Now how about that couples' class from Reidsville? They rigged up nine automobiles—enough for their own families and all the children at the Baby Home and took them on the fifth Sunday afternoon in May, to the Burlington City park and spread a bounteous picnic for them. Then they gave them a share in the recreational activities of the park. It was such a thrill to the children and their matrons, and to Mrs. Truitt and me.

You know what! Blackberries are going to be ripe soon! Well, sir, the boys and girls here know where the biggest, sweetest and "bestest" of the blackberries ripen. Buckets-ful of them will come into our kitchen for cobblers and canning. And in spite of all the warning there will come some boys and girls with poison-oak. Maybe they will read these lines and be more careful.

Finally, remember one of the things Jesus commended, "... and ye visited me." These little folks will like your visit. Come to see us.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JUNE 4, 1953.

Commodities for the Week.

Mrs. T. K. Atkinson, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.

Mrs. J. E. Harrell, Jr., Suffolk, Va., Clothing.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 7,155.79

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Antioch $ 17.00
17.00

Eastern Va. Conference:
Franklin $ 41.00
41.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Mebane, for Thurman Arnold $ 15.00
Reidsville S. S. 61.00
76.00

Western N. C. Conference:
Albemarle $ 20.00
Brown's Chapel S. S. 5.00
25.00

Total $ 159.00

Grand total $ 7,314.79

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 9,350.04

First Cong. Church, Asheville, N. C., Special ... $ 50.00

Chester H. Roth Co., Inc. (interest) 30.00

Philathea Class, Suffolk, for W. C. & Raymond Harvell 5.00

Robert Lee House S. S. Class, Newport News, for Marie Proctor 20.00

Special Gifts 176.70
281.70

Grand total $ 9,631.74

Total for the week $ 440.70

Total for the year $16,946.53

My hostess had twin beds in my room. I shrank from slighting any provision made for my comfort. But without a surgical operation, or a bacon-slicer, how in the world could I occupy twin beds? In the nick of time it occurred to my flivver mind that I could sleep in one half of the night, and in the other pro rata. But the duece of it was that I didn't waken in time to make the change and Twin Bed No. 2—but should I have mused it anyway?—J. F. C.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through June 6, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	$ 60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	$1,591.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown	127.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presnell	361.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr.	82.50
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth	2,450.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson	1,065.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries	3,211.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

†Paid.

STUDENT VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT TO MERGE.

(Continued from page 7.)

dy existing between the student movement and foreign mission groups.

"Better than that," he said, "the movement should now be in a stronger relationship to the various church groups and other agencies working on America's college campuses. Students are becoming increasingly aware of their missionary responsibility," he continued, "and our movement, with new opportunities as a department of the council, will be better able to call these young people to play their part in Christian missions."

Full membership in this group is tantamount to a personal commitment of the student to "devote his life work to the world mission of Christ's Church." Others who are not prepared to sign the declaration, participate as members of local campus fellowships.

This student group will be the 13th interdenominational agency to join the council. Miss Fran Charrier, an Oberlin College senior, who is the student chairman of the movement, declared, "We particularly appreciate an affiliation that grants the movement autonomy and initiative in matters of philosophy, policy and program." The group will also retain its name, although it will operate as the Missionary Services Department of the Commission on Higher Education of the Division of Christian Education.

Since its founding 67 years ago by Dr. John R. Mott and other student leaders, the Student Volunteer Movement has been instrumental in sending over 20,000 American college men and women to significant Christian service in the foreign mission field. In 1945, the movement was broadened to include home missions in addition to foreign.

The group's national quadrennial conferences have been held without interruption since 1891. The last such meeting was held in 1951, at the University of Kansas. It was attended by more than 2,000 students, representing 40 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox churches, from 476 colleges throughout the United States and Canada. Also attending were 200 foreign students from 50 foreign countries.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:

(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address

..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

Congregational Christian Camps and Conferences

1953 SESSIONS

VALLEY OF VIRGINIA YOUNG PEOPLE'S CAMP

Powell's Fort Camp, Woodstock, Virginia, June 9-15

REV. HENRY V. HARMON, Dean

Total Costs, $10.50

* * * * *

ELON SCHOOL OF MISSIONS

Elon College, North Carolina, June 16-19

Cost, $10.00

* * * * *

CRABTREE PARK CAMPS FOR JUNIOR BOYS AND GIRLS

Camp No. 3, Crabtree State Park, June 20-24, June 24-28

REV. and MRS. CARL WALLACE, Directors

Cost, $8.50

* * * * *

NORTH CAROLINA JUNIOR HIGH CAMP

Camp No. 3, Crabtree State Park, June 28-July 4

REV. and MRS. MARK ANDES, Directors

Cost, $13.50

* * * * *

SENIOR HIGH AND YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE

(Convention Wide)

Elon College, North Carolina, July 5-11

REV. JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR., Dean

Cost, $15.00

* * * * *

EASTERN VIRGINIA JUNIOR HIGH CAMP

Central Y. M. C. A. Camp, Norfolk, Virginia, August 9-14

REV. A. LANSON GRANGER, JR., Dean

Cost, $17.50

* * * * *

THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION FAMILY CAMP

Central Y. M. C. A. Camp, Norfolk, Virginia, August 14-16

DR. and MRS. F. C. LESTER, Directors

Costs: Board and Room, Adults, $7.00; Children under 6 yrs., $6.00;

Registration Fee, per family, $5.00

* * * * *

For further information, write to—

MISS PATTIE LEE COGHILL, Educational Secretary
Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JUNE 18, 1953

NUMBER 25

Western North Carolina Conference Promotes A Program of Progress

Albemarle Congregational Christian Church

The church at Albemarle, North Carolina, was one of the small group of Congregational churches in the area of the Southern Convention at the time of the "merger." How complete the integration has been is written in the recent history of this progressive little church.

News Flashes

There will be no CHRISTIAN SUN published next week, it being customary to skip the last weeks in June and December.

This issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is devoted mainly though not entirely to the Western North Carolina Conference. We hope at some future date to have issues devoted to the other conferences.

Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Sloan are to spend this summer at Elon College, and are available for their illustrated addresses telling of their last summer's experiences in Africa and the Bible lands. They are both also available as Sunday pulpit supplies.

We are printing in this issue, in its entirety, a personal letter from Dr. Wm. T. Scott to the managing editor. The letter, though sent by air mail, was received after the last issue of THE SUN was in the mail. It is hoped that you will enjoy it as much as we did.

The time of the Children's Essay Contest for the Church Building Society has been extended until July 2, according to the letter on the "Children's Page" this week. These essays should be sent to the Convention Office at Elon College, attention of Miss Pattie Lee Coghill.

We learn with regret that Rev. W. Walter Hall, of Carlisle, Massachusetts, and a former pastor of the Albe-Marle Church in Massachusetts Memorial Hospital for a major operation. Also that he has a broken heel. His wife says that they would appreciate the prayers of friends.

The Leaksville Church of the Virginia Valley Conference held its twenty-second annual Home Coming and Memorial Service on last Sunday, June 14. A large number of members and friends were present for the occasion. There were all-day services and a picnic lunch was served in the newly constructed basement at the noon hour.

Oakland Christian Church, Chuckatuck, Va., held its Daily Vacation Bible School the week of June 8-12. The enrollment reached eighty-two, including children and teachers, and the average attendance was unusually high for the entire week. The general theme of the school was "The Life and Teachings of Jesus," with various emphases in the various age groups. The usual program of worship, memory work, instruction, instruction in music, directed recreation, and creative activities and hand work was followed. A picnic was held on the closing day of the school, Friday, and special exercises by every department of the school were presented on last Sunday morning.

A Most Interesting Personal Letter From Superintendent Scott

Aboard Queen Elizabeth,
June 7, 1953.

Dear John T.:

As we make our way on this big and wonderful ship—the largest afloat—in this big, big ocean, we have had a good chance to think on the goodness of God and the marvels of his creation. Mrs. Scott and I feel very near to our dear friends in the Southern Convention, even though we are far away. "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

The trip has already been a wonderful relaxation for us. Mrs. Scott is gaining her strength daily. We both look forward to seeing old England, Scotland and parts of Europe, and especially to attending the International Council. We so much want our trip to benefit our churches in the Convention. While the trip, itself, is wonderful, we have appreciated these days of preparation for the Council meeting at St. Andrews.

The theme of the Seventh International Congregational Council will be "Congregational Churchmanship." This theme seems to follow naturally the one of the 1949 meeting in Wellsley, Mass., on "Freedom's Fellowship Through Christ." We as a church seem especially to need at this time to test our Christian Stewardship to the world in understanding ourselves and relating ourselves effectively to each other as Congregational Christians and to the whole Church as the Body of Christ.

The St. Andrews Council will not be narrowly "denominational," yet there will be an urgent examination of ourselves as a fellowship, and from this a new and fresh attempt will be made to shape ourselves as a Church through Christ into "better instruments of the Gospel."

(Continued on page 11.)

Officers and Committees of Western North Carolina Conference

OFFICERS.

President—Rev. M. A. Pollard, Rt. 2, Liberty, N. C.

Vice-President—Rev. G. H. Veazey, 911 Tryon St., High Point, N. C.

Secretary—Dr. F. C. Lester, 840 Sunset Ave., Asheboro, N. C.

Asst. Secretary—Rev. Max Vestal, Rt. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Treasurer—Mr. I. L. McDowell, Rt. 2, Asheboro, N. C.

Historian—Rev. John Q. Pugh, Rt. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

STANDING COMMITTEES.

Executive—M. A. Pollard, chairman, F. C. Lester, Max Vestal, I. L. McDowell, S. H. Pell.

Home Missions—J. Q. Pugh, chairman, L. H. Brady, Paul Wilson.

Foreign Missions—L. M. Presnell, chairman, Lunnie Burgess, Mrs. B. P. Moffitt.

Evangelism—R. T. Grissom, chairman, H. V. Cox, N. L. Rumley.

Stewardship and Apportionment—Cyrus Shoffner, chairman, H. L. Bean, E. H. Coble.

Ministry—E. Carl Brady, chairman, J. U. Fogleman, B. H. Lowdermilk, G. H. Veazey.

Christian Education—Bill Simmons, chairman, Miss Lola Farlow, W. W. Thomas.

Religious Literature—Winfred Bray, chairman, Edgar Freeman, Stacy Hayes.

Superannuation—Arthur Cox, chairman, J. A. Caviness, L. M. Murray.

Ministerial and Church Relations—G. H. Veazey, chairman, L. V. Dorsett, Rowland Farrell.

Moral Reform—M. L. Fogleman, chairman, John Bowers, Avery Brown.

Church Grouping—R. L. Clapp, chairman, Von Allen, Alton Richardson, W. W. Riter.

Elon Sustaining Fund—F. C. Lester, M. A. Pollard, R. T. Grissom, Cyrus Shoffner.

Max Brown Vestal Ordained

Max Brown Vestal was ordained to the gospel ministry in a special service at his home church, the Asheboro Congregational Christian, on Sunday evening, June 7. Invitations had been sent to each minister and church in the Western North Carolina Conference, and nearly two

(Continued on page 10.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. Earl Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Slow Starting, Laymen's Fellowship Now Going Strong

The Laymen's Fellowship of the Western North Carolina Conference dates back for about four years. It was a slow go. I remember the first conference meeting we had was in Asheboro, with Dr. William Moseley Brown as the speaker. Only seven men came to hear him speak on Evangelism.

This experience sure took out of the Fellowship's first chairman about all of his enthusiasm. The next year rolled by with very little forward movement by our men. In November, 1951, the conference asked the writer to again try to lead in the Laymen's work. On March 1, 1952, enough courage was mustered to call for a conference-wide meeting at Liberty, hoping that we might have at least 25 or 30 men present for a dinner meeting. Again Dr. Brown was on the program, and, to our surprise, 81 men came to that meeting. From that date on we have averaged about 100 at all of our meetings.

The men in the Western North Carolina Conference are on the move now, and the credit goes to the devoted laymen in the local churches. We have seven organized Laymen's Fellowships now: Albemarle, Pleasant Ridge, Pleasant Grove, Union Grove, Liberty, Asheboro and Spoon's Chapel. The Union Grove Church has also organized a youth Laymen's Fellowship. Besides these organized groups, we have plenty of active laymen in our other churches that support us at our meetings and activities.

We have contributed in a financial way to the treasury of the Southern Convention Fellowship and the orphanage, and we are now working on our Moonelon project. At our meeting with the Union Grove Laymen, we adopted the report which follows this article. We have already received $197 on our goal. We think this will be of great value when Moonelon is made into a center for our use.

I believe that this is only a beginning of greater and more worthwhile things that the Laymen's Fellowship of the Western North Carolina Conference will be doing in the near future.

S. H. PELL,
Chairman.

* * * * *

Report of "Moonelon" Committee To Western N. C. Conference

This is the report agreed upon concerning the Moonelon project and the erection of a central building for the purpose of developing the site as a Summer Camp for the Congregational Christian Churches:

This committee makes the following proposals:

1. That this conference set and reach a goal of $2,500 toward the erection of a central building and development of the Moonelon site.
2. That this goal be reached by May 31, 1954.
3. That each interested group of this conference report at the next conference rally how much of the goal will be assumed by that group. This rally should be held on August 30, 1953.
4. That each group report to the conference at the end of six months from this date as to the progress made, and offer any new ideas to the groups having trouble reaching their goal. This report should be made at the conference rally to be held on November 28, 1953.

(Continued on page 7.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. O. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

General contributions should be addressed to the editor at Southern Pines, N. C., and should reach him by Wednesday of the week preceding date of publication.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195 . . .

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $ for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

REV. F. C. LESTER, Guest Editor

We Work Together

Sometimes the world seems to be so complex that one is tempted to find a cave and move into it. But that is really a temptation; and not a desirable solution to life's problems. We are made to depend upon others. No one is complete within himself. Dozens of people help to supply the food on our tables, and thousands of people are involved in the manufacture of the things we use. Life on this earth depends upon cooperation. We cannot "go it alone."

That is one reason we have churches. Prayer is personal, and so is singing; but prayer and singing mean more when they are done in company with others. Faith is personal, but it must be related to others to make it profitable. Preaching is personal, but unless there are listeners it has little value. The congregation is necessary for the development of Christians and the promotion of the Gospel. The Church is the living organism made up of individuals, through which the Spirit of God operates. Those who separate themselves from the Church miss the fellowship of the Spirit that transforms life and fits a person for righteous living.

And so it is with churches and the conference.

A local church finds its greatest development when it is associated with other churches in what we call conferences. A church can be just as selfish and suspicious as an individual; and selfishness and suspicion never lead to grace and love. They are sins that cause destruction of the persons or organizations that practice them. Faith and fellowship have to do with the spirit; the kind of spirit that was in Jesus. The church that works with the conference grows. When it needs help, it has friends.

During the seven years that I have served in the Western North Carolina Conference there has been real progress. The Asheboro Church is a sort of symbol of it. Asheboro has built a church and bought a parsonage. Many other churches have done likewise. Others are getting ready to build.

New members are constantly being added to the churches. The revival is still used, but it is not the only time that people can join church.

Giving is much more generous both for home expenses and for benevolences. Visiting from one church to another is increasing. Fellowship is found in conference sessions, and nearly every church meets the requests of conference. This is progress.

Your Church

(Excerpt from a report made by this writer to our Fayetteville Church, June 3, 1953)

It is with great joy that I report to you . . . Here is your church; it is yours. You have helped to make it, and you will use it through the years.

When joy, or sorrow, or trouble comes to you, as surely they will, bring them to the altar of your beautiful little church; share them with the people and the God you love. Consecrate your babies here; solemnize your marriages here; and seek comfort here when it is necessary to bury your dead.

In this building study the Bible, seek the best way to live, enter into real fellowship with those who worship, join in play-time for relaxation, eat with your friends, listen to good music, and let its melody flow from your voice and the instruments that you can play, look at the problems of the world and your personal problems here among the trees, where the birds sing and people of wisdom may come to instruct and inspire; in fact, help to make this a real church, one with facets for service like those on a polished diamond.

Here is your church for today and tomorrow. Make it . . . a place where God's people, the good and the not so good, meet on the level and together search for the love that transforms life into a "thing of beauty and a joy forever." Let your own growing soul be an invitation to others to climb that highway that leads to the home of the soul. . . . Make this a beauty spot along life's way—a place of prayer of rest, of peace and of hope eternal.

Sixty days is a remarkably short time in which to erect a church like this, but I am confident that the coming years will reveal no shoddy workmanship. Southern Builders gave us workmen who appeared to be interested in giving us a good church at the earliest possible date. The cross on the front altar is an example of their interest, for it was their idea and request to put it there. . . . So many things have worked together so well that it has seemed to me that God has been in this place, even when we did not recognize him.

Our Western North Carolina Churches Report . . .

Pleasant Hill, Growing, Plans to Build New Sanctuary

In the year 1947 Pleasant Hill Christian Church, located six miles east of Liberty, North Carolina, on the Snow Camp road, began the erection of a parsonage for its minister. The building was completed that year and the present pastor, Rev. M. A. Pollard moved in on September 3, 1947. The following June the parsonage was dedicated. There was no help asked nor given, as this church has always depended on its membership and friends to carry any building project started. The two first years Liberty and Smithwood were served in connection with Pleasant Hill. The church decided in 1950 that it would have services every Sunday. This action started an increase in attendance at both church and Sunday school. Now we are badly in need of more room. The present plans call for the building of a new sanctuary, converting all of the present building into brick veneered Sunday school rooms.

We have a very active young people's group doing good work. Also there is a Boy Scout group, newly organized, but doing a splendid job with the boys. We are now expecting to build a suitable place for all of these boys to carry on their program.

We had an average attendance of 248 last year and we expect the attendance to be larger this year. June 7, was our Children's Day and Memorial Service, and although it rained all the morning, we had 229 registered in Sunday school. There were several who came at 11 o'clock. We had sixty-eight children in the program. Those who worked so faithfully to train these children are to be congratulated for the splendid job they did.

Our membership has gradually increased over the years. It is a joy to work with people who seem to enjoy backing the pastor and his wife. It makes us feel so unworthy.

This church, organized in 1823, has never, according to record, failed to pay its conference apportionment nor to be represented at conference. It has given to the ministry seven of its members.

What this rural church is doing could be done by many more of our churches in the Western North Carolina Conference. We hope as we have led the way to full time work for rural churches of this conference, many more will follow.

Our Daily Vacation Bible School will begin on June 15. We are now in our second pastorate here. Our young people are always responsible for the night service. We feel that to keep young people busy is a good way to keep them interested in the church. They are made responsible for some special days for the 11 o'clock service too. They seem to appreciate the opportunity to have a part to do. This is a church with great possibilities, since it has such a large number of young people and children. May we be able to lead them into service for the church and the Lord Jesus Christ, is our prayer.

M. A. POLLARD.

Union Grove has done an Outstanding Job of Renovation

Union Grove Christian Church Has a New Exterior

Union Grove Christian Church was organized on September 22, 1866, under the leadership of Rev. J. S. Lawrence. It is not known when the church building was started, but at a meeting on November 6, 1875, there was a motion made to complete the building then under construction. The first officers of the church were, John A. Scott, secretary; Ira Brown, collector, and Eli Brown, treasurer. S. H. Way and Adam Brown were deacons.

A Sunday school was organized on March 16, 1889, and E. C. Phillips was the first superintendent.

The list of pastors includes such familiar names as J. W. Patton, C. C.

Peele, R. L. Williamson, T. J. Green, John Allred, Carl Brady, J. Q. Pugh, and B. H. Lowdermilk.

In 1938 four Sunday school rooms were built and other renovations made. In 1948 the interior of the church was remodeled, with new pews and a new carpet added. The bills were all paid on completion of the project.

In 1951-52, while Rev. Clyde Fields was pastor, the church and Sunday school were brick-veneered, a vestibule was added, repairs and painting done to the exterior. Stained glass windows were given as memorials. Improvements were also made on the church grounds and cemetery.

The present pastor is Rev. Winfred Bray. The church is looking forward to a successful future.

Pleasant Union Finds That New Opportunities Bring New Responsibilities

Many of the members of our church and also many faithful attendants who are not members are saying: "This is the Year." This year we have seen an increase in average attendance of seventeen. Not only has there been an increase in numbers but in the interest of the church, Sunday school and activities of our Young People's groups. We have a Junior Choir consisting of twenty-five or more that is doing a fine job. Our Senior Choir would hardly want to contest them. Then there are organized Young People of our church at work. One of their projects for the next three years is the Building Loan Fund quota for our church, starting the fifteenth of June and to be paid on a quarterly basis, ending March, 1956.

As is always the case, where there is activity, interest and increase in numbers, there are new opportunities and also new responsibilities. This means a need for more Sunday school rooms, and a field for more teachers and workers. A movement in this direction has already been started by setting up a Building Fund, which was started several months ago. It is hoped that within the next few weeks plans may be complete, whereby we may see started two or more class rooms. This may lead to remodeling our church inside.

Now for the announcements: Vacation Bible School will be the week of July 13. Revival services will begin July 19, through the 26, each evening. Rev. Harold Loman will be the evangelist.

Through the leadership of our pastor, Rev. B. H. Lowdermilk, and also our superintendent, Mr. Lewis Trotter, who has, with the help of many others, given us something new on our program each Sunday for the past twelve months, and by the guidance of God and the help of the whole community, we are going forward. So we may truthfully say: "This is the Year."

I. L. McDOWELL,
Reporter.

Parsonage Paid for, High Point Starts Educational Plant Fund

The High Point Christian Church was built in 1914. The late Rev. Frank Morgan was the first pastor. Seventeen men have served as pastor since the organization. The late Rev. Ben Joe Earp was the first pastor to reside on the field. A parsonage was purchased, largely through his efforts, in 1947, and he and his family moved into it after quite a bit of repair. His health gave way the next year, and he was forced to resign. Final payment was made on the parsonage September 1, 1952. A building fund is growing rapidly for a Christian Education plant. Work is to begin in the near future.

The present pastor is in the latter half of his third year. The church, we believe, is making progress.

A revival was held May 17-24, which was more largely attended than any revival in recent years. The Rev. M. A. Pollard was the evangelist, and he brought deep spiritual messages. While there were no conversions, we feel that seed were sown in good ground.

The Vacation Bible School will be held June 14-19, with Bill Tolley as leader.

"The harvest truly is plenteous, but the laborers are few."

G. H. VEAZEY,
Pastor.

Liberty Congregational Christian Church Makes Plans to Enlarge

Liberty Congregational Christian Church has made much progress since it was reorganized in 1922 by a few members of the Christian Church who were living in Liberty.

The floor of the auditorium had fallen in, and services had been discontinued. The floor was rebuilt and the church opened for services. A Sunday school was organized and a part-time minister called, and services were held once a month. The membership slowly increased, and later the auditorium was enlarged and four Sunday school rooms of brick veneer were added.

At a business meeting, the church members decided they should have a resident pastor, and it was voted to use the offering one Sunday of each month for the building of a parsonage. This fund grew, and the time came to purchase a lot and build the parsonage. A modern six-room parsonage was built and with some help from the Mission Board it was paid for and dedicated April 19, 1953.

September 20, 1951, Rev. L. M. Presnell moved into the new parsonage, and since that time the church has progressed rapidly. We have an active Woman's Missionary Society, a Laymen's Fellowship, a Young People's organization, a very active Board of Deacons and efficient Trustees. The church also has various committees that are quite active. We adopted a budget system this conference year and had the Every-Member Canvass, which has proven beneficial. A modern bulletin board has been erected in front of the church. The Sunday school enrollment and attendance has increased.

Our Finance and Building Committees are now working on plans to remodel the church auditorium and enlarge the Sunday school facilities.

It may be interesting to know that even with this building program on, that our small group has met all conference apportionments in full, supported the Elon College Sustaining Fund and voted to accept our quota of the Church Building Loan Fund, that others may have a place to worship, too.

CYRUS SHOFFNER,
Ch'n, Board of Deacons.

Activities of Sophia Congregational Christian Church

The Sophia Church has just ended a successful revival. It began May 31 and ended June 5. The Rev. M. A. Pollard, pastor of Pleasant Hill Christian Church, was the evangelist for these services. At the close of these services six members were received into the church, and we are expecting to take in some more at the next worship service. A great interest and attendance was shown throughout the services as Mr. Pollard delivered his soul-stirring messages.

The annual Vacation Bible School is now in progress for this week, under the direction of the pastor, Rev. Avery Brown. He is being assisted in the school by La Verne Brown, Pearl Hill and Mrs. Sue Hollingsworth.

The attendance at Sophia Church has increased greatly for the last five months. The average attendance for last year was 42, with an enrollment of 71. The enrollment is now 101, and the average attendance is around 82. We have had as many as 97 present for Sunday school during May. Much credit for this should be given to the pastor for his visitation in the community.

We are in need of a new church building in Sophia, and plans are now under way to secure a lot in a more suitable location. The members

(Continued on page 9.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Opportunities

Every pastor of our church in the Southern Convention, every Sunday school superintendent, and every church member is confronted with an opportunity—an opportunity may carry with it a responsibility. Elon College was founded by the church, for the church. It has made a telling contribution to the church through the years. It is better prepared than ever to make contributions to the intelligence and leadership of the church. The church needs the contributions that the college can make more than ever before. Every one interested in the college has an opportunity to speak to prospective college students about Elon College. To take advantage of this opportunity may mean a richer experience for the individual student and an added opportunity for Elon College. It is estimated that between 700 and 1,000 Congregational Christian Church Young People in the Southern Convention have graduated from high school this year and will enter college somewhere in September. Technically speaking and from an educational standpoint, Elon College, our college, has first claim on our church young people. A sense of opportunity and obligation on the part of our church young people assumed and expressed would doubtless result in an appreciable increase in students in Elon College from our churches in the Southern Convention which would mean much to our church from every standpoint.

In recent years, many high school graduates select their colleges before graduation from high school; others after graduation, but during the months of June, July, and August, many prospective students select the college that they are to attend and apply for admission. Elon shall doubtless receive applications from many, many young people who are not members of the Christian Church and who have no connection with it. They know of Elon College, of its accomplishments in the field of higher education, and of the high quality of work that it is doing today and are glad for the opportunity of receiving what it has to offer. We are delighted to have them but, at the same time, we are greatly concerned for our own young people. I trust sincerely that we shall have the hearty cooperation of every one who reads this article, that he may be conscious of his opportunity and his responsibility. Will you please be good enough to write today and send names and addresses of prospective students, stating whether or not they are connected with our church. Your cooperation is appreciated and will bear fruit for our college and for the church.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

The church, alumni, and friends of Elon College are interested in its economic stability. The curriculum of the college, the faculty, and the student body are certainly essential. Without them there would and could be no college. It is equally true that without a sufficiently satisfactory economic interest all things so vitally essential to the college could not themselves be, or if they do hang on, it must constitute an unsatisfactory and unstable situation.

The convention, in its forward looking plans for the financial support of the college, called upon the churches of the convention to assist in its support by asking the churches of the Southern Convention to accept definite quotas to be paid to the college annually. When, in the course of events, it was evident to the convention that the support for Elon College was not sufficient, it again knocked at the doors of our churches and requested that they be responsible for an additional amount for the support of the college equal to $1 per member to be known as the Elon College Sustaining Fund.

If the churches of the Southern Convention would see that these two funds are raised in full annually, the college, with other sources of support, would be able to meet its obligations and continue its course of instruction without embarrassment. Your contributions to either fund will be greatly appreciated.

Previously Reported $ 4,595.57
 Eastern Va. Conference:
 Liberty Spring S. S. $ 24.00
 Rosemont 62.00
 Oakland S. S. 37.57
 Wakefeld 14.96

Waverly S. S. 16.28
 Windsor S. S. 19.36
 N. C. and Va. Conference:
 Shallow Ford $ 20.00
 Burlington, Beverly Hills 19.07
 Virginia Valley Conference:
 Bethel S. S. $ 25.07

238.31

Total to date $ 4,833.88

LAYMEN'S FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 3.)

5. Each group should set a goal and strive to reach it by methods and means that seem appropriate to that particular group. Young People will help, ladies will help, Sunday school can help, and then any project outside the church will make the goal easier to attain.
6. That some responsible person be contacted in each church of this conference and through him offer that church an opportunity to take part in this most worthwhile project.
7. That some members of the Fellowship make themselves available to the conference chairman to report to any group that may have a problem or questions concerning the project and its operation in this conference.
8. That some report go forth from this conference concerning certain suggestions about the operation and the conduct at Moonelon. That this conference be advised of the laws and by-laws that will govern the operation of the camp.
9. That this conference will strive to maintain a constant program for this project and with the help of the other conferences of the Convention, will erect a lasting and worthwhile camp site for the young people, who are the future of our church.

MOONELON COMMITTEE.

Dalton Harper, Chairman,
 Winfred Bray,
 Martin Deese,
 Cyrus Shoffner,
 Hubert Beane.

Sharing is the great and imperative need of our time. An unshared life is not living. He who shares does not lessen but greatness his life, especially if sharing be done not formally nor conventionally, but with such heartiness as springs out of an understanding of the meaning of the religion of sharing.—Rabbi Wise,

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

The Why of This Page

Rev. M. A. Pollard, the president of the Western North Carolina Conference, has asked that the Women's Page this week be concerned with activities of our societies in that conference, since this week's issue of THE SUN is devoted to the work in that area.

I am sorry that there was not sufficient time to get a brief report from each active society. Since that was impossible, I have had to resort to memory, to generalizations, and to "guesses." If I have made mistakes, please excuse them, and send me the correct information, and I will see that it is published.

* * * * *

Western North Carolina Societies

According to the 1951 Annual, only fourteen churches in the Western North Carolina Conference had missionary societies which evidenced their concern in our denominational missionary activities by giving to them.

These churches were: Albemarle, Asheboro, Flint Hill (R), Hank's Chapel, High Point, Liberty, Mt. Pleasant, Pleasant Grove, Pleasant Hill, Pleasant Ridge, Ramseur, Smithwood, Spoon's Chapel and Union Grove. All but two of these churches are in the Asheboro District of our women's work—Hank's Chapel and Mt. Pleasant being in the Sanford District.

At the present time there are other churches which have missionary societies, and we hope the report at the end of this conference year will show that they, too, have been sharing in the denominational enterprises as they are expected to do. I believe the following should be included: Antioch (R), Bailey's Grove, Parks Cross Roads, Pleasant Cross, Randleman, Shiloh and Sophia.

That leaves seventeen churches that have no women's organization—unless I have missed some of them unintentionally, from my above lists. What about them? Whose responsibility is it to see that missionary societies are started in these churches?

We would not all give the same answers to these questions. Some would say that the minister and the minister's wife are the ones responsible. Some would say it is the district superintendent's job. Others would say that Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, educational secretary, and Mrs. W. T. Scott, state president, could help. And still others would remind us that it takes at least one interested woman in a church, besides the minister's wife, to begin a successful women's society. Perhaps a combination of the efforts of the above-mentioned individuals would give us the best chance for success. Let's see how it might work!

* * * * *

A New Society

"Just suppose" that there is a church in the Western Conference, or in any other conference for that matter, that has not had a woman's society since granma or anyone else can remember.

Wishful thinking on the part of outsiders will not succeed in getting a society started there. What might be the best process?

In the first place, the minister and his wife ought to be sympathetic to the idea. Who can imagine a minister nowadays who would consider an organization of women in his church as of little value? Or who can imagine a minister so little interested in the spreading of the Gospel to people who know it not, that he would fail to be interested in a group in his church who would study about and give to missions? And working with the women of her husband's church or churches ought to be the first place a minister's wife would choose to put her efforts in their church's activities. So, first, we will assume that we have an interested minister and his wife.

Next, they will find out when the district superintendent, who in the case of most of the churches in the Western North Carolina Conference, is Mrs. Bill Simmons, R. 1, Bennett, N. C., could meet with a group of women in their church. (If the church is in the southeastern corner of the conference, the superintendent would be Mrs. K. M. Lindner, 815 Ethelored St., Fayetteville.) All of the district superintendents are ready and anxious to visit new or old societies, or ones not yet organized. But they hesitate to "barge in" without an invitation.

Then, with the enthusiastic support of a woman or two who will assist the minister's wife in encouraging attendance, invite the women of the church to the church to the pastor's home for this first meeting. Or, if he does not live in the area, surely someone else will open their home for this meeting. And Miss Coghill or Mrs. Scott would be glad to come to such a meeting too, if it can be fitted into their schedule.

At this meeting you would want to have a devotional moment, an explanation of the work of our women's societies, and an opportunity for discussion concerning an organization there.

* * * * *

What Are Our W. N. C. Societies Like?

These societies vary greatly from place to place—they may meet every two weeks, as I believe the groups in Albemarle and Radleman do, every month, as most of the societies in the conference do, or be divided into circles which meet once a month with a general meeting monthly or quarterly as in Asheboro.

Their giving varies, too, being in some places mostly concerned with the work of the local church, and in others giving all the money they receive to missions.

The programs may be taken entirely from the packet material prepared by the Southern Convention, as is done in most cases, or they may consist of a miscellaneous collection of hymns, prayers and talks, as in others.

But in every church where there is an active women's organization, there is a group of women who are praying, giving, learning, who are genuinely concerned about Christ and his work.

The ideal situation, it seems to me, is a society which supports the program of its local church and also gives to the missionary enterprise of our denomination. A society which has well-planned programs which fit the language of its group, but lift them to new heights of knowledge and inspiration. A society whose officers are glad to give the time to go to rallies, conferences, schools of (Continued on page 10.)

Pleasant Ridge Church Has Progressive Program

One of the more active churches in the Western North Carolina Conference is Pleasant Ridge, located near Ramseur. Although worship services with preaching are held only twice each month, many other activities are provided for members and friends of the church. Each Sunday evening the Youth Fellowship meets—the “Ridgesingers” they call themselves, because one of their favorite activities is singing. Their membership forms a choir which sings for the Sunday morning worship services with the chancel choir of the church. In addition, the “Ridgesingers” often sing at youth rallies and at other churches. Mrs. S. H. Pell is the director of the choir and counselor of the youth group.

The Parsonage at Pleasant Ridge is typical of the Western Conference

Each Sunday evening also there is a meeting of the prayer group. Very interesting programs are planned, including study, prayer, speakers, singing, etc. The first Friday of each month is the time for the Ladies' Missionary Society to meet. These ladies participate in the ladies' programs of the conference and the Southern Convention. They have shared with neighboring churches in the World Day of Prayer and the May Fellowship Day services. The ladies also have contributed greatly to the efforts of the church building program.

The Laymen's Fellowship meets once each month, with a number of loyal members. This fellowship has accepted $150 of the church's Church Building Loan Fund goal. In addition to this, the fellowship has about eight acres of Lord's Acre oats, which will be sold to complete payment on the educational plant of the church.

The Sunday school, under the direction of Theodore Cox, the superintendent, is active and progressing satisfactorily. It always begins on time, and there is an average attendance of from 80 to 90 per cent of the members.

The church has recently completed the building of a parsonage and a new Sunday school plant, which provides ample space for classes and for other functions of the church. If the goal is met, and there is every reason to believe that it will be, the church will have soon completed payment for all of this building. The money given in the Lord's Acre project will go to complete the payment.

This Lord's Acre project, with J. C. Newell as chairman of the committee, is being participated in by individuals, classes and other organizations of the church. It has proved a blessing to all of those taking part. The whole church is working together to complete the payment on the building they are now using, remembering that “except the Lord build the house, they labor in vain that build it.”

Memorial Day found a new and beautiful carpet on the floor of the sanctuary. Floyd Brown is chairman of the “Rug Committee,” and he has done a fine job with the help of members and friends of the church.

Quarterly church meetings are held regularly. Preceding these meetings the deacons meet to discuss the progress and problems of the church. The deacons usually meet in one of their homes, enjoy a covered dish supper together, and then hold their business meeting with the pastor. In preparation for the revival in the fourth week of August, the deacons plan a visitation campaign of their own, inviting persons in the community to attend our church.

MAX VESTAL,
Pastor.

OUR WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CHURCHES REPORT.

(Continued from page 6.)

are now ready to plan and work for a new church.

The Women's Missionary Society is really working to help the church. The last monthly meeting was held on June 6, at the home of Mrs. R. L. Pearce, with seventeen members present. The treasurer reported $600 to go into the building fund. A play will be presented in the near future by the society to raise additional money for the building fund.

MRS. METTA HALL,
Reporter.

Bailey's Grove Hopes to Build New Church

Bailey's Grove is located in North Asheboro, on highway 220, and has a beautiful oak grove lot. Being in a fast growing development, we are in great need of a new church building, and we know that our lot is an ideal place to build it. Our present pastor, Rev. Avery Brown, is working faithfully with us in hopes of a new church.

The Women's Missionary Society of the church has been working hard for three years to contribute to our Building Fund, and has succeeded in raising over $1,500 thus far. We have tried many ways to raise money, such as quilt projects, chicken suppers, sings, auction sales of donated articles, and others. To date, the church has raised over $3,500 to put in this fund, and we want to keep it growing.

The average church attendance has been very good this year; and we have a Sunday school enrollment of 80. We are looking forward to our annual revival which will begin on Sunday night, June 21, at 7:30. Rev. William Simmons of Bennett, pastor of Pleasant Grove Christian Church, will be the evangelist for this series of services. Our annual Vacation Bible School will be held at the same time as the revival. The public is invited to these services.

NADA JADE ROBBINS,
Reporter.

Church at Albemarle Originally Was Congregational

Rev. A. Lamonds, state evangelist of the Congregational Churches of North Carolina, came to Albemarle, N. C., with his tent in May, 1912, to

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

Time for Essay Contest Extended

Mr. William Kincaid Newman, of the Church Building Society thinks we should extend the time for the Essay Contest, so we will let it run for three more weeks. Be sure to send in yours now!

* * *

Next Sunday is Father's Day. Be thankful if you have a father to love and remember. The children in my family speak of their father often and say they like to imagine he is helping care for some boys and girls in heaven. These are things we do not know, but it helps our hearts to think them so.

Fathers are very important people. You just stop and think of what would happen if they didn't work for us, play with us, help us and guide us. Constance Foster, who lives at Pinebluff, here in North Carolina, wrote a book about "Fathers are Parents, Too." So they are! So do be especially thoughtful of Dad and let him know that you think of him and love him lots.

* * *

Prof. Barney, of the Elon faculty, showed me a very interesting letter and picture the other day. It was taken from Christian Herald, and it showed the characters from "Dell Comics" that this religious magazine considers to be good comics. Some of them were Bugs Bunny, Little Lulu, Captain Marvel, and a host of your other comic-book friends. Your parents would be interested in it, too.

* * *

Southern Convention women will be on the campus for the School of Missions this week. Mrs. Ralph Galt of the Valley has already arrived, and others will be coming. I imagine some of them will be your mothers and aunts. They will be studying about next year's mission work and doing some interesting things.

J. J. H.

* * * * *

"No Room for Self-Pity"

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Mother, Kenneth and Alice won't let me play games with them!" My niece, Betty Ann, lifted a scowling face to her mother as she made that indignant assertion.

I was visiting at the home of my brother. Beatrice, my sister-in-law, and I were sitting in the living room with our knitting. From time to time laughing voices floated in to us from the front porch, where my nephew of high school age, Alice and Kenneth, were enjoying a game of canasta. Coming back from a visit at the home of a neighbor, Betty Ann had asked to join them, only to be told not to bother them since the game was already in progress.

Just as I expected her to do, Beatrice put aside her work in order to give full attention to the little girl's problem. "I don't believe you need to play games this afternoon, Betty Ann," she answered lightly. "Suppose you look in the top drawer of my desk and see what Aunt Lucia and I brought from town this morning. You'll find a little package there marked with your name."

A smile replaced the frown on Betty Ann's face as she skipped off to follow her mother's directions. "Oh, Mother, thank you!" she called. "Now I can finish my kodak book and show it to Aunt Lucia."

The little girl found a place at a table and began mounting pictures with the gummed corners she had found.

That evening, after Betty Ann had gone to bed, I heard Beatrice say gently to Alice and Kenneth, "It would have been kind, this afternoon, if you had invited Betty Ann to play a game of canasta with you after you had finished the one you were playing when she came home."

Both of the older children agreed. It was evident that, another time, their little sister would be invited to join them. Said Kenneth, "We'll teach her all the fine points of the game!"

In the same joking spirit his mother replied, "Betty Ann may surprise you by winning the first game!"

"I didn't intervene this afternoon, Lucia," Beatrice explained to me later, "because I didn't want to place undue importance on Betty Ann's hurt feelings. She has sometimes show too much of a tendency to indulge in self-pity. I was saving the materials for her kodak book to give her a pleasant, independent occupation when she needed it. I want her to acquire a fine personality that will not stop to dwell on real or imagined slights.

"I've seen too many examples among adults of the unhappiness that self-pity induces." Beatrice continued. "Only last week a member of a committee on which I was serving left our women's club meeting in unhappy haste because of an unintentional slight. She had been unable to attend the first meeting of our program committee, but she had assured us that any plans we made would be satisfactory to her. On the day of the program we met early at the clubhouse to complete preparations. In our hurry nobody thought about explaining our plans to her. Suddenly we heard a childish exclamation, 'Nobody consulted me about this program—I guess I'm not needed!' Before anyone could stop her our oversensitive friend had left the room and gone home! Needless to say, she left much discomfiture behind her, and I have no doubt she spent a very unhappy afternoon by herself."

"I am sure such early guidance as you are giving Betty Ann would have provided your friend with a more sensible attitude toward such minor omissions," I said. "I like your idea of helping a child build a defense against self-pity by developing resources of his own. When I look around at all the wonderful books in the room where I serve as children's librarian, it seems to me that, with just the little help required to make the needed contacts, right there within those volumes abound the richest of resources for the satisfaction of any child's hands, his mind and his spirit."

MAX B. VESTAL ORDAINED.

(Continued from page 2.)

hundred people were present for the service.

Rev. M. A. Pollard, president of the conference, presided. Invocation was given by Rev. L. M. Presnell, and the scripture lesson was read by Rev. B. H. Lowdermilk. Rev. G. H. Veazey led the evening prayer. The ordination sermon was given by Max's pastor, Dr. F. C. Lester, the title being, "The Man of God."

The candidate was presented by Rev. C. Fred Allred and Rev. H.

(Continued on page 15.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Western North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship

The Western North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship is but one of the five conference youth groups in the Southern Convention. They have their rallies on each fifth Sunday with an average attendance of a little less than 200. These rallies are afternoon and evening affairs, and are looked forward to with anticipation by the youth groups of the churches. Clemm Shankle, of Shady Grove church, near Troy, is the present president of the conference youth, and is a steady, progressive leader.

The youth of this conference always supports the project of the Southern Convention Youth Fellowship, and had Dr. Henry Robinson to speak at their last rally to bring them up to date on the Moonelon project. In addition the different church groups have projects of their own which are helpful in their church and community.

Their next fifth Sunday rally will be held at Pleasant Grove, which has one of the most active groups in the conference. Rev. Bill Simmons, ex-president of the conference youth, is pastor of this church. Grace's Chapel church, near Sanford, also served by Rev. Simmons, will be the scene of the November rally. One of the younger groups in the conference, the Grace's Chapel Youth Fellowship, promises to become one of the strongest.

The fellowship in this conference receive a good deal of support from their ministers. At the last rally, which was held at Smithwood, there were 10 ministers present. Winfred Bray, pastor of Antioch, Union Grove and Randleman churches, and Max Vestal, pastor of Pleasant Ridge and Spoon's Chapel churches, are ex-officers in the W. N. C. Youth Fellowship. Rev. Silas Madren, new pastor at Albemarle, and also his son, Thomas, have been active in the Valley conference youth work, and have taken up here where they left off there. Although space will not permit the naming of all the helpful ministers, the youth do appreciate their support.

Let Us Pray . . .

For work to do that's good and true;
For light each day to guide the way;
For hope that's pure, and faith that's sure.

* * *

Relax With Max

One town's most worldly parson put it squarely to his parishioners in his last church bulletin, "Why don't you," he wrote, "spend one hour in church as a tithe for every ten you spend with radio and television?"

* * *

We have so many things to do nowadays and so little time to do them in, that we can't afford to waste our time on things that aren't worthwhile.

* * *

If there are any of you who disagree with me that Western North Carolina Youth Fellowship is the best in the Southern Convention, let me have some news from you to prove it.

* * *

"Haste makes waste" scares a good many folks; so they don't bother to do anything. So actually they waste a lot, but it takes them longer to do it. Maybe the saying should be changed to read, "Haste makes waste, faster."

Elon Community Church Closes Successful Bible School.

Ninety children received certificates in the Elon College Community Church Vacation Bible School which closed on Friday, June 12.

The Children's Day program which was presented in Whitley Auditorium at the regular church hour was planned by the Vacation Bible School. Each group was represented on the program. Mrs. Robert Lee House was the speaker for this service.

The Vacation Bible School was directed by Mrs. J. H. Booth. The teachers were Mrs. Virgil Truitt, Mrs. Baxter Twiddy, Miss Melva Foster, and Mr. Bill Tolley, a S. S. S. worker. Those assisting in the school were Misses Glenda Burke, Mary Lou Booth, Betty Rae Franks, Vivian Franks, Ann Kinch, Foye Matlock, Mrs. J. Mark McAdams, and Mrs. Fred Yarbrough.

A PERSONAL LETTER.

(Continued from page 2.)

The theme, itself, "Congregational Churchmanship," is of great importance because of the very diversity of the membership of the Council, for in these diversities our various national bodies have each developed its own form of Congregational Christian Church life, illustrating that it is a Spirit that unites us rather than some particular way of performing.

It will be a searching for the principle that unites us as we continue to work with power for the union of the Church of Jesus Christ. It was to further this purpose that the Christian Church began, and later merged its life with our "Congregational" brethren.

Delegates from several nations and our mission fields will unite hearts and minds in this world meeting of our Congregational Christian forces.

There are approximately twenty-five Congregational Christians aboard the Queen Elizabeth—many others are flying or taking other ships. Dr. N. G. Newman is amongst us, and he is a joy and inspiration to all of us. Dr. and Mrs. Robert Cashman are with us; also Mrs. W. B. Buckham. Dr. Cashman, as you know, is the moderator of the General Council, and Mrs. Buckham is the president of our Congregational Christian Women's State Presidents. We have had a delightful company.

Sincerely,

BILL.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 8.)

missions, to learn how to do the job better. A society which enjoys Christian fellowship, rather than "bickering." A society whose interests are as broad as the world in which we live, but which can also narrow its focus so as to help people in its own vicinity.

May we have more societies like this in the Western Conference!

* * * * *

Missionary Society Reorganized

The Mt. Gilead Missionary Society, Rt. 2, Louisburg, N. C., has been reorganized, and will meet on Tuesday evening after the First Sunday of each month, at 8 o'clock. For the present, all meetings will be held in the church. The officers include: Mrs. W. P. Pleasants, president; Mrs. Sam Hight, chairman of the program committee, and Mrs. J. B. Hight, secretary.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Paul's Joy in Christ"

LESSON XIII—JUNE 27, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "The peace of God, which passes all understanding, will keep your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus."—Philippians 4:7.

LESSON: Philippians 1: 12-27a

DEVOTIONAL READING: Philippians 1: 1-11.

Prison Productions.

A lot of good and great literature has been produced in prison. Marco Polo wrote his immortal travels in jail. Many of John Huss' greatest writings were written in prison. John Bunyan wrote Pilgrim's Progress, the next "best seller" to the Bible, while in Bedford jail. Daniel Defoe planned his Robinson Crusoe while serving a prison sentence. O Henry wrote many of his best short stories in a cell. And many more instances could be given of men—and women—who, in prison, produced good and great literature.

Perhaps the number one exhibit along this line, however, is Paul's letter to the Philippians. For this little letter, four chapters long, was written while Paul was a prisoner in Rome, and while he was chained by day and by night to a Roman guard. Furthermore, he was imprisoned unjustly, and in a sense illegally. His imprisonment apparently would cut short his great ministry of preaching, and would prevent him from going some places he planned to go, and doing some things he wanted to do. He might well have become bitter and cynical and desperately unhappy. But not this fellow Paul. And when he wrote this letter to his Philippian friends he wrote out of an abundance of joy that overflows and fills every page—almost every verse—in the letter. Indeed the letter might well be called "Joy in Jail." How could the man write such a glad letter under such circumstances? What was there about the situation to produce any happiness? Let Paul himself give us the answer or answers.

In the first place, in spite of the fact that Paul was a prisoner, he was finding an open door to a great and an unsuspected ministry of preaching and personal work. Every so often, perhaps every few hours, the Roman guard who was chained to Paul and guarded him, was relieved by another man. Thus in the course of a day and a week and a month, Paul came in contact with a large number of Roman soldiers. And to every one of them, Paul bore his witness to his faith in Christ, and his love for Christ, and his loyalty to Christ. These men heard him talk to those who came to see him, saw him write letters to his friends, heard him read them aloud, and most impressive of all, heard him as he talked with them about Christ, and were brought face to face with Christ's claim upon their lives. And when they went back to the guard house they told others about this indomitable and indiscourageable man. Thus Paul writes that his bonds had "become manifest in Christ throughout the whole praetorian guard, and to all the rest." Indeed the "good news" was spread abroad even unto "Caesar's household." When God closed the door of Paul's ministry in one place, he opened another door in a place where he never would have had a chance to preach the gospel if he had been free. God works in mysterious ways his wonders to perform and his ways to fulfil. Paul's heart was filled with joy over this open door to Caesar's men and to Caesar's household.

There was something else that made Paul glad. His courage in speaking about Christ and his example in proclaiming the gospel under difficulties, encouraged and inspired others to preach more boldly and more faithfully. "Most of the brethren in the Lord, being confident in my bonds, are more abundantly bold to speak the word of God without fear." Just as one soldier or sailor can strengthen and inspire a whole company of his fellowmen, so did Paul's courage become contagious and others preached more zealously. And that made him very happy. What difference did it make, if some of them were preaching from the spirit of faction? Christ was being preached. "Whether in pretence or in truth, Christ is proclaimed; wherein I rejoice, yea, and will rejoice."—that was the thing, Christ was being preached, people were hearing about him, the seed was being sown. That made him happy.

But of course, the thing that made Paul happiest, and the thing that caused his joy to be full, even in prison, was the fact that Christ was with him and in him. "For me to live is Christ, and to die is gain." The fellow was in a "strait" as he himself says. In a way it would be good to get the things over with and to die, for then he would "depart and be with Christ" which would be far better. But he felt that God still had work for him to do, and for the sake of his friends he was willing and glad to abide with them. He knew that he was within God's will and in God's hands. He was conscious of the presence of Christ. As long as Christ had work for him to do here, he wanted to do it. What did it matter where he was, so long as Christ was with him? And suppose he died, what difference did it make. For when he departed, he would still be with Christ. You can't take the joy out of a man's heart when he is sustained by that conviction. Paul knew the truth of the Master's words, "My joy I give unto you, and your joy no man taketh away from you. Not as the world giveth, give I unto you." All this does not mean that Paul went through life grinning like a Pollyanna. It does mean that deep down in his life there were deep wells of joy which time and circumstance could not touch or quench. He had learned from the Master himself that it is not what one has, or where he is, that makes for happiness, but what he is and what he is doing for others that creates and sustains happiness.

As some one has written, we permit too many opportunities for happiness to slip by us because we think we shall be happy—

When we can be with a certain person in a certain place;
When our schooling is finished;
When we get a better job;
When we arrive at a certain income;
When we are married; (or some people think when they get unmarried)
When we recover from our illness;
When all our bills are paid;
When we move into a new home;
When some disagreeable task is finished.

A lot of it is wishful thinking. All the while opportunities for happiness are flowing by us continuously at conduct a revival meeting. The meeting was such a success that at its close a group of believers asked him to organize a church. At first, he refused to grant their request, but after careful consideration decided to go through with the organization.
(Continued on page 14.)

OUR WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA CHURCHES REPORT.

(Continued from page 9.)

On the night of July 28, 1912, the group of believers met in a "bush arbor" prepared for the purpose and organized the First Congregational Church of Albemarle. The church was legally organized according to the Congregational laws. Officers and a building committee were also elected.

For a period of about ten months, worship services were held under the "bush arbor," in a tent and in the homes of the people. During these months plans were developing for a church building.

A lot was purchased on November 30, 1912, for the sum of $100. The church building was then started and, with the help of the Church Building Society, the building was completed at a cost of $1,200. The first service held in the church was a business meeting on May 25, 1913. The purpose of this meeting was to elect officers for the church.

The church continued to grow, and the Sunday school membership also increased. By 1922, it seemed that a new and better equipped building was an absolute necessity. It was also plainly evident that the Sunday school could not do its best without class rooms. After five long years of planning and preparation, in July, 1927, a new church building was started. Through the untiring efforts of the members and the support of friends and the building society, the present building was completed except for the basement.

The first service held in the new church building was a sunrise service on Easter Sunday, 1928. The special service of dedication of the church was held on Sunday morning, September 27, 1931, at 11 o'clock.

After the merger of the Congregational and Christian churches, the name of the church was officially changed to the First Congregational Christian Church of Albemarle, on October 4, 1936.

The Sunday school rooms in the basement of the church were completed April 27, 1937, giving the Sunday school a total of 13 class rooms.

The present value of the church property is estimated at $30,000.

There were ten charter members when the church was organized, five of whom are still living: J. J. McSwain, Carl Simmons, Mrs. Pattie Holt, Mrs. Elizabeth Plyler and Dora Carter.

Thirteen pastors have served the church since its organization. The first pastor was Rev. Rivers Lebby, who came to the church on August 14, 1912. He served only five months, and was followed in turn by Rev. W. Boyd Goebel, Rev. J. K. Higginbotham, Rev. W. B. Graham and Rev. C. C. Hamilton. Rev. George W. Penn came to the church on January 1, 1930, and was followed by Rev. Arthur G. Swartz. Rev. Arnold Slater served from August 16, 1934 to February 28, 1938. He was followed by

REV. SILAS E. MADREN

Rev. O. A. Elmore in June 1938. Rev. Ben Joe Earp served from Dec. 1, 1940 to May 28, 1947. He was followed by Rev. W. Walter Hall and Rev. Thomas D. Sutton, who served till December 28, 1952.

The present pastor, Rev. Silas E. Madren entered the pastorate on April 5, 1953. Under his leadership, the church is looking forward to a period of growth and increased activity in the work of the Kingdom.

Student Pastor Doing Good Work At Flint Hill (R)

The Flint Hill Church is progressing along very nicely this year under the pastorate of Rev. Avery Brown. The attendance has increased some during the summer months, and all are looking forward to a stronger and more united church. The present pastor accepted Flint Hill along with Sophia and Bailey's Grove, on February 1, 1953, and moved to the parsonage at Sophia. He is a student at Elon College.

Flint Hill has only about 40 on roll at present, but is doing a wonderful work according to membership. We voted to accept our apportionment on the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign at a called business meeting held in May at the church. We are glad to be a part in advancing our help to others. We could never have built our church without the aid of the Congregational Building Society, so we gladly accept our part.

The following pastors have served Flint Hill Church since it was organized, 25 years ago: S. M. Penn, D. M. Spence, Chas. C. Thomas, W. T. Madren, G. C. Crutchfield and the present pastor, Avery Brown. The 25th anniversary was held last October with the first pastor, Rev. S. M. Penn, present for that day.

On the third Sunday in May of this year, an outdoor Memorial Service was held at 6 o'clock in the evening. We gathered at the picnic table for a bountiful supper and then proceeded to the cemetery where we were welcomed with a solo from Harvey Lanier's accordion. Mr. Brown, our pastor, read the scripture and led the prayer. Rev. S. S. Nelson and Miss Eula Smith read memorials to those who had passed away during the last year. We then went into the church for an evening of quiet fellowship and a song service.

We are looking forward to our annual revival and to the Vacation Bible School in July.

MRS. MARY FARLOW,
Reporter.

Spoon's Chapel, Small But Active Church

Although Spoon's Chapel has only 38 members, it is always in the forefront when there is a conference or convention task to be done. Spoon's Chapel was the first church in the Western North Carolina Conference to make its Declaration of Purpose in the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign. Its average attendance is in excess of the membership, and so there is great possibility for healthy growth.

In the church are organizations for the young people, the men and the ladies. They meet regularly with good attendance. The Sunday school has good attendance and is making

(Continued on page 15.)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

The rains have come and our gardens and crops have started to grow again. We are so grateful. At the same time we have been slowed down for a few days—we hope it is only a few days—with our harvest of oats and wheat. It is very interesting to see boys here grow up to where they can be given some responsibility, and to see how most of them shoulder it well.

Frequently I get requests for information which has been emphasized regularly in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. By the very nature of the inquiry, I know the one making it is not a subscriber, and when I realize the one asking for the information is a member of our denomination right here in the Southern Convention I feel like somebody is missing a good chance to keep up with the orphanage by subscribing to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

One of our citizens of this community told me the other day as we came from morning worship that he thought the orphanage children were the best behaved children—considering how many there are—he knew about anywhere. Well, I am sometimes embarrassed with their behavior but I do think on the whole they do real well. When they are in church they act in such a way as to be commended. And I am always proud of them, especially when they show reverence and attentiveness. Two of our older girls joined church this past Sunday, June 7.

This week Miss Foster is assisting mornings in the Community Church Vocational Bible School. A large number of our children are attending from 9:00 to 11:30. The orphanage is glad to share Miss Foster with this community effort because the Elon Church is our church, and we want to do our part in it. We wish every matron, child and worker could attend the church every Sunday morning. Attending church does something for us all that goes undone without it. To neglect the church is to neglect the noblest institution on earth. Except for the exceptions every Christian should contribute to the church every week. We want our children here to go forth with the power and blessing of the church upon them in order that they may render the kind of service in the world a good Christian renders.

I was talking with one of our graduates yesterday. She had come back to see me. She was so thrilled over the fact that soon she would draw her first pay check. I reminded her of her duty to contribute to the church. No, I did not say the orphanage. I said the church. If she helps make a strong church the orphanage will be given its needs. Good Christians are going to see to it that these children here are taken care of, and that this home will be supported.

Thank you for the money received and reported this week. I could wish it were more, but I believe you will see to it that your Sunday school gets that "monthly offering" in and that will give us more on the coming reports. It is the regular monthly offering that makes our income as regular as the outgo. This is true because we lack endowment, and because we have to depend each week on the income of that week, or go in debt. So you can see why I watch these reports so eagerly.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JUNE 11, 1953.

Sunday School Monthly Offering.

Amount brought forward	$ 7,314.79
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Morrisville	$ 8.42
	8.42
Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Nans) S. S. .	$ 26.07
	26.07
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington S. S.	$ 5.00
Durham S. S.	39.17
Hopedale	52.64
	96.81

Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Grove	$ 5.00
	5.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Timber Ridge	$ 1.00
Winchester S. S.	8.34
	9.34
Total	$ 145.64
Grand total	$ 7,460.43

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 9,631.74
Miss Patti Adams, South Boston, Va. for shower room	$ 5.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. E. Branch and Dotie, Garner, N. C. .	50.00
Fifth Grade, Elon College Public School for Thurman Arnold	5.00
Miss Wilmer C. Holt, Burlington, N. C. for Laverne Mecimore	13.00
Mrs. G. W. Wade, Franklin, Va., in memory of Mrs. Naomi T. Jones ..	10.00
Special Gifts	10.00
	93.00
Grand total	$ 9,724.74
Total for the week	$ 238.64
Total for the year	$17,185.17

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

home, in the office, in the school, along the street, all through life.

"Only let your manner of life be worthy of the Gospel of Christ," adds this glad man. Those of us who are Christians wear the name of Christ. Let us live worthy of the high calling wherewith we have been called.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through June 6, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	$1,591.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein .	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo . .	459.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood . . .	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register . . .	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown . . .	127.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey . . .	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder . . .	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr. . .	82.50
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth	2,450.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson . . .	1,065.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries . . .	3,211.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes . . .	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

†Paid.

MAX B. VESTAL ORDAINED.
(Continued from page 10.)

Winfred Bray. Mr. Allred led the ordination prayer, Mr. Presnell presented the Bible, and Mr. Lester gave the charge. President Pollard performed the act of ordination.

Other ministers present included Rev. L. M. Burgess and Rev. Avery Brown.

Special music was furnished by the combined youth and adult choirs of the Pleasant Ridge Church, directed by Mrs. Sybrant Pell, who also served as organist.

The Asheboro Church presented Max with a brief case, a zippered pocket Bible and a gift of money to be used in purchasing a book, to show their appreciation for this first minister to be ordained from their church group.

Mr. Vestal is a graduate of the Asheboro High School and Elon College. He has been for some time the editor of the Young People's page in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. He spent one summer in Italy as a member of a World Council of Churches work group. At present, he is the pastor of Pleasant Ridge and Spoon's Chapel Churches.

If you like this issue of THE SUN, we invite you to become a subscriber.

MAX VESTAL,
Pastor.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

The Progress of the Western North Carolina Conference

By REV. M. A. POLLARD, President

The Western North Carolina Conference of Congregational Christian Churches has, in the last several years made great progress. There has been from year to year a much better understanding of the various organized groups working with the whole program of the churches of the conference. The Executive Committee of the conference is anxious to find new ways to help our churches. This special edition of The Christian Sun, we hope, will be a means of creating a greater interest in The Sun, and at the same time will awaken our churches to what has taken place in our conference in recent years. We have not only increased in membership, but in generosity—increasing pastors' salaries, building new houses of worship and enlarging others to more adequately meet the local needs. We are also learning to understand each other better. In all these ways we are making progress.

There were thirty-eight churches reporting at our last conference session, with interesting news of work being done by these churches. The progress of these churches is under the leadership of pastors who can give more efficient service because they live among their people and can give more time to their work. Many churches in the conference have parsonages for their ministers. Five of these churches are full time pastorates: Albemarle, Rev. S. E. Madren, pastor; Asheboro, Dr. F. C. Lester, pastor; High Point, Rev. G. H. Veazey, pastor; Liberty, Rev. L. M. Presnell, pastor; and Pleasant Hill, Rev. M. A. Pollard pastor, the only rural full-time church in the conference. We have five organized groups, who have their pastors living in parsonages provided by these groups: Sophia, Flint Hill (R) and Bailey's Grove, served by Rev. Avery Brown, with a parsonage at Sophia; Randleman, Antioch (R), and Union Grove, served by Rev. W. H. Bray, with a parsonage at Randleman; Seagrove, Ether and Shady Grove, served by Rev. R. L. Clap, with a parsonage at Seagrove. Rev. R. T. Grissom, with a parsonage at Hank's Chapel, also serves Shiloh. Rev. Bill Simmons, with a parsonage at Pleasant Grove, serves Grace's Chapel. The Pleasant Ridge parsonage is vacant at present, Rev. Max Vestal serving that church along with Spoon's Chapel. All of this means that greater interest and the desire for better leadership is being provided.

The aims of the conference are to endeavor to provide such help as to lead every church to realize its own responsibilities to the Lord Jesus Christ and its opportunities to serve the community better by cooperating and working in harmony with the conference. This, we feel, already has been accomplished in part. We urge all of our churches to call as pastors only those who are members of our own denomination in good and regular standing. No church can render its best service to any denomination until it can and will work with and support all of the enterprises of the denomination. Many of our churches have fallen short of what they should be doing. Our conference officials spend much time trying to correct mistakes and failures of the past and helping the local church to realize that there is strength in unity. Each church is an important unit of the Southern Convention, and as such should cooperate in carrying out the whole program of our church. We hope that this year will be one in which every church will do its best to bring to conference a report of work done of which they will be justly proud. Let us all work together to build the Kingdom of our Lord on solid and Christ-like principles.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JULY 2, 1953

NUMBER 26

"God shed His grace . . ."

O beautiful for spacious skies, for amber waves of grain,
For purple mountain majesties above the fruited plain!
America! America! God shed His grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood from sea to shining sea!

O beautiful for pilgrim feet, whose stern, impassioned stress
A thoroughfare for freedom beat across the wilderness!
America! America! God mend thine ev'ry flaw
Confirm thy soul in self control, thy liberty in law!

O beautiful for heroes proved in liberating strife,
Who more than self their country loved, mercy more than life!
America! America! May God thy gold refine
Till all success be nobleness and every gain divine!

O beautiful for patriot dream that sees beyond the years
Thine alabaster cities gleam, undimmed by human tears!
America! America! God shed His grace on thee,
And crown thy good with brotherhood from sea to shining sea!

—Katherine Lee Bates.

News Flashes

We wish for our readers a safe and sane Fourth of July.

How is the Church Building Loan Fund Drive coming along in your church? Read "The Manhasset Story" by Wm. Kincaid Newman in this issue of THE SUN.

The article on page 5, "Citizenship, Our Christian Concern," by Rev. T. H. Britton, pastor of Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, was submitted for publication by Mrs. Frank H. Lewis.

In this issue we carry a letter from Ed Riggs to the people of the Southern Convention. We have also received one from Frances, which we promise you next week and both are somewhat delayed because of our skipping the last week in June.

Plan Now Your Fall Stewardship Program

The Missions Council has just issued "Your Every-Member Canvass Work Book." I believe this is the most comprehensive piece of Stewardship work we have produced. I presume every minister has received one, and I urge you not to lay it aside, thinking you will get back to it later and get your order in for the materials you want. They request us to order now. The materials will be mailed to you in August.

This Work Book is a thorough job of indicating steps needed and in setting forth procedures for the entire program of Stewardship for a local church. It announces and lists pamphlets on the various points to be emphasized, and lists the many visual aids available.

Together with this Work Book was sent "Stewardship Plans For the Local Church." This, too, is very fine. There are twelve articles, written by men who know, touching many points of a good Stewardship Program. An order blank is also enclosed.

I urge each pastor to carefully examine these materials and study his local needs now, so that those needs can and will be met as the fall program, with all its demands upon the

(Continued on page 15.)

Rev. Olive Daniel Poythress, Pastor of South Norfolk Church, Is Signally Honored

Rev. Olive Daniel Poythress, on Sunday morning, May 24, at his own church, was presented South Norfolk's "First Citizen of the Year" plaque by Berkly Camp No. 46, of the Woodmen of the World. The presentation was by Mr. Walter S. Williamson of Richmond, Virginia, the past head consul and head clerk of the Jurisdiction of Virginia.

The Rev. Benjamin T. Candler, retired pastor of the Memorial Methodist Church of Berkley, and now the director of social service for the Wes-leymen of the Epworth Methodist Church, delivered the sermon for the occasion.

Photo by C. S. Stewart.

Rev. O. D. Poythress (right) is presented Plaque by Walter S. Williamson of Richmond. Rev. B. T. Candler (center) delivered the sermon for the occasion.

The local committee who selected Mr. Poythress for the honor was composed of W. Henry Rawls, Hugh L. Rawls and E. A. Murphy. Henry A. Seymour presented the speakers at the honoring event.

In this connection was given the following pen sketch of Mr. Poythress:

* * *

Rev. Olive Daniel Poythress, son of the late Robert Lee Poythress and Nancy Daniel Poythress, was born No-

(Continued on page 8.)

Successful Vacation Bible School in Suffolk

The Daily Vacation Bible School of the Suffolk Christian Church was held the week of June 8-12, each day from 9:00-11:00. The school closed Friday night, June 12, with 165 children enrolled and 28 workers. Each department took part in the closing exercise.

The following superintendents and teachers worked in the school:

Cradle Roll—Mrs. H. W. Trump, superintendent; Miss Judy Bolton, Miss Ardith Ann Howell, Mrs. Gordan Haskins, Mrs. T. W. Miltier, Mrs. George Rogers, Mrs. F. C. Copeland.

Beginners—Mrs. Roy Richardson, superintendent; Mrs. Norman Daughtrey, Miss Dottie Daughtrey, Miss Jamie Felton, Mrs. J. F. Murphy, Miss Shirley Richardson, Miss Joyce Odom, Miss Nancy Brown, Miss Nancy Howell.

Primary—Mrs. J. W. Rountree, superintendent; Mrs. G. L. Johnson, Miss Sandra DeShields, Mrs. J. L. Byrd, Jr., Miss Sara Lee Griggs, Miss Patricia Jones.

Junior—Mrs. J. V. Brinkley, superintendent; Mrs. Leon DeShields, Mrs. A. E. Stone, Miss Faye Gordon, Miss Marjorie Price.

Mrs. J. V. Brinkley was director of the school.

Virginia Valley Conference Loses Valued Member

The passing of Mr. Samuel Earman, Sr. in May 12, 1953 brought to an end a long and useful life to the Valley of Virginia Conference where he served as treasurer for more than thirty two years.

Mr. Earman has spent his entire life in Rockingham County with the exception of seven years that he made his home at White Sulphur Springs. For the past forty years he resided at his present residence in Cedar Grove community. For fifty years he had been engaged in the lumber and cooperage business and was widely known throughout the county. Mr. Earman was a man of gentleness and simplicity whose kindness and consideration for all, won for him the friendship of those with whom he came into contact. He was a deacon and faithful member of the Linville Congregational Christian Church. He was a generous giver and supporter not only of his own

(Continued on page 10.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. DANIELEY, Editor, 428 Westwood, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Is Your Church Listed?

We are listing this week all of the churches from which the questionnaires have been received. It is our hope that you will look over the list and see whether your church is listed. If it is not, then why don't you do something about it? If our survey is to be of real value we must have responses from more of our churches. Let us hear from you!, please.

The following reports have been received from Virginia: First Congregational Christian Church, Portsmouth; Bethlehem of Disputanta; Berea of Driver; Antioch, Linville; New Hope and Mayland churches of the Valley, and Franklin.

From North Carolina churches the following reports have been received: Pleasant Ridge of Ramseur; Spoon's Chapel of Asheboro; Happy Mome of Ruffin; Salem Chapel of Belews Creek; Pleasant Grove of Bennett; Asheboro; Albemarle; Elon College Community Church; Morrisville; Erskine Memorial Church of Tryon; Beverly Hills of Burlington; and Union (N. C.) of Burlington.

Many of our churches are missing from the list; some of you probably never received a questionnaire although we certainly tried to get one to every church. Please check and let us have your answer, or write to us for another blank if you did not receive one.

* * * * *

Union (N. C.)

David Barker is president of the Laymen's Fellowship at Union; Graham Chandler serves as secretary and R. L. Gilliam as treasurer. The group which was organized in 1948 meets each month. The men have assessed themselves with annual dues of $6.00. Although they do not have a Father-Son Banquet they do have a Family Night and also a Ladies Night program. They have had a number of projects including the sponsoring of a harvest sale, furnishing labor and materials on the new educational building (and they have done a fine job!), reworking the church grounds furnishing the necessary labor, fertilizer and seed. In addition to this the men are supporting the Moonelon project. These men have a good program; it requires them to work and that is just what our church should do. We are proud of the work being done in the total program at Union and appreciate the fine part the Men's Fellowship has had in it.

* * * * *

First Church of Portsmouth

Organized in 1948 this Fellowship of 35 men is served by B. L. Sawyer as president and Harry H. Harcum as secretary-treasurer. The group meets quarterly. The men conducted the Wednesday evening services for five weeks during the Lenten Season. A banquet is being planned for the men and their wives.

* * * * *

From Walter Graham

Walter Graham, National Director of our Laymen's Fellowship, has many jobs and does them well. One of these jobs is the writing of an editorial in The Fellowship, monthly publication of National Fellowship. We are printing today the message which he wrote and published in the April issue. We commend it to you very highly.

* * *

"Living in today's world calls for faith. How much do you have? Is it stronger today than a year ago? Has your religion strengthened your faith?"

(Continued on page 10.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

General contributions should be addressed to the editor at Southern Pines, N. C., and should reach him by Wednesday of the week preceding date of publication.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195...

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

The Real Basis of Americanism

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

The Church believes that the real basis of Americanism is not found in hilarious demonstrations of flag waving or in the hip-hip-hurrahs that but voice sentimental flashes of miscalled patriotic fervor. True Americanism is found only in the character and idealism of true Americans—whether by birth or by adoption—in their interest in and regard for America's youth, who in the rapid passing of time will so soon be directing the affairs of State, of Church, of business, of industry and of every profession and vocation, and of all human relationships!

Giving youth a fair chance, recognizing that much of so-called juvenile delinquency can be traced directly to parental delinquency, and the determination on the part of adults to see that every youth has a fair break in life—these are the chief corner stones and the dynamics of true Americanism on which rest our nation's hopes and dreams. As go the youth of today, so will go our nation tomorrow.

Every pitfall in the pathway of the youth of today was designed and placed by society's adults who very definitely owe an apology to youth for the kind of world in which youth have to live. Adults owe the youth their sympathy and not their condemnation, their prayers and not their censure, when youth go wrong.

There never has been a finer generation of youth than those of the present day. By and large, they have a far higher batting average in "The Game of Life" than had their parents in their own days of youth. It is maliciously wrong to generalize in our appraisal of present-day youth, and because of the wildness and misdeeds of a few misguided youth to condemn all youth as a group. The thoughtless and careless youth of today may be more daring and may go farther in their depredations than did the thoughtless and careless youth of past generations, but it is also true that the youth of today who seek "the good way of life" far outnumber those who are on "the wrong road," and those on the right road are much farther along the way than were their type in any generation past.

But so long as so many present-day dads and mothers spurn the right road—thinking they can get by with anything—it is only to be expected that their sons and daughters will conclude that they, too, can do as they may please and get by with it.

Playing fair with the youth of today is our biggest job, our greatest responsibility, as individuals, as organizations, as a nation.

Precarious Independence

This week-end the American people will celebrate in one way or another the anniversary of their Declaration of Independence from the crown of Great Britain. One wonders, with misgivings, whether the "Spirit of 1776" is still alive. What has happened to cause the difference between the small group of colonists who defied the most powerful nation of the earth, and this great nation which is ours today?

The statement made by Dr. Daniel A. Poling, editor of Christian Herald, upon his recent return from the Orient, is ominous. Said he: "If Moscow and Red China can keep us talking a little longer, they will take Indochina, Thailand, Burma and Malaya, and move directly into India. Right now, they are knocking at India's thin door, with 'comrades' ready to open it from within. Any 'peace' or armistice that agrees to the partition of Korea or accepts present frontiers in Asia and Europe, would be a second but infinitely worse Munich. General James A. Van Fleet said recently: 'In the present peace talks with the Chinese Reds, I am absolutely convinced that we run the risk of throwing away the future of our nation.'" Dr. Poling added, "I agree with that."

This question confronts the Christian on the anniversary of our independence. "What should be my attitude regarding the crisis that confronts our nation?" As a follower of the Prince of Peace, war can be only abhorrent to him. Yet Jesus said: "Think not I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword." And he quickly adds, that father, mother, son or daughter may have to be sacrificed in the cause of building his kingdom here on earth. What then should be our attitude in this alarming situation? What should be the attitude of our leaders? More important yet, what should be the attitude of the Church of Christ?

May our sincere prayers be that God give us and the leaders of our nation the strength to do what he would have us do.

As We Celebrate the Fourth of July Let Us Remember that . . .

Citizenship is Our Christian Concern

An Address by REV. THOMAS H. BRITTON
Minister of Shelton Memorial Church of Portsmouth, Virginia

The relationship of God and political government is one which is difficult to describe. But even the most superficial student of our nation's history cannot help but be cognizant that the awareness of the existence of such a relationship has had a tremendous influence upon our government down through the years.

Looking back in history we learn that when the Mayflower Pilgrims readied themselves to disembark at Plymouth, they prepared a document which was the first compact of self-government in America. And it began with the words, "In the name of God"

Many years later in colonial history, when Patrick Henry stood in St. John's Church in Richmond to give his famous "liberty or death" speech, in which he preached opposition to the unjust edicts of the Mother Country, he felt it his duty to place before his hearers what he referred to as "the great responsibility which we hold to God and our country."

The Declaration of Independence, that exalted pronouncement which occupies first place in freedom's hall of fame, demonstrates by its words that it is a religious as well as a political document, calling attention as it does to "certain inalienable rights" with which men are "endowed by their Creator."

The Father of our Country, in the address which he gave following his first inauguration in New York City, stated that ". . . it would be peculiarly improper to omit . . . my fervent supplications to that Almighty Being who rules over the universe."

Abraham Lincoln, in his memorable message at Gettysburg, which is now revered in both South and North, made reference to the shining hope of "a new birth of freedom" which would come to "this nation, under God."

Bringing our thesis to an application in more recent history, during the dark days of World War II, while he called for the utmost effort in the field of the production of those goods and commodities necessary for the successful prosecution of the conflict, the late President Roosevelt emphasized just as strongly that, "We must avail ourselves to the full of our spiritual resources."

And only a few months ago, after he took the oath of the highest office in the land, President Eisenhower began his first message as Chief Executive with a prayer for wisdom and for guidance of Almighty God.

Certainly it is evident that the political statesmen of our nation throughout its history, reflecting the conviction of the majority of our citizens, have recognized that the relationship of God to government, through virtually indescribable in words, is nevertheless real and vital.

Now, this is not to suggest that there is or that there should be a direct relation of church and state. The First Amendment to our nation's Constitution specifically declares that there can be "no law respecting an establishment of religion." This provision refers, of course, to sectarian religion; and the early leaders of our republic exercised great wisdom here, for they realized that an alliance of church and state could result only in the restriction of the liberty of both. But separation of church and state is not the same as the separation of religion and state. For as long as religious faith makes its abode in the hearts and minds of the people, and as long as the people control the government, there will be a real and vital tie between God and the nation's affairs. This is an important consideration, for what we are really saying is that the citizens themselves are the link between God and the government, and the nation is "under God" to the extent that the citizens of the nation truly respond to the prompting of God's Spirit in their hearts.

The relationship we are considering, then, is three-fold—involving God, the people, and the government. And the relationship of God to government depends, first, upon the response of citizens to the purpose of God, and second, upon the acceptance by the people of the responsibilities of citizenship. This might express another way—in terms of duty: It is the responsibility of the Christian citizen, insofar as he has the power, to translate the will of God into the law of the land. And it should be added that the converse of this is also true, that it is the responsibility of the Christian citizen to see to it, insofar as he has the power, that the law of the land does not do violence to the purpose of God.

We might well ask ourselves, then, what are the purposes of God for our nation? What is his will for America?

Now, I am not a seer. I make no claim to be a reader of the mind of the Eternal. But let me suggest to you two great purposes which I believe with all my heart to be descriptive, at least in part, of God's will for our own country. The first is that God desires our nation to be what its national anthem claims it to be: "The land of the free."

Now, it may come to your mind that implied in that conviction is the suggestion that our country is not now such a land. It may seem a shocking thought that perhaps our nation is not truly free. And yet I must say, however regretfully, that it is not. Of course it is true that the people of the United States enjoy as much freedom as there exists in any other nation, and more than in most. I quite agree that that is the case, and with you I thank God. But in spite of the large measure of freedom which we do have, still there are in our nation many who are not free.

Let me try to make clear to you what I mean. Think of it this way: The nation is the people—all the people. Each individual person in our land is part of the whole—the whole being the nation. And, then simple logic tells us that if freedom is denied one part of the whole, then the nation is not totally free. (Now,

(Continued on page 9.)

"The Manhasset Story"

By WILLIAM KINCAID NEWMAN.

At its Commencement, May 25, Elon College honored the Reverend George Gerald Parker with a degree of Doctor of Divinity. In the ten years of his ministry at the Manhasset Church, Dr. Parker has led the church in one of the most thrilling developments of any church in our fellowship. The church had begun two years earlier when a group of laymen who had recently moved to Manhasset from Brooklyn decided they missed the fellowship of their Congregational Christian churches there and that a new church ought to be founded in Manhasset. They consulted with the denomination with the result that a woman's club was rented for services and a student from Union Theological Seminary secured to give part-time leadership.

So much strength developed that a full-time pastor, Reverend Stephen Ayers, was soon called to the church, serving until 1943, when he entered the chaplaincy. Under Dr. Parker's leadership the club house was outgrown and the church purchased, with assistance of the Church Building Loan Fund, a large country club. The men removed the bars from the bar room and converted it into a worshipful chapel. Other rooms served well for the Sunday school.

Hardly was this step taken when both the Sunday school and church services became so crowded that it was necessary to hold two complete Sunday schools and two complete church services every Sunday. Plans were drawn for a new church building, and several major building fund drives were held among the members of the church. The club house was sold and a beautiful church building was erected. Although this is one of the largest buildings built by any of our churches since the War, it also is filled to capacity and the church continues to hold two services of worship and two Sunday schools every Sunday, with additional services on Easter. In the twelve-year period, the membership has grown from zero to 1,913, of whom 247 joined the church in 1952.

The average attendance is 760, and the church school enrollment is 1,351. The total benevolences of the church in 1952 amounted to $19,819. The church is strong in its program as well as in its membership and is doing a marvelous job in its youth work and Christian education as well as in its Sunday services. Dr. Parker's brilliant leadership, the hard work and sacrificial giving of the members and the financial help of the Church Building Society have made this possible.

How many more Manhassetts can we have if our Church Building Loan Fund Campaign is successful?

Causes of War

By WM. T. SCOTT.

On Sunday, June 7, the Congregational Christian delegates to the International Council aboard the Queen Elizabeth, had the privilege of a personal conference with Rabbi Nathan Swift of Natal, South Africa.

Rabbi Swift has been Chief Rabbi of South Africa since 1950. It is here that racial conflict is so great at the moment—where 10 millions of black men are struggling for their rights against 2½ million whites.

Rabbi Swift is a brilliant man and in his brief address he gave some most interesting facts concerning South Africa. For one thing, we were reminded that geographically this area of the world is one of the largest inhabited by man. He said South Africa's potential in gold, uranium, and other minerals was one of the world's greatest, and for that reason, the present conflict reflects the same motive that is present everywhere—resources, material possessions.

In the course of his talk, he stated that while aboard the Queen Elizabeth he was reading some old Rabbinical legends, and in them were listed—among others—"Cardinal Transgressions" of man. He mentioned five.

1. Greed—as reflected in Adam's desire to eat the forbidden fruit.
2. Murder—illustrated by Cain's Sin of Murder. He said this crime was one of hasty temper, but evil not only in taking life, but also in disregard of his brother's right to live.
3. Forger—maker of instruments of murder. Tubal Cain, a descendant of Cain, the character showing the effect of this transgression. If anything, the sin of Tubal Cain was greater than that of his ancestor, because Tubal Cain's act was a premeditated and deliberate attempt to place in man's hand an instrument of death.

4. Evading the Law—as in the days of Noah. Open and flagrant wickedness and robbery.
5. Usurpation of God's Place—the Tower of Babel incident being illustrative of this sin.

Summing up, he said the history of war is one of greed; Cain's disregard of his brother, the profit of armaments, the practice of evading what is fundamentally right, the usurpation of God's place in the life of man. All of these are modern sins and makers of war.

One of the most condemning statements Rabbi Swift made was that the African's high sense of morals and honesty has broken down because of their contacts with the white man! Certainly privilege carries grave responsibility.

Cherbourg, France.

Discussion Meeting Called for by Group of Ministers

Thirty two ministers of the Southern Convention, meeting at Camp New Hope for a Study Conference recently, made the following motion which was adopted unanimously:

"Moved, that the Executive Committee of the Southern Convention be asked to call a meeting in the Fall to consider problems of the Southern Convention, especially those in relation to structure, organization, and administration of the conferences and institutions of the convention."

There is a feeling among many of the ministers that the conference boundaries are not suited to present day conditions. Some feel that the conferences, as presently carried out, are stereotyped and of little value—and ought to be thought through pretty carefully with a view to make our work more effective. The work of our institutions need also to be re-considered.

Such changes ought not to be made hastily, but should be thoroughly discussed. It is the hope of this group of ministers that the Executive Committee accept responsibility for beginning this process by setting up such a discussion meeting.

RICHARD L. JACKSON.

Church Building Loan Fund envelopes for the use of local churches in promoting the campaign are available at the Campaign Office, 287 4th Avenue, New York 10, New York.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Illiteracy

Since the founding of this nation officials have done battle against illiteracy. We have authorized and supported a comprehensive public school system designed to reach every child with the opportunity of learning. We have passed laws compelling our children to take advantage of these opportunities. We have built colleges and great universities at tremendous cost that the youth of our land might be educated and fitted for life. The results are gratifying but not complete.

During World War II an amazing number of young men were disqualified for service to our country for the lack of education. In spite of our public schools and all of our colleges and universities, there are still uncounted thousands of school children and young people of school and college age in our country who are illiterate, disqualified for the best service to society and to their country and for joyous satisfaction to themselves.

When a young man or a young woman graduates from high school, he is face to face with another test that may be severe. He is ambitious to enter college but will he be permitted to enter? In an educational conference a college president in speaking of standards that he had set for his college declared that only high school graduates who were in the top ten percent scholastically would be admitted as students. Some applauded, others were silent. What would you say? This is a grave question. Should only the brilliant be given the advantage of a college education? What about the other ninety percent? Would this create a wholesome situation for democracy? Would democracy thrive in an atmosphere of that character? Would it not provide fertile soil for autocracy? It might create a favorable situation even for the communism where the few laud it over the many. Illiteracy sets the pattern for servitude.

Fortunately, we are not all alike. The Good Lord gave some five talents, some two, and some one. They are all given even opportunities to develop their talents. The ones with the one talent are held responsible according to their abilities. The failure to develop that talent receives condemnation.

The position of Elon College is and has always been that our system of education, secondary and higher, is and was designed to dispel illiteracy, to replace ignorance with information, to offer the privilege of a college education to all who are ambitious and willing to pay the price. There are some brilliant, some fairly intelligent, and some who stand at the bottom, but if we are to have a safe and working democracy, all should be given the opportunity to inform themselves. Democracy will not thrive on ignorance.

The government comes along and says if a college student is in the upper half of his class, he could be permitted to remain in college until graduation, but if he is in the lower half of his class he is subject to being drafted for military service. Someone has said, "No nation can survive half free and half slave." Can a democracy survive half learned and half illiterate? Elon College offers its facilities in the field of higher education to all who are ambitious and who are willing to pay the price. It solicits the support of all who believe in the democratic form of government and who stand for the advancement of all of our people.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

There are times when we do not like to discuss debts. If we owe money, we don't like to think about it ourselves unless we can pay it and, much less, do we like for our neighbors and our friends to discuss what we owe.

A group of Elon College Alumni came to the college recently to discuss official business. It was made plain at the meeting that we did not propose to discuss finances. Notwithstanding the fact that the question of finances for the Elon College Alumni Office is a very critical one. Whether we like debts or not, when we owe money our creditors discuss it and they are constantly and continually reminding us that we owe them. When we do not owe money, when we have plenty of money, we do not hesitate to talk about it. We are delighted for other people to talk about it. We want everybody to know that because of our wisdom and business acumen, we have accumulated much of this world's goods. It is interesting how debts make us retiring and how money pushes us forward.

Elon College has its needs. It also has its friends. These friends are abundantly able to assist the college in meeting these needs. Elon numbers among its friends—the churches, Sunday schools of our convention, the alumni of the college, and others who are concerned for the stability and progress of our college.

Previously Reported	$ 4,833.88
Eastern Va. Conference:
Norfolk, First	$ 50.00
Oak Grove S. S.	17.00
Richmond, First	85.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Ingram	$ 24.83

	176.83
Total to date	$ 5,010.71

* * * * *

Rev. O. D. Poythress Is Honored

It quite frequently happens that the daily press carries news of general and specific interest that fails to reach the columns of the religious press. Early last week Mrs. J. Monroe Harris of Norfolk, Virginia, sent me a clipping from the Virginian Pilot giving the interesting news of a signal honor that had been conferred upon our good and popular pastor, the Reverend Olive D. Poythress of South Norfolk, Virginia, he having been named the "outstanding citizen of South Norfolk for the year 1952-53" by Berkley Camp No. 46, Woodmen of the World.

I wish to add my enthusiastic approval of this act on the part of the Woodmen of the World and to extend congratulations to "Red" and to his church, and to wish for him and them many more successful years together as they labor in the interest of the church and for the coming of the Kingdom of Christ in South Norfolk and elsewhere.

L. E. SMITH.

What our deepest self craves is not mere enjoyment, but some supreme purpose that will enlist all our powers and give unity and direction to our life. We can never know the profoundest joy without a conviction that our life is significant—not a meaningless episode. The loftiest aim of human life is the ethical perfecting of mankind—the transfiguration of humanity.—H. J. Golding.

Missions at Home and Abroad

Our Trip from Bombay, India, to San Jose, California

196 So. Clearemont Ave.,
San Jose, California,
June 15, 1943.

Dear Friends:

In spite of the fact that it has been so long since I wrote last, I ought to be able to get this all into one page—for a change—because everything I have to report this time is old stuff, more or less, to most of you, and therefore does not need as much elaboration as when I was telling about India. Of course we have been gone long enough so that we got quite a thrill out of everything we saw and and all the various experiences we had. But when I mention the taste of fresh American milk, or the “new look” of American city residential districts with all the television antennas which have sprouted from the roofs since we were last here. I do not need to go into detail because you have already seen these things. Here goes, then, for a brief resume.

We packed up and left our Kilanjunai home rather suddenly, due to a last-minute advance in boat-sailing schedule, on March 26. The leave-taking was really tough, because no one had been found to take over, and we had to walk out with everything in suspense, with the strong possibility that all the work would have to close up if no doctor could be found. Fortunately we heard after we arrived here that an Indian doctor had volunteered for the job and had started in the first of May. That news sure made us feel good.

We sailed from Bombay, India, on April 2. We had intended to sail up the Persian Gulf, to Besra, and thence to Bagdad and across the desert by bus to Syria, but we found out at the last minute that we couldn't get visas for Iraq, because of their disorination against missionaries, so we left the boat at Kuwait, the tiny Arabian Kingdom where so much oil has been discovered recently, and where all the social results of the oil boom made the Arabian Nights scenes we had been looking for in Bagdad seem like child-play. We then flew across to Damascus, much of Louis' and Teddy's delight; and looking down on the Arabian desert during our 4-hour trip we decided that it was much better to cross it that way than by bus after all. Then followed a delightful tour through Syria, Turkey, and Greece, going most of the way by train, visiting old historical scenes and seeing friends in the various American Board enterprises there. Then by boat, with a stopover in Naples and a visit to Pompeii, and we landed in New York on May 20. The trip went smoothly, and was lots of fun and relaxation for Fran and me and high adventure for the children (tho, I am afraid they will be too young to remember any of it). So, though it took more time and money than the orthodox way of going all the way by sea, via England, we were very thankful that we had chosen to do it.

After arriving in New York we crossed the country directly by train, without stopping for visiting anywhere along the way, in order to be able to arrive here in time so that I could give Fran the treat of a homecoming on our fifth wedding anniversary, (my, what a lot has happened to us during those five years!), and to be here for the Whitakers' fortieth wedding anniversary. Since then we have been here, enjoying the process of getting acquainted with our various family and relatives. In addition to seeing Fran's younger sister and nephew, and her older sister down from Spokane with five children, we managed a Riggs reunion with all five of us, four of the five spouses, and nine progeny (so far). Since three of the spouses and eight of the offspring had joined the family since I left in the fall of '46, we all got quite an eyeful.

Of course it would be nice if this bliss could continue for the entire furlough, but I guess it would not be very practical, because a furlough is made for other kinds of refreshment besides just play. In addition to relaxing and visiting of relatives I have been corresponding and interviewing with various places for the purpose of finding a suitable place and subject for postgraduate study, and I have finally made my decision for next year. Provided that they will admit me, I plan to take a one-year course at the School of Public Health, University of North Carolina, in Public Health Education. The need for such a course in my preventive work is obvious, and it seems that North Carolina happens to have the best course in the country on that subject. So after more visiting and relaxing on the West Coast during the next two months we plan to head for the East Coast toward the end of August, arriving in Chapel Hill in time to start school. It is a happy coincidence that we will be right in the middle of the Southern Convention area during the year, whose churches have given us so much interest and support during the time we were in China with the Jacksons, and whose interest has followed us to India. Also the Jacksons themselves are located in Chapel Hill, where the University is located. That will be almost as nice as if we were located in the midst of our family and relatives here in the San Francisco Bay area.

I guess I have gone over my one page in spite of my resolutions, so I wont elaborate on the question which everybody keeps asking us since we have landed—what do we think of America after our experiences in Communist China and famine-stricken India? I personally was a bit surprised to find out how much I liked it. (Fran knew she would!) It is a relief rather than an embarrassment to see everybody well-nourished and healthy-looking; and the good things that have come from scientific advances during the past seven years impress me more than the silly frills and the atom bombs. These things are for export too, and I look forward to the chance to “get caught up” and find out all I can that can be applied to the needs of the people in our corner of India, so that I can tackle the work there a bit more intelligently.

But that must be all for now.

Ed Riggs.

REV. O. D. POYTHRESS IS SIGNALLY HONORED.

(Continued from page 2.)

vember 14, 1890 in Orange County, North Carolina, near Chapel Hill. He was educated in the public schools, and after graduating from Chapel Hill High School entered Elon College to study for the ministry. In 1914, he graduated from Elon with an A. B. degree, and in October, 1915, he accepted a call to the South Norfolk Christian Church. He was later ordained in this same church. Mr. Poythress will complete 38 years of ministry in South Norfolk next October. He has spent his entire ministry at the South Norfolk Congregational Christian Church.

From the time Mr. Poythress first came to South Norfolk, he saw the possibilities and need for a new and modern church. In 1926 this dream became a reality. On April 3, 1926, the members of the South Norfolk Christian Church started a $150,000 church. The church today is free of debt, and the membership has grown from 32 members to approximately 700. It is the largest church on the southside, and is still modern in every respect.

Since Mr. Poythress first came to South Norfolk, he has always been active in all civic affairs. Because of his love for sports and his interest in clean athletics, he has been a popular figure among the young people of the community.

Mr. Poythress organized the first Boy Scout Troop and served as Scout Master for six years. He also organized the first Cub Scout Troop. He helped organize the Community Relief Association, and has been an active worker in Red Cross and Community Fund work. He has served as president of the Christian Missionary Association of the Eastern Virginia Conference, president of the Eastern Virginia Minister's Association, secretary of the Tidewater Interdenominational Minister's Association and president of the South Norfolk Ministerial Association. He is now Chaplain of the South Norfolk Police and Fire Department, a member of the committee on evangelism of the Congregational Christian Churches and a charter member of the South Norfolk Civitan Club. He has been a member of South Norfolk Lodge No. 339, A. F. & A. M., over 25 years, and has served as Chaplain of that order. He has organized two churches in the Norfolk area, and has helped organize many churches throughout Virginia and Eastern North Carolina.

In 1921, Mr. Poythress was elected a member of the South Norfolk School Board. In May, 1922, he was elected chairman of the board, in which capacity he served until he resigned in 1927. During his term of office, the tract of land known as Lakeside Park was purchased for the purpose of erecting a new high school. It was also during his term of office that the School Board petitioned the State Board of Education to make South Norfolk a separate school division.

Because of his beautiful tenor voice, Mr. Poythress is recognized as one of the outstanding soloists of Norfolk, and is constantly in demand to sing for various organizations and churches, and is frequently heard over radio and television.

Mr. Poythress is the dean of ministers of South Norfolk. Because of his genial personality, his unselfish love for his fellowman and his desire to serve, he has become known as South Norfolk's "Community Pastor." He has never confined his ministry to just one denomination or his own church. He spends approximately two days a week visiting the sick and the shut-ins in the numerous hospitals of Tidewater Virginia. He not only makes a sick call, but conducts a short devotional service, including scripture, prayer, and a hymn. While visiting the hospitals, he comes in contact with all faiths and denominations. Mr. Poythress is also highly respected by the colored people of this area, and has on many occasions been invited to speak in the colored churches. He has also visited many, many times in the homes of some of the old colored residents of this community.

Though he is 62 years of age, Mr. Poythress is still active. When talking to his members they say, "we can not see how he finds time to do all the things he does, and yet, his preaching just gets better all the time." He hardly ever retires until after midnight, and is awake promptly at seven, studying and reading.

Since coming to South Norfolk, Mr. Poythress has performed 2,500 marriages and conducted and assisted in more than 3,500 funerals.

Mr. Poythress loves all kinds of sports, but is especially fond of golf, and usually plays once a week. He was at one time Golf Champion of the Tidewater Ministerial Association.

Mr. Poythress and his wife, the former Miss Ethel Hanbury, live at 1212 Guerrier Street with their daughter, Carolyn and son, Franklin. They also have two married sons, Amos Lee and Leary D., and one married daughter, Mrs. James Lane, and four grandchildren, all of South Norfolk.

CITIZENSHIP IS OUR CHRISTIAN CONCERN.

(Continued from page 5.)

do not misunderstand me; I am not making reference to those who deny or abolish their own freedom, such as criminals in prison. I am referring, rather, to those of our citizens who are not free because their freedom is denied by other citizens.) Even in this heaven-favored land of ours, there are men, women and children in bondage because of un-Christian economic exploitation; there are men and women and children in bondage because of meagre opportunity; there are men and women and children in bondage because of discrimination on grounds of race and creed. And perhaps the most distressing fact about this situation is that in many cases these denials of freedom are sanctioned and encouraged by law. It has been said that righteousness cannot be legislated. But if the law is on the side of unrighteousness, where is our hope?

Here, then, the citizen who truly believes in liberty has a clear responsibility. Consider these words written by Rabbi Silver: "Every human life must be regarded as a reflex of divinity. Every act of wrong and injustice therefore, mars and defaces the image of God in man. Oppression and exploitation are more than violations of social law. They are sacrilege and blasphemy. They thwart life—God's life in man. They distort and mutilate that which is the end and goal of all being—the free unfoldment of personality." Then Rabbi Silver adds this lucid statement of our individual responsibility: "The religious man (And I am sure he would say also, "The religious woman.") will not rest content with personal salvation. He will strive to bring about a social order which will insure to all men freedom for self-realization."

I am reminded of a statement by A. D. Belden, that if our blood does not boil at injustice and injury to men we are not truly saved by Christ. The words of God, which he put into mouth of the Prophet Amos so many years ago, apply to our time and our society as well: "Let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream." The divine message transmitted through the pen of the Apostle Paul is a message for us in the present hour: "Ye yourselves are taught of God to love

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

Donald Learns to Be a "Finisher"

By GEORGE M. DODSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

After another successful Parent-Teacher Association meeting, Miss Pleasant sought out Mrs. Morrow. Although she had a problem to discuss, the young teacher had looked forward to this meeting, for Mrs. Morrow had a reputation for co-operation in family community affairs.

"I hope you can spare a few minutes to consider a matter in connection with your son Donald," Miss Pleasant began. "Frankly, he is one of the most enthusiastic pupils in my class. He has wonderful ideas for getting projects started and he soon has everyone else interested. But then he thinks of something new and he seldom finishes what he has already put so much effort into."

Mrs. Morrow gave the teacher an understanding smile. "It seems we have both noticed Donald's special problem. So early in his school career it might not seem to make much difference. But I certainly do not want my son to lack 'staying qualities' in whatever he undertakes when he's a grown man, and this is the time for habit-forming."

"Then I may count on your co-operation?" asked Miss Pleasant. And as her listener nodded assent, she continued, "Probably you saw a good example of what I mean in Donald's performance in the little play my pupils put on for the meeting this evening. Donald studied his part and even offered a minor suggestion or two for improving it. Yet a day ago I could tell his interest had passed its peak. Tonight I actually had to coax him to go on with it, and I can assure you that his performance here did not compare with the acting he displayed during our rehearsals. Do you think you could help me to make him see the importance of finishing what he has begun?"

"You may count on me," said Mrs. Morrow. "I have already been working on a plan that may show results by the time of our next meeting."

Several evenings later, Mrs. Morrow said to the rest of the family, "Your father and I are taking John with us to visit your Uncle Albert. He is inviting one of his neighbor boys in and will teach the four of us to play a new game. He says he can show us the rules much better if he needn't play at the same time."

Donald's reaction was immediate. "Why couldn't I go with you? I am almost as old as John. And you know how much I like to visit Uncle Albert! Why did he ask a neighbor boy instead of me?"

Mrs. Morrow answered in a matter-of-fact voice. "Well, Donald, your uncle said this new game will take an hour or two to learn. He wanted to be sure he could count on all four players being there on time and taking an interest in the game until they knew all the rules. Do you think he may have noticed that you do not always finish the things you start, and so picked another boy whom he can depend on?"

When his parents and John had gone, Donald's older sister suggested pasting clippings in the family scrapbook. In fifteen minutes he was ready to quit. Then he suddenly remembered why he had not been invited to Uncle Albert's party and he asked, "Do you think we could finish this whole bunch of clippings before they come home?"

At the next Parent-Teacher Association meeting, Miss Pleasant told Donald's mother, "You never saw such a change in a child in so short a time! Donald hasn't lost a bit of his enthusiasm but he never stops now until he has a job completed. From what he told me, I believe you worked out the perfect solution. With co-operation like that from parents, I feel sure this will be, up to this time, the most successful year of my teaching career."

VALLEY CONFERENCE LOSES VALUED MEMBER.

(Continued from page 2.)

church but gave liberally and cheerfully to the orphanage.

Mr. Earman had enjoyed good health for a man of his age. When asked to what he attributed his long life, he would boldly say, "I owe my long life to my love and respect for the Word of God" He would follow by quoting these words, "Honor thy father and mother that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee." He died on Tuesday morning. His last words his loved ones heard him speak were the grace at the table on Monday night. On Tuesday morning he arose early and as he sat in his old family rocker in the process of dressing, the Lord stopped him, saying I have a better robe for you to put on. Thus he was found asleep in Christ, resting peacefully in his old arm rocker. Absent from the body to be present with Christ. We shall always think of him as one of God's young saints who was growing old gracefully.

E. J. ROHART,
His Pastor.

LAYMEN AND THE CHURCH.

(Continued from page 3.)

"When you ask a person for directions as to the road to take or request a doctor to diagnose your illness and prescribe for your recovery, do you have complete trust in the direction giver or your physician?"

"Believe it or not, having faith is one of the causes of spiritual health and physical happiness. The lack of faith is the explanation of many a physical breakdown or the difference between a happy person and one who is not.

"A current radio and newspaper series, very popular too, is entitled 'This I Believe.' Has it occurred to you to put yourself in the place of the person speaking or writing and say, what do I believe? It might shock you!

"If laymen as individuals or the Laymen's Fellowship as a group is to accomplish its avowed purpose, they must believe in God, His Son Jesus Christ, the Church, the goodness of mankind, the sanctity of the home, the Bible, themselves, the future and many other things.

"No man should attempt to tell another just in what or how to believe but let it be said with great emphasis that faith is requisite.

"Faith also can be increased and improved; it is far from static. It is frankly admitted that people or even institutions will some times let you down, but even having faith, helps in those situations.

"Try building up your faith and see what happens. Today is fine, thank God for it, but tomorrow will be a better day. Having faith today will help make it so. Faith is expressed both in words and deeds."

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

A Way of Recognition

One of the fine ways of recognizing college students who are returning to our churches for the summer months was suggested this week by Dr. Henry E. Robinson, of our Burlington church. His suggestion is that these students be given an opportunity to speak at the morning worship service in their home church. This plan was successfully used in the Burlington church, and on this page this week and next week will be printed the addresses delivered by Elsie Somers, who attended Greensboro College, and William Hoffman, who attended North Carolina State. These addresses offer welcome variety to our Youth Page, and we hope that other addresses will be sent in.

* * *

"Train Up A Child . . ."

By ELSIE SOMMERS.

Once upon a time there was a little girl born the last of four children in a small and growing town. Although her parents had hoped for a boy to even things up, it proved best for them to have a girl baby. Of course, they accepted her with all the pride and pleasure that was possible for them to have. She very definitely got all the love, attention, and security that was necessary. In fact, maybe a little more.

As she grew from infancy into childhood, she was immediately introduced into the church. So, as far back as she can remember, there has always been the church standing first in the process of learning and living.

"Jesus loves Me" and "I Washed My Hands This Morning" stand out in the memory of the little girl as the first songs she ever learned to sing. The teacher of these songs continued that practice all through the years that the little girl has gone to church. From year to year the songs changed and the notes grew more difficult to read. But, like others around her, she learned and grew to a great advancement.

Also, among her early memories, is the Sunday mornings when she, along with her little classmates, learned Bible verses one right after another in order to get as many gold stars by her name as possible. These lessons were realized more and more as time went by.

The children were encouraged to bring others to Sunday school with them. This little girl decided to bring her two best friends along one Sunday. Since that Sunday the two friends have missed only a few. Evidently the program was very good and encouraged attendance.

One Easter Sunday morning while the little girl was participating in the program as a member of the Junior choir, it became time for her to join the church. This was the first big step of her life. She began to think seriously of the church and of God and of God's son, Jesus, who came to live with all the people so he could tell them about his Father. Although she didn't understand completely the significance of joining the church, she knew it was a good thing and she knew that God had said, "Suffer the little children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of heaven." Yes, she knew it was a good thing.

The minister of the church seemed to take a special interest in this little girl. She noticed that he often frowned when he looked at her. One day he explained that he came to the town when she was a very tiny baby; she was his constant reminder of old age creeping on.

As years went by, she moved from class to class in the Sunday school. But there were many other functions of the church also. She advanced from the Junior choir to the Young People's and finally to the Senior choir. She was a brownie scout. There were scout camps, church camps, parties, programs, etc. connected with these church organizations. Bible School each summer was fun and profitable for her in both student and teacher participation. The Christmas pagants were fun and successful. Each year the Homecoming Day was eagerly awaited by all the young people as well as the adults. On these days, she remembers particularly how the children would take their plates and eat off the edge of the stage in the basement of the church.

She has always enjoyed the church services. First, she attended Junior Church on the second floor of the building while her family was in the big church, as she thought of it. Soon she was old enough to attend big church with them. She really felt like a lady.

The church has had a great deal to do with her teen-age life. The Youth Fellowship meetings on Sunday nights and the many church socials such as weinners roasts, hayrides, swimming parties, and open houses have ranked first on the fun list of her young days.

Now this little girl is not so little anymore. After finally graduating from a much-loved high school, she went off to college. Away from home, her church and her friends, she realized just how much these things meant to her. Now she was on her own. She made her own decisions. And now mostly she realized how much she really appreciated all that had been done for her. The learning from the church had accumulated through the years and formed quite a foundation. She learned that she had everything as long as she had her faith. Problems always seemed to work out fine just as she expected them to. She became acquainted with girls of all types, kinds and descriptions. Some of these girls were like her in faith and some were not. More and more she learned to appreciate the true value of her faith molded in the church by years of hard work by many unselfish people.

There must be many girls and boys like this little girl. Girls and boys who now have come to realize what a great treasure they have in their possession. They can only repay the many responsible parties for what they have done for them by doing the same for others when the opportunity comes. Yes, there are others just as grateful as this little girl but this particular one is me. Now I want to thank you, the ones who have played so large a part as children of God in helping me to find and to formulate a faith that shall stand firm.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

I was very happy to hear from our Texas Doctor, Henry E. Robinson this week. Some of the other ministers could very well follow the Texan's example and send in some news. Thanks Doc!

* * *

Let Us Pray

That we may live each day
So that if should be our last
There would be no regrets.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"The Righteousness and Justice of God"

LESSON I—JULY 5, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; it is the power of God for salvation to every one who has faith." Romans 1: 16. (R S V)

The Reputation of Your Church.

Paul had never visited the church at Rome; but he had heard about it. And when he wrote his letter to the Romans he thanked God that their "faith is proclaimed throughout the world." The church had the reputation of being full of faith, the folks had such faith, that Christians in all parts of the Roman world were talking about it. And that made Paul glad and thankful unto God.

Now churches, like men, get reputations. Sooner or later it gets around as to what kind of church a church is. What is the reputation of your church? Is it a friendly or unfriendly church? Is it stingy or a liberal church? Is it a narrow church or a broad church? Is it a self-centered, or a missionary-minded church? Is it a formal, or is it a spiritual church? Is it a dead church, or is it a dynamis church? What is the reputation of your church?

Fire Kindles Upon Fire.

The apostle told his Roman friends that he wanted to visit them very much, to the end that he might impart to them some spiritual gift, to the end that they might be established. Then he adds, "that is, that I with you, may be comforted in you, each of us by the other's faith, both yours and mine." He knew that he could kindle faith in their hearts. He knew as well that they could kindle faith and fire in his heart. Fire kindles upon fire. The members of a church have the right to expect their minister to kindle the fire of faith in their hearts. But in turn the minister has the right to expect the members of his church to kindle the fire of faith in his heart. Faith is a reciprocal, two-way thing. It is a fact that a congregation can make a minister as well as being made by a minister.

Unpayably in Debt.

"I am debtor, both to the Greeks and to Barbarians, both to the wise and the foolish." This fellow was not like many moderns—indebt to everybody, that is financial debt. But he knew that he was unpayably in debt to all men, to those before his day, and to those of his day. Like every other man he had received from others things for which he had not labored and for which he had not paid in terms of money. And he was receiving from the men of his day, from both the people of his own country and other countries, many, many things for which he was not paying in terms of money. He felt himself in debt to those people, both known and unknown. Other men had labored and sacrificed and even died, and he had entered into the rewards and the fruits of their labors. So as much as was in him, he was ready to serve and to sacrifice to pay in part at least his unpayable debt. Alas for the man who does not feel that he is debtor to all men for what he is and has!

The Dynamite of God.

"For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first and also to the Greek." At first sight it might seem as if he would be ashamed of it. Rome was a great city, the capital of the world and the ruler of the world. He was a Jew, a member of a subject race, and a leader in a small "sect" whose head was a man who had been shamefully put to death at the instigation of the Jews by this very Roman power. But he boldly states that he is not ashamed of the gospel which he preaches. Could Rome talk about power? So could he. As about power beyond anything that Rome could muster of manifest. The word which he uses is most suggestive. When Paul used the word power, he used the Greek word dunamis from which we get our own word "dynamite"! Talk about power, this man knew what real power was. The gospel was the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believed, to men of all races and religions! It is still the supreme power in the universe, The gospel of Christ is the power of God to the breaking down of strongholds and to the redemption of mankind. No need for us to be ashamed of it. Fact is, no need for us to defend it. All we need to do is to proclaim and practice it, and apply it. It is still power, the power of God.

Living by Faith—The Righteousness of God.

"The just, or the righteous shall live by faith." These words really started the Protestant Reformation, our great heritage. For as Martin Luther, a monk of the Roman church, was kneeling on the steps of a great cathedral, saying his prayers and seeking forgiveness for his sins and seeking to save his soul, these words flashed into his mind and set his heart afire. He arose to his feet, a new man and began to proclaim this cardinal doctrine of the Protestant Church. A man is saved by faith in Christ, faith in Christ alone. And he can be righteous only by faith in Christ. Not by works of righteousness, not by forms and ceremonies, but by faith in Christ's atoning sacrifice, and by faith in Christ's continuing grace, is a man saved, is he brought and kept in right relationship with God. Furthermore, it is no intellectual formular; it is a living relationship. It involves the commitment of the life to Christ, and obedience to Christ. But it brings life, and life more abundant. It is the secret of happy, effective Christian living.

The Judgement and the Justice of God.

Centuries before Paul's day, a man of God with inspired insight had said, "Shall not the judge of all the earth do right?" Now Paul is saying it in another way when he says, "And we know that the judgment of God is according to truth against them that practice such things." How are men to fare in the hands of God in the day of judgment? The good men? And the bad men? There is one answer—the judgment of God will be according to truth. He is just and righteous. Every man will get a square deal. And justice will be tempered by mercy.

No Respect of Persons.

"For there is no distinction" in this judgment—No pulling of wires, no special privileges, no taking of hush money, no partiality, no preferential treatment, no "settlement one another." The warning of Christ reported to us by the Apostle John has a present-day application: "This commandment have we from him, that he who loves God must love his brother also."

(Continued on page 15.)

CITIZENSHIP IS OUR CHRISTIAN CONCERN.

(Continued from page 9.)

America! America!

God shed his grace on thee
And crown thy good with brotherhood
From sea to shining sea!

A part of God's purpose for America is that it be truly "The land of the free" in which all citizens enjoy equally the rights and privileges of freedom.

And the second great purpose which I feel fervently to be descriptive in part of God's will for our country is in reality an extension of the first. Just as we are called to promote brotherhood within the borders of this land, so we are called to be a humble but ardent promoter of world brotherhood, a dependable and steadfast instrument of world peace.

Now, again, you may read in that suggestion the implication that our nation does not at present play such a role in world affairs. Are not our people peace-loving? Is it not the official policy of the nation to preserve the peace? Well, I grant that the desire for peace is nowhere stronger than in the hearts of the American people. But the hard facts reveal that our country is not as effective an instrument of world peace as it is possible for it to be. And one of the reasons is this very domestic situation about which we have been thinking—the denial of liberties at home. An effective witness by America to the principles of world brotherhood and peace will depend in large measure upon our demonstration of attitudes and actions of brotherhood at home. Words are never as effective as example. And our words of peace are not effective at all when our action denies our expression. To contribute, therefore, to the cause of peace throughout the world, it is necessary for us to practice those attitudes and policies which promote peace among our own people.

But world peace is contingent not only on cooperation among ourselves, but co-operation with the citizens of other nations as well. And the most effective agency of such cooperation is the United Nations. But listen to these words of a message recently adopted by the National Council of the Churches of Christ: "In some quarters of our country we witness a mounting criticism of the United Nations and at times an effort to undermine its works. Our people must learn that the sovereignty of nations as well as the freedom of individuals is under God. The United Nations although frustrated at points because cooperation was lacking, has a notable record of achievements in its social, humanitarian, and economic activities and in providing a forum for world public opinion. It has played a vital part in settling disputes and in containing conflicts. Christians and Christian churches have a responsibility to support its work as it seeks to accomplish the purposes for which it was set up."

These, then, appear to me to be the two paramount considerations in our nation's role in promoting world peace. We can become a more effective instrument of concord among the nations by practicing at home what we preach about freedom, that we may be an example to the rest of the world; and by supporting the United Nations and all other international agencies which have as their purpose the promotion of understanding among nations.

Brotherhood and peace—two most powerful words they are, and they describe God's purpose for America. But we have said that God's purpose must be translated into political policy and that the translators are the people. It is evident, then, that the Christian citizens of our nation are called to exercise to the uttermost the responsibilities of citizenship.

Let us ask ourselves briefly what means we should use to be Christian witnesses in the nation's political affairs. The first suggestion that comes to mind is the never-ending task of the Christian to keep close to God. Prayer and politics seem miles apart, but they should be tied up together. I have been delighted by the recent efforts of the United Council of Church Women to emphasize this valid relationship. Their calling people to prayer during the political conventions and on Inauguration Day was a thoroughly worthwhile endeavor. People should pray before making political decisions. They can know God's will only as they know God. They can reflect the purposes of God in their political acts only as their hearts are influenced by God's Spirit within. Personal consecration, then, is not an isolated religious experience; it is involved in Christian citizenship.

But, prayer is not enough. That needs hardly to be said. There is a story of a little girl who prayed that the birds would not be caught in a trap her brother had set for them in the back yard. And she helped answer her prayer by going out and kicking the trap to pieces. The point is that prayer must be followed by action; by voting, by participation in political campaigns, by work for those candidates and those measures which contribute to the purposes of God for America. The influence of the church in politics must come through the influence of churchmen and church women. Direct political activity can be, if we make it so, religious activity of the highest order.

But even prayer and prayerful activity in political concerns is not enough. There is one further task which comes to mind—one which might surprise you. It is the task of evangelism. Now, evangelism is thought to be exclusively a matter pertaining to church affairs. And in a sense it is. But consider this: Only a bare majority of the American people are affiliated with churches or synagogues. And more than a majority of Americans are virtually unaffected by the witness of the church. Did you know that there are 66 million Americans with no religious affiliation whatsoever? Now, many of these people vote. And they vote away from the influence of the church. If our nation is to be an effective instrument of the purposes of God, then, it is our political duty as well as our religious task to bring more Americans under the influence of God and his gospel.

We began by saying that there is a real and vital relationship between God and the government, that it has existed since colonial days and still exists. But that relationship is not the close relationship it should be, because the connecting link—the American people—requires strengthening and reinforcement. By prayer, by political activity in behalf of the Christian principles of brotherhood and peace, and by ardent Christian evangelism—by these means we most effectively fulfill our responsibilities of Christian Citizenship.

O beautiful for pilgrims feet,
Whose stern, impassioned stress
A thoroughfare for freedom beat
Across the wilderness!

America! America!
God mend thine every flaw,
Confirm thy soul in self control,
Thy liberty in law.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Thank you for the good report. Thank you for the vacations you are giving many of our children. When you listen to their conversations remember they are children from a home where only the best or nothing about any parent is told them. They are taught to honor their father, or mother, as the case may be. For the sake of the child's mind and attitude toward life both now and in adulthood in the future he is shown the highest and best in his outlook on life. It is not good to try to draw the child out on why he or she is at the orphanage. Most children do not have all the facts. There is some good reason why they are here, or they would not be here. The child may also paint you a pretty picture of what he possesses so that you think he lives in a dream world. That is his privilege, but you are not wise if you make up your mind on the basis of his talk that he has too much. On the other hand he may try to make you, seeing your generous spirit and your kindness, believe he is neglected and has almost nothing. It would be well for you to test such at the source and—well, you are the child's host and the orphanage has entrusted you with a really fine privilege. Just be a good and fair friend to both. Thank you for your kindness of heart and keenness of mind.

This week we have been made glad by the visits of so many of our friends throughout the convention. The School of Missions has attracted a goodly number of the leaders from among the women of our churches. They have visited the orphanage. They have seen the boys' building with many of its boys, the children's building with many of the little folks and the girls' building with its happy girls. They have seen sunshine on the faces of every boy or girl they met. Beneath my smiles they may have detected anxiety for our daily needs, and for the fields ready for harvest but too damp for gathering in the hundreds of bushels of wheat and oats. They saw these beautiful fields of grain, the milk herd and the pastures; the chickens and the swine-herd; they saw the growing gardens, and the beautiful fields of corn. They saw the Holt Memorial Chapel—gift of the Kirk Holt family—in process of building. They saw a busy outfit where the generosity of hundreds of people is crystalized into human kindness. We appreciate their visits. It shows in a dramatic way that we do not work alone, and it encourages us to carry on the honored work of past years in the very best way in which we can.

Each matron is allowed two weeks vacation. Six matrons twelve weeks. Rather than picking up a supply here and there we have employed a senior from Woman's College as a supply matron for the summer. Right now she is supplying at Johnston Hall. Since she arrived croquet has become popular and volley ball has become a favorite game. No one can take Mrs. Bennett's place in the hearts of her boys, but Miss Marilyn Brannon is making good as a supply matron and she will have a chance to serve in many places during the summer. We believe the boys and girls will find in her a good friend.

Thank you. God bless you. Come to see us.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JUNE 18, 1953.

Commodities for the Week.

Mrs. J. A. Waters, Elon College, N. C., Candy.
Mrs. Bodey Silver, Asheville, N. C., Clothing.
J. H. Johnson, Norfolk, Va., 50 copies of "The Upper Room."
Mrs. Burton Daniels, Beaufort, N. C., Clothing.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 7,460.43
Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Springs S. S. $ 20.00
Christian Temple 10.00

Rosemont—Special	20.00
Oakland S. S.	15.00
Windsor S. S.	10.00
		75.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Shallow Ford	$ 18.00
Union (Va.) S. S.	10.00
Greensboro, Calvary	18.00
Burlington, Bev. Hills S. S.	31.81
		59.81
Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Union S. S.	$ 14.10
		14.10
Virginia Valley Conference:
Bethel S. S.	$ 2.00
		2.00
Total	$	150.91
Grand Total	$	7,611.34

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$ 9,724.74
J. G. Quakenbush, Oteen, N. C.	$ 2.00
E. F. Craven, Greensboro, N. C.	15.00
Smithwood Christian Ch. for Thurman Arnold ..	8.81
Mrs. Chandler, Durham, N. C.	5.00
Wake Chapel Christian Missionary Society for Betty Jean Proctor ...	15.00
Mrs. M. C. Faucette, Brown Summit, N. C. ..	12.00
H. O. Byrd, Suffolk, Va. for Woody Byrd	10.00
Young People of Hope- dale Christian Ch. to send two children to camp	25.00
Mr. & Mrs. R. C. Jarrett, Hampton, Va.	5.00
Mrs. J. M. Riddle, Sanford, N. C.	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. D. L. Boone, Durham, N. C., in memory of J. J. Pritchard	7.50
T. D. Shoemaker, Asheville, N. C.	15.00
A Friend, Norfolk, Va. .	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. L. Read,

(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through June 30, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	$1,591.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	1,088.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown	127.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr.	82.50
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth	2,450.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson	1,065.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries	3,211.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

†Paid.

PLAN FALL PROGRAM NOW. (Continued from page 2.)

pastor's time and energy, crowds in upon us. To get your order in to the Missions Council now assures you of having the desired materials well in advance. These requests for ordering early are made so that the proper amount of materials may be printed. Late orders will likely find shortages—in materials and therefore in a well conducted fall program. Don't let that happen to you! If you have not received the above mentioned materials, write at once to The Missions Council, 278 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

Finally, if you plan to invite a fellow-pastor, or anyone else, to help you in your Stewardship Institute and Every-Member Canvass, determine the dates you will want him and ask for them at once.

JESSE H. DOLLAR,
Chirman.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

out of court," no quashing the case. Every man must give an account of himself to God. Every man will receive a reciprocal, two-way thing. A congregation can make a minister as well as be made by a minister.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

THE ORPHANAGE.

(Continued from page 14.)

Norlina, N. C. for Ella
Jean & Angelee Haith	30.00
Philathea Class, Suffolk
Christian Ch. for W. C.
& Raymond Harvell	5.00
Special Gifts	312.58
	477.89
Grand Total	$10,202.63
Total for the week	$ 628.80
Total for the year	$17,813.97

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:

(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church

By Secretary or Clerk
Address

..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

First Ashram to Open July 4th

Quietly and without fanfare, groups of private citizens in all parts of the country are preparing to attend the 1953 Ashrams—unique spiritual retreats which had their origin in India, but have been given a Christian content.

The first of six Ashrams will open July 4, at Green Lake, Wisconsin, under sponsorship of the National Council of the Churches of Christ. In succeeding weeks during the summer, others will be held in Virginia, New York, Texas, California and Ontario, Canada.

First brought to this country in 1940 by the Department of Evangelism of the old Federal Council, Christian Ashrams have been held in America for thirteen consecutive years. Dr. E. Stanley Jones, who adapted the name and idea from the forest retreats of Hindu religious teachers, will attend this year's series for the fourteenth time and will speak twice daily.

Stressing that the Ashram program is centered in Christ, Dr. Jones points out that in its American version, Christ is the "guru" or teacher of the Ashram. In the Ashram much is made of silence and exchange of spiritual experience through counsel and discussion. One hour each day is spent in manual labor.

The objective of each Ashram is to enable those participating "to become, in miniature form, the Kingdom of God. The Ashrams are primarily a corporate quest for the larger understanding and better realization of the Kingdom of God."

Blending Western Christianity with mystic experiences of the East, Ashrams attract Americans seeking spiritual refreshment from all walks of life. Doctors, psychologists, social workers, housewives, business executives, school teachers, ministers, all enter the retreat seeking to remove "all inner barriers that hinder fellowship with God and each other."

"We are looking forward to a heavier attendance this year," declared Dr. H. H. McConnell, Ashram director in the National Council of Churches' joint department of Evangelism. "Advance registrations are beyond that of any previous year."

He emphasized that Ashrams are open to all Christians sincerely seeking a deeper spiritual experience. Expenses are borne by those attending.

The Green Lake Ashram will be held from July 4 to 11. The other five Ashrams are scheduled for the following dates and places:

July 11-17, Alma College, St. Thomas, Ontario, Canada.

July 18-25, Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Virginia.

July 28-August 4, Keuka College, Keku Park, New York.

August 8-15, Wesley Encampment, Kerrsville, Texas.

August 15-22, Asilomar, Pacific Grove, California.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JULY 9, 1953

NUMBER 27

A Pastoral Prayer

By WILLIAM ROBERT CATTON

Minister of First Congregational Church, Decatur, Illinois

Our God, our heavenly Father, we come again out of the turmoil of our busy, distracted, daily lives, into the calm, the quiet of the house of prayer. And in this our prayer we come to thee, we meet with thee, we talk with thee. Thou dost hear our prayer and thy Spirit speaks to us. Help us, now, to be still and know that thou art God. When thou saidst, "Seek ye my face," our spirits answered, "Thy face, Lord, will we seek." Speak to us, now, for spirit with spirit can meet. Thou art closer to us than breathing; nearer than hands or feet.

Bring to us thy word of comfort in our sorrows. We have faced some hard experiences. We have known some disappointments and defeats. We have sustained some losses. Speak to us the word of comfort that we need. As thou art our Father, leave us not, neither forsake us, O God of our salvation.

Speak to us thy words of hope and courage. Remind us again of those who have discovered they can, indeed, do all things in the strength of Christ. Make us strong in the love of God and in the faith that in everything God works for good with those who love him. If God be for us, who is against us! He who did not spare his own Son, but gave him up for us all, will he not also give us all things with him? Tell us once again that nothing in all creation shall be able to separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus our Lord.

Speak to us thy word of direction; and point out the way for us, that we may walk therein. The will of God! This we must know. In all the confusions, the bewilderments of these tumultuous days, may we see thy clear light of truth. We would come to understand what is truly good; we must come to know what is truly wise. Let the will of God be declared to us this day, and we will follow it.

Speak to us thy word of resolution. When we have seen our duty clear, when thy will has been declared to us without mistake, then make us brave, devoted, that we may do thy will. Thy Christian life is not merely one of blessed privilege, but also one of solemn obligation, and one of triumphant power. Let us be doers of the word, not hearers only.

Let us go from this place today to do thy will. May the will of God be done, by us, in our homes today. May the will of God be done, by us, when we are at work tomorrow. Make us, each one of us the instruments of thy will. Bring the peace of God into the lives we live.

So speak to us, our God, speak to us, in our prayer, and in all the experiences of this hour. Speak to us the word we need, and let thy word abide with us until it has wrought thy holy will.

We pray to thee through Christ our Lord. Amen.

News Flashes

Please send in some interesting news from your church.

We welcome back one of our old-time contributors this week — Rev. William Robert Catton of Decatur, Illinois, who offers the "Pastoral Prayer" on page 1.

We have learned of the resignation of Rev. Ernest F. Brickhouse as minister of our church at Hopewell, Virginia. He plans to return to seminary for graduate work.

Did you have a Glorious Fourth of July? We hope you did. Anyway, we recommend your reading "What Price Patriotism?" by President Edmunds of John B. Stetson University.

May we suggest that the "Welcome to Our Visitors," on page 16, by Rev. Richard K. Morton, might well be adapted to your local church needs and issued in folder form. We are sure the author would not object.

Rev. James C. Perkins, a graduate student at Duke University and a ministerial member of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, has been appointed instructor in Philosophy at Wake Forest College for the 1953-54 school year.

The Rev. Dr. Duane N. Vore has resigned as pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church to accept the responsibilities as a member of the staff of the First Congregational Church, Los Angeles, California. He will assume his duties there September 1.

We learn from Dr. Warren H. Denison, well known and beloved by so many in the Southern Convention, who now lives at Grinnell, Iowa, that his son-in-law, Dr. Fiebiger and his daughter Mary, were in Scotland as delegates to the International Council. Accompanying them was their son, Ted. Also his other daughter Martha and her husband, Dean Rondilean were official visitors from the Riverside Church in New York City. Dr. Dennison has sent us a group of "Stewardship Nuggets," which will appear from time to time. The first to be printed is on page three of this issue.

Mrs. F. C. Lester and the three Lester children have joined Dr. Lester in Fayetteville for the summer. Their address for the next two months will be 1055 Stampe Road, Fayetteville, North Carolina. They will be delighted to see any of their friends as they pass through Fayetteville en route to White Lake, the North Carolina beaches, or Florida—or those who would take the trouble just to go to Fayetteville to see them—and will be most happy to show the new building of the Eutaw Community Church. A nice park and playground across the street from the "parsonage" will prove inviting for the children who may come to visit.

Morrisville Church Has Revival

Revival services were started at the Morrisville Church on Sunday, June 21, the pastor, Rev. E. M. Powell, preaching both morning and evening. On Monday evening, Rev. Max Welch of Palm Street Church in Greensboro, preached, as he did every evening through Friday, to a well-filled house.

Most inspiring sermons were delivered. Mr. Powell took so much interest in the children, having them sing several children's songs each night.

Nine new members were received into the church, by profession of faith and by letter. This is the largest number to come into the church at any one revival since Mr. Powell was pastor around ten years ago.

LESSIE PUGH,
Reporter.

"The Little Church in the Woods"

By WM. KINCAID NEWMAN.

Although Rock Spring Church is one of our strongest in Virginia, the readers of THE SUN have heard little about it since it is a member of the Middle Atlantic Congregational Christian Conference. Founded in 1912, it occupied for many years a little frame building in the woods in Arlington County not far from Washington, D. C. It was reached by the old Washington and Old Dominion Railroad trolley line, being located on a dirt road one-half a mile from the Vanderwerken Station. Every Sunday hundreds of people from Washington heard the whistle blow for the Vanderwerken crossing on their way to picnic and ride the merry-go-round at Great Falls. Today the trolley line is no more, but the church has grown to a membership of 485 and a Sunday school of 450. Up until 1940, it remained a little country church with an attendance of only 26. In that year, under the able leadership of Reverend Paul R. Hunter, a lovely chapel was erected seating 97. This seemed a bold venture but attendance jumped the following year to fifty and has now increased to 205 in two services with would-be worshippers being turned away for lack of space on frequent occasions. A parsonage and a fine religious education building have been constructed but the education building, like the church, is already over-crowded. Both the church and education building were erected with the help of the Church Building Society.

Now the church is engaged in a campaign for additional funds with which to more than double the seating capacity of the church and for additional classrooms. The church operates a fine library, a nursery school and kindergarten, a Couplets Club and a good youth program. It received 81 new members last year and has accepted its goal in the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign, notwithstanding its debt on its education building and its campaign for additional funds to enlarge the church.

"A Trip to the Moon"

A Feature Story

By A. F. JENZANO, Manager.

Vacationers who desire to include an imaginary "Trip to the Moon" this summer, may do so in the Moorehead Planetarium's huge air-conditioned ship, Expanding Galaxy, at the University of North Carolina. Flights leave Chapel Hill every evening at 8:30; in the afternoons on Saturdays at 3:00 and 4:00, and on Sundays at 2:00, 3:00 and 4:00, during July and August. Advance reservations may be made for groups or individuals for any flight. The passenger lounge seats 490.

480,000 miles of educational entertainment are compressed into an exciting fifty-minute program. The factual fun begins for visitors immediately upon entering. By means of specially arranged lighting and effects, they are actually able to see through the 68-foot stainless steel Planetarium dome to the simulated passages and other spaces of the rocket ship. This is made possible by the some 19 million acoustical holes in the perforated dome.

(Continued on page 7.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. DANIELEY, Editor, 428 Westwood, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Editor Enjoys Fish Fry

The Laymen's Fellowship of the Chapel Hill Church met at 3 o'clock on Monday afternoon, June 22, 1953, at the fish pond of S. H. Basnight. The men caught, cleaned, cooked and ate a large number of fish. Your column editor was fortunate to be there and reports that the fellowship was fine and the fish were tasty.

* * * * *

Our Durham Church Reports

The Laymen's Fellowship of the Durham Church has decided to hold its meetings quarterly and to make each meeting a dinner meeting. This action was taken at the regular April meeting. The arrangement is on a trial basis for the remainder of the year. The first meeting which was held under the new plan was the Father-Son Banquet which was attended by 56 people.

This fellowship has not sponsored any particular financial projects; this is in line with the idea of a unified budget under which the church operates. The men, however, did participate in and greatly benefit from a program of visitation.

Officers of the fellowship include: N. W. Langston, president; J. A. Riggsbee, secretary, and R. L. Dickens, treasurer.

* * * * *

Report from Pleasant Ridge

The Laymen's Fellowship of the Pleasant Ridge Church has a membership of about twenty men and holds its meetings monthly. J. C. Newell is president of the group, Theodore Cox is secretary, and Quentin Hicks is treasurer.

The men in the group had the responsibility for sowing and harvesting oats for the Lord's Acre. They also sponsored the Annual Harvest Day Festival, with the proceeds going to the local building fund.

* * * * *

News from Pleasant Grove Laymen

The Laymen's Fellowship of the Pleasant Grove Congregational Christian Church is now in its second year. It was organized in January of 1953. G. P. Bray, Jr., is president of the organization and Wade Bray is secretary-treasurer. The men meet every month with an average attendance of about 15.

The group has undertaken projects for the improvement of the parsonage, including the purchase of cabinets and the purchase and installation of bathroom fixtures. This group also has had a God's Acre project—the land was sown in wheat.

* * * * *

Wanted . . .

more men to send in news items from the churches; more of the questionnaires to be filled out and returned. Can you be of help?

Proportionate Giving

Nearly every major denomination is experiencing a new and deepening experience in proportionate giving, starting with the tithe. Many Christians are missing a rich blessing which they might have. Tithing is not something for some particular nation, or some particular time. Like the Sabbath, the marriage relationship, it has been from earliest history. Nor is it a legalistic matter. It is not something for time and occasion, but is an enduring, continuing attitude, an essential life intent. Our arguments cannot do away with it. Let no Christian neglect it. Try it faithfully for a year and find for yourself its joy. You will find it a door into stewardship, a deeper and richer life, an expression of gratitude for God's goodness.

WARREN H. DENISON.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

General contributions should be addressed to the editor at Southern Pines, N. C., and should reach him by Wednesday of the week preceding date of publication.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195....

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

A Christian College, a Challenge to Christians

A Guest Editorial by J. EARL DANIELEY

We have heard much about education, public and private; we have read about the plight of the privately endowed college in these days when more and more financial assistance is being given to state-supported institutions. But have we stopped to think about the CHALLENGE which our COLLEGE presents to us as CHRISTIANS?

Elon College was founded to educate our people for the pulpit and the pew. During all of her life she has done that job and has done it with distinction. We are justly proud of her record and the records of those who call her Alma Mater. That purpose is just as strong now as it ever was; that need is just as real and probably more acute than it ever was; our people are more capable of doing the job which the institution was created for than they ever were. If our people are interested in the education of those who will occupy our pulpits and our pews, then the support of our college offers a real challenge.

Many of our people are working people, and they will say as they read this, "I find it difficult to give to my church as freely as I would like. I find it difficult to support other causes as much as I want to. How can I do much for Elon?" This question, it seems to me, rises because of a misconception. Of course Elon College needs money; all institutions of higher learning must have money, but this is not our primary need. There are other things which we need more; these you can furnish.

A Christian college needs the prayerful support of consecrated Christians. The founding fathers of our college were devout men; they thought it proper to seek God's guidance and his blessing; our college continues that tradition. It would be a great day indeed if all the people in our fellowship would unite in prayer asking God's blessing upon our endeavors in this all-important field of Christian service.

A Christian college needs the finest young men and women in your community as students. It is true that there has been a good group of students at Elon for several years now. But there is real need for more of our church people. If Elon is to educate the occupants of the pulpit and the pew, then we must send them to Elon. Here is a genuine opportunity to be of real service to our college. Send your finest young men and women as students; the contribution which they make is invaluable to the college, and the contribution which the college will make to them can never be measured. Each will be of great benefit to the other.

A Christian constantly finds life a series of challenges. Certainly one of the most important of these challenges is the challenge to support Christian higher education. We have a real opportunity to continue to do that through our own Elon College. Now is the time to see to it that all of those in your community who should attend Elon are applying and making plans to be on the campus in September for the beginning of the fall term. To do so is to perform a service to the student, to your community, to your church, and to our college.

Duane Vore to Leave Convention

Our news columns carry this week a notice of the resignation of the pastor of our Suffolk Church. The Southern Convention, too, and especially the Board of Publications will feel the loss.

Duane Vore would not call himself a Fundamentalist; possibly the word has been so misused by some of those who have appropriated it to themselves as to make it an anathema to others. Probably he would call himself a conservative liberal; but whatever the designation may be, certainly the fundamentals of Christianity stand out as guideposts in his life and work. Our whole Church needs more such men as Duane Vore.

Since coming to the Southern Convention, he has been active in the promotion of its work and has helped to give it much needed leadership. For the past three years he has been the chairman of the Board of Publications, and under his guiding hand it has weathered unusual crises and done a good job. In our over thirty years of service with The Christian Sun, we have never worked with one who was more conscientious in the carrying out of the task assigned them. We express our regret and, we believe, that of all of the members of the Board of Publications, that our working relations must so soon be terminated.

We wish for him the success that he so greatly deserves in his new field of endeavors.

Just a Plain Lie . . .

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN, Minister

First Congregational Christian Church of Richmond, Virginia

The New Testament carries a declaration in the plainest speech which reads like this: "If a man says that he loves God, and hateth his neighbor, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother, whom he hath seen, cannot love God, whom he hath not seen. And this is the commandment . . . that he who loveth God, love his brother also."

In other words, love for God is impossible without love for humanity. Moreover, love for humanity is the only convincing evidence of love for God. "The two loves" always go together. Each depends upon the other, and together they constitute the supreme witness of religion.

In a world, as we have it today, divided and torn asunder by greed, exploitation, misunderstanding, suspicion, intolerance and hatred; in a world where individuals and nations have lost faith in each other—a situation which threatens the very foundations of society and civilization—anyone, who has eyes to see and a mind to comprehend, cannot fail to realize that the present social injustice and the present international tragedy are all due to the fact that so many people have forgotten God—the Author of Life—and have lost love for both God and man out of their lives. If men truly loved God, they could not treat their fellowmen as nonentities or as enemies, instead of as brothers.

Well may we thank God for men and women of all creeds and of all races, and of all nations who truly love God, for they are God's surest defense for human society. Their love for humanity is the most convincing witness of true religion, as the New Testament writer declares in such forceful language, "If a man says he loves God, but hateth his brother, he is a liar."

The world does not rate our religious faith by the love we profess to have for God, but by the love we show in our attitudes and daily conduct toward our fellowmen.

The same New Testament writer just quoted, also declares that, "If we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we shall have fellowship one with another." People who walk in the darkness of ignorance and self-mindedness cannot have fellowship with others. They can't see the other person's point of view. They fail to realize that the accident of birth—the parents one has, the country in which one was born, the background of one's life—nearly always determines the religion to which one will be a devotee, as well as determining his national loyalties.

For instance, if a child is born into a Protestant family, it will most likely grow up a Protestant. And the same with a child born in a Catholic home or a Jewish home. The religion of the home in which one is born generally determines what religious faith one will follow. I happen to be a Protestant. If my parents had been Catholics, there is little doubt that I would have been a Catholic. And likewise, with ninety-nine people out of every hundred—if the religion of their parents had been other than it was, their religious affiliation today would be other than it is. In more than ninety-nine cases out of every hundred, this fact holds true.

Since the same is true of practically every person of us, and since our religious position was most likely determined for us by the accident of birth, over which we had no control and about which we had nothing to say, there would seem not to be the slightest ground for religious prejudice or religious intolerance. Such is absolutely preposterous. Such can only be possible because of ignorance and lack of love for God. Prejudice and bigotry speedily make retreat before the purging power of sincere love for God.

"If we walk in the light" of intelligence and love, we cannot ignore or despise the beliefs and convictions of those who walk in a different path of faith from the one we walk. But we will recognize that, as in ancient days, when it was said that "all roads lead to Rome," so in every-day life, all faiths lead to God. And "if we walk in the light (of intelligence and love,) we shall have fellowship one with another." Fellowship does not require compromise, nor does it call for patronage or endorsement of the creeds of those with whom we fellowship. But true love for God inspires us to say to them, "If your heart is as my heart, then give me your hand." Not, "If your creed is as my creed, then give me your hand; but, "If your heart is as my heart"—if your love for God is as my love for God, then let us fraternize with each other. I repeat, religious prejudice is evidence of ignorance and of lack of love for God.

In an age of social tension and constant change, prejudice is most likely to thrive, and to raise its ugly head in every social group. Religion ought to be society's best defense against prejudice, because it demands that those who love God shall prove that love by practicing love toward all human kind.

Charles Lamb, the celebrated English writer, was one day asked what he thought about another contemporary writer. Lamb replied that he "hated him." And then the questioner asked Lamb if he personally knew the man. To this pointed query Lamb replied, "No, I do not really know him. If I did, no doubt I would love him."

And likewise with people who may cherish prejudice and contempt toward other faiths and other races than their own; if they knew what other faiths believe and do, what other races have been and may become, they would appreciate them. Lack of knowledge is responsible for the world's prejudice and intolerance. Such ignorance is the greatest barrier to world progress and to world peace—ignorance of facts and ignorance of the love of God. Love for God makes one eager to learn and to understand, that he may love and appreciate those who differ from him in race, in faith and in position. We are challenged by reason and common sense to prove our love for God by including in the circle of our appreciation all who live the good life, regardless of their creed, race or color.

A man's good character is the only passport to heaven, and should be sufficient to recognition and opportunity anywhere upon the earth.

Though others with lack of love for God and lack of love for humanity, may "draw a circle and shut us out, heretic, rebel, a thing to flout. Love for God and for humanity will give us the wit to win. We'll draw a larger circle and take them in."

Our love for God is indicated by our attitude toward our fellowman whose creed is different than ours or whose color of skin is not the same as ours. We can test our love for God by our love for humanity. Forbid that any of us should profess love for God, if we have indifference or con-

(Continued on page 8.)

"What Price Patriotism?"

By DR. J. OLLIE EDMUNDS

President of John B. Stetson University, De Land, Florida

There is no evidence to suggest that Lord Macaulay was an especially malicious individual, but if he were, and if he were alive today, he might very well be rubbing his hands and preparing to say, "I told you so." That sagacious English statesman didn't think very highly of Thomas Jefferson's ideas, and he predicted that the democratic government which Jefferson evolved for America would crack up about now. He declared that one of two things would happen: (1) either "some Caesar or Napoleon will seize the reins of government with a strong hand" or (2) "your republic will be as fearfully plundered . . . by barbarians of the twentieth century as the Roman Empire was in the fifth, with this difference . . . the Huns and Vandals who ravished the Roman Empire came from without . . . your Huns and Vandals will have been engendered within your own institutions."

Macaulay was pretty sure that pressure groups eventually would bring about the nation's downfall by electing legislators who would hand over to them the wealth created by others. He thought of pressure groups in terms of working men hearing their "children cry for more bread," for he came along several generations too soon to think in terms of political action committees, farm blocks, veterans' organizations, oldage pension clubs, manufacturers' associations, and similar symbols of an age in which most of us are less worried about getting bread than we are about tires.

If pressure groups didn't cause the crash, he figured that some strongly entrenched group (he thought it would be the military) would do the trick by depriving us of our liberty in their efforts to save order and prosperity.

Such pessimistic conclusions were not arrived at impulsively. Macaulay watched our government in operation for half a century before he made his dire predictions. He did not expect to see the smashup in his time, but he said, "Your fate I believe certain, though it is deferred. . . ."

Today, thoughtful Americans are wondering a bit fearfully just how good a prophet Macaulay was. They see the shadow of the government growing larger and that of the individual citizen growing smaller. They see free enterprise becoming restricted enterprise. Even in the face of socialistic disillusionment abroad, they see Americans, who under private management have made themselves the most prosperous and most successful people on earth, being gently coaxed into trying government management—with pennies from their own till. They see Washington swarming with economic doctors, who, though pleased with the golden eggs, are itching to operate on the goose.

These economic experimenters are causing increasing concern to many citizens. Now, with so much of our attention focused on our tremendously vital defense effort, the set-up should be about perfect for them. With powerful propaganda machines at their command, millions of dollars of tax money to play with, and almost everybody looking in the other direction, they should be in a position to "correct the shortcomings of our democratic government" to their hearts' content.

What will our government be like when the smoke lifts? Will these well-meaning planners turn out to be a twentieth century variety of kind Huns and gentle Vandals (armed with pens instead of spears) who will, with the most altruistic intentions, destroy our time-tested way of life if we don't watch out? Nations catch socialism in two ways; either they are exposed to it through revolution, or, as is the case with creeping-socialism, they breathe too long the stagnant air of apathy.

With uncanny foresight Macaulay pointed out some of the problems that would be facing us a century after his death. But the most important factor of all he overlooked—the one thing that can save us from the fate he predicted. That is the character of the American people—the fact that when they get their backs up, Americans can be as strong for preserving their government as he thought they would be for overthrowing it. He failed to realize that by the middle of the twentieth century, most Americans would still like their form of government—imperfect though it is. He thought their selfishness would be the rock upon which their ship of state would be wrecked. What he did not foresee was that, out of the self-reliance and individual initiative engendered by their institutions, the great body of Americans—both inside and outside of pressure groups—would have become so contented and prosperous that their selfish desires would be less compelling than the deep pride they would have in their country. Loyalty—though he did not know it—will dissipate selfishness—and apathy, too. He failed to take into account that wonderful thing called patriotism!

We are likely to be hearing a great deal about patriotism in the months ahead. It is probable that a lot of strange items will be offered in patriotic wrappers. It might be a good idea to take time out to discover just what patriotism is. Exactly what is this powerful force that can upset Macaulay's unhappy calculations? What does it require of us as individuals?

Dictionary definitions are inadequate. Patriotism is more than "love of one's country"; it involves attitude, alertness, action. It requires, first of all, a deep conviction that the principles for which our country stands are right. It implies a personal determination to guard these standards, not from change, but from unwise change, or change slipped over on us. It connotes an active loyalty—not the kind that lets George do it!

There are two kinds of patriotism: the war-time patriotism which all of us know about, and a deeper, less emotional kind—the patriotism of peace. The first kind, we usually turn on and off on holidays and during war scares. The other is something like self-respect, good sportsmanship, or love of one's family.

Like freedom, patriotism is not free. The price was high at Valley Forge; it is high today in Korea. For us at home, there is a price. We must believe fervently in our country's basic ideals, and stand for them ourselves—boldly and unashamed. We must protect these ideals against the political dreamers and economic theorists who offer us enticing substitutes, some original, others imported (with the directions on the box). We must support the institutions which are teaching our time-tested principles to the young men and young women upon whom we must depend to pre-

(Continued on page 10.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Undergraduate Education

The G. I. Bill of Rights has encouraged and inspired scores and hundreds of young people to further their education that they may be better prepared for life. Many who have graduated from high school, college and university, would never have received this advanced training, had it not been for the subsidy made available by the government. Beyond question, there are more young people in undergraduate schools today than there would have been had it not been for the assistance offered by the G. I. Bill of Rights.

Many complimentary and congratulatory things have been said and written concerning the expressed interest on the part of the government in trying to lower the number of illiterates in our country. All who are ambitious for the progress of our country will join in the applauding of our government. There is more in education, however, than simply instructing in the fundamentals of an undergraduate education program. That is to say that the individual who is schooled in science, history, English, languages, and the like, without reference to moral or spiritual values, is far from being educated for citizenship in a democracy. Every student should, during his undergraduate days, be schooled in matters of religion that contribute vitally to the moral fiber of the individual. To instruct the mind and train the body without reference to the heart and soul of the individual is to do that individual a serious injustice. If he is being taught the fundamentals in undergraduate studies, he should at the same time receive instruction in religious matters. When I speak of instruction in spiritual and religious matters, I am referring not simply to Bible, textbooks and religious literature, but referring to the instructor himself. It is useless for him to talk about faith, faith in God, in Christ, and in the Bible, when he is void of that faith himself. We have lived beyond the day when anyone can say with any degree of effectiveness, "Do as I say do, without considering what I do." How may others hear what one says, when his deeds speak louder than what he says,

Those who instruct in undergraduate schools today have a tremendous responsibility. We are all aware that there is a tendency today not only in religious circles but on college campuses to swing back towards a more strictly religious life and to re-evaluate religious instruction on a college campus, and at the same time to emphasize the importance of the impact of the professor's life on the students themselves. The one need for the church college today is to sound a definite note in matters of Christian belief and Christian practices. It must hold high the banners of morality and religion or give way to secular institutions and secular instructions given on the campuses of these institutions. The hope of the church in this new day, aside from the gospel and Christ, is the Christian college. The faculty of a college determines its character and force in society.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

Appreciation is expressed to those churches and Sunday schools that, during the summer months, have been faithful in making their contributions to apportionment to be forwarded to Elon College. The generosity of our Sunday school and church people has kept the college going since the day of its founding.

Someday, and may God speed the day, all of our Sunday schools and churches will realize the great importance of our college and be conscious of its need of support. When that day comes, they will, out of their earnings, contribute sufficiently generously that the college shall be able to meet its minimum economic demands. Elon College covets the cooperation and prayers of our church people.

Previously reported	$5,010.71
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Durham Sunday School	$ 24.37
Bethel	5.00
Long's Chapel	9.66
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro	50.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Dry Run Sunday School	6.97
Leaksville	19.42
Newport Sunday School	9.05
Winchester Sunday School	8.34
Total to date	$5,143.52

"A TRIP TO THE MOON."

(Continued from page 2.)

Final checks and terse orders by the commander preceded the rushing take-off and soon we find ourselves shooting through space at the rate of 11,000 miles per hour.

Special sound effects originated by Mack Preslar of the University Radio and Recording Division, impress an illusion of being space-borne en route to Luna, as the congenial voice of the head stewardess advises and instructs the passengers.

Actual sequence shots of the earth as photographed from a V-2 rocket, soaring to a height of seventy-eight miles, are shown on the control panel tele-viewer soon after blast-off time. The unique film was generously lent to the Planetarium by the Johns Hopkins Applied Physics laboratory and made under the sponsorship of the Navy Bureau of Ordinance.

As we approach the moon, it is seen to grow in size until the retarding rockets check the speed of our ship which lands safely in crater Newcomb, our chosen destination. With audio and visual effects, the nose of the rocket leaves the mother ship on a cruise to photograph the surrounding Moonscape. Immediately, the heavenly bodies become apparent beyond the protective plastic dome which covers the passenger lounge. The sun rises and bathes the crater walls with its unfiltered rays. . . . The Earth hangs there in the sky, spinning on its axis and undergoing the same changes of phase as we observed in the Moon when viewed from Earth.

A whole day is spent on the Moon—two weeks by Earth time—and in the middle of the afternoon the Sun passes behind the Earth and is eclipsed. During the eclipse . . . the temperature drops rapidly from 30 degrees above to 240 below zero.

Sunset on the Moon brings our stay there to a close, and after the cruising rocket returns and couples, the ship takes off and noses toward mother Earth. The growing image of the Earth on the tele-viewer, followed by a safe landing of the rocket, concludes the exciting fantasy.

Though only a present-day "fantasy," Lunar excursions will, according to experts, become a reality in the next twenty-five years. Trips into outer space are now theoretically conceivable. . . . So take "A Trip to the Moon" this summer. If you will allow your imagination this wholesome exercise, many interesting facts may be digested enjoyably.

Missions at Home and Abroad

Frances Riggs Writes

Dear Friends:

It seems like a long time since we left our little village, and it is already hard to recall our last hectic days before we left for America. We had had a great many visitors our last month, who wanted to see the rural work while there was still a place to get American meals and someone who spoke "American" English to explain it all. It was getting so that Joy and Louis were asking me when the next car would come. They weren't much impressed by the important visitors, but they were very much excited by the autos. Jeeps were first on their list.

The day before we left, after our furniture had been loaded into ox-carts, the villagers of the local area gave a lovely goodbye celebration. We hadn't heard what was happening until we heard the drums and firecrackers. Louis and Joy were scared, so we picked them up when the drummers got close. They came to our home and paraded us down to the church square, drumming and dancing all the way. There they gave us the proper speeches and garlands. They even had garlands for the children. Joy started immediately picking the petals off of hers!

From Madura we took a train which carried us across India to Bombay, where we caught a British steamer to the Persian Gulf. The first night on the train our little boy was so excited he lay in his bunk with his eyes wide open. When I fell asleep at nine thirty he was still awake very quietly thinking about the wide, wide world. We were glad to get aboard our steamer and give him a few restful days, for he was almost sick from so much "spice in life." Joy took everything very calmly as if she had traveled all her life and was bored with it all.

I think that the climax of our trip for Louis, was the airplane ride from Kuwait to Damascus. From the time he saw the plain waiting until we climbed aboard he kept tugging at my skirts to be sure we moved the right direction. It was a four-hour trip and he got awfully drowsy before the end, but he refused to relax. He pleased the pilot so much that he took the little fellow's hand and led him off the plane when the trip was over. From then on he took things more calmly, but would suggest to us every now and then that we might take another "big plane ride."

It is wonderful to be here in the home of our parents. We also are looking forward to seeing each one of you personally. We have many friends whom we have not yet met, and we would like to thank you personally for all that you have done.

Sincerely,
FRAN RIGGS.

JUST A PLAIN LIE . . .

(Continued from page 5.)

tempt for those who differ from us. Are we able, you and I, individually to stand with Protestants, Catholics, Judaists, Mohammedans, Parsees, Hindus, and the rest, and say together, "Our Father who art in Heaven"? Are we able to stand with the yellow-skinned Chinaman, the dark-skinned Afro-American, the Indian, with his bronze skin, and together say "Our Father"? If we are not, then something is wrong, and the wrong is within our own souls. "For God has made of one blood all races of men for to dwell upon the earth"—not apart as enemies or opponents, but together as friends. God is no respecter of persons, of races, nor of creeds; but that person or that race which practices love for humankind is in highest favor with God, and that creed which most inspires its devotees with a spirit of brotherhood is most acceptable to God.

The only antidote for prejudice is knowledge. The only corrective of intolerance is understanding. But it is not tolerance that the world needs most today. Tolerance is not enough. Tolerance is only a half-way station. What the world needs today is appreciation. Who wants merely to be tolerated? We would almost as soon be dispised as merely to be tolerated. Tolerance which lacks appreciation is but camouflaged contempt. What the human heart craves and what society needs is mutual recognition and mutual appreciation.

Love for humanity expresses itself in something more than tolerance. It expresses itself in genuine appreciation—appreciation of the rights of other faiths, recognizing that these other faiths have right for being, and that other faiths have made and will continue to make their contribution to human happiness and human welfare, and that other faiths seek the same God that we seek. It is not religious tolerance that the world so sorely needs and that every community needs, but religious appreciation.

Every faith should realize that all faiths have God in common and that love for the Father God and love for all men as brothers gives to the world the only convincing witness of religion. Regardless of what claim individuals or groups may make of loving God, the Bible declares that failure to love humanity gives the lie to the claim. "He that loveth not, knoweth not God." We should love men not because of what they believe, but because of what they are. Regardless of what a man's creed or color of skin may be, if he has honor, if his life is right, he is entitled to the respect and appreciation of all mankind.

There is an old legend which illustrates the importance of appreciating the other person's point of view: Three men stood looking at a large triangular prism, each man standing on a different side of the prism from the other two. One man exclaimed, "It is a red prism." "No, you are wrong," said the second man, looking at the prism from another side, "It is a blue prism." "No," said the third, "You are both wrong. It is a green prism." And each man, looking at the triangular prism from his respective point of view, insisted that he was right and that the others were wrong. They could come to no agreement, and the longer they each held their ground contending, the more positive each became that he alone was right. So long as they each looked at the prism from his place of observation, there was nothing they could do but disagree. And then a fourth man came upon the scene, and instead of being content to look at the triangular prism from any one side alone, he walked around it and saw it from all sides. And to the great surprise of the three men, he said, "Men, each of you is right. The prism is red, the prism is blue; it is green . . . when you look at it from your present positions. But, men, you are also each one wrong. The prism is not all red, or all blue, or all green. It is red, blue and green."

And that simple legend teaches a
(Continued on page 13.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

At the School of Missions

This article is being written in the Convention Office during the time the School of Missions is in session on the Elon College campus. There are 105 people registered, with 75 staying for the entire school. The following churches are represented:

Valley Conference:
Bethlehem Pastorate	1
Winchester	5
Total	6
Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Nans.)	8
Christian Temple	3
Cypress Chapel	3
Dendron	1
Franklin	4
Holy Neck	2
Liberty Spring	3
Newport News	2
Oakland	2
Portsmouth, First	1
Rosemont	2
Suffolk	5
Union, So.	1
Windsor	1
Total	38
N. C. Conference:
Apple's Chapel	1
Asheboro	1
Beulah	1
Burlington, First	1
Chapel Hill	1
Elon College	7
Greensboro, First	4
Greensboro, Palm St.	2
Happy Home	1
High Point	1
New Hope	1
Pleasant Grove	1
Pleasant Ridge	1
Southern Pines	2
Union	1
Union Ridge	1
Wake Chapel	2
Winston-Salem	3
Total	31

Churches with women who registered for single sessions at the School of Missions were, as would be expected, all from North Carolina:

Burlington, First	1
Chapel Hill	1
Durham	2
Elon College	1
Gibsonville	1
Haw River	3
Henderson	2
Hines Chapel	2
Monticello	8
Mt. Bethel	2
Reidsville	3
Union Ridge	2
Total	28

Concerning the School's Activities.

It is always difficult to report adequately a meeting of the type of the School of Missions. The committee planning for the school this year, composed of Mrs. W. B. Williams, Mrs. Garland Spratley, Mrs. Cecil Whitlock and Mrs. W. T. Scott (now in absentia), did a good job. Mrs. Colclough and Mrs. Booth, from Elon College, and Mrs. M. F. Hall and Mrs. Whitlock, did a fine job of making people feel welcome and relieving them of their money. The dining room hostess, Mrs. Ballinger from Greensboro, combined efficiency with humor in running this department.

Devotions at the breakfast table got the day off to a good start. The Bible course, taught by Dr. H. S. Hardcastle, has been excellent. Rev. Quentin Leisher, nice looking and with a good voice, neither of which is any detriment with an audience of women, has brought us up to the minute information about our mission fields around the world, with special emphasis on the Philippines, where our Thank Offering will go next year. Miss Marjorie Martin, new Friendly Service secretary, is giving us practical suggestions for use in our women's groups, pointed up by a program on Wednesday evening, and is telling us about Spanish-speaking Americans.

Work of the various departments and committees of our Women's Convention is being presented in the afternoon sessions, with each chairman using her own method of presentation. The results have been varied, interesting and helpful.

A tour of the Elon College campus, led by President Smith, and a trip to the Christian Orphanage, led by Mrs. John G. Truitt, have been pleasant features. A picnic supper at Moonelon gave an opportunity for visiting this newest acquisition of the Southern Convention.

Evening Sessions.

The Visual Aids department had charge of the first evening program, which consisted of two moving pictures, with some explanation regarding the use of both, given by Mrs.

Ralph Galt and Mrs. Harry Nelson, both of the Valley.

In lieu of the regular worship service, a picture featuring a rhythmic dance group from our church in Hanover, New Hampshire, directed our thinking along the lines of worship. "The Hidden Heart," a feature film for use by our denomination, was "previewed" as the main part of the evening's program. Between September 1 and March 1, it is hoped that this film will be shown in every church in the Southern Convention. Book it through the Convention Office and "the sooner the better" if you want to get it on a special date. After March 1, it will be available to other denominations on a rental basis. Following the program, we were entertained at a reception in the main parlor of West Dormitory, with the Women's Auxiliary of the Reidsville Church as the hostess group. The refreshments, flower arrangements and fellowship all combined to make it a delightful occasion.

Wednesday evening we met at the Parish House for a "World Tour of Listening Posts." Miss Martin, aided by twelve hostesses and speakers, took the members of the School of Missions on a speedy air trip to many of our mission fields. This was a demonstration of something which could be done by a local society, being an adaptation of a program in our denominational program booklet for the coming year. A group in costumes representing many nations held our attention as we finished the program by singing "In Christ There is No East or West."

Thursday evening's session in the Whitley Auditorium was a striking one. It was fitting that "our" Dorothy Jackson should preside when Mr. Leisher told us about "A New Day in Missions," making us see the opportunities for service in the world in which we live. Dr. L. E. Smith conducted the communion service in a dignified and worshipful manner, assisted by deaconesses who were present for the school.

Personalities.

As this school draws to a close, I am impressed by two ministers' wives (one to a minister!) who are attending their first School of Missions, and entering into every phase of its activities. Rebecca Carne, wife of our new minister in Franklin, Virginia, is "charming to look at, delightful to know." She has played the piano beautifully on short notice, or no notice at all, led the vesper services

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

God's Littlest Creatures

Census takers are the people of the government who count all the grandfathers, grandmothers, fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, aunts and cousins. Every so many years they write it down in their books. But who takes the census of God's littlest creatures?

The other day, as we came up the walk, we saw a small creature fall to the ground. It looked like a newborn baby bird, but close inspection showed two baby bats wrapped in a biting grip! No one had counted them, no one on the ground even knew they existed!

A little boy claimed them all for his own, and they have been living on the screen window, hanging most comfortably up side down! Some people think bats are repulsive (a big word meaning they don't like them) and they shudder to see them.

These two didn't look so bad. Their badness comes when they get together and they begin to nibble and claw one another. Their little pointed ears make nice mouthfuls. A medicine dropper filled with milk furnishes their food, and they are quite content.

Do you know that bats use radar to travel? Their little ears are keen and they make a high pitched sound that reflects to them from solid objects, so they fly clear of them.

A scientist made a study of bats and their habits; then he wrote a book about them. He had favorites among them. He traveled to New Mexico's Carlsbad Caverns to see the thousands of bats that spiral from the cave each day at sunset.

Bats are among God's littlest creatures. Often we do not know they are with us.

Good wishes to J. and R. V., having fun down on the farm!

JUNE JOY HOUSE.

* * * * *

"Comfortable Mothers"

By LELIA MUNSELL.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Joey had been scuffling with his neighbor, Tommy, and had torn his coat. Tommy had torn his coat, too. The boys had gone to Tommy's mother first. He felt pretty sorry, and so did Joey. How Joey hoped his mother wouldn't scold! He'd rather take a whipping.

Joey's mother didn't scold at all. "Too bad," she said. "But it's an old coat, and I can mend it. This is what we will do. You sweep off the front porch and the walk for me, and I'll mend your coat."

Joey rushed for the broom and did a very creditable job. Then he carefully put the broom in its place.

His mother had not quite finished his coat, and he snuggled up to her. "You're so comfortable," he sighed, happily. "You don't crank a bit."

It takes time and effort to be comfortable and not to crank, but Joey's mother thought it paid. Joey had a baby brother, and how he loved that baby. When Mother bathed and dressed him, he always wanted to help. She let him. "It slows down the process," she said, "but his love for the baby is a sweet thing, and well worth encouraging. However, I always attach a condition to letting him help. He must do certain little things, such as picking up his own belongings and putting them away. I'm killing two birds with one stone—making him happy and teaching him to give as well as to receive."

The Bible is full of messages of comfort, but neither the Bible nor the dictionary define comfort as mere pity. The dictionary says that to comfort means not only to soothe but to give courage to, to strengthen. Real comfort never induces self-pity. A really comforting mother never encourages her child to give up. Rather, she insists that he try again.

Joey came home from school one day much upset. He had been on the program and had been so nervous he had forgotten his piece. "They all laughed at me," he sobbed. His mother let him cry it out, and then she said, "The sun will rise tomorrow, just the same. We all do things like that. I did, once; and I felt awful."

He looked at her in wide-eyed surprise. "You did? Why, Mommy, you can stand up and talk now better than anybody else." She had taken him with her once when she had made a talk before her club, and he had been immensely proud of her,

"Thank you, Joey. Do you know how I learned to get over being afraid? My teacher urged me to 'try again.' I thought I never could, but I tried and got along all right. I was never afraid after that."

Joey shook his head. "I can't ever try again. They'd laugh at me."

"Let's think it over," she counseled.

It took a little while to persuade him, but finally he said, "I'll try again if you'll sit right up in front and smile at me when you think I'm getting scared. Will you?"

"Of course I will."

This time, Joey did beautifully. It was a happy laddie who came running to his mother when the program was over. "I'd be pretty scared," he said, "and you'd smile at me, and that would end my being scared."

As Joey grew, he continued to take his troubles to his mother, sure of her understanding. On one occasion, when a high school student, he was out of town with a group, when a bit of car trouble made them late in getting back. "We'll catch it," said one of the group. "Our mothers will never believe we couldn't help it," said another.

"Mine will," said Joe, confidently.

When he went in, his mother heard him, called, and came down. Joe explained why he was so late, and added, "I hope you didn't worry too much."

"I was anxious, Joey," she said, using the old boyhood name, but not worried. I have tried to teach you to be dependable, and I believe you are."

Joe kissed her. "You're so comfortable," he said. "You still don't crank a bit."

"WHAT PRICE PATRIOTISM?"

(Continued from page 6.)

serve our national heritage in the future.

Among such institutions are the hundreds of small, independent, Christian colleges which for so many years have been training their students, through precept and example, to pull their own weight as good citizens—self-respecting, self-reliant, loyal. America will be needing these privately supported colleges in the years to come—perhaps as never before—for they are the ramparts from which our American way of life will be defended. Are you helping to keep these ramparts strong?

—Scottish Rite News.

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Young Adults Meet at Lebanon

The regular meeting of the Young Adult Class of Lebanon Christian Church, Semora, N. C., met on Thursday night, June 11, in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Luther Hudson, with twenty-five members present. Mr. Ezra Snow, our president, presided over the meeting. Mrs. W. F. Hudson, Jr., led the devotionals, using as the theme, "Why Christians Suffer," followed by prayer.

Following routine business, an interesting and informative program on "How to Be Happy" was given by the program committee, headed by Mrs. Foster Pointer. At the close of the meeting everyone went out on the lawn and enjoyed playing games and a weiner roast.

ALICE WELLS,

Secretary.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

A good number of the high school young folks are having a grand time at Elon this week. Don't you wish we were there, too. Let's plan to go next year; whatdaya say?

* * *

Here's a story Harry Emerson Fosdick used to tell:

A farmer was driving his horse laboriously along a dusty road. He came to a man sitting beside the road and pulled his team to a halt and called out, "How much longer does this hill last?"

"You ain't on no hill," the stranger replied: "Your hind wheels is off."

* * *

I heard this story the other day: A traveling salesman stopped at a service station early in the morning to fill up with gas for the day's trip. He noticed a man pull into the station with a truck load of the finest young hogs he had ever seen in quite some time. He got his gas, made his rounds for that day, and stopped back that same evening at the service station to get a Coke. While he was there he saw the same man drive into the station with the same load of hogs—or at least they looked like the same ones. He could not imagine why, because surely the farmer would have had no trouble selling such fine hogs.

So the salesman walked over and asked the man, "Aren't you the same man that I saw here this morning?"

"Yes, sir, I am," was the unconcerned reply.

"Well, it looks to me," the salesman continued, "that you have the same hogs that you had this morning. What are you hauling them around for?"

"Well, it's like this. I live close to the city, and there is no grazing handy for the hogs. So each day I haul them out to my country farm, let them graze all day, and then bring them home."

The salesman, somewhat surprised by this explanation, asked, "But doesn't that take an awful lot of time?"

"Yes, it does," the man answered, "but time don't mean nothing to a hog."

* * * * *

"The Basic Formula"

By WILLIAM HOFFMAN.

A boy can go to college and memorize all the formulas and notes given and still not learn a great deal. For the memory is a process that can change unless it has a picture it can see in the mind's eye. By memorization a student gets a portion of the solution, but that is not enough. He is like a bird without wings or a stream without water. He has to think on the given information and picture it in his mind before the information will help him to succeed. At night we can look up and see the stars with our eyes, but in our minds we can reach up and touch them.

The mind of the untutored Indian knew only the out-of-doors life. He did not know what kind of an "animal" was this thing we call a book, but he did see God in the clouds and felt him in the winds. He did not take the clouds and the wind as merely an occurrence, but looked deeper, picturing these things in his mind, seeing God made manifest in the processes of the universe, and felling in his heart that God was the solution to this wonder and mystery. And it was the right solution.

It has not been but a few years that college and the opportunities of higher education have been possible for so many. And for those who did have this advantage it was just a pine bench with a student at one end and a Bible on the other—this was education for them. It was quite sufficient, too, for today we endeavor to pattern ourselves in their character and likeness. Of course, there are others of the present day, whose lives serve as a pattern and challenge to us. Those we most like to use as our model and inspiration are our mothers and fathers. Some young people have parents who mean as much to them and are as vital to their life as the sun and moon. With strength and guidance of God these parents can, and do, light the pathway of a young person's life and help him in the solution of life's problems.

The greatest factor I know to give a fellow ambition and at the same time a sense of true values is his parents. If he has their love and knows it, all other things become right and his perspective of life sound, no matter whether his education be large or small. With the assurance of this basic consideration each one can do great things. Perhaps not great by the standards as set by man, but by the standards set by God himself, which are the eternal values. Who knows how God is going to grade us on our education during these earthly years? There are formulas for living for all to learn and to follow. They must be analyzed and given serious thought. Every person might not use the same formula, but may arrive at the right answer. Which of us is to say that one person receives more from life than another? Perhaps the person many of us frown upon, who seems to have little choice as to the formula for his own life, may be the one whose formula is the correct solution to right living—and to eternal life.

We, the young people of this church, feel that if our parents are members of the church and attend its services that we are greatly inspired—to us it makes a great deal of difference. For where there is knowledge of God there is love—the basic ingredient of life and central in the teachings of him whom we follow as our Lord and Master. To all our parents and to those of you who have given much that we might come to know and to serve God we are grateful. We love the church and to her we look for guidance that our faith might become crystallized and that it shall help us prove ourselves worthy to be called followers of him who gave his life that we might live.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"One World in Christ"

LESSON III—JULY 19, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "So then ye are no longer strangers and sojourners, but you are fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God."—Ephesians 2: 19.

LESSON: Ephesians 2: 8-10, 13-22.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 35.

NOTE.—In keeping with the custom, there was no issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN last week. Dr. "Hardy" decided that inasmuch as THE SUN was having a vacation, he would have one too. That accounts for the fact that there were no "Notes" on the lesson for Sunday, July 12. This business of writing these "Notes" reminds me of the story of the woman who got on the trolley car following fourteen children. The motorman said, "Lady are all these your children, or is this a picnic?" She replied, "These are all my children, but I want you to know that this ain't no picnic." Just as "the show must go on," so must these "Notes" be written. It isn't always a picnic; but it has its compensations in the way of service to Christ and his Church, and in the words of appreciation that come from those who read and use them. So here we go again after a week's vacation.—H.S.H.

Saved by Grace Through Faith Unto Good Works.

Let us try to understand what Paul is saying to the members of the Ephesian Church, when he writes, "For by grace have ye been saved through faith; and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast (or glory)." Paul is saying, first of all, that salvation is a gift of God, an act of the unmerited love of God. That is the meaning of the word grace. God took the initiative, God freely gave, offered himself in Christ to man, to all men. Salvation is the gift of God, it is not of men.

This salvation, this gift of God, however, is appropriated by faith. "By grace have ye been saved through faith," God offers. By faith, man accepts and appropriates salvation. Faith is the instrument through which the gift is received; it is not the source of the gift. And faith is not a matter of the head alone; it is a matter of the heart. A man simply believes or trusts God, and accepts by faith what God in Christ offers. Salvation is offered by and through the grace of God. It is appropriated by man by faith.

It is not of works, that no man shall glory. A man cannot earn salvation. He cannot buy it. He cannot get it by good works. He cannot save himself. He can get it only by accepting it by faith. But there is a relation between salvation and works. If a man cannot save himself by works, he can show that he is saved by his works. Good works are the fruit of salvation. "For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus for good works, which God aforetime prepared that we should walk in them." A Christian does not do good works in order to be saved; he does good works to show his appreciation of the grace of God in granting him salvation through faith. This, in simple language, is what Paul is telling his Ephesian friends.

One in Christ.

Having established this great doctrine of salvation by grace through faith, Paul goes on to show that this salvation makes all men one in Christ. There were a great many Gentiles in the church at Ephesus. The apostle reminds them that at one time they were strangers and sojourners from the Commonwealth of Israel. They did not have any part or place in the Covenant with the Chosen People. But by Christ's death on the Cross, they had been brought near, and had been made one with the Jews and all men who had accepted God's gracious offer of salvation in Christ. "For he is our peace." Those of you who saw the moving picture, "More for Peace," will recall how these words were carved on the foot of the Cross that was made from the wood that came from the blasted church in Hiroshima. In the Cross, God slew the enmity, he reconciled men not only to himself, but to each other. He preached peace to those that were afar off—the Gentiles—and peace to them that were nigh—the Jews. And through Christ, both have access in one Spirit unto the Father.

What this man is saying to the Christians of that day, and to the Christians of this day, is that Christ and Christ alone is the hope of one world. We can have union in other ways; we can have unity only in him. It is only as men are made brothers in Jesus Christ that we can have peace and true brotherhood. Wherever anywhere there is a Christian, regardless of his creed or color, his race or his religion, he is one with every other Christian everywhere. This does not mean uniformity; but it does mean unity.

And all men and all races have a place in this enlarged Kingdom of God. "In whom each several building, fitly framed together, groweth into a holy temple in the Lord. In whom ye are builded together for a habitation of God in the Spirit."

Now, all this had point in Paul's day. The Jews regarded the Gentiles as dogs and looked upon them with disdain. The Gentiles hated the Jews and loathed them, and looked upon them as snobbish and proud, and regarded them as an inferior race. There was suspicion, jealousy, hatred between the two groups. But in Christ these evil things were done away with. Jews and Gentiles met as brothers at the Cross of Christ. Racial and religious differences were done away with. They were reconciled in one spirit and body unto God through the Cross.

All this has point in our day, too. Not only is there great division between nations and races, but, alas, there are cleavages even among the churches. How effective can be the Church's plea for unity and peace, when there are so many divisions in the Church itself. Here, again, the call is not for uniformity, but for unity. It is only as the Church can sing in spirit and in truth, "All one body we," that the world can be one in Christ. Thank God for all those movements which are seeking to bring the churches together in Christ in the common task of saving the world and of bringing enduring peace. For only in Christ is there peace.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

True religion is the life we live, not the creed we profess, and will some day be recognized by quality and not by brand.—Wright.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 9.)

at Moonelon, and participated with zest in other phases of the school. She is the daughter of a Methodist missionary to the West Indies, and was born in Greensboro, where her grandparents live, although she never really lived there.

And then, Louise Galt, wife of our minister to a group of churches near New Market, Virginia, made an unforgettable impression on the entire School of Missions. An early arrival, she began her "vacation" by helping Pattie Lee Coghill with the packets. In the class and workshop sessions, she was always ready with helpful suggestions. A keen mind, a forceful manner of speaking, and a ready wit, made her a person to be noticed. Her husband's parents were long-time missionaries of the American Board in China, the senior Mr. Galt now being in Hong Kong. Our Mr. and Mrs. Galt went out to China as missionaries, too, but were only able to stay a short time on account of world conditions. The leaflet many of you have received in your churches recently about a nurse in Korea, shows a picture of Edith Galt, sister-in-law of Louise, and tells about her work. Here is a family the members of our churches in the Southern Convention need to meet.

* * * * *

Financial Report—Third Quarter
1952-1953

WOMAN'S MISSION BOARD
NORTH CAROLINA CONGREGATIONAL
CHRISTIAN CONFERENCE
Quarter ending June 15, 1953.

RECEIPTS.

Woman's Societies.

Albemarle	$38.75
Amelia	5.00
Apple's Chapel	17.25
Asheboro	35.00
Auburn	5.10
Berea	10.00
Bethel	16.00
Burlington	180.50
Calvary	38.00
Carolina	10.00
Church of Wide Fellow- ship	35.00
Concord	6.25
Damascus	2.50
Durham	70.50
Elon College	126.17
Erskine Memorial	37.50
Eutaw Community	10.00
Flint Hill (R)	3.75
Greensboro, First Church	201.50
Greensboro, Palm Street	38.00
Hank's Chapel	27.00
Haw River	8.75
Hebron, Virginia	10.00
Henderson	35.00
High Point	12.50
Hines' Chapel	10.00
Hopedale	16.62

Ingram, Virginia	22.50
Kallam's Grove	5.00
Lakeview Community	10.00
Liberty, Vance	50.00
Long's Chapel	25.00
Moore's Union	10.00
Mount Bethel	5.00
Mount Zion	10.00
New Hope	20.00
New Lebanon	10.00
Oak Level	4.00
Pfafftown	6.00
Pleasant Grove, N. C. ...	5.00
Pleasant Grove, Virginia	7.50
Pleasant Ridge (G)	15.00
Pleasant Ridge (R)	10.00
Plymouth	5.00
Ramseur	10.00
Reidsville	20.00
Sanford	80.00
Shallow Well	45.00
Smithwood	5.00
Spoon's Chapel	6.25
Turner's Chapel	30.00
Union Grove	7.50
Union, N. C.	30.00
Union, Va.	25.00
Wake Chapel	60.00
Winston-Salem	14.00

1,659.39

Young People.

Mount Zion	25.00
------------------	-------

Junior Societies.

Apple's Chapel	$ 5.75
Durham	8.40
Elon College	20.02
Greensboro, First	10.54
Henderson	9.00
Lakeview Community	2.00

55.71

Cradle Roll.

Durham	$ 6.30
Greensboro, First	10.54
Lakeview Community	1.00
Turner's Chapel	5.00

22.84

District Rally Offerings.

Asheboro	$13.37
Burlington & Greensboro	61.09
Halifax	25.50
Raleigh & Henderson	39.60
Sanford	21.20

160.76

Total $ 1,923.70

DISBURSEMENTS.

Mrs. McKeith, Rally
Speaker	$ 25.00
Expense of Rallies	83.74
Mimeograph work	4.95
World Day of Prayer Of- fering	2.10
Youth Fellowship	25.00
Mrs. W. V. Leathers, Treasurer Woman's Mis- sion Board—Southern Convention for:
Thank Offerings	$ 52.02
Life Memberships	150.00
Memorials	130.00
Rachanyapuram School ..	9.00
Foreign Missions, Special Fund	15.00
Missions, General Fund ..	1426.89

1,782.91

Total $ 1,923.70

Respectfully submitted,

SUSIE D. ALLEN,
Treasurer.

JUST A PLAIN LIE . . .

(Continued from page 8.)

truth that the world needs to appreciate and to practice today. Many of the differences that separate mankind would speedily be obliterated if, instead of contending, men would be willing to look at the problems of life from the other person's point of view. They would then realize that it takes all the different points of view to see life whole.

Understanding is the crying need of our day—for individuals to understand each other; for religious groups to understand each other; for races to understand each other; for nations to understand each other.

If we but understood the other person's position; if we but understood those whose faith, whose race, or whose natural heritage is different from our own, our attitude toward them would be entirely changed. If nations but understood each other, and would think of their problems in the light of the problems of other nations—each nation appreciating the right of every other nation to live, and hope and to have a place in the sun—what a different world this would be!

Thomas Bracken, the Australian poet, has laid bare the secret of the world's unrest and confusion, in his lines entitled "Not Understood":

Not understood! We move along asunder;
Our paths grow wider as the seasons creep along the years.

We marvel and we wonder why life is life,
And then we fall asleep—Not understood.

Not understood! We gather false impressions,
And hug them closer as the years go by;
'Til virtues often seem to us transgressions,
And thus men rise and fall and live and die
—Not understood.

Not understood! How trifles often change us;
The thoughtless sentence or the fancied slight Destroys long years of friendship and estrange us;
And on our souls there falls a freezing blight—Not understood.

Not understood! Poor souls of stunted vision
Oft measure giants by their narrow gage.
The poisoned shafts of falsehood and derision
Are oft impelled 'gainst those who mold the age—Not understood.

Not understood! How many breasts are aching
From lack of sympathy: Ah, day by day
How many cheerless, lonely hearts are breaking,
How many noble spirits pass away—Not understood.

O God! That men would see a little clearer,
Or judge less harshly where they cannot see.
O God! That men would draw a little nearer
To one another, they'd be nearer Thee—and UNDERSTOOD.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

This week our total is only $281.89. We need more; and we believe you will help us get more. The monthly Sunday school offering is a life-saver for the orphanage. Do not let this monthly offering be a burden in any Sunday school. Pass the offering plate, telling them it is for the maintenance of our children in the orphanage. Whatever they give, send it to us and we shall be most appreciative.

This week two combines are in the harvest field. Boys are working with such happiness in being able to do something really big and fine together. You should see them putting bags of grain on the "big red" as they call it. Or bagging the wheat on the combine. The grain is too damp to harvest until around 9:00 o'clock in the morning, but from then on, it is touch and go until suppertime. A neighbor has generously loaned us a combine to go along with the one we own. I shall give you a report on how much we made when it is all in.

Two of our girls, Marjorie Oakes and Nancy Watkins, will spend this coming week at Junior High Camp at Crabtree. Others will attend the Young People's Conference here at Elon.

Our gardens are pretty. Beans, potatoes, blackberries, squash and cucumbers, are coming in, and there will be plenty of corn soon, and butterbeans. You must come to see us and let us show you how busy we are, and let us share a good country dinner with you.

The first Sunday in July we gave a children's program at Mt. Gilead. We would like to present such a program at your church or Sunday school.

Again and again I thank you for your help, for many letters of encouragement, and for the gifts you send for this worthwhile work.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JUNE 25, 1953.

Commodities fro the Week.

Mrs. John King & family, Suffolk, Va., Clothing.

Kindergarten Children, Union Christian Church, Franklin, Va., Toys.

Miss Mary Lee Gardner, Falls Church, Va., Clothing.

Mrs. J. C. Beal, Franklin, Va., Clothing.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Eastern Va. Conference:
Newport News S. S.	$ 12.00
Norfolk, First	28.16
	40.16
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington S. S.	$ 69.83
	69.83
Western N. C. Conference:
Zion	$ 30.00
	30.00
Total	$ 139.99
Grand Total	$ 7,751.33

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$10,202.63
Mrs. L. W. Hollowell, Suffolk, Va.	$ 30.00
Philathea Class, Reidsville Church	10.00
A Friend, High Point, N. C.	60.00
Progressive Bible Class, Newport News Church for Wayne Knight ...	5.00
Sophomore Tri-Hi-Y, Walter Williams High School to send a girl to camp	13.50
Mrs. Painter's Class, Leaksville Church, Luray, Va.	5.00
W. B. Truitt, Greensboro, N. C.	5.00
Special Gifts	13.40
	141.90

Grand Total

Total for the week

Total for the year

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through June 30, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	$1,591.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	1,088.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown ..	127.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder ..	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr.	82.50
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman ..	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student) ..	75.00

†Paid.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

In Memoriam

PRITCHARD.

Mr. J. J. Psitchard, 90 year old Durham resident, died on June 10, 1953. He was born in Orange County and was educated there. At the age of 25 he moved to Durham and helped found Pritchard & Bright Company. Later he worked for an insurance and realty company. He was a lifelong member of the Congregational Christian Church, Serving the Durham Church continuously as Chairman of the Trustees and member of the Men's Bible Class as long as his health permitted.

In memory of Mr. Pritchard, the Durham Congregational Christian Church presents the following resolutions:

- 1. That we express gratitude for having known and worked with this Christian gentleman who was affable, kind and gentle.
- 2. That his keen interest and devotion to the chorch and all its functions, his family and friends, serve as an example to us in promoting brotherhood.
- 3. That the memory and influence of his long, useful and unselfish Christian life prove a benediction to his family, church and community.

Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. J. M. SAUNDERS,
LUCILLE M. SMITH,
Committee.

HARWARD.

Mrs. Geneva Cannada Harward passed to her eternal home on June 4, 1953. She was a charter member of the Durham Congregational Christian Church. Mrs Harward was an exceptionally active worker in the church as long as her health permitted. At various times she sang in the choir, served as president of the Woman's Society and taught the Junior Philathia Class.

In memory of her the Durham Church presents the following resolutions:

- 1. That we express appreciation for the privilege of having known and worked with a woman who was so devout, gracious, friendly, and so patient in suffering.
- 2. That her loyalty and devotion to the church throughout the years, and the generous use of her talents for the work of Christ inspire us to be more consecrated.
- 3. That we hold in loving memory her life as a good church member, a devoted wife, a good mother, an excellent neighbor and a loyal friend.

Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. J. M. SAUNDERS,
LUCILLE M. SMITH,
Committee.

OUTLAW.

Mr. Herman F. Outlaw was born in March, 1896. He was a native of North Carolina, but had made his home in or around Driver, Virginia for the past twenty years. Having been a faithful and loyal member and deacon of Berea Christian Church, his family, many friends, and all those who knew him, in business or social life, have suffered a great loss, since his passing April 14, 1953. He was a prosperous farmer, but had been inactive for about five months prior to his death. A greater humanitarian no community ever knew; for he was always doing good and helping those in need. If he needed outside help to assist him in an undertaking, he went about seeking this help in his own quiet and meek manner. Mr. Outlaw was the father of an outstanding family in the community. To Mrs. Outlaw and family the members of Berea Christian Church extend their heartfelt sympathy.

OPAL K. JONES,
EMMA C. DARDEN,
EUGENIA W. YEATES,
Committee.

WILLIAMSON.

Mr. Fred Williamson was born in 1889. He attended William and Mary College, and for thirty years had been affiliated with The Lone Star Cement Company. Prior to this position, he was manager of The Hotel Elliott in Suffolk, Virginia for two years. In 1945 he retired from public work because of ill health. When just a child he joined Berea Christian Church, and although he made his home in Norfolk in his late years, he attended his church whenever the opportunity availed itself. His passing on November 17, 1952 was sudden, and we members of Berea Christian Church have missed his frequent visits to our church. We extend to his widow and other loved ones our heartfelt sympathy.

OPAL K. JONES,
EMMA C. DARDEN,
EUGENIA W. YEATES,
Committee.

HARRISON.

Mrs. Ilong Kelly Harrison died on January 7, 1953. Mrs. Harrison had been living in Norfolk for a number of years, but was in Durham at the time of her death. She was the daughter of John Kelly and Ada Sears Kelly, charter members of the Durham Congregational Christian Church.

From childhood, Mrs. Harrison was a member of the Durham Church. In memory of her, we submit the following resolutions:

- 1. That her character as a devoted daughter, sister and wife be an example for us.
- 2. That the influence of her sweet Christian spirit be continuous.

Mrs. R. J. KERNODLE,
Mrs. J. M. SAUNDERS,
LUCILLE M. SMITH,
Committee.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING
LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
BySecretary or Clerk
Address

..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

"Welcome to Our Visitors"

By RICHARD K. MORTON

Minister of Union Congregational Church of Jacksonville, Florida

Welcome, friends, in the name of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ! No one needs be a stranger in the Church of our Lord.

Please speak, after the service, to at least some of our people—and to our minister. Sign our "Guest Book"—giving both your home address and your local one (if any). Include, if you will, your address at your destination if you are traveling.

Whether at home or away, or in our church or some other, the important concern is: Do you know Jesus Christ and his love and power—and are you serving him—especially through his Church? We pray that the service of this day and every other contact with us will bring you into a deeper knowledge and love of our Lord. No matter who you are, or where you go, you cannot get beyond the reach of his love. No matter what experience or impression you get, or how much our imperfections may impose themselves, we hope that you will be glad that you came to our service of worship and entered into our fellowship. We want this sense of cooperation and of love to go with you in the days ahead.

As you meet with us today, you may desire some service which is in our power to give. Perhaps it is a matter of possible continued residence here—you may want to know good places to stay over-night, places to get food and other supplies, places of entertainment, and service on your car. We shall be glad to advise—to acquaint you with what our community offers.

We shall be glad to write to your home church or to a church in the community to which you are going. We urge you to join some church where you settle. We urge you also, in dealing with those who seek to provide you with services, to seek only reliable people. In the event of some special emergency or need, go to a clergyman or some other respected leader and describe your situation.

As you go from us today, we pray that God will keep you safe and give you a happy and fruitful journey. Wherever you stop, we hope that you will use your influence in helping those in charge to maintain a place of honest service and high principles.

Write to your folks at home, and keep them in your heart.

Do not let your travels, your pleasures, or your business separate you from the practice of high ideals, the nurture of faith, and participation with your fellowmen in the building of a better society.

In departing from us, go with a sense of our continued interest. Go with a sense of gratitude that you have been among those who, no matter what their personal faults, have sincerely tried to minister in the name of Christ.

If you can remain among us, we shall rejoice and take you into our circle with gladness and make you speedily a part of our work. There is always a light upon your way and upon all your problems and privileges, whether you stay or go from us.

Worship reverently today, and set your thoughts on things above. As you leave this place of worship, resolve to establish habits of study and of prayer. Seek a place of service where you may best help. And as you travel, take the blessing of Jesus Christ our Lord with you!

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JULY 16, 1953

NUMBER 28

"I Shall Not Want"

By ROBERT T. DANIEL

SHALL NOT WANT" (Psalm 23:1). Regarding the verbal form of this statement, Briggs says: "The imperfect is not future, but a present of habitual experience," and he translates it: "I have no want." This assurance is positively conditioned by the truth contained in the preceding statement. No one can say "I shall not want" until he can say truthfully "Jehovah is my shepherd." And when one can truthfully say "Jehovah is my shepherd," he can, with absolute assurance, say "I shall not want." The eternal and immanent God is also omnipotent. He created and he maintains the operation of the (apparently) infinite universe. Certainly he can provide for those who follow him in his way. This is an assurance expressed throughout the Bible. In Deuteronomy 2:7, Moses, in speaking to Israel about the wilderness, said: "... thou hast lacked nothing." In Deuteronomy 8:9, in speaking of the land of promise ahead, Moses said: "... thou shalt not lack anything in it." Jesus said: "But seek ye first his kingdom, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you" (Matthew 6:33). Paul said: "And my God shall supply every need of yours according to his riches in glory in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:19).

These statements do not mean that God is an indulgent, sentimental Person, foolishly showering upon his followers everything they wish. But their needs, in the light of their total existence, are provided for. Martyrdom, as a rule, is not a welcomed experience, but it may be exactly what is needed in the light of one's total existence and in view of the contribution he is to make to the witness of God in human history. With this one verse and its meaning clearly in mind and heart, the oppressed and crushed can look up, take hope and rejoice.

—"How to Study the Psalms," Fleming H. Revell Co.

News Flashes

Dr. D. J. Bowden, for many years Dean of Elon College, has been elected to the position of Director of the School of Religion at Indiana University. Dr. Bowden will leave his present position to assume his new post in Indiana in September. Our best wishes go with him.

The article, "Christian Seed in Communist Soil," by Harold W. Robinson, one time of T'ungshien, China, and now living in Guerneville, California, comes to us through the courtesy of Armstrong Hunter, Research Secretary of the Missions Council. We are sure you will be more than repaid for reading it.

The special report on the International Congregational Council, by Cecil Northcott, is from The Christian World, published in London, England. This is not the first time that we have had the good fortune to have an article from the pen of Dr. Lesslie E. Cooke, outstanding English Congregationalist. His article, "Congregationalism and Catholicity," was one of the feature addresses at the International Council.

"Dr. Helfenstein's Past"

By WM. KINCAID NEWMAN.

We all know the splendid work being done by Reverend Roy Helfenstein, D.D., the pastor of the First Church of Richmond, Virginia, but how many of us know what he did in Mason City, Iowa?

In Mason City, the Congregational Christian Church was for many years a strong church, but during the Depression the building fell into disrepair, the membership dwindled and the spirit of the church seemed to dwindle also. The Pastoral Supply Committee, however, had a vision and persuaded Dr. Helfenstein to undertake the difficult job of restoring the spiritual life and vitality of the congregation. He tackled it with his usual zeal, but it soon became evident to him that unless the building were made a fitting symbol of the faith of its members, it could not go forward. He led the church in raising a substantial fund and in borrowing additional funds from the Church Building Society. As a result, the building was completely restored and modernized, a beautiful and worshipful chancel was installed and a chapel constructed.

The members of the church could once more hold up their heads, and the attendance and whole tone of the church activities was improved. The members, because of their generous giving to the restoration fund acquired a sense of stewardship and the budget and benevolences of the church increased so that it is today the third strongest church in the Iowa Conference, with a membership of 895 and benevolences of over $4,000—a splendid record for a church which, when Dr. Helfenstein was called as pastor in 1938, had a membership of 711, and benevolences of only $335.

This is one of many churches in the denomination which have been helped to help themselves by our Revolving Loan Fund. Today, because of the need for new church buildings, the Church Building Society is able to put very little money into remodeling programs, but in normal times this is one of its most important functions.

The North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School Convention

The North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School Convention met at Liberty Church, Nathalie, Virginia, on Thursday, July 9, 1953.

The theme of the convention was, "Evangelism Through the Sunday School"; and at this period in the history of our nation, a more appropriate theme could not have been chosen. Our thinking as to what evangelism is has grown, expanded and changed, from the old idea of camp meeting evangelistic services, to an everyday problem that concerns each and every member of this vast throng of church goers and Christians.

The theme was forcefully impressed upon the minds of those in attendance as to how each person who is a Christian is doing evangelistic work, and has not realized it.

Dr. Henry E. Robinson's address gave one the urge to want to get out and do something in a big way in the church community.

Mrs. Richard Jackson spoke on the "Techniques for Teaching Evangelism" to children. Her address was most interesting. She brought home in a unique way the responsibility of parents, grandparents and teachers—both Sunday school and grade teachers—in teaching evangelism to our youth of all ages. The tone of our voice, our answers to their questions, our actions, our comments on radio and television programs, even our choice of toys for the children, have an effect in teaching evangelism. Mrs. Jackson gave a list of books that could be used to advantage, some priced as low as 10 cents. Women have made many wonderful improvements by working together for the good of all children, and here again is another field to conquer.

Rev. John Graves spoke on "Evangelism in the Summer Camps," as it is taught to our young people. How wonderful it is to teach and reach young people so close to nature, where it is so easy to feel and know God's presence and power. He also gave examples of the thinking, writings and oral expressions of those young people who are to be our future leaders.

Mr. Worth Squires talked on "Evangelism Visitation" by adults. He brought out the method used by his church, of visiting in pairs the members who are not so active and who do not attend regularly. This was followed up with all pairs meeting and discussing their visits. He said that results were very noticeable in attendance after one of these drives.

The part our young people contributed to this convention is showing the results of intensive training both in church and grade schools that our young people are receiving.

The youth of Liberty Church conducted a well-planned devotional for the morning service, and a group from Happy Home conducted the service in the afternoon. Both of the groups showed poise and promise for future leadership.

The convention was well attended. There were ten ministers present.

The officers elected for next year were: Martin Garren of Greensboro, president; C. H. McKinney of Reidsville, vice-president; E. W. Kellam of McLeansville, secretary, and Maynie Flynt Neal of Winston-Salem, secretary.

Those who were unable to attend missed a wonderful meeting. Make your plans now to be present at next year's meeting at Hopedale Church, near Burlington.

This writeup would not be complete without mention of the home-cooked meal that was served by the Liberty people. It was bountiful and delicious.

MAYNIE FLINT NEAL,
Secretary.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. DANIELEY, Editor, 428 Westwood, Chapel Hill, N. C.

"The Layman and His Nation" PROGRAM FOR JULY.

SUGGESTED HYMNS:

"Faith of Our Fathers," "O Beautiful for Spacious Skies," "America."

SUGGESTED SCRIPTURE:

St. Mark 12: 15-17.

PRAYER:

"Grant us, O God, the power to be loyal to and proud of our nation. Help us in every way to be good citizens, now and always. Amen."

MEDITATION:

The United States is being looked to today as a leading power among the other nations of the world as never before. This power is not only monetary, political, military, but can be spiritual as well. Has any other nation done so much for religious freedom as has America?

It is a popular thing today to decry America and its progress, saying that its civilization is doomed as was that of the Romans and Greeks. Before you agree, ask some questions, and be sure they include these: Who is paying more than 50 per cent of the cost of the United Nations Organization? Who originated The Marshall Plan, Point IV, CARE, CROP, and many other such organizations that continually help people of other nations?

Does history record any other nation which ever had a Church World Service or paid more than 50 per cent of the cost of the World Council of Churches program. What other nation has spent literally millions in all sorts of missionary enterprises and is still sending books, food, clothing and medicine to all parts of the world, and also Bibles?

Has any nation, especially a young one as ours, shown such unbelievable advances in science, medicine, transportation, communication, housing, entertainment, religion, and made great strides in most every phase of life? What other nation was victorious in battle, occupied its conquered foe and then turned that government back to its people with few strings attached? America did that in Japan and is working on it in Germany.

America is not a perfect nation, far from it; we've made mistakes before, and will make more in the future, but let's keep the record straight. As a melting pot of all other nations, our enemies not excluded, truly a Congregational Christian layman can be proud of America. It still gives a chance to every man, and the rags to riches fable is still a possibility.

QUESTIONS:

1. How can America be improved as a nation?
2. What can I do as an individual to improve our nation?
3. What part has the church played in American life?
4. How do you define American materialism or secularism?
5. Why is America today a leader in world affairs?
6. How can America better circulate its story of peace and freedom?

Linville Installs Audio System

An Audio System has recently been installed in the auditorium of the Linville, Virginia, Congregational Christian Church, which has proved of great benefit to the members of the congregation. This improvement was installed as a memorial to Mrs. Ora Scott Earman by loved ones of her family. The amplifier can also be used for a public address system; and earphones have been installed in some of the pews for the convenience of the hard of hearing.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year$3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

General contributions should be addressed to the editor at Southern Pines, N. C., and should reach him by Wednesday of the week preceding date of publication.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195....

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

World Congregationalism in Council

An Editorial from "THE CHRISTIAN WORLD," London, England

The first thing to say about the meeting of the International Congregational Council at St Andrews is—simply that it is international, and therefore a thing to thank God for. Every little Congregational church throughout the world should take hope and heart from this visible demonstration of the fact that Congregational principles and loyalties transcend national barriers, and that the same witness which is given in the drab London suburb or the Devonshire hamlet is being proclaimed throughout the greater part of the Christian world. We heartily welcome our guests from overseas.

A reading of the utterances at St. Andrews . . . draws our attention to another point about this Council of 1953. There is very obviously a concern that Congregationalism should not be on the defensive, but that, without yielding an inch on principle, it shall regard itself as an active and cooperative element in the whole Catholic Church as Protestants understand that phrase. So keen is the interest in Christian unity that some may think, on a superficial reading of these utterances, that Congregationalism is not quite sure of its own raison d'être for continuance as a separate communion, and that the next step is to find a means of gracefully surrendering its identity in the interests of a United Church whose lineaments still remain to be drawn. This is a mistake. The great contribution which Congregationalism has to make to Catholicity is its own peculiar gift of freedom of thought and action. It must preserve this freedom in order that it may be able to serve all the various communions when the time comes for framing the constitution of a Catholic Church which shall be both orthodox in the best sense of that word and at the same time completely free from superstitious barriers to the work of the Holy Spirit through the Church. Congregationalists have not to "give away" their Congregationalism. They have to preserve and use it for the benefit of Christ's Church as a whole.

Our Pension Boards Report

Recently we have received the report of the Pension Boards of the Congregational Christian Churches for the year 1952. The report covers the Annuity Fund for Congregational (and Christian) Ministers, the Retirement Fund for Lay Workers, and the Ministerial Division of the Board of Home Missions—what we of the Southern Convention better know as the Superannuation Fund.

Fortunate indeed is our church to have boards made up of such outstanding men in the fields of business and religion to care for these funds. The president of the board handling the Annuity Fund for Ministers and the Retirement Fund for Lay Workers, is Leslie R. Rounds, retired first vice-president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. On that board are bankers, trust officers, insurance company officials of outstanding companies, giving of their time and talents for the church. Few corporations can boast such personnel.

Heading the Board of Ministerial Relief is no other than Dr. Howard Stone Anderson, known to many Southern Conventioners through his pastorate in Washington in years past.

Frank J. Scribner is the General Secretary for both boards. He is an outstanding churchman and a conscientious worker.

Now what of the Pension Boards: Mr. Rounds, in making his report for the year, says: "Both the Annuity Fund and the Retirement Fund are in sound financial condition. The investments are now worth substantially more than their book value, and are invested to produce a satisfactory rate of return. Furthermore," he adds, "all liabilities are now fully funded." That is another way of saying that all of your funds are absolutely safe.

Secretary Scribner gives the following interesting figures: In 1952 there were 4,195 members of the Annuity Fund; in 1952 this number had increased to 4,267. In 1952 a total of $532,301 was paid in annuities. He also reports that 90 per cent of the members received assistance from their local churches, and in almost all cases this assistance was at least one-half of the net dues.

We have insisted that our ministers become participants in the Annuity Fund at their first opportunity. Mr. Rounds puts it this way: "It is also highly desirable for any minister not already a member of the Annuity Fund to arrange for his membership at the earliest possible date. Compound interest is a powerful factor in determining the amount of annuities. Payments made prior to age thirty will provide nearly twice as much annuity for each dollar paid as will payments made after age fifty."

The report is a good report. But our churches and ministers can make the next one a better one.

Congregationalism and Catholicity

An Address before the International Council

By DR. LESLIE E. COOKE

The paradox has been remarked more than once recently that with the growth of the ecumenical movement there has been a growth of confessionalism. That confessionalism is justified as a means of ensuring that in the ecumenical movement the richest possible contribution shall be made by each member church. No doubt confessionalism has something to contribute to the ecumenical movement, but there is also in it the danger that it might mark the recrudescence of a fierce denominationalism all the stronger because organised on a world scale. It seems to be important that this confessional group of ours—one of the earliest, I believe, if not one of the numerically strongest—should make it perfectly clear that we are bearing our witness not to other communions, or to the ecumenical movement, but within the fellowship of the Church in the world. Those principles of Catholicity which have been entrusted to us, will have testimony borne to them best if our witness is in such a Catholic conception and temper.

The Oxford Dictionary defines the word Catholic as meaning “universal,” “of interest or use to all men,” “all embracing, of wide sympathies.” Obviously we cannot apply that word to Congregationalism in the sense that Congregationalism is geographically universal. Our specific witness is borne in comparatively few countries. If we are to claim to be Catholic at all, then manifestly it must be on grounds other than geography or arithmetic.

We are one with the Holy Catholic Church in that we share with all Christians in the heritage of the faith which was once delivered to the saints. We hold to the main central path of Catholic and Evangelical thought. Ours is the Catholic deposit of faith and the Protestant restatement of it. True, we have not set much store by the power of creeds and confessions acknowledged and imposed to safeguard the faith, but we have not been creedless. The ancient covenants on the basis of which many of our churches were formed, were to a certain extent creeds. Not only our covenants express our Catholic evangelical faith, but our canticles also. Our hymns are our sung creeds.

We are Catholic in that sense that we share with all the faith once delivered to the saints.

We are Catholic, too, in that we stand in the unbroken succession and tradition of the Church. If the succession comes to us not by the episcopate, but by the continuing fellowship of Christ's people, we none the less share in it; and indeed, it could be argued, share in it more really than those who believe it is preserved in other ways. The apostles, the fathers, the saints, the mystics and the martyrs are no less ours. As Bernard Manning once said, “The Medieval Church is the mother of us all.” Our hymnody, our theology, our manuals of devotion and public worship at their best, reveal that ours are the rich treasures of the Catholic and evangelical tradition.

In theology and in worship we have no specific contribution to make within the Church, save perhaps through our hymnody. Here with all the rest we are debtors. There are, however, certain insights to which we are called to give specific witness. I will not say exclusively called, although sometimes I am tempted to think so. The first is to a truly Catholic doctrine of Grace. There seems to be a curious reluctance at times in discussions of Church union to face the fact that this is the crux of the problem. Discussions about the sacraments, the validity or otherwise of their administration, lead to discussions about the ministry, valid orders, Apostolic succession, and correlated subjects, but behind all this controversy is a divergence in the conception of Grace. One of the paradoxes of the so-called Catholics is that they hold in fact a limited doctrine of Grace—they are ever seeking to restrict Grace in some way by law. Grace they believe in, but only as it flows through certain predetermined channels. As I understand it, Congregationalism believes in the free Grace of God immediately available to every man and woman through faith. In this sense, we may be said to have sought to carry through to its logical conclusion the message of the Reformation.

It is no accident that the description given to us by the depositions made before bishops and magistrates, of the type of men and women who constituted the first Independent congregations in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries are similar to those descriptions of the early Christian communities sneered at by Celsus, and to those churches of whom Paul spoke: “Not many wise after the flesh, nor many mighty, nor many noble are called.” That is a truly Catholic doctrine and there can be no Catholic Church which does not rest upon it.

From this derives the next principle of Catholicity to which Congregationalists bear testimony, “the nature of the Church.” The principle was fashioned out of an historic situation. The Elizabethan settlement in this country threw into relief the whole question of Church and State and with it the whole principle of the identification of the Church with the nation. It was in protest against this that our fathers were led to affirm that the Church is composed of Christians. Perhaps inadvertently they stumbled upon the truth which must be the basis of any real Catholicity. Congregationalism has ever stood for the principle, Ubi Christus, ibi ecclesia.

We have never, I think, felt ourselves to be out of communion with the whole Church. We have not, certainly not in the latter part of our history, been constrained to deny the churchmanship of others. We ourselves may have been denied communion with others, but it does not occur to us to question their orders or to deny that Christ is with them.

It is not just an accident that we move easily in ecumenical circles, and that often the longing for the unity of the Church has been strong among us. Contrary to what has often been popularly believed, this is not because we do not believe anything deeply enough and may therefore get along with anybody; it is because we have a profound conviction about the nature of the Church and therefore feel ourselves to be in fellowship with all Christians.

This Catholicity of belief and experience, however, must not be misunderstood, either by others or by ourselves. It does not mean that willy nilly we can enter any scheme of Church union. For ourselves, it does not mean, as some among us have taken it to mean from time to time,

(Continued on page 13.)

The International Council

As Reported in "The Christian World"

By CECIL NORTHCOTT

Here in the grey and windy beauty of St. Andrews by the northern sea, sunlit at the moment, the Seventh International Congregational Council is assembled from June 20-29. No place in the British Isle is more aptly fashioned by position and history to receive such an Assembly than this "auld toon" where the high humanities of philosophy and logic, within the Scottish academic discipline, mix with the modern debates of science and language under the shadow of the Kirk. The delegates and visitors from thirty countries have moved into the spacious University halls of residence—one of them magnificently overlooking the springy, sacred turf of the "Royal and Ancient" fairways.

* * * * *

Being out of term-time we have to imagine the flash of the scarlet gown on the backs of youthful undergraduates—the signal which inspired J. M. Barrie to his "red badge of courage." But their quadrangles and solid stone buildings are here for us, with all the seemly quietness, too, of the little town where this morning they were selling flowers on the cobbles, and the fountain was laced with the blooms of a June which has the sun behind the high drifts of the clouds.

* * * * *

This is the seventh time the Congregationalists have met in a world assembly of this kind, the last only four years ago in the heavy heat of Wellesley, Mass. But I have an impression, even at this early stage, that no assembly has been better prepared for than this one. In the preparatory material, the organization of the assembly into groups for discussion, and the deliberate decision to keep to the one theme of "Congregational Churchmanship," there are all the signs of thoughtful care and accuracy. We will not re-make the world at this assembly, nor give unprecedented marching orders to the Church or do any of the things which are supposed to be done at assemblies of this kind. We are a company of men and women who have found in a certain tradition of the Christian faith one of the lanes of traffic between God and man. We are not exclusive about it, nor do we want to push other travelers off the track. We are happy to go along with others, but while doing so it is a useful and necessary discipline to know who we really are.

The Questions.

That is both the genesis and exodus of St. Andrews, and, we hope, the revelation, too. For Congregationalism, like all other Christian traditions today, is under the influence of the all pervading "ecumenical conversation" which burst into its modern flower and flavour at Amsterdam in 1948, and will blossom again next year at the Evanston Assembly of the World Council of Churches. That "conversation between the Churches" is having its effect on the kind of questions that Congregationalism asks about itself, the character of its Churchmanship, the type of organizations it requires for expressing its Churchmanship, and how far it can go on the road to unity. Some of these questions can, no doubt, be resolved within the various national Unions of Congregationalism, but to give them an adequate orbit and horizon there must be the world view. Hence, the genuine usefulness of an assembly, like St. Andrews where not only do relations meet in a bliss of domesticity, but the family sees itself as part of the greater Christian family of all races, tongues and places.

* * * * *

In the handsome Graduation Hall on the evening of Saturday, June 20, the various Congregational Unions of the British Isles expressed their welcome to the delegates as their guests, a gracious act of hospitality well spoken by Rev. Carlyle Murphy (Scotland), Rev. J. M. Henry (Ireland), Rev. W. T. Gruffydd (Wales) and Mr. Ebenezer Cunningham (England), and heralded at the entrance doors by the skirl of the pipes.

Sabbath Beginnings.

At the morning service on June 21, led by Rev. H. J. de Kievild of Holland, Dr. Douglas Horton, the general secretary and minister of the General Council of the American Congregational Churches, gave a characteristically lucid Moderatorial address on "the best description of a Congregational church I know—in the Book of the Revelation, chapter iv, v. 1, 'a door into heaven.'"

The second "diet" of public worship Sunday was in the stately church of the Holy Trinity, with its file of Norman arches, and the glint of gold at the Holy Table most properly flanked by the ministers and elders' chairs in the Reformed tradition. We processed to Holy Trinity, not perhaps so measured and slow as the Coronation procession in the Abbey, but nevertheless a procession in as much academic finery as could be mustered. St. Andrews people turned out to look at us on the cool, grey Sabbath evening in the Scottish north where the light lasts as long again as it does in England's far south.

* * * * *

Dr. Boynton Merrill, minister of the First Church, Columbia, Ohio, preached what the International Congregational Council calls "The Council Sermon." It rightly came from the Old Testament, from one of those elemental sources of good preaching, an encounter of a king and a prophet—Syria and Elisha. On this first Sunday at St. Andrews both addresses have been soundly expository and have really said something arising from their texts—a good augury for the debates of the week.

Monday's first session brought out the delegates in brilliant sunshine to hear Dr. Lovell Cocks' splendid statement on "The Foundation in Christ," which was preceded by morning devotions led by Rev. Vera Kenmure (Scotland). The official photograph was taken in the quadrangle of the United College followed by an official reception by St. Andrews University and the Provost, in which "Town" and "Gown" said how glad they were to see the assembly. An added touch of true St. Andrews was the intimation that certain "tees" were open to the delegates on the greens shining in close-cropped sheen by the sea.

The Fall Program of the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

Two major emphases will be featured in the fall program:

1. To complete the promotion of Declarations of Purpose from churches until all have declared what they will undertake to do for this campaign.

Some 1800 churches had sent in Declarations of Purpose by July 8, averaging $1,764 each. One hundred and fifty more have made contributions.

(Continued on page 7.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Evangelism and the Sunday School

It was my privilege to attend the annual meeting of the North Carolina and Virginia Sunday School Convention on Thursday, July 9, held at Liberty Church, Lennig, Virginia. The theme for the one day session was "Evangelism Through the Sunday School." A very good program was well executed. The attendance was good, the hospitality cordial, and the lunch delicious. The lunch was served without cost. In the afternoon, however, everyone was given an opportunity to make a contribution for the lunch which was turned over to the church for its use.

The topic, Evangelism, was certainly. In fact, evangelism is always a proper topic for the churches' consideration and practice. To begin in the Sunday school is always proper. By far the greater number of our churches had their beginnings with the Sunday school. Families interested in the Christian Church have come together in given communities for the study of the Bible, which eventually resulted in preaching services and ultimately in the organization of a church.

The New Testament Church had its beginnings in a great evangelistic movement. Protestantism was born in a wave of enthusiasm for the application of the gospel. Martin Luther was perhaps the greatest evangelists that Protestantism has known. Through the years great evangelists have championed the cause of Christ—such as Charles G. Finney, Dright L. Moody, Billy Sunday, and in our day, Billy Graham. Of course, there are those who do not agree with the methods employed by these evangelists or even with the messages given. People have different minds, different inclinations and different temperaments. They require different approaches, but one gospel is sufficient for all.

Today there seems to be a renewed interest in evangelistic efforts on the part of leading protestant denominations—Presbyterians, Methodists and Baptists have all been campaigning for new members; along different lines, perhaps, but with the same instrument and for the same purpose—bringing individuals to Christ and enlisting them in his church. In fact, is it possible for a man to be a Christian outside of the church? We should remind ourselves that the church is the body of Christ. How can one be in Christ without being a part of his body?

The Sunday School Convention's theme was "Evangelism Through the Sunday School." Where we have children and adults gathered together on Sunday for the purpose of familiarizing themselves with the Bible, it invariably lays down conditions for salvation in Christ and suggests the ways by which the individual may be brought to Christ. To sit down and talk with a child or an adult about his spiritual life, about his relation to God through Christ, about what joy may be found in a life surrendered to Christ, is a high privilege accorded to all who name his name and who strive day after day to live a life profitable and pleasing to him. The poverty of the church today is the fruit of closed lips and still hands on the part of those who are his own. The opportunity to witness should never be neglected. Through our Sunday schools, scores and thousands should be coming to Christ and thus brought into his church annually.

May we of the Congregational Christian Church no longer neglect these opportunities that come to us, but in every Sunday school, in every class, in every session, may we give our witness and expect those who have not to turn to Christ and give their hearts and lives to him.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

When money is sent to the college through the Convention Office, what is it—a gift, a loan, a share or an investment?

A gift is an offering which an individual is not required to make; it is purely voluntary on his part. A loan is an accommodation which one makes to another; the other has a need and the lender has a surplus out of which he may lend his neighbor, on his neighbors request, with the promise on the part of the neighbor that the loan will be repaid. A share is a part of an individual's holdings which he may place in the hands of another because of his interest in what the other is doing and his desire to assist his neighbor in that effort. An investment is the placing of values, human or material, in the hands of another, or in a cause or an institution with the expectation that the principal will be preserved and the increment thereof returned to the investor either in material substance or in human values that may result in satisfaction to the investor.

As we think of Elon College, the money that has been given to it through the years and the resultant good to all of our people in capable and intelligent leadership, the gift, however large, seems paltry and inadequate. There is no one among us who can begin to calculate the benefits of a Christian college to our church, and the cause of righteousness. Nor could one begin to estimate the loss, the discouragement, the disgrace that would result from the loss of our college to our people and to the cause of Christian education.

We are determined to continue our investments that our college may continue its contributions to our church and the cause of righteousness in the earth.

Previously Reported $ 5,143.52

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Damascus S. S. $ 29.00

Piney Plain 14.00

Eastern Va. Conference:

Holland $ 56.00

Dendron S. S. 3.05

Rosemont 50.00

Portsmouth, First S. S. .. 7.65

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Elk Spur $ 2.50

Happy Home S. S. 23.97

Greensboro, First 47.82

New Lebanon S. S. 13.70

Tryon, Erskine Memorial 15.00

Virginia Valley Conference:

Bethlehem S. S. $ 23.00

285.69

Total to date $ 5,429.21

THE FALL PROGRAM.

(Continued from page 6.)

tions. Subtracting inactive churches and others participating, we should hear from 2500 more churches before December 31.

2. To promote individual and special gifts.

An individual gift is a contribution or pledge from a person over and above what he plans to give toward the accepted goal of his local church. A special gift is an "over and above" contribution from an organization.

Special gifts ranging from small amounts to $25,000, and individual gifts from $3 to $5,000 have been received.—Campaign News.

Missions at Home and Abroad

Christian Seed in Communist Soil

By HAROLD W. ROBINSON,
Gurneville, California.

In the summer of 1949 Mrs. Robinson and I were living in T'unghsien, fifteen miles east of Peking, China. The Communists had controlled that city for several months and had conducted a training class for Public Health Workers in the buildings of the North China American School, where our children had prepared for college, and where we had been teachers. When the first class in Public Health had completed its course, and another class was enrolled, graduation exercises were held in the Chapel of the American School and we were invited to attend.

The buildings of the school had been occupied by the Japanese army from 1942 to 1945 but the chapel had been left in a surprisingly good condition. The pews, altar and pulpit were undamaged and on the west wall there was a bronze plaque in memory of Betty Scott Stamm, a graduate of the school who with her husband had been killed by Communists in Central China some fifteen years earlier. On the plaque was a Bible verse which indicated that Betty had given her life in service for Christ but since there was nothing to indicate how she died the Communists probably did not know that she was one of their victims but to those of us who knew the facts that plaque had a special significance when the young Communists received their diplomas, prepared to go out into the rural areas of that vicinity to teach and practice the much needed lessons in Public Health which they had studied in the American School.

On the north wall of the chapel the Communists had placed a large red silk banner on which were the four characters, "Chih Ping Chiu Jen" (Salvation by Healing). The speaker for the occasion was a Communist doctor from Peking who held an important position in the Department of Public Health of the Communist government. Near the end of his speech he pointed to the red banner and said to the young graduates that as they went out into the country to save the common people of China they would have many difficulties to overcome. Then he added something which, though it was very appropriately spoken from the platform of the American School Chapel, came to us Americans as a great surprise from the lips of a Communist. He said to the young listeners "Whatever you may think of the Christian religion its followers say that Jesus saves others because he sacrificed himself. You, too, will be able to save your fellowmen only as you sacrifice yourselves." Was it our imagination, or did the plaque in the back of the room whisper "Amen!"?

We learned later that the speaker had once studied in a mission school and while we do not know whether he ever called himself a Christian or not it was quite evident that somewhere he had learned an important truth of the Christian religion. He not only had learned it, but in his own heart and conscience he was convinced of its validity. Even after he accepted the "theology" of the Communists he could not forget the important lesson he had learned from the Christians, and he was preaching it to his young fellow Communists. What he had said to them was exactly what Betty Stamm's plaque had been saying for years to the young Americans who had studied at the American School and attended religious services in that Chapel.

Mrs. Robinson and I left T'unghsien a few months after that meeting and went to Tientsin, where we worked under the Communists until December, 1950. The memory of what we heard the Communist say in the American School Chapel has been a source of encouragement and inspiration, and has somewhat offset the sadness caused by having to leave China and our friends there. We left of our own free will because it seemed to us that the doors of opportunity for the work that we wanted to do were nearly closed, and our presence was not only an embarrassment to our Chinese friends but was creating for them difficulties which might even become dangers. The Communists looked with disdain and suspicion on Chinese who had friendly relations with Americans.

When we left Tientsin for America

our Chinese friends came to our homes and brought gifts of love to show their affection but none of them went to the pier to see us off. They knew, and we know, that to show their friendliness to Americans in public would not meet the approval of the Communist government. We left with an ache in our hearts but both we and our friends knew that we were leaving part of our hearts in China. It was the seed of love which we had sown there. We left China with a deep consciousness that this seed which we had been sowing for over thirty years had not been sown in vain.

Since we have reached America people have asked us if we don't feel that our lives have been wasted now that our work in China is wiped out. Our answer is that while we regret that we had to leave our Chinese friends, knowing that they were passing through deep waters, partly because of their relations with us, we do not believe that missionary work in China has been destroyed. Rather, we consider that while we have been the sowers the seed which we have scattered has brought forth fruit. Now it is harvest time and the grain has been gathered into the threshing floor. In the fall of the year it has been a source of satisfaction to see Chinese farmers threshing their grain after the long and hard labor of spring and summer. The grain is brought to the threshing ground which has been made smooth and hard with water and rolling. Farm animals pulling stone rollers are driven around and around so the roller will crush the grain from the stalks. When the straw has been pitched aside with wooden forks the grain is thrown into the air so the wind may separate the good seed from the dirt and chaff.

Unfortunately, there is a hurricane in the air which is sifting the grain of our harvest, so that some of the good seed, along with some that is immature, is being blown away with the chaff. Still there is a remnant which not even a hurricane can carry away, and it, along with some that has gone with the wind, has not been destroyed. Experience has taught us, and Bishop Ward of the Methodist Church emphasized that teaching as he passed through Tientsin on his way out of China, that the nature of seed is to grow. We have marveled at times to see seed which have taken root among rocks, briars or sand, where to the human eye it seemed that nothing

(Continued on page 9.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Report of Treasurer of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference

Quarter ending June 15, 1953.

Balance brought forward $ 140.83

RECEIPTS.

Waverly District Rally 14.65
Norfolk District Rally 32.83
Suffolk District Rally 72.95

Woman's Societies. (On Apportionment)

Antioch$ 9.00
Berea (Nansemond) 25.00
Bethlehem 46.00
Cypress Chapel 25.00
Cypress Chapel (Anges Brittle Circle) 15.00
Dendron 15.00
Eure 13.75
Franklin 75.00
Great Bridge 20.00
Holland 40.00
Holy Neck 37.50
Hopewell 4.25
Isle of Wright 15.00
Liberty Spring 55.00
Mt. Carmel 15.00
Mt. Zion 7.50
Newport News 35.00
Norfolk:
Bay View 22.50
Christian Temple 93.75
First—March and June 40.00
Little Creek 8.75
Rosemont 50.00
Second 20.00
Oak Grove 9.60
Oakland 22.50
Portsmouth:
Elm Avenue 15.00
First 30.00
Shelton Memorial 2.00
Richmond, First 20.00
Spring Hill 3.00
Suffolk—March 217.50
South Norfolk 30.00
Sunbury (Damascus) .. 25.00
Union (Southampton) .. 26.25
Wakefield 16.70
Waverly 15.00
Windsor 10.00

Young People.

(On Apportionment)

Berea (Nansemond)$ 25.00
Bethlehem 40.00
Dendron 10.00
Eure 4.75
Franklin 9.00
Holland 6.25
Holy Neck 10.00
Liberty Spring 25.00
Mt. Carmel 5.00
Norfolk:
Bay View 1.75
Christian Temple 20.00
Little Creek 2.50
Oak Grove 2.50
Oakland 25.00
Suffolk 22.03

1,130.55

208.78

Juniors. (On Apportionment)

Antioch$ 7.00
Berea (Nansemond) 6.25
Bethlehem 5.00
Cypress Chapel 4.00
Eure 1.25
Franklin 7.50
Holland 5.00
Holy Neck 5.00
Liberty Spring 6.85
Mt. Carmel 2.75
Newport News 6.00
Norfolk:
Bay View 1.50
Christian Temple 9.35
Little Creek 1.00
Rosemont 5.00
Oakland 1.25
Portsmouth:
First 3.00

Cradle Roll.

Cypress Chapel$ 1.00
Dendron 2.00
Eure 1.25
Franklin 2.00
Liberty Spring 10.00
Mt. Zion 1.00
Norfolk, First 20.00
Oakland 7.70
Portsmouth, First 2.00

Thank Offering.

Newport News (Juniors)$ 8.00
Norfolk, First (Women) 20.00
South Norfolk (Women) 10.00

Specials.

Mrs. Moulton—India 10.00

Life Memberships.

South Norfolk$ 10.00
Little Creek 10.00
Norfolk, Second 10.00
Newport News 30.00
Liberty Spring 40.00
Bethlehem 80.00

Memorials.

Berea (Nansemond)$ 10.00
Suffolk 10.00
Elm Avenue 10.00
Waverly 10.00
Oakland 10.00
Newport News 20.00
Mt. Zion 10.00
Liberty Spring 10.00
Franklin 10.00

Total Receipts $ 2,053.24

DISBURSEMENTS.

Sussex Surry Dispatch ..$ 5.00
Gurley Press 10.50
Mrs. W. V. Leathers,
Treas. So. Convention.1,722.39
Mrs. Barbara B. Nelms,
Treas. Youth Fellowship 69.59

Total Disbursements $ 1,807.48

Balance $ 245.76

CHRISTIAN SEED IN COMMUNIST SOIL.

(Continued from page 8.)

could grow, but where by the help of God's sunshine and rain miracles have been wrought.

I don't know how many hundreds of thousands, or how many millions, of Chinese students have studied in Christian mission schools, but countless numbers of them are still living in China. Whether they have named the name of Christ, or have been baptized into the Christian church, is not the most important criterion, it seems to me. If the seed of the Gospel which has been planted in their hearts has taken root God's sunshine and rain can work miracles whether there are any foreign missionaries in China or not, or whether any foreign money can go there.

Our faith that the seed which we have sown in China will continue to grow and produce more seed is based on the record of the Christian church down through the ages. The Christian religion started in Asia and has worked its way around the world. As it has gone from one land to another it has taken nourishment from each place which has enabled it to spread its branches until it is now quite a different looking plant than it was in Palestine. The fruit which it has borne has been peculiar to the soil in which it grew. Now that the journey is completed and the church is back in Asia it is as a mighty tree, in spite of the fact that some of its branches have been broken and twisted. We should not expect that the shape of the tree, now or in the future, will be the same that we see in Western lands. Nor should we expect that the fruit which the tree bears will have the same color, shape, size and flavor as that which is borne in our field. Kagawa of Japan, Ghandi of India and the many splendid Christians whom I have known in China, lead me to believe that the seed which missionaries have sown in Asia, including China, has brought forth good seed which will produce good harvests in the years to come.

We cannot do anything to cultivate the field of China today, except to pray that strength, faith, wisdom and courage may be given to the Chinese Christians, and to the remnant of missionaries who are still there. They may be able to bear only silent testimony, as does the memorial tablet of Betty Stamm, but through that sil-

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

The United States Has No Legal National Holiday

There are many holidays in the United States, but it is the only important country which has no national holiday by Congressional authority. Congress has always regarded the making of holidays a state or local affair. It has legalized certain dates as holidays in the District of Columbia where Federal jurisdiction is locally exercised, but legal holidays elsewhere resulted from State legislation.

There is widespread belief that July 4 is a national holiday, but it is not by Congressional action. A section of the National Banking Act provides that national banks may close on certain days, but the act does not declare those dates to be national holidays. Congress in 1943 designated the fourth Thursday in November as Thanksgiving, but did not decree it a legal holiday. Only by proclamation of the President is it such.

December 25 and January 1, are legal holidays in all States, because the States have so decreed. February 12, Lincoln's birthday, is a holiday in many States, but legally a local affair. Washington's birthday, February 22, is a legal holiday in all States, but not from a national standpoint.

In nine States, Good Friday is a legal holiday. Memorial Day, May 30, is a legal holiday in most States. Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and the Carolinas are exceptions. National election day, the second Tuesday in November, is a legal holiday in many States, and so is Armistice Day, November 11, as the result either of legislative action or governor's proclamation.

Although 47 States had entered the Union before Arizona, that State made February 14 Admission Day and declared it a legal holiday. California and Nevada also have admission days. March 2 is Texas Flag Day, and that State observes April 21 as the anniversary of the Battle of San Jacinto. Alabama, Florida and Louisiana make Shrove Tuesday a legal holiday of Mardi Gras. On March 25, Maryland Day is celebrated in that State, and on September 12, it observes Defenders' Day. North Carolina celebrates May 20, the anniversary of the signing of the Mecklenburg Declaration of Independence, a document which preceded the Philadelphia one.

June 15 is Pioneer Day in Idaho, while on July 13, Tennessee honors General Forrest, the great Confederate cavalry leader. Utah's Pioneer Day is July 24, and on August 1, Colorado Day is observed. Missouri Day falls on October 1. South Carolina is the only State which honors the birthday of Woodrow Wilson, December 8, as a legal holiday.

The most local legal holiday is Repudiation Day, which marks the anniversary of the repudiation of the British Stamp Act of 1765. Frederick County, Maryland, alone observes it.

* * * * *

"Unkindness Through Thoughtlessness"

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"What do you suppose makes Sammie so cross today?" Alice Cronan addressed the question to her mother, as the two were sewing in Alice's sunny living room. Three-year-old Sammie was scattering his toys around the room and whining discontentedly. "Hasn't he been a good boy when you have visited us before?"

"Yes, indeed," her mother answered. "Sammie has always carried out my specifications for a satisfactory grandson!"

The distressed young mother was not to be diverted by a whimsical reply. "But what can be the matter with him today?" she persisted.

In the meantime Sammie had knocked down his toy garage, tumbled his little cars into a heap, and, finally, had burst into tears.

"I think maybe we are all a bit weary," his grandmother suggested. "I'd like to go over to the corner drug store for some post cards to send to my friends at home. Couldn't I take Sammie with me while you have a little rest?"

"It's almost time for Sammie's nap," Alice faltered. "I don't know—"

"We'll be gone only a few minutes," her mother promised. "Sammie can lie down as soon as we return, and then you and I can discuss the problem."

True to her promise, Sammie's grandmother brought him home promptly. Refreshed by the brief walk, the little fellow went quietly to his room for his afternoon nap, as was his custom.

"I hope you can tell me what is wrong, Mother," Alice began in a troubled voice. "We've looked forward to your coming for weeks, and I do want your visit to be pleasant."

"For one thing, Daughter," her mother answered, "the normal routine of your household has been broken by the addition of a third person—"

"One we're delighted to have with us," Alice quickly interposed.

"Of course," her mother agreed, "but Sammie is used to having your undivided attention, even though you always permit him to play by himself while you go about your work. This is the first day of my visit, and you and I have talked continuously in an effort to catch up on news of the other members of our family and of your friends at your old home. Our constant chatter may have created an element of tension in Sammie's ordinarily quiet day.

"This condition is only temporary. Sammie will soon become accustomed to having me with you, and we'll all settle into a quieter routine. There is one mistake, however, that both of us have been making—we've talked about Sammie too much in his presence. Such a practice exaggerates a child's sense of his own importance and sets him apart. A child is not a plaything or an exhibit. He should be accepted as a normal member of the family, with an equal share in the attention and interest of the other members, and as far as he can see, no more than that."

"I should have known better, Mother," Alice hastened to say. "I've just been so eager to tell you about Sammie that I didn't wait until he was not with us."

"And I've been equally eager to hear about my grandson," her mother assured her. "It is fascinating to watch a child's development. Each day brings so many bright new achievements that it's hard for a parent to refrain from talking too much about them. Worst of all, I am sure, is the habit of spelling the

(Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention to Meet

The eighty-fourth annual session of the Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention will meet with the Oakland Christian Church, Chuckatuck, Virginia, on Tuesday, July 21, at 10 o'clock.

Mr. J. Letcher Eley, president of the convention, reminds us that there were 39 out of the 43 churches of the conference represented at the convention last year, and that $970 was raised. This year the goal is a one hundred per cent representation and more than a thousand dollars for the work.

A good program has been arranged and all of the Sunday schools of the Eastern Virginia Conference are urged to be represented.

Other convention officers are: Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, vice-president; W. H. Baker, secretary, and Miss Mary Lee Folk, treasurer.

* * * * *

A Beach Party

The Youth Fellowship of the Congregational Christian Temple in Norfolk, Virginia, held a Beach Party at the Y. M. C. A. Beach Club, on Sunday, July 12. Each person was asked to bring sandwiches for a picnic supper, and soft drinks were provided by the fellowship. The group met at the church at 2:45, all going to the beach together. The meeting was concluded by a worship service on the beach.

* * * * *

Miss Divina del Carmen

A charming "ambassador" without portfolio from the Philippine Islands, Miss Divina del Carmen, a teacher at Silliman College of Theology at Mindanao, will be a special guest at the Eastern Virginia Junior High Camp at Bayside, August 9-14, and at the Family Camp, August 14-16.

A person who makes friends easily with people of all types and possessed of an excellent sense of humor, Miss del Carmen appeals particularly to young people with whom she has worked, both in the Philippines and the United States.

The daughter of a Filipino Congregational Church leader and Moderator of the Northern Mindanao District Conference, Miss del Carmen served for a time as director of Youth Work in the United Church of Christ in the Philippines, which includes five denominations, one of them being the Congregational Christian. She also was assistant director of Youth Work for the Philippine Federation of Christian Churches.

After graduating from Silliman University, magna cum laude, Miss del Carmen looked forward to coming to the United States for further study in religious education looking toward an M. A. She has been studying at Hartford Seminary Foundation since she came to America.

After graduation from Silliman, Miss del Carmen taught Christian Education in the College of Theology of her alma mater, often having students older than herself, but her knowledge, friendliness and maturity gave and held their respect.

In her senior year at Silliman, Miss del Carmen prepared a manual for use by the church women's societies, entitled "My Faith in Action." This is widely used in the Philippines and even in other Asiatic countries. It has been translated into a number of dialects. She also translated a group of children's hymns into the Cebuano dialect.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Uumm Boy! Stunt night at the High School Camp at Elon was really something. I motored over just to see the goings on, and wound up right slap in the middle of one of the stunts. The stunt in which I was slap in the middle of was a hillbilly one. Wonder if there could be any significance in that? Warren "Slim Clem" Matthews and I sang, "Hey, Hey, Good Lookin'" twice, because we didn't know that classical number they asked for called "Encore." We also learned later in the night that little Melvin "Gold" Dollar can really beat a madolin on such numbers as "Comin' Round the Mountain," "Hand Me Down My Walking Cane" and "Under the Double Eagle."

Here is an account of one of the conference ball games held at "Leon Field":

Today, one of the most thrilling games of all conference play took place on the beautiful green diamond in the heart of Elon.

But after seven innings of play there was no beauty left in the world for the old faculty. It was while the teachers were trying an experiment that the students scored most of their runs—fourteen of them. Professional catcher Clyde Fields was started as pitcher by Manager Bill Simmons, thus leaving home plate attractive to base runners. Then, too, the teachers made a few minor errors in the field that overbalanced the score in the students' favor. Stuart claims a home run; however, the faculty say that it was a single plus three errors by students playing for the teachers.

But the next inning was different. Hurler Dick Jackson was called to the mound and Fields was planted behind the plate. The afternoon was made considerably cooler by the breeze that came when Muggsy and Stuart fanned out. In the top of the seventh, the teachers started a big rally, and Clyde Fields crossed home to make the score 12-11 in favor of the faculty. But the old people were unable to stop the working of the student strategy, so the game ended 14-12, the students winning.

* * *

Mother: "Well, Son, what did you learn in school today?"

Son: "Oh, plenty. We've been studying about Molecules."

Mother: "How thrilling! I've been trying for years to get your father to wear one."

* * *

Let Us Pray, For . . .

A faith fit to live by,
A self fit to live with, and
A cause fit to live for!

FOR THE CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

words one does not want a child to understand. Imagine how a neighbor would feel if, within his hearing, we should begin talking to each other about him in an unfamiliar language. A child, too, becomes somewhat baffled and disturbed by such thoughtlessness."

"Thank you for helping me, Mother," Alice concluded, "I'm going to try hard never to be so thoughtless again."

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Growing in Christ"

LESSON IV—JULY 26, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Speaking the truth in love, we are to grow up in every way into him who is the head, into Christ."—Ephesians 4:15.

LESSON: Ephesians 4:1-6, 11-16.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Ephesians 3:14-21.

Born in Christ.

Jesus said, "Except a man be born again (or from above, or anew), he cannot see (or enter into) the kingdom of heaven (or God)." A person becomes a Christian by being born of the spirit of God. That which is of the flesh is flesh, and that which is born of the spirit is spirit. It is imperative that a man be born of the spirit if he is to be a Christian.

Growing in Christ.

There is nothing more appealing, nothing more wonderful, than a new-born baby. Alas for the man or woman who is not moved by the sight of a baby. But what a tragedy it is when a baby never grows up. There are some children, born with certain handicaps or diseases, which doom them forever to perpetual childhood. Even if their little bodies do develop after a fashion, or in a limited way, their minds never develop. They remain stunted, dwarfed, crippled children. As important as it is that a child be well-born, it is even more important that the child grow and develop. Growth is the natural law of normal life.

Now there are folks who have been born of the spirit—there is no doubt about that. They can name the place and the date and even the hour when they accepted Christ, and when they knew they had been born again or from above. But they have never grown up, at least never grown much in the Christian way of life. They are children in spiritual stature. Normal and strong in body and mind, they are stunted and dwarfed in spirit. Having become men and women, they have never put away childish things. There are adults who are children in Christ. There are grown-ups who are babies in the things of the spirit. Paul told some of his church friends that they "were babes in Christ"—he had to feed them milk instead of meat.

Now, it was to impress upon his Ephesian friends the importance of growing in grace and in Christ that Paul wrote the words which are the basis of today's lesson. He wanted his converts to grow from babyhood and childhood into mature, adult spiritual life. And he states that the laws of growth in the life of the spirit are like unto the laws of growth in body and mind—food and exercise and culture.

"I, therefore, the prisoner of the Lord, beseech you to walk worthily of the calling wherewith ye were called, in all lowliness and meekness, with longsuffering forbearing one another in love." Walking denotes progress. The Christian is to go from strength to strength. Tonight's stoppingplace is the startingplace for new advance tomorrow. If a Christian stands still, he begins to go backwards. We are to press toward the mark. We are to cultivate the graces of the Christian spirit: lowliness, meekness, longsuffering, forbearance, love. Are you growing in these Christian graces?

"Endeavoring, or giving diligence, to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace." In another letter, he told the folks that the strongest evidence of the fact that they were still babes in Christ was their divisions and petty differences. How prone are church folks to split over petty things. In our world, how much we need to keep the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace.

The reason for all this is that basically there is only one body. There is only one Church, the Church of Jesus Christ. There are, of course, many members, but only one body. There is only one Spirit, the Holy Spirit. By that one Spirit were we all called into one body to the hope of our calling. There is only one Lord, one faith, for only faith in Jesus Christ saves, only one baptism—unless one has the baptism of the Holy Spirit nothing else avails, and one may choose the form of the water baptism if he has the baptism of the Spirit. There is only one God and Father of us all. There is not a God of the white man and another God of the black man, or the yellow man, or the red man, or the brown man. We are all children of one God and Father, and hence we are all brothers in Christ.

There is one body and one calling, but there are various functions and ministries. "And he gave some apostles, and some prophets, and some evangelists, and some pastors, and teachers." God gave his children different gifts. But to each he gave some gift. And all these gifts were given "for the perfecting of the saints, for the ministering and unto the building up of the body of Christ, the Church." And it is an endless process. "Until we all come unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." There you have it—the ideal and the goal is the Christlike character and conduct. To be sure, none of us reach it; but we dare not accept anything less as our goal.

"That we be no longer children"—that is the goal. How childish some folks are. How much unhappiness there is in the world because so many folks have never grown up. They are childish. Every minister knows folks who are big, strong, grown-up men and women who act like little children in so many ways. Every choir director knows the same thing. Shame on all of us for our childishness—we are all more or less guilty of it.

But we are "to grow up" in him, who is the head, even Christ. By Bible reading, by meditation and prayer, by attendance at worship, by service and sacrifice, by discipline and self-denial, by looking unto him, we are to grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

At their annual conference, recently held, the Hawaiian Evangelical Association voted to inaugurate a Reconstruction Fund Drive for $185,000 to meet a number of their own emergency needs and to include a share for the Church Building Loan Fund. The amount originally designated was $30,000, but upon reconsideration, the committee recommended that their full goal of $65,000 be included for the Loan Fund. Dr. Stanley U. North, area director, was present at the meeting.

CONGREGATIONALISM AND CATHOLICITY.

(Continued from page 5.)

such a vagueness of churchmanship that it is easy to move from our communion into another without loss. I have sometimes heard Church of England clergymen who are erstwhile Congregationalists declare at anniversary tea tables that they have made the transition from our fellowship to the communion of the Church of England without difficulty. That is because they never really understood what they were leaving. If they had realised it they would have known that they were moving from a more Catholic conception of the Church to a less Catholic one. Our doctrine of the Church rests on a positive truth that the Church is there where Christ gathers with his people. A oneness in Christ suffices for us as the basis of a united fellowship both with each other and with the members of other churches.

We must, however, admit that while this conviction has given us confidence in the authority of the local church and engenders in its noblest expression a mind and temper which makes us feel in true fellowship with all Christians, we have failed both in the relationship of our churches to one another and in our relationship to other Christian communities to think out what is the nature of the authority which belongs to the local Church Meeting; we are very difficult in defining what authority belongs to a Council or Assembly. A Catholic principle of churchmanship, as far as we are concerned, has never been worked out in terms of a Catholic organisation. While the principle permits us to share fully in the ecumenical movement, our failure to work out the implications of our principle for a Catholic organisation hinders our complete participation in that movement in so far that it is a stumbling block when actual negotiations for Church unity take place. Logically there is no one and no body who can negotiate Church union on behalf of a collection of independent churches.

Congregationalism is Catholic because ultimately its trust is in the guidance of the Holy Spirit. Our churches are churches of the Holy Spirit. This trust in the Spirit's guidance has kept us orthodox and saved us from becoming obscurantist. It has made us respect tradition and saved us from becoming traditional.

The readiness for new insights and new interpretations of the truth which have characterized Congregationalism at its best are the prerequisites of Catholicity, which to be a true Catholicity must always provide unity in diversity and acknowledge diversity in unity.

The sharpest paradox of our faith and order I have left until last. We have claimed that the principles for which we stand, our doctrine of Grace, our doctrine of the Church, our confidence in the guidance of the Holy Spirit, are necessary ingredients of a true Catholicity, yet in order to bear witness to them we are confronted with the necessity of maintaining our denominational life. That is the paradox, a paradox which will only ultimately be solved if we ourselves hold to these principles and bear witness to them in such a temper that we are not fighting for survival but fighting to the death; that is, for our death as a sect, as a denomination, at the very moment when what we stand for has been built into a truly Catholic Church. To persist in separation one moment beyond that day would be to deny all to which our history has borne testimony, and all that God has been pleased to reveal to us.

CHRISTIAN SEED IN COMMUN-IST SOIL.

(Continued from page 9.)

ence there may come a new and deeper realization of what it means to follow the Christ who gave his life that all mankind might have life abundant.

There are thousands of people in China who, like the Communist doctor, know that only the Christian principles of self-sacrificing service can bring the good life to China's millions. They may not call themselves Christians but neither did the disciples of Jesus. "The wind blows where it wills, and you hear the sound of it, but you do not know whence it comes or whither it goes." Because of the wind in China today we cannot send men or money to work in that field but that fact should remind us that there are other fields which need cultivation. Who knows when the hurricanes may strike Africa, India, Japan, The Near East, or the Isles of the Ocean? This is not a time for discouragement but one which should inspire us to work with all our might and main in fields where the hurricane has not yet arrived.

Church Building Loan Fund
Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through July 16, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt . .	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Gr. Br.)—H. S. Hardcastle	$ 872.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell . .	1,321.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar . .	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith . .	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein . .	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo . . .	459.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register . .	†166.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood . . .	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register . . .	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown . . .	127.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder . . .	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr. . . .	82.50
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth	2,450.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wiseman	3,292.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson	1,065.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren . . .	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wiseman . . .	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries	3,211.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student) . .	75.00

†Paid.

"One interesting feature in my area," reports W. K. Newman, "is that the churches with big debts and big building problems seem more prepared to contribute than the others."

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

DEAR FRIENDS:

How nice the three Burgess boys looked when they came to my office this week dressed and ready to take the bus for the two-week vacation! Jimmy, 16, and the twins, 12, were three as good looking boys as you will see anywhere. You should see the change that has come to them since they came to the Orphanage several years ago. They showed need of food, need of clothes, need of care. They have responded beautifully to these things, and to the training which is given them. Now we are proud of them. The ticket agent at the bus station, a good friend of ours, seemed very proud of them. Their father dead and their mother very poor and very feeble made them a charge on such charity as they could pick up. Wise friends interceded for them and they were received here. Some day we shall all be proud of what the Orphanage with your help has done for them.

Oats on our farm averaged more than eighty bushels per acre for a total of 3,350 bushels. Wheat averaged thirty-eight bushels for a total of 1,348 bushels. A grand total of 4,698 bushels. It looks now like we shall need it for feed because the corn is drying up for want of rain. Every day we look for much needed rain. We are grateful for the good crop of small grain, and if rain comes in a day or two we shall make a good crop of corn.

I cannot understand all I see here at the orphanage. For instance when the six of us were growing up in an humble farm home we were a team. We helped one another until each of us were through college. As long as one had funds we all had funds. Some stayed out of school and worked while others stayed in school by work. So naturally when I see a poor little fellow here in the orphanage and know his brothers have good jobs I wonder why they do not put something into his care and keeping. I wonder. Deut. 15:11, "The poor will never cease out of the land; therefore I command you, You shall open wide your hand to your brother, to the needy and to the poor, in the land." What a pity it is that there are always a few people who answer No to the question: Am

I my brother's keeper? What a still greater pity that there are those who say No to the question Am I my own child's keeper. I wonder what it is that so completely perverts human nature. There must be some new, fancy name for it. Until I learn it I shall just call it sin. My father would have called it low-down sorriness!

Two wrongs do not make a right. So I pity and love the few little ones I know who are the objects of my wonderment, and work all the harder to hold before them good goals. They are helpless without the helping hand of the Church and friends. Matt. 18: 5, "And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me. And whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea."

Around these little children is wrapped each day the mantle of prayer, and friendship, and love. They thrive on it, as God would have it so. I am proud to belong to the church and to serve her as best I can. I would like to encourage our matrons here to leave upon the hearts and minds of these growing boys and girls the blessed imprint of that One "who went about doing good." I am proud of the churches, Sunday schools, and people who like to have a share in caring for these children. I believe God will bless them, and that you and I will rejoice that God honors us by giving us the privilege of being the channels of His blessings.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JULY 2-9, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

Mrs. R. C. Luke, Hampton, Va., Clothing.
Mrs. Thurman Williams, Dendron, Va., Clothing.

Primary Dept., Berea Christian Church, Driver, Va., Clothing.

West Memorial Bible Class, Suffolk Christian Church, Beadspreed.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 7,751.33

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Mt. Auburn S. S.	$ 10.50
New Elam	20.12
Plymouth S. S.	9.00
Wake Chapel	73.82
		113.50

Eastern Va. Conference:

Bethlehem (Nans) S. S. .	$ 20.61
Liberty Spring S. S.	20.00
		40.61

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Bethel	$ 7.00
Durham S. S.	26.79
Greensboro, First	98.03
Long's Chapel	12.93
Reidsville	69.00
		213.75

Western N. C. Conference:

Asheboro	$ 75.00
Brown's Chapel S. S.	5.00
Pleasant Cross S. S.	7.00
		87.00

Virginia Valley Conference:

Bethlehem S. S.	$ 8.13
Dry Run S. S.	1.00
Newport S. S.	20.96
Winchester S. S.	8.34
		38.43

Total $ 493.23

Grand Total $ 8,244.56

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $10,344.53

Mr. & Mrs. Harry E.
Ollerhead, Chapel Hill,
N. C., in memory of John Jackson Pritchard $ 10.00

(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

.....
(Name of Deceased)

.....
(City)

.....
(Date of Death)

.....
(Survivor to be Written)

.....
(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

In Memoriam

WARRINGTON.

Mrs. Regina Williamson Warrington, or "Miss Reggie," as she was affectionately known, was born in September, 1881. She was a graduate of Elon College and taught school for several years. Her passing on April 16, 1953 has brought sorrow to all who knew her, for to know her was to love her. She was ill for about eighteen months, most of that time being too ill to attend the church she loved so dearly. She was widely known and will be missed by her many, many friends and loved ones. Her church held its place in her heart, and we are grateful she lived to see her church beautified in its present setting. To Mrs. Savage, her sister, and other members of her family, the members of Berea Christian Church extend their heartfelt sympathy.

OPAL K. JONES,
EMMA C. DARDEN,
EUGENIA W. YEATES,
Committee.

BYRD.

We, the members of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Liberty Spring Christian Church wish to pay living tribute to the memory of Mrs. Nora Porter Byrd who passed from her earthly home to her eternal home on March 27, 1953.

In her going the Auxiliary has lost a beloved, faithful member and friend. She was ready to go when her Master called.

Because then, of the love and esteem in our hearts for her, be it resolved:

- 1. That God's way is always best.
- 2. That we honor her life by being true in service to the cause she loved and served.
- 3. That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved family, and emulate the faith which radiated from her life.
- 4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, a copy to "The Christian Sun" and a copy be recorded with the Woman's Auxiliary.

Mrs. RUDOLPH BADGER,
Mrs. C. E. NICHOLS,
Mrs. N. W. BYRD,
Committee.

HOWELL.

We, the members of Holy Neck Congregational Christian Church submit the following resolutions of respect for Mrs. Pattie Holland Howell.

She was so quiet and unassuming in her daily work of life. A wonderful friend and neighbor to those around her.

She passed away in Louise Obici Memorial Hospital, Suffolk, Virginia on Saturday night, May 30, 1953 after a long illness.

Therefore be it resolved:

- 1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.
- 2. That in her death we have lost a faithful member.
- 3. That we extend our deepest sympathy to those loved ones in our mutual loss.

Miss ALLICE LEE NORFLEET,
Mrs. CHARLIE C. BAKER,
Mrs. J. O. DAVIDSON, Sr.,
Committee.

THE ORPHANAGE.
(Continued from page 14.)

Mrs. W. R. Sellers, Burlington, N. C., in memory of Gordan A. Kirkland	5.00
De Molay, Burlington, N. C. (to send two boys to camp)	30.00
Lila B. Sellers Bible Class, Burlington, First, in memory of Gordan A. Kirkland	5.00
Maud Headly Bible Class, Rosemont Church for Angelee Haith	10.00
Farmers Coop. Exchange Dividend Check	11.78
Carolina Steel & Iron Co., Greensboro, N. C.	50.00
New Hope Christian S. S. Roanoke, Ala.	4.13
Pillsbury Mills, Inc., for coupons	10.00

G. S. Huber, Spring Grove, Va.	75.00
Mrs. Margaret R. Pulley, Richmond, Va., in memory of Mrs. Gladys Nelms Bagley	1.00
Progressive Bible Class, Newport News Church for Betty Oakes	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Allen Piland, Holland, Va., in memory of W. John Norfleet ..	7.50
General Mills, Inc. for Coupons	19.00
Vanceville Sunday School, Tifton, Ga.	3.00
Mrs. Isabelle F. Robinson, Albany, New York for Jo Ann Arnold	10.00
Special Gifts	245.76
	502.17
Grand Total	$10,846.70
Total for the two weeks	$ 995.40
Total for the year	$18,091.26

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING
LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

Congregationalism and Christian Unity

A Statement to the International Council

By DR. HENRY SMITH LEIPER

1. There can be no question about the Will of Christ for oneness among his followers.
2. Analysis of the meaning of unity in his teachings reveals its likeness to the community of the ideal family which is both an organic and a covenanted union.
3. There can be no question about the need for unity in the world where the Christian Church is the only worldwide fellowship, and the only realistic hope of creating a world community consciousness is to be found in the Church. Yet what cannot hold itself together in manifest unity can neither inspire nor lead others to unity.
4. The churches pay a tremendous price today for their failure to give this authentic lead towards holding the free world together—not to speak of the world now behind the Iron Curtain.
5. There can be unity without union; and even where union exists on a national scale—as in each of the Scandinavian lands—it does not of itself alone assure the fulfillment of the mission of the Church to lead in developing wider and healthier community in social, economic and political life.
6. But, in general, union of the organic sort is understood by the world as a manifestation of the oneness of the Church while the converse is not true—i. e., unity of spirit is not necessarily understood as the substance of oneness in Christ's family.
7. Our Congregational fellowship has committed itself from the earliest days to unity and union. This has been shown by the unmistakable proofs contained in the statements of its great leaders as to both unity and union.
8. Our representative spokesmen and representative corporate bodies have believed that the two foci of our organized life as Christians should be freedom and fellowship.
9. There is a tendency to inherent conflict between freedom and fellowship, and when it has appeared, our best minds have so construed freedom as not to set up insuperable barriers to union with others.
10. As an indication of the soundness of this latter view, we note that enduring and spiritually productive unions have been consummated in our fellowship with churches of both like and unlike ecclesiastical polity—e. g., those in India, China, Japan, Canada and the U. S. A.
11. From all this, we conclude that any who are not interested in both unity and union are not facing realistically four considerations:
 - (1) The clearly indicated will of Christ.
 - (2) The obvious need of our time.
 - (3) The implications of the precept and example of our leaders in the past.
 - (4) The implications of the example set by many of our brethren in the present.
12. Fuller manifestation of the unity of the one family of Christ depends on:
 - (1) Continued and increasingly responsible personal and corporate participation in common service to our age through such inter-denominational and ecumenical agencies as local Councils of Churches, State or regional Councils, National Councils, the International Missionary Council, World Council of Christian Education, and World Council of Churches.
 - (2) Continued personal cooperation by our members with the Y. M. C. A., the Y. W. C. A., the Bible Societies, and other non-ecclesiastical bodies.
 - (3) Supplementing these ways of advancing functional unity and developing the sense of community in Christ, we must continue to study and act for further union with other churches on bases indicated by the majority action of "the Congregation of the world."

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JULY 23, 1953

NUMBER 29

A Prediction

Beyond the war-clouds and the reddened ways,
I see the Promise of the Coming Days!
I see His Son arise, new charged with grace,
Earth's tears to dry and all her woes efface!
Christ lives! Christ loves! Christ rules!
No more shall Might,
Though leagued with all the Forces of the Night,
Ride over Right. No more shall Wrong
The world's gross agonies prolong.
Who waits His Time shall surely see
The triumph of His Constancy—
When without let, or bar, or stay,
The coming of His Perfect Day
Shall sweep the Powers of Night away—
And Faith, replumed for nobler flight,
And Hope, aglow with radiance bright,
And Love, in loveliness bedight,
Shall greet the Morning Light!

—John Oxenham.

News Flashes

Congratulations to Rev. and Mrs. James H. Lightbourne, Jr., Franklin, Virginia, on the arrival of Miss Leslie Hope, in the early morning of July 13, 1953.

Rev. and Mrs. Walstein W. Snyder announce the arrival, on July 9, 1953, of a daughter, Rita Dale. We offer our felicitations.

Annual Bible School at Rosemont

The Rosemont Christian Church held its annual Bible school June 22 to July 1. The total enrollment was 108 with an average attendance of 93. Miss Ruth Dunn directed the school with the help of Mrs. L. L. Milteer, Mrs. John Swink, and Mrs. J. W. Goforth as superintendents of the Junior, Primary, and Beginner Departments, respectively. There were also teachers and assistants in each department. An offering of $31.00 was given to send CARE packages to India, Korea, and Germany.

The Bible school was concluded with a picnic at the Y. M. C. A. Beach with about 235 people attending from the Bible school, Sunday school and church. Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Morrison, Jr. led the group in recreation, and the young people conducted a vesper service.

ELLEN HEWITT,
Secretary.

News from Bethlehem

It has been some time since we gave a report to THE SUN. Nevertheless, things of great interest have been happening in our church. Beginning Wednesday night, July 8 through 10, our Junior Board of Deacons sponsored a three night prayer service in preparation for our Revival Meeting, which began on July 12. These services were largely attended with a great depth of interest. Rev. M. T. Sorrell of the Third Avenue Christian Church, Danville, Va. came to us on Sunday night and did the preaching each night through July 17. The interest was profound and there were quite a large number re-consecrating their lives unto the Lord. There were professions of faith in Christ by eight individuals, for which we are most grateful to our Heavenly Father. Brother Sorrell's messagees were simple and to the point, manifesting a deep spiritual tone throughout.

Sunday morning, July 19, we received eight new members into the fellowship of the church—seven on profession of faith in Christ, and one by letter of transfer. The ordinances of Baptism was administered to the seven. It was also Communion Sunday, which was observed with a large congregation. On the afternoon of this Sunday, Deacons O. H. Ross and Horace Lee along with their wives and the minister carried the emblems that represent the broken body and shed blood of our Lord to eight of our shut-in homes. The service was well received and deeply appreciated by the shut-ins.

We are looking forward with great pleasure to having our church plant completed in full, with all side bills paid, by this fall, leaving us with just the monthly retirement of our mortgage loan. We feel that the congregation at Bethlehem is deserving of no little praise and credit for having erected the building such as they have, and having a total cost involved at this point of approximately $100,000.00. They only borrowed $15,000.00, which we repay monthly at $150.00 per month.

The attendance throughout the entire conference year has been steadily on the upward move, both at the Sunday school and church services. Financially speaking, our last quarterly report showed that the congregation had raised more money for both current and Benevolent Expenses as well as for the Building Fund, than in any prior quarter in the history of the church. This indicates that the church is moving upward and a better day is in vision.

G. C. CRUTCHFIELD,
Pastor.

Western North Carolina Sunday School Convention Meets

The Sunday schools in the Western North Carolina Conference of the Congregational Christian Church held their annual convention at Hank's Chapel Congregational Christian Church near Pittsboro on last Tuesday with W. W. Thomas, president, presiding over the session.

The meeting began Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock with Thomas introducing the theme of the year. "Evangelism Through the Sunday School." Joe Stevens of Varnia led the devotion with Rev. Avery Brown of Sophia offering a prayer.

A roll call by churches showed that 27 of the 38 churches in the conference were represented and special recognition was given the 13 ministers, nine Sunday school superintendents and three assistant superintendents present. A number of special visitors were also recognized by President Thomas.

Following committee assignments for the new year, Dr. Henry Robinson of Burlington was introduced by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, field secretary of the Southern Convention, as the principal speaker for the morning.

In his address, Dr. Robinson explained the various parts of the Church's evangelism program in its Sunday school, outlining the manner in which the program should be carried forward in the light of the Bible.

Mrs. Richard L. Jackson of Chapel Hill spoke briefly on "Evangelism and Children," explaining how people who work with children should use the best literature possible and prepare themselves to be good evangelists.

The final speaker of the morning session was Rev. John Graves of Burlington who spoke on "Evangelism and the Young People." Rev. Mr. Graves illustrated many ways in which true facts should be presented to young people in order that they might grow.

The afternoon session began with a hymn by the congregation, followed by prayer by Rev. Silas E. Madren of Albemarle.

Mrs. Orva Brown, secretary-treasurer, gave a complete report on the convention and also presented some of the needs of the Sunday school as had been reported to her. She also read a list of improvements that had been made by all Sunday schools in the past year.

Rev. Max Vestal of Asheboro, chairman of the nominating committee, submitted the following list of names for election as officers for the coming year: Theodore Cox, Ramseur, president; Rev. Bill Simmons, Bennett, vice-president; Mrs. Winfred Bray, Randleman, secretary-treasurer; and Ralph Riddle, Pittsboro, assistant secretary-treasurer. The convention elected these officers for 1953-54.

Rev. L. M. Presnell of Liberty conducted an impressive installation service for the new officers and the closing worship service was led by Rev. R. L. Clapp of Seagrove.

The convention adjourned after voting to meet next July 13 at Needham's Grove Church near Seagrove.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. DANIELEY, Editor, 428 Westwood, Chapel Hill, N. C.

A Few News Notes

Ersine Memorial Church in Tryon has a Laymen's fellowship which was organized in 1951. It has a membership of approximately 50. W. H. McDonald is the president of the group with James Jackson serving as secretary and Emil Henrich as treasurer. The men meet monthly.

* * *

Another fellowship which was organized in 1951 is the one at Albemarle. There are approximately 30 men in this group which is headed by H. A. Simmons as president. Dalon Talbert is the secretary and Harrie Williams is the treasurer of the fellowship. A Father-Son Banquet is an annual affair with these men who have undertaken the support of the Moonelon project.

* * *

Ernest Scott is the president of the Laymen's Fellowship at Spoon's Chapel Church, of which Max Vestal is the pastor. Otis Johnson serves as secretary-treasurer. This is a young fellowship which does not have a large number of members. But let us all remember that if every church had a few members united in work for our God the whole world would feel the effect!

* * *

This week your editor received another of the completed questionnaires. It would be very fine to receive one from each of our churches. Walter Graham has asked me to write a short article for The Fellowship, our national paper, concerning this questionnaire. I am sorry to say that as of the present I don't have enough returned questionnaires to allow me to do this for him. Your attention to this matter would be greatly appreciated.

* * * * *

Fish Fry Climaxes Year's Activities

The Men's Fellowship of the United Congregational Christian Church of Chapel Hill has just completed another productive year. At its final meeting of the year, the men caught, cleaned, cooked, and ate about 100 bass, bream, etc. and enjoyed a wonderful evening together. Some brought their sons and they were thrilled at catching an occasional fish.

The years activities saw the fellowship operate a refreshment booth at football games, and the completion of many projects of service to the church. The highlights of the monthly meetings, however, were the fine devotionals and programs as well as the extension of Christian fellowship among the men of the church. The success enjoyed was due in no small part of the fine leadership of the outgoing president, James R. Ellis.

Officers for next year were elected at the meeting. They include, president, Lee Edwards; vice-president, Lindsay Neville; secretary-treasurer, Ray Strong; chairman of Planning Committee, Joe Tyson.

During the months of August and September only one meeting will be held. It will begin at 6:30 p. m. with a recreational program. At 8:00 p. m. the group will have a devotional service followed by a planning session at which time plans will be made for the programs and projects to be undertaken next year.

Dr. Wm. G. Sargent Passes

Dr. Wm. G. Sargent, one of the outstanding ministers in our former Christian Church, died of a heart attack on Thursday July 9, at Craigville, Massachusetts, where he had

(Continued on page 15.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

- 1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- 2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- 3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- 4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
- 5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing EditorJohn T. Kernodle
Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.
Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.
Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year	$3.00
Two Years	5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank
Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195....
Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.
Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.
To
Address
Who is a member of Church
() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.
My Name
My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Two Editorials Written Twenty-four Years Ago

By the Late DR. J. O. ATKINSON

No Creed But Christ

Our Saviour is not responsible for the creeds that divide his followers, and the theology that has confused the thinkers. Theology has, from time to time, emphasized certain phases of the life, the labors and the love of our Lord. When, however, we sound theology to its depths, we come back to Christ. The strange thing is that Christians have not been willing to let others, who think differently from themselves, indulge their own personal views without dividing on the essentials of Christ. What the world needs most of all is a spiritual loyalty to Jesus, the Son of the living God, and to have no creed but Christ. After all, his life and saving power are sufficient, and to that the world must come; and, in fact, all creeds have this in view. The trouble has been and is that we magnify the things that divide, instead of the essentials that unite. Rev. John R. Ewers, in speaking of the early Church, very pertinently points out these salient facts when he declares:

"The early Church had a passion for the personal Jesus. He was fresh in their minds and hearts; his spell was upon them. Theology began with Paul, and with it various schools of thought. The early Church was not divided as ours. There were some who favored Paul and some Apollos, but there were not the hundred denominations we have now to curse our cause. There was no creed but Christ. We must heal the divisions in Protestantism by a return to a spiritual loyalty to Jesus. We cannot go back to apostolic Christianity, but we can go forward with Christ."

The Mysterious in Christianity

The soul is stifled when any professing Christian decides that he will believe only what he can understand and accept only that which is "practical and rational." The strength of Christianity is the marvel and the majesty of its mystery. Our Saviour, while on earth, emphasized this salient fact repeatedly.

In talking to that scholar and "master of Israel," Nicodemus, Jesus said to this practical man and rationalist: "Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God." For the life of him, Nicodemus could not reason that saying out, could not follow it logically and understandingly, and so he said in his confusion, "How can these things be?" The glory as well as the strength of Christianity is the sublime mystery of it that the mind itself cannot comprehend. And such is the glory of the great and the good things all around us.

One scarcely knows which brings the greater thrill, the program of song that delights the ear and heart over the radio, or the mystery of that marvelous machine which the man who invented it could no more fathom and explain than we who enjoy it. The radio can no more be explained than Edison could explain electricity, or the most learned physicists can explain the power residing in an atom of earth, air or water. A while ago a member of the English Parliament said, in addressing that body, that there was sufficient power, if suddenly released, in one dewdrop hanging from the eave of the great building in which Parliament was assembled to blow that building into fragments; and, moreover, that there was sufficient atomic power in one penny, if released, to pull a freight train of heavily loaded cars twice around the earth, if the power that held the atoms of the penny together were suddenly released and could be harnessed for locomotion. The rose loses its beauty, and the flower its fragrance, when analysis is made of them to understand their mechanism and their make-up, which, by the way, no mortal has yet understood.

We cannot understand the mystery of the most commonplace things about us, and if we could, their majesty and grandeur would disappear. With advancing science and learning, the world doesn't grow less mysterious, but more so.

We were reading this morning that the mother of Jesus said to the servants at the marriage in Cana of Galilee: "Whatsoever he shall command you, do it." They obeyed, and Jesus said, "Fill the waterpots with water." Then he commanded them to draw out. No mortal mind can anymore grasp the mystery of the power to transform that water into wine than the mind can understand the majesty of the shining stars, the glowing sun, the silvery moon, and the meaning of life and love. If we discard Christianity because of the mystery attached to it, we would logically discard the glory and the grandeur of things around us.

A Church Free and Catholic

Excerpts from an Address before the International Council

By DR. DOUGLAS HORTON, Retiring Moderator

Let me ask you to gather your thoughts about the best description of a Congregational church I know. You will find it in the first verse of the fourth chapter of the Book of Revelation—"A door open into heaven."

The fundamental reason why the true Congregational church may be compared to a door open into heaven is because Christ can be seen through it. "And I beheld and lo, in the midst of the throne . . . stood a Lamb as it had been slain." If a visitor to a Congregational church cannot discern in its midst the figure of One who suffered that others might live, and live abundantly, he may know that he has made a mistake: it is not a Congregational church. It may be a congregation of a sort, but if it has been gathered merely by the social interest of the people in each other, or by fiat or government or by any other means than the gracious calling of our Lord, it is not a Congregational church according to any proper definition.

Of the Lord of the Church all the Members stand equally in need. In point of spiritual status they are on a parity. Constitutionally there is no difference between clergy and laity. There are clergy and there are laity, and different kinds of each, but all occupy a ministerial status to Christ and the entire church: the difference between them pertains to what they do, not to what they are. This is the good root out of which political democracy has stemmed historically, but at the moment I am interested not so much in history as in heaven. Equality before Christ is surely an attribute of paradise.

Because Christ is in every true church, there can be no thought of forcing it to conform to an outside will, whether political or ecclesiastical. This would be an inversion of the divine-human relationship. If the constituting fact of the church is the presence of Christ, then polity must be made to conform to the expectedness of His presence, providing authority at the point where He is most likely to make His will known. To us Congregationalists this means that the local church must be left free, for we know that Christ is accustomed to make His will known there. That fact alone gives the local church its authority. But let us not forget that the freedom of a local church is only freedom to be in Christ. One can use an electric saw to cut the wire which brings power to the saw. One can pull the trigger of the gun that kills him. One can use the freedom of a church of Christ to exile Christ, and then it is no longer Congregational—or heavenly. It is only the freedom of heaven which one desires in a Congregational church.

DR. DOUGLAS HORTON

These heavenly characteristics of a Congregational church to which I have alluded have been named in our history again and again. (a) We all agree, and our fathers with us, that the constituting fact of a church is Christ. (b) We further agree, and they with us, that within any local church, since all are ransomed sinners, there is only one order of membership. (c) We further agree, and our forebears as well, that each congregation must be left free to listen to the voice of Christ and to act upon what it hears, Co-operation from other congregations being given in proportion as they too hear His same commands. (d) More important for our generation than any of these characteristics of a heavenly church, however, is another which our fathers took for granted—the church's Catholicity. The church is One and Universal.

In the large, Congregationalists have held loyally to the idea of Catholicity. They have not believed that heaven was to present to the admiring eye the sight of a myriad of little groups of the redeemed, each so zealous of its autonomy as to be drawn only with difficulty to share the beatific vision with others. Congregationalists have seen the church, as they have seen heaven, one and undivided. The reason we cannot blame the non-Congregationalists for thinking that we believe altogether in freedom and not at all in fellowship is that we have not developed to the extent required the agencies and symbols of fellowship. We have been Catholic in idea but have not brought into sufficient being among ourselves—the area over which we have control—that visible oneness which is paretical Catholicity. We have not looked like a segment of the Catholic—the One and Universal—Church, either to ourselves or to our world.

Our task in this area will not be finished until the Congregational churches of the world remind one of the unity of heaven as much as they remind him of that freedom which is also to be found in heaven. They should appear in history as a powerful symbol of the unity which derives from authority.

We are recapturing this unity along two axes. We are today tying our past into our present as we have never done before. We are one with our fathers in a new solidarity. We are also discovering new means of uniting our churches in the dimension of the present.

As an illustration of what is being done among us to re-establish our rapprochement with the Fathers, let me point to the leadership Britain is giving us in the realm of liturgics. I am thinking of the new hymnal and also of the forms of service which have been presented in recent books of worship. The distinctive note about these books is that they are not mere anthologies, as too many of these publications have been. They represent a strong, definable tradition—as individual in history as our fathers and we are individual, together constituting an individual branch of the church. We are more than our mere selves when we can unite with all our spiritual forebears in singing "O God, our help in ages past," catching the overtones of all the Congregational ages

(Continued on page 13)

Excerpts from the Council Sermon

By DR. BOYNTON MERRILL

Eight hundred years before Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea the story of Elisha at Dothan began its long journey down through time. In Jesus' boyhood the story was as old and must have seemed as remote to him as the stories of William the Conqueror are old and seem far off to us.

* * *

The King of Syria was warring against Israel, but his tactics had, obviously, been spied out; for, repeatedly, Israel, forewarned, had been saved. "And the heart of the King of Syria was sore troubled." Then he learned that it was Elisha, Israelitish patriot and prophet, who had discovered his plans and, again and again, had set him back on his heels. It was discovered, too, that Elisha was in the village of Dothan, for counter-spies had ferreted him out. That self-same night the King, under the cover of darkness, circled the village with horsemen and chariots, setting a net of steel and spears in which to catch his troubler.

* * *

Day dawned and the young servant of Elisha, rising early, went forth and saw the encircling army of the hostile king. Frightened, he raced back: "Alas my master, what shall we do?" and Elisha answered. "Fear not; they that be for us are more than that are against us." And he prayed: "O Lord, open Thou the eyes of the young man that he may see." And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man, and he saw, and behold, the mountain round about was full of horses of flame and chariots of fire. Below, circling the village, clearly seen and near at hand, very real, was the Syrian host; horses of flesh and chariots of steel, men well supplied with spears and swords. But beyond those threatening ranks, encircling them in turn, were other hosts, a greater multitude by far; only these were horses of fire and chariots of flame.

* * *

Now, I suspect that few of us take this for a literally true account of an actual, physical experience. Horses of flame, chariots of fire? We should dare to pass straight through the letter and outer form to the heart of it, remembering that the story-loving Oriental always spoke of spiritual things in symbolic terms.

Let us remember, too, that from time immemorial fire and flame have, in many faiths, including our own Christian faith, been the recognised symbol for the descending spirit, for the saving presence of the living God. Here, in exuberant imagery, is an ancient declaration that God is closer than we think, that spirit is mightier than matter, that no matter how close the forces of evil may press, the believer in God, if he opens his eyes, will discover the Eternal Righteousness round about, a sufficient and very present help. "Horses of fire and chariots of flame;" it was Elisha's version of "not by might, not by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord."

* * *

Twice this young man's eyes were opened; once when, waking from sleep, he looked out upon the world of time and space and saw the hostile host set for his master's death and his country's overthrow, and the second time when, raised by prayer to faith, he looked indeed and beyond his foes, and, far mightier, discerned the unaccountable, flaming armies of the Spirit.

Open Thou our eyes, O God; first that we, roused from our sleep, may surely see the dangers by which we mortal men are here and now encircled; and second, open them to see that, although we live in a dangerous world and time, that world is also Thine and that all times are in Thy hands, and that Thou the Maker art mightier than that which Thou hast made.

Now may I seek to be specific in two areas. In each of them we are encircled with the hostile, as was Elisha in Dothan. . . But beyond the encircling and threatening are the hosts of spiritual and the saving.

* * *

We of the West have, in the last hundred years, shown an amazing ability to discover and to develop, to capture and colonize, the physical planet, to unlock the secrets and lay hold upon the treasures and powers of the material world. But in so doing we have become obsessed with our own cleverness and have almost forgotten the far more significant spiritual thing which has made it all possible. I refer to the West's spiritual discernment of, and very practical insistence upon, the spiritual concept of human freedom as the imperative and only soil in which the life of man can come to full flower and "bring forth fruit, thirty, sixty and an hundred fold."

* * *

Our Christian inheritance has opened the doors on truth, and having come on truth, we have become, also, the passionate lovers of freedom. Jesus stated the proper order long ago: "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." It is because freedom is a spiritual thing, and essential to true human progress that we fear materialistic Communism and thought control.

* * *

It is precisely at this point that the institutions of religion must prove themselves adequate. They will either take on Elisha's role or they will be stammering and frightened as was the young man before his eyes were opened to see lying beyond the hostile armies the mightier armies of the spirit.

* * *

This, then, of the world that is so much, too much, with us. And now, second, what of the Church? Is she, too, encircled? Is it not possible that as the early Church ceased being the lengthened shadow of the poor and crucified Christ and was slowly changed into "the Holy Roman Empire, wearing mitre and chasuble," so the Church of our day, being very much in and of the world, has also been surely, but subtly, captured by the world? Could it be that the Syrian hosts have really closed in on us? We find it very easy to be critical of the secular, militaristic world of Statism. Are we capable, I wonder, of looking honestly at ourselves, of being ruthlessly critical of our own inherited and beloved Church? This could be very hard to do and the result might be very hard to face.

* * *

The theme of this council is Congregational Churchmanship. Both Congregationalism and Churchmanship seem to us good, and to be important. But are we sure that they are of heaven and not of men, and that the world is not luring us from our spiritual character and task? As we dedicate these days to looking at Congregationalism and Churchmanship, are we predetermined to discover that they are surely of God. Or are we equally ready to see and confess, if we must, that they may be

(Continued on page 7.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Keep Elon Strong

When refinancing the college in 1935 it was necessary to borrow money. After raising all the money that we possibly could, we were compelled to borrow $144,000. This amount was borrowed from Virginia Trust Company, Richmond, Virginia. The college obligated itself to pay interest only for five years and to pay principal and interest during the next five years. The debt was to be completely discharged by 1945. Fortunately, and by the Grace of God, on January 26 of that year at ten o'clock in the morning the entire debt to Virginia Trust Company was paid in full. From that day until 1953 the college has been able to pay its current bills promptly. In addition, it has added $294,000 to its endowment and $350,000 to current fund investment, built a new power house, heating plant, and gymnasium at a cost of more than $400,000, $20,000 of which is still owing.

Today Elon College is in very good financial condition. It needs a lot of things—dining room, dormitories, endowment, and the like, but its present financial situation is good and strong. Let's keep it so.

Now if we, church and alumni, keep Elon College, our college, strong, there are certain things that must be done.

1. We must keep a good faculty. There are two ways of securing additional funds for salaries. Either raise a special fund to supplement faculty salaries annually or increase the college's endowment or invest funds and have the income therefrom allocated to the salary account.

For the past twenty years we haven't had to bother about money for salaries but, unfortunately, that day has past. The church and alumni must realize this fact.

2. To keep Elon strong, somehow we must provide better equipment for housing students. We are compelled to house our students in old dormitories that are certainly lacking in modern or acceptable facilities. The dining room, the only one that we have, is a one-story wooden structure. We may be presumptuous to invite our boys and girls from good homes to come and use these facilities while in college. Many of our own people will just not send their sons and daughters to their college. Neither we nor they have done much in the last forty years to improve these facilities. If we do not, who on earth will? The only way I know to keep our college strong is to provide these facilities that are obviously needed so very badly.

If everyone, church members and alumni, would give a little time and a fair share of his earnings annually for five years to the campaign to raise $2,500,000 for the college, we would secure this amount and keep Elon College strong. Let's do it. It is worth the effort and the sacrifice, if sacrifice is necessary.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

If apportionment giving could be, in reality, proportionate giving, there doubtless would be no difficulty in any church securing all its conference apportionment—apportionment for institutions, purposes, and causes. In the average congregation a percentage of the members assume the greater part of their church's financial responsibilities. Too many of us who are members feel this responsibility and do not concern ourselves with the total responsibilities of our local church. The problem has always been and doubtless is to enlist the active participation of the last member of the congregation in all of the opportunities and responsibilities of the local church. If the local church will take care of its responsibilities, the responsibilities of the convention will be adequately cared for.

Previously Reported	$ 5,429.21
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Wake Chapel	$ 3.50
Eastern Va. Conference:
Cypress Chapel	$ 56.15
Spring Hill S. S.	3.11
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Lebanon	$ 55.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Bailey's Grove	$ 5.00
Pleasant Ridge	65.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Antioch S. S.	$ 20.05

207.81

Total to date, $ 5,637.02

COUNCIL SERMON EXCERPTS.

(Continued from page 6.)

primarily of men and of time, and that like Syria's army, they may even be making our souls earthbound and the spirit vague.

* * *

As Elisha and the young man looked past Syria's armies to the armies of the spirit, we need to look past the world for God, and within and beyond the Church for Christ, whose mind was not only spaciously all-embracing and vitally alive but, also, was altogether victorious in mood and conviction. And it was so because it was rooted and grounded in God. Whatever else, "pessimistic Christianity" may be, it was not, I think, the Christianity of Jesus or of Paul. They looked past the delays and denials, the distress and the encirclements inevitable in this world and said quietly, "Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God." "Arise, let us go hence"—and "hence" was Calvary; or, earnestly, "I am persuaded that nothing, neither life nor death, shall be able to separate us from the love of God"; or, exultingly, "We are more than conquerors though him that loved us"; or calmly, "Fear not, they that be for us are more than they that be against us."

* * *

It makes no difference; in drab little Dothan, the man of God could see horses of fire and chariots of flame, and was without fear; in cruel Jerusalem, men saw in his face a glory as of the glory of God passing by, and the world was forever altered: and here, in this seaside town, bearing the name of one who left his boat and nets by the side of a smaller sea to follow Jesus, we too can say to him, "Where dwellest thou?" and we can pray to hear his answering voice, saying, "Come and see."

The Joy Of It

Adapted from a familiar parable.

And the Master said, "I gave a church into your keeping; what have you done with my church?" The minister answered, "My people and I have helped build five other churches and we have tried to train up and inspire our youth to be ready to be their leaders and pastors." The Master said to him, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of your Lord."

And to the second minister, he said,
(Continued on page 10.)

Missions at Home and Abroad

"Reminiscences of Other Days"

By MARY R. NUTE,
Talas, Kayseri, Turkey.

In these times of rapid changes, it is good for our spirits to pause and think back to the "good old days" of our Turkey mission. Let us see just what was so good about those old days.

Surely it was not the gay times or the easy life. It was the magnificent heroism with which those missionaries of old met the missionary challenge when they came forth from their schools of training and answered, "Here am I, send me." It was such a challenge to those young people as few feel themselves called to meet in those days. There were no "term workers." All who came out to the field burned their bridges behind them, expecting to stay for the rest of their lives. There was not a retiring-age limit, with a pension awaiting them. Furloughs were every ten years, and many did not go home even then, because they felt they could not be spared from their work.

Many faces are thrown on memory's screen as we think back fifty years or more. Nowadays we look around and say, "Where are the Miss Vaughns, the Miss Fenengas, the Miss Shattucks, the men like Mr. Sanders, and the others?" Their lives they offered in total consecration. For them, the Kingdom of God came first, personal desires came last. These were such as had been tried by fire. Self had been burned out of them.

Miss Vaughn and her great friend Miss Billings had the girl's school in Hajin. They had succeeded such heroines as Mrs. Coffing, Miss Spencer, and a number of others. For years they stayed in that isolated little town, tucked away in a narrow valley among the mountains. Only by a four-days' horse-back journey over dizzying trails up and down through terrifying gorges could they reach Adana, the nearest station where other Americans and relative civilisation could be found. The girls they trained went out of that school to teach in village schools, or to make Christian homes. The courage and devotion of those two young women in that wild and isolated town can never be forgotten.

Miss Fenenga and Miss Diantha were also two ladies who stayed alone through years of war, massacre, and famine, when the dead lay in the streets. They gathered up orphans and widows whom they fed and protected; and they started industries to help support their charges. For many years they allowed themselves no furloughs. They seldom saw any American or others from outside. They stayed on after their colleagues had either all died or been forced to leave.

Miss Shattuck, another heroine of the past, defied tuberculosis. After the doctors told her she should retire because of having only one functioning lung, she refused to go home, and lived on for twenty years carrying on a huge work among orphans and widows at Urfa, another lonely station far in the interior. Finally a young man was sent out to help her, and he was nearly worn out with the large amount of work to be done.

Mr. Sanders was left with a baby daughter when his young wife died, because we didn't have Penicillin in those days. He never remarried, but spent his life as a touring missionary, going from out-station to out-station, visiting the little village churches and schools, advising, encouraging, or settling petty quarrels, till a broken girth, as he was galloping home one night, caused his sudden death. How well I remember him when I was a child. We children were always delighted when he visited our house, because he had such a jolly laugh, and was ever ready for a romp with us, tousling up our hair, piling us up one on top of the other, or sitting down with us to tell us a story.

Another visitor I remember was Mr. Riggs who was blind from childhood. He was a teacher at the Aintab college. He was so quiet and gentle. He would wince when the boys took advantage of his blindness to play practical jokes on him. We children loved him, and marvelled at the way he would run up our stairs as if he could see.

The insidious cancer that ate the heart out of some of the younger missionaries was homesickness or loneliness. There was very little recreation, but everybody had to know how to ride a horse, otherwise how was traveling to be done? A regular duty was to go for at least a little canter after school, if possible, to get some fresh air and exercise. Then the table-talk at supper would generally be about how horses had behaved that afternoon. Sometimes a horse would take advantage of an inexperienced rider to lie down in mid-stream and treat the astonished lady to a little ducking. More expert riders would have fun at times with racing their horses, when out on the plain. I used to hear about Miss Brown of Adana who had a good runner of a horse, but he was very thin. She called him "Napoleon Bony-part" because she claimed she got only the bony part of the bargain when she bought him.

Now and then there would be an evening party when nice little "parlor games" would be played, or else all would gather about the organ for a sing. The organ was there long before any pianos were in Marash. The first piano brought to the college had to come swung between two camels. Half the town turned out to see the wonderful thing arrive. The girls' college specialized in its music course. What beautiful concerts those girls gave! The coming of that piano was a great blessing.

The younger generation did not have the temptation to skip off over the holidays by bus, train or plane to visit other lands. Travel was not the simple matter it is today. When my mother took a summer vacation trip to visit stations of the mission, she and Miss Brewer and my little sister spent thirty-four days in the saddle. Often they slept on a housetop in some very dirty village. Big, fierce shepherd dogs guarded the courtyard so that one dared not descend without calling first to the host to hold them in check. In those days we travelled with our bedding, cooking equipment, and staple foods. In fair weather we camped out, but in bad weather we had to brave the insects, without benefit of DDT, in some village hut. Just from Adana to Gaziantep it was a six-day trip. Now a car does it in about as many hours.

Sixty years ago we were closer to our Puritan forefathers. Sunday fun was strictly ruled out, and no one thought of traveling on that day. The caravan would stop wherever it arrived on Saturday night, and wait till Monday morning. Mother said it gave the poor horses a chance to

(Continued on page 9.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Air Mail From Abroad

Geneva, Switzerland
July 8, 1953

Greetings to each and all!

We shall never cease to be grateful to you for the wonderful trip which you have helped to make possible for us. It has been a glorious experience, both spiritually and physically. We shall be telling you about it from now on.

Our travels have taken us through England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Italy and Switzerland. We have been given introductions to many means of travel—on the land, on the sea, and in the air. Everywhere we have met wonderful Christian friends and somehow have managed to get something to eat and a place to sleep, though we found little use for the Scott brand of French and Italian. Believe you me, it's a helpless feeling to discover yourself a foreigner in a strange land, trying to be understood by sign language. An interpreter is a real friend!

All of our Council meetings as St. Andrews were fine. The fellowship with Christians of so many nationalities was indeed a meaningful and pleasant experience. Our women's meetings were especially interesting and helpful, too. We voted to complete plans for an International Council for our women which will continue to be an integral part of the I. C. C.

We have been moved by the enormous problems and needs of the refugee work in Europe. It is impossible for Americans to realize how comfortably we live, until we have an opportunity to see this work on the Continent. I know that you will be eager to hear more and to lend help wherever possible.

Our faces and hearts are now turned homeward! That too is a wonderful experience. We shall leave Geneva tonight by train and go to Paris and then to Cherbourg, France, the port of embarkation of the Queen Elizabeth. We shall arrive in New York City on July 14. We can hardly wait to see the Statue of Liberty.

You and the work of our conference have been constantly in our hearts and minds all the way. Together, may we ever plan for greater Christian service.

Thanks for the thoughtful and kind greeting from the School of Missions.

Best wishes.

DELLA C. SCOTT,

WILLIAM T. SCOTT.

* * * * *

Johnson's Grove Omitted

Someone reads THE SUN from Johnson's Grove Society in Eastern Virginia! They discovered that the name of their society was not listed among those represented at the School of Missions. A nice letter from Mrs. Hugh Beale of Courtland, Virginia, explains about it thus:

"When we arrived at Elon to register about 6:30 there wasn't anyone at the desk. I think everyone must have been eating supper. We decided we would drive back to Burlington and find a hotel. It being our first time there we didn't want to be late getting our rooms. We got our mid-day meal in the dining hall and enjoyed the fellowship and especially having a part in buying the 'goat.'

"We as a group of four were happy to be with you all and enjoyed everything and feel that we got so many good ideas for our work. In addition to our four delegates we brought a visitor which made our number five.

"We are looking forward to next year and hope we won't be late, yet our 'half loaf' was better than none.

"We are very proud of our society. We hope we can accomplish more in the future with the help of our new pastor, Mr. Carne, and his wife. They are such lovely people."

We appreciate the letter from Mrs. Beale and are glad to know that Johnson's Grove was represented at the School of Missions, and that they think it was a worthwhile session.

* * * * *

Apples Chapel Reporting

The missionary society of Apple's Chapel, under the leadership of Mrs. Orelia Hogan, holds its meetings every month. A little over a year ago our younger women organized another circle. They have as their president, Mrs. Cletus Powell. They are doing great work. Each group is separate, except for special occasions, when we meet jointly.

We receive spiritual inspiration from our Bible studies, taught this year by Mrs. Ted Andrews on the Book of Colossians.

For the first time in the history of our church we were hostess to the North Carolina Missionary Conference.

We observed World Community Day, World Day of Prayer, and May Fellowship Day, working together with our United Council of Church Women.

In November both circles had a Harvest Festival sale and a chicken pie supper. We made $554.66. This money was given to the building committee, to be used on the payment of our new educational plant. Our Thanksgiving Offering was $65.00. This we sent to Carroll County to be used there.

Dr. W. W. Sloan came to our church and reviewed our foreign mission book on Africa. After seeing the slides, and hearing him tell of the mission work there, we felt closer to these brothers in Christ.

Our home mission book was taught by Mrs. Nannie Pritchett. Our women attended the missionary conference and the spring rally at Burlington, and also the School of Missions at Elon College.

We have sent clothing overseas and for our people at home we have sent cards, fruit baskets, and gifts to our secret sisters. We are now working on our membership quilt.

As our year is drawing to a close, we hope what little we have been able to do will serve to draw others closer to Christ, who gave us the Great Commission, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature."

MRS. VADEN APPLE,
Reporter.

"REMINISCENCES OF OTHER DAYS."

(Continued from page 8.)

rest, and so they were all more fit to travel the next day.

Missionaries had no tennis-courts, no skis, and theatre-plays were not allowed. Dancing and card-playing were absolutely taboo. Of course movies had not yet been invented. We children had some crudely fashioned sleds in winter. Some of the

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

The Byrd That Never Touches Ground

The chimney swift, a species of the Bird family, literally lives in the air. It is scattered over a large portion of the North American continent in summer but never, except by accident, sets foot on the land. The bird even eats and mates on the wing. It is the chief among fliers, an aviator unexcelled.

Like a six-day bicycle rider who speeds around the wooden saucer, the swift is noted for its speed and tireless energy. During daylight hours throughout the summer, it has the habit of continual flight, sailing circling on set wings, and then with a rapid beat of wings spurring off in a burst of speed, racing along like a cyclist during a sprint.

Probably the most unusual sight offered by a flock of swifts is often seen at night, when literally thousands gather and wheel in funnel-shaped clouds over a large chimney into which they descend to roost. Its roosting and nesting habits have given the bird its popular name, chimney swift.

The chimney swift cannot walk, but its feet and legs are strong enough to hold the bird to the wall of a chimney as it roosts at night, braced by its spinelike tail feathers. The bird's food consists almost wholly of insects and beetles; flies and ants are the principal items. It gets many beetles, the most serious enemies of forests, and takes also the old fashioned potato beetle, the tarnished plant-bug, and many other injurious insects.

Swifts show no fear when caught. When held in the hands they will snuggle between the fingers confidently, and when held against the clothes they wiggle under the folds of the garment and contentedly go to sleep.

* * * * *

"Methods Of Approach"

By LOUISE C. HAISTINGS.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Now we are going to do things differently around here!" explained Mother one morning. "You children will have to help me more. All you do is play, and here I am working hard all day long! I have no chance to go to the Woman's Club, and nobody asks me to play cards because I always have to say, 'No, I can't come.' " Have you ever heard a mother voice such sentiments? Of course, much depends on the tone the mother uses. Imagination will help us to determine the reactions to different tones and different facial expressions. Again in some families no impression would be made on the children by the mother's complaining, no matter how it was made, while in others her words might create a feeling of antagonism and unhappiness and even stubbornness. If they loved their mother dearly, the desired result might possibly follow.

Not long ago I made a Saturday morning call upon a friend of mine and I found a very happy family getting ready to do the week-end housework. Spread out on the hall rug were pieces of paper with writing on each one. All were printed so the youngest child could read them easily, and they were placed face down. These papers held directions for doing the morning housework.

"Well!" I exclaimed, "I never saw disorder in this house before."

"That is no disorder," laughed my friend. "That's the way we do our work each Saturday morning." She picked up two or three of the papers and showed them to me. Then replacing them, she said, "Now watch us in action."

Looking at her children with a twinkle in her eye, she said, "Go!" Each stooped down, took a paper, read it, and went to work. It was all good fun. I looked at the slips. Susan's slip read, "Sweep the kitchen floor." Jonny had to use the vacuum on both the front-porch and the back-stoop furniture. Their mother's slip told her to dust the furniture in the living room.

"Why didn't you take a slip?" Susan asked. Her eyes sparkled. My slip was a great surprise. It read, "Turn on the radio to some music and lie on the chaise and listen to it for five minutes."

"Mother always includes funny slips like the one you found," explained Jonny. "It peps the game."

"We have another slip game," said Susan. "Sometimes Mother puts a slip under our pillows. We never know when one will be there, so we always look. If we forget to look and there happens to be a slip there, it is just too bad, for often the slips are for something very nice."

Jonny Grunted. "Like the one I got about meeting Daddy at the beach! And I didn't see it!"

The way things are presented makes a great difference in the attitudes our boys and girls have toward helping in the home. Giving such help should be a happy experience. Every child should have the opportunity and feel the desire to share in the responsibilities of home activities. It is a part of our obligation to them, as parents, to see that they do.

A grandmother was talking with me over the telephone not long ago. Said she, "I received a real thrill of pleasure the other day when I called up Junior. I could hear baby voices in the background and I asked what was going on. My son laughed. 'Oh, Chucky is cleaning up the living-room floor with the dry mop,' was the reply. 'He heard me say I expected one of the fellows from our office to call.' Just think," commented the grandmother, "the dear little youngster felt it his responsibility to make that room presentable. What a satisfaction it is when our young people carry out, spontaneously, some of the teaching that we, in the past, worked patiently, day by day, to get over to their parents!"

THE JOY OF IT.

(Continued from page 7.)

"What have you done with the church I gave to you?" He replied, "My people and I have been through sorrow and storm, but we have helped build two other churches and are in close Christian fellowship with them." The Master said to him, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of your Lord."

And to the third minister he said, "And you too, what have you done with my church?" and the third minister replied, "We have taken good care of your church but we have been occupied with our own problems and too busy with our building program to be able to reach out to other churches."

You remember the ending. That church, alas, did not get to know the joy of their Lord.

—Helen Kenyon.

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Young People's Summer Conference at Elon College

Fifty-five young people from the churches of the Southern Convention attended the Young People's Summer Conference at Elon College the week of July 5-11.

The conference was highlighted by the presence of several persons from outside the convention family. Miss Grace Raju, of the Uduvil Girl's English School, Chunnoka, Ceylon, spoke to the group several times and was on hand for informal talkfests. Miss Rae Cochrane, a National Pilgrim Fellowship visitor, whose home is in Billings, Montana, taught the course in "Pilgrim Fellowship" and assisted in the recreation and entertainment. Four young people composing a "Youth Caravan," interdenominational in character, held a daily workshop in activities and gave a big boost to the recreation, entertainment and counseling. The members of this caravan were: John Smith, Sioux City, Iowa; Allen Blum, Des Plaines, Ill.; Betty Jean Haynes, Boise, Idaho, and Shirley Vaughan, Bradley, Ill.

Departing somewhat from the practice of recent years, the schedule called for all of the students to take courses in the history of our denomination—taught by Rev. Melvin Dollar and Rev. Clyde Fields—and in Christian Belief—taught by Rev. Harvey Carnes and Rev. Richard Jackson. Mrs. Baxter Twiddy both presented a course on "The Choir" and directed the choir of the conference.

Elon College.

The administration of the college did everything possible to make the conference a success. The necessary buildings for living and studying were at the disposal of the conference. A real treat was the use of the facilities of the new gymnasium. The meals served by the cafeteria staff were outstanding, and Mr. Horell went out of his way to have the picnic at Moonelon prepared and served.

Both President L. E. Smith and Dean D. J. Bowden of the college appeared on the program. Moreover, the regular college students evidenced a fine spirit toward the conferees, Moonelon.

Having the use of the swimming pool at Moonelon is a big boost to the conference. The pool was used every day and a picnic supper and the vesper service were held at Moonelon on Wednesday. Many of the young people expressed the hope that Moonelon some day will be developed as the site for the conference.

Miss Bouneva Farlow, of Sophia, North Carolina, who is a Student Summer Service Worker working in many of our churches this summer, served as a counselor and as a life guard.

Other members of the staff included: Mrs. Melvin Dollar, head counselor for girls; Mrs. Clyde Fields, Miss Ruth Helen Gunn, Rev. Warren Matthews, head counselor for boys; Rev. Bill Simmons, director of recreation, and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, registrar.

The writer, who served as dean, is aware of the tardiness of this report and its rather sketchy character; but there is a reason. Miss Leslie Hope Lightbourne, who was expected the first of August, could not wait. The writer arrived home late Saturday afternoon and on Sunday night took Mrs. Lightbourne to the hospital. Leslie Hope showed up in the early hours of the 13th day of July. The Dean, Jimmy, J. and Andy have set up bachelor quarters and will clean house on Friday in expectation of the ladies on Saturday.

JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR.

* * * * *

Young Adults Meet at Lebanon

The Young Adult Class of Lebanon Christian Church enjoyed an evening of fun and fellowship Wednesday June 26 when thirty-four members motored to the home of their pastor, Rev. Mark Andes and Mrs. Andes at Virgilina, Va; for a program of recreation which included an old fashion picnic supper in addition to freezers of homemade ice-cream. Everyone thoroughly enjoyed this wholesome recreation and the hospitality of their pastor and his wife.

The young adults held their regular meeting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Mise on Tuesday, July 7, with twenty-eight members present. The class has just completed a project of building an outdoor fireplace at the church.

Since their pastor will be on vacation for the month of August, the young adult class will be responsible for the third Sunday service.

ALICE WELLS.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

You may think that I am the most nosey person in the Southern Convention, and it may be true; but it is all your fault. You see if you would send in the news like you should then I wouldn't have to keep begging for it. Please tell me what is going on around your church, so that I can tell everybody else in the Southern Convention.

* * *

The darker the night the brighter the stars.

* * *

We certainly had a fine Sunday School Convention at Hanks Chapel the other day. Lots of churches represented, plenty of good food, and three very fine speeches. These were delivered by Dr. Henry Robinson, Rev. John Graves, and Mrs. Richard Jackson. Miss Coghill arrived late at the meeting—the first time in her life that this has happened—because—well, I'm afraid the explanation might be embarrassing for a nationally known producer of automobiles.

* * *

I've teased Pattie Lee so much that I never know what may happen. You know, she sent me to Europe once, but I came back. Everytime we start a new project I'm afraid of what may become of me. Then she writes me a letter telling about it, and I still don't know. She even records her letters on circular discs so they will fit the paper when her secretary, poor soul, transcribes them. Pattie Lee, you're wonderful to me, and I suppose I am full of wonder to you too.

* * *

A woman I heard about had a big fancy dinner party, and among the guests were her grandfather and her grandmother.

Everything went smoothly until coffee was served. Grandpa picked up his cup, took a good gulp and, finding it scalding hot, coughed it out.

The guests were pretty surprised and sat there waiting for an apology, but Grandpa just shook his head and said in a loud voice to everyone at the table: "You know, a lot of fools would have swallowed that."

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"The Christian Home"

LESSON V—AUGUST 2, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Whatever your task, work heartily, as serving the Lord and not men."—Colossians 3: 23 (RSV).

LESSON: Colossians 3: 12-4: 1.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 119: 9-16.

Somewhere in the Old Testament there is a verse that reads something like this, "God hath set the solitary in families." Thank God that he did! How much stronger and richer and sweeter life is for so many of us because we are a part of a family circle. The home is one of God's best and greatest gifts to men. There is no substitute for it. There is no price that can be placed upon it.

To be sure there are some who would not agree with all this. There are many homes in the world, and all too many of them in Christian America, where there is friction and factions, where home is a kind of prison, where there is constant bickering, where real love and understanding and patience and cooperation are unknown. And of course there are many, many homes which have found married life and parenthood so burdensome and disappointing that the home has been broken by separation and divorce. There is much wisecracking and flippancy and cynicism about home and home life. But after all is said and done, the average man and woman knows deep in his or her heart, that home life is one of life's surest source of happiness, and one of life's deepest springs of character. And many of those who are cynical about home life, and who have had a part in a broken home, have a homesickness for a wholesome family life. The home instinct is deeply rooted in human life. It is divinely planted there. For this cause will a man or a woman leave their homes, and give themselves to each other, and for this cause will men and women sacrifice and save and labor and love—they will do anything to preserve the home and to propagate a family.

A small group of soldiers were talking about their native states in a "bull session" one evening. One after another had bragged about his state, and had extolled its virtues and advantages above the other states. At last a tall Oklahoma boy, with a drawl, boldly asserted that his state was the greatest state in the Union, because it had something that no other state had. When pressed for an answer by a Californian and a Floridian he replied simply and feelingly "My state is the greatest state in the Union because my home is there." It was a great tribute on the part of the young man to the place and power of a home. There is no place like home.

But happy homes do not just happen. As Edgar A. Guest wrote, "It takes a heap of living (and he might have added 'a heap of loving') in a house to make it a home." There are houses with every modern convenience and with added luxuries, which are not homes at all. On the other hand there are humble houses and even shacks which are the finest kind of homes. This thing called a home is a matter of spirit. Material things may and can help. But of themselves they do not make a home. Mutual respect for each other's personality, the spirit of cooperation, the willingness to sacrifice one's selfish desires, the sharing of counsel as well as of tasks, the spirit of democracy, the spirit of trust, of loyalty, of kindness, of forgiveness, of love—these and other qualities are necessary ingredients in making a true home. In today's lesson Paul writes about certain qualities or a certain spirit that should characterize the follower of Christ—"a heart of compassion, kindness—how many homes would be so different if the meners of the family were simply kind to one another—lowliness, meekness, long-suffering, forbearing one another, and forgiving each other." As the thing that binds all these virtues together, he adminishes his friends to "put on love" which is the bond of perfectness. And in what might seem like an anti-climax, he adds "and be ye thankful." The spirit of gratitude, gratitude to God and gratitude to each other, a word of appreciation once in a while might transform a home in which members of the family take each other for granted. One is reminded of the story of the woman who lay dying, whose husband said to her as he leaned over her, "You have been a good wife to me." "Thank you," replied the dying woman, "that's the first time you ever told me that." Gratitude,—all too often there is too little of it, and it comes too late.

The Christian Home.

The second part of the lesson deals specifically with the ideals and the spirit of a Christian home. "Wives, be in subjection to your husband, as is fitting in the Lord." Paul is not suggesting that a wife submit to anything from her husband which is degrading or contrary to her conscience. He is simply saying there is need for authority in the home, and in some spheres of family life the husband must exercise that authority. The husband is not a dictator. The fact is the relationship between husband and wife is a partnership.

"Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them." These words limit the husband's authority, make tyranny and selfishness and cruelty impossible, call for cooperation and not coercion. The husband's authority is to be governed by love. The wife's submission is to be the expression of love. In a Christian home there is no "boss." The happy home is the home in which love rules.

"Children obey your parents in all things, for this is well pleasing in the Lord." Obedience is the first law in the home—unless children learn it in the home they are not likely to learn it anywhere else. A disobedient child is displeasing to God, dishonorable to his parents, and derelict to himself. Parents should demand and should expect obedience.

But, "Fathers provoke not your children, that they be not discouraged," adds this man who was so practical and commonsense, under the Spirit. If fathers and mothers expect obedience, children have a right to expect courtesy and consideration. Parents who are too severe in their treatment of children often produce a sullen and rebellious child. Obedience should be based on love and respect and reasonableness. It takes a lot of grace and gumption to treat children in the right way.

"Servants, obey in all things them that are your masters according to the flesh." He was not condoning slavery. He was under no delusions about it. He knew it was ultimately doomed as Christ's ideals became more universal and practiced. He simply exhorts servants and slaves (and some slaves were better educated and more cultured than their masters) to do their work well and faithfully. Their own character was at stake in the matter.

"Master, render unto your servants that which is just and equal; knowing that ye also have a Master in heaven." Thus does Paul in one brilliant stroke lay the whole matter on the conscience of the masters. They would be judged on the basis of the way in which they treated those who were their slaves, but who were in fact their equals before God, and their brothers in Christ.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

A CHURCH FREE AND CATHOLIC.

(Continued from page 5.)

between Watts' time and our own, as they sing with us. Much more could be said of our rediscovery of our own fathers—of our new access to the Puritan thinkers, of our penetration behind the time when we came into corporate being into the rich field of the Middle Ages when we and the other now separate parts of the Western Church were one—but this must be left for our general discussions later. There is undoubtedly among us a new Catholic sense of our own past.

As a warp to that woof we are also growing in our understanding of one another to-day. I trust that before the younger of you pass from the scene you will have witnessed new triumphs of cooperation among us.

Other Symbols than Episcopacy.

We are familiar, I take it, with the suggestion of "bringing episcopacy into our system." Undoubtedly episcopacy has this advantage to offer—that it does effect a certain unitedness among the churches of a diocese. The difficulty with it, from our point of view, is that along with the unitedness it brings spiritual subordination—and in principle would open us to all the vicious addenda of episcopacy which drove our fathers to desperation. The episcopal unit in our system to-day is the local Union or, as we say in the United States, the Association. If we were to take authoritative episcopacy into our system, it would require that our Moderators or (to use the American name) Ministers of Conference should assume the role of bishops.

As has been pointed out, their presence would wonderfully advertise to young people at the time of the making of their vows of church membership the great Catholic fact that the church is more than the local congregation. But what is to prevent us now, at the time when our young people are being brought into the church, from having representatives of the local Union or Association (a group of whom might be formed into a kind of diaconate) appearing at the service, on the invitation of the local church, and offering the right hand of fellowship in an appropriate liturgical setting? This would at least suggest that the great Church of Christ, which the young people were joining, is something more than the immediate congregation accustomed to meet within the four walls of that church building.

A Proposed "Norm."

In order to assist us all in the development of our oneness, I trust that this body (the International Congregational Council) will authorise a continuing committee to publish a book on the theme of this meeting itself. One could wish that the thoughts, new and old, laid on the altar of Christ and on our hearts by our speakers, may be gathered together in logical unity, sent out to other thinkers not here, and so finally be made the nucleus of a volume on "Congregational Churchmanship" which by its very excellence might become normative for our Congregational world. The working together to produce such a book would be unitive: the book itself would become a symbol of our oneness in Christ.

At the close of the first meeting of the International Congregational Council in London in 1891 Dr. Bradford, delivering the final formal address, observed that "he could not help feeling that in the meetings . . . there had been one note that was not quite true. There had been too much glorification of Congregationalism. They ought to have got a little higher."

You will pardon me, I know, if I have glorified Congregationalism. I cannot help rejoicing in relationships which have been to me unrelenting purveyors of spiritual joy. But as I close now I want simply to stress the exceeding great danger which lies in taking seriously such a text as has been mine in this address. When that door into heaven was opened, the seer of Patmos saw judgment as well as glory. It is all very well to realise that Christ, being at the very heart of every church, makes it to the inwardly prepared a vestibule of heaven. But it is all very terrible to realise that Christ is also our judge. Said John Owen, "It is Christ who . . . will come Himself . . . 'to take vengeance on them that obey not the gospel.'" Christ will be present at these meetings at St. Andrews. He will be watching us with, I hope, not unhappy eyes. His vengeance is not usually violent. It may sometimes be wished that it were: it would then be more evident and resistable. The vengeance He takes upon those who turn away from Him is the dessication of motive, the growth of a sense of meaninglessness in life. Let us determine that this shall not happen here.

Let us open our thoughts to that last scene in heaven—a pure river of water of life, clear as crystal, running through the midst of the city, renewing and healing all it touches because it comes from the throne of God and of the Lamb. Let our hearts and minds be cupped for that water. Let us be prepared for new insights and new powers: God through us can clothe our churches in strength: God through them may then see His will done on earth as it is in Heaven.

"REMINISCENCES OF OTHER DAYS."

(Continued from page 9.)

very "foolish" young ladies of the station would join us in sliding.

Home comforts, such as are taken for granted in these days, were conspicuously absent. Our houses had no plumbing, no furnaces, and no screens to keep out flies or mosquitoes. We did not know about flies spreading disease, or mosquitoes causing the dreaded malaria. We thought the latter came from sleeping on the ground floor. We never heard of electricity, that marvelous hand-maiden of modern man. Hence, not one of the convenient gadgets of the modern home were even dreamed about.

And yet, in spite of the lack of all these things, those old-time missionaries were by and large the happiest people on earth. I wonder why,—do you? Paraphrasing the familiar hymn:

"They climbed the steep ascent of Heaven, through peril, toil and pain,

A noble band, their hope they knew,—who follows in their train?"

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

I wrote you last week that our corn crop is drying up in the field. It has not rained since then and it is a pitiful sight now. It looks now like there will be no roasting ear corn, nor any to feed our many hogs, cows, nor for corn bread and for canning. It is very discouraging because we count on it so much. Fertilizer, seed, preparing the land, and cultivation, has all been expensive. Our pastures are dry and brown, and our cows are walking around looking for a morsel of grass. Our gardens are just about gone, as well as we planted them and tended them. I must say I am a little "blue."

My wife has been down three weeks with a bad back. She has had the local physician, had four days in the hospital, and in still only just able to be around in the house an hour or so a day—most of the time she is in bed.

Vacation time is always extra trouble. The children are restless and it requires more clothes to go away a week or two than to stay at home. For those at home and that is most of them at any given time the constant question is: What can I do? There is nothing to do they say. Some matrons are away each week on their vacations. And it is hot, dusty and dry. And getting drier every day. "Into every life some rain must fall." A good rain now would be welcome, believe me.

Today we accepted two more boys, Micheal Heritage, 8, and his brother, Everette, 7. Two fine looking boys they are. They have made good thus far in school in spite of their handicaps. I am to go for them tomorrow. I hope they will like it here. I pray they will not be too lonely, and that the children and matrons will like them. We are taking them on faith. We believe God will bring things out right. We believe you will help us.

When I see how happy and care-free these children are in the main, I remember my mother's old saying: They are eating their sweet bread. And indeed they are for up to now that is one thing that they have plenty of—good food. They are full of energy, and happy. It does not seem too hot and dry for them.

We are going right ahead with that Memorial Chapel. Three brick-masons and their helpers are steadily at it now every day.

Too, we are making our plans for home-coming which will be here the last of the summer. We have many boys and girls of whom we may be justly proud. I am anxious to see them and their families back here for their annual visit home. I hope by then we shall have had rains and that there will be green hayfields for them to see. They always seem to have such a good time.

Send us a cheery message from your hearts and homes and churches and help to brighten the pathway of your home here—the home that helps the homeless, and loves and trains the unwanted. It is something to fill up to them the cup of kindness and affection and to make their little lives bright.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JULY 16, 1953.

Commodities for the Week.

Miss Edith Jones, Holland Va., Clothing.
Mr. & Mrs. J. A. Boland, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Mrs. E. Carl Brady, Robbins, N. C., Coupons.
Linville Christian Church, Linville. Va., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 8,244.56
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Auburn$ 66.54
Morrisville 9.38
Mt. Gilead 37.66
113.53
Eastern Va. Conference:
Dendron S. S. $ 24.55
Liberty Spring S. S., Special 30.00
Norfolk, First 35.55
Portsmouth, First S. S. . 6.78
Wakefield, Special 8.24
Windsor S. S. 10.00
115.12

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington S. S.$ 67.86
Elk Spur 1.00
Happy Home S. S. 45.11
Mebane 5.50
Tryon, Ersk. Mem. S. S. . 15.00
134.47
Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Union$ 15.62
15.62
Total$ 378.79
Grand Total $ 8,623.35

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $10,846.70
Henry V. Harman, High View, W. Va.$ 2.00
A Friend, Holland, Va. . 25.00
Mrs. Olive Scott, Ocean View Va. 5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Charles E. Apel, Morehead, Kentucky 5.00
The Annie Gay Circle, Franklin Church for a Child's vacation 15.00
The Nat. Bank of Burlington (interest 36.00
A Friend, Raleigh, N. C. 25.00
Pisgah Sunday School, Pisgah, Alabama 10.00
Senior High Class, Ram Seur Church for Bobby Daughtrey 4.60
Miss Louise E. Wells, Tacoma, Washington . 100.00
G. E. Rountree, Sunbury, N. C. 25.00
Mrs. Esther E. Jinkens, St. Paris, Ohio 5.00
Roanoke First Cong.Ch. Roanoke Ala. 7.00
"Mary Sue Brittle" S. S. Class for Woodie Byrd 15.00
H. O. Byrd, Suffolk, Va. for Woodie Byrd 10.00
Special Gifts 5.00
294.60
Grand Total $11,141.30
Total for the week $ 673.39
Total for the year $19,764.65

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)
(Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....
Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund
Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through July 23, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt . .	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardcastle . .	$ 372.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo . . .	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell . .	1,321.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar . .	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Gran-
ger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette
Neese	577.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith . .	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—
Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein . .	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde
Fields	928.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register . .	†166.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood . . .	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register . . .	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown . . .	127.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowder-
milk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder . . .	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr. . . .	82.50
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth	2,450.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisse-
man	3,292.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren . . .	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman .	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries	3,211.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student) . .	75.00

†Paid.

What church will be next to send in its Declaration?

DR. SARGENT PASSES.
(Continued from page 3)

been living with his son and family. Dr. Sargent came from a long line of ministers in Canada. He was the grandson of the Rev. Thomas Garbut, an outstanding minister in our Canada churches. He served the Church Hill district for three years, then for seven years he was with our Toronto Church. During his Toronto pastorate the church there was erected. He then came to the Broad Street Christian Church in Providence, Rhode Island. There too, a new church was built during his pastorate, and it was renamed the Elmwood Church.

This was the union of the Broad Street Christian Church and the Elmwood Temple Congregational. This union was effected in 1912, long before the union of the congregational and Christian denominations in 1931. The church was built in 1915.

Dr. Sargent has served as pastor in New England churches, his latest church was that at Somerset Center, Massachusetts, where he served for ten years.

He has served in many important official positions in the church. He was secretary of the Department of Christian Education in the Christian Churches for a long time. He was a member for one or two terms of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and held other important posts.

He died at Craigville, a former Mecca of the Christians, where he had spent many happy summers. He was a strong preacher, of fine mind, and a splendid counselor.

WARREN H. DENISON.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING
LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195.
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $., beginning, 195.
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

The Water of Life

In these midsummer days of such excessive heat, when man and beast seem exhausted from the lack of life-giving showers, and vegetation is so wilted, it is with a feeling of refreshment that we turn to the fourth chapter of the Gospel according to John and read again the story of the woman at the well.

She had gone to draw water for external and internal refreshment, even as we seek it today. For even though men today seek to slake their thirst with the popular drinks of the day, they ever turn to the pure and sparkling water, which only can truly satisfy.

Jesus the Christ also sought to have his thirst quenched by this water from Jacob's well, and as he talked with the woman he talked of another type of water, a fountain ever flowing, carrying life-giving power to all mankind. The woman was skeptical, for had not that well been there since Jacob's time, and it had never been known to dry up! What water could surpass it in value? Yet Jesus answered her with the beautiful words of the 13th and 14th verses: "Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst: but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

Then the woman's impassioned plea, "Give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw." And our hearts respond to her cry as we thirst for the natural water. But Jesus wanted her to thirst for the living water, the river of salvation that Ezekiel saw in the vision—"water to swim in." Water to wash away the pollution of the earth life, water to satisfy the thirsty soul that is never satisfied with the supply that the world gives.

We believe that the woman thirsted and drank of the fountain of life, and then went to her own household and brought them to Jesus. A woman of the despised Samaritans, a home missionary! The disciples wondered. Later Jesus spoke the words signifying that out of them who believed on him should flow rivers of living waters which would refresh all with whom they might come in contact.

Their sphere is broad, and the influence of the Spirit's power may be felt around the world to all the dry and parched places and touch the dry and parched hearts who are seeking for the water of life. Oh, may we plunge deep! May we drink deep of the life-giving stream, that it may flow through us to others, a channel of blessing to be used of God, with no sin to impede the flow.

*I heard the voice of Jesus say, "Behold, I freely give The living water thirsty one. Stoop down, and drink, and live."
I came to Jesus and I drank
Of that life-giving stream;
My thirst was quenched, my soul revived,
And now I live in him.*

W.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, JULY 30, 1953

NUMBER 30

Do It Heartily!

By RICHARD K. MORTON, Ed. D.

Heartiness and sincerity are valuable qualities—and popular ones. Whatever is really worth doing, is worth doing well. "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord," wrote Paul to the Colossians, "and not unto men; knowing that of the Lord ye shall receive the reward of the inheritance; for ye serve the Lord Christ."

We should live heartily, work heartily, play heartily. This brings power and enjoyment and success. Jesus emphasized fullness of life—and wholeheartedness is vitally involved in this.

Much failure is due simply to half-heartedness and poor effort. It is also due to a lack of confidence in oneself or in the value of the work that is being done. If there is something of value that we are deeply interested in, the chances are that we will take the trouble to find out all we can about it and to perfect our skill in doing it. Whatever is done wholeheartedly is done more happily and more effectively.

There is not much fun in a family circle if chores are done grudgingly or if shared experiences are not entered into willingly and wholeheartedly. It is difficult for us to feign wholeheartedness. People can usually tell whether or not our heart is in what we are saying or doing.

The happiest and most effective people are those who have found certain interests they want to enter into wholeheartedly—and in doing this they find the deeper blessings of life.

Nothing is more needed in this blase and jaded world than a fresh sense of enthusiasm—the discovery of something in which we can be completely immersed.

People today would get much more thrill out of living if they felt that others were interested in them and that they counted and belonged. It is this oppressive, deadening feeling of not mattering which hangs over many a life. They try all sorts of ways to get around this and to find substitutes for it.

In particular, if we can find something we can wholeheartedly share with another—as we do in marriage—we can tremendously enrich life.

That person is indeed poor who cannot think anything, or do anything, or share anything wholeheartedly.

News Flashes

Superintendent Scott visited the Elkton Group in the Virginia Valley Central Conference the week-end of July 19.

Rev. E. J. Clawson, pastor of the Long's Chapel Church, near Burlington, N. C., has been a patient at the Alamance County Hospital. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Chaplain and Mrs. Johnson L. Griffin's address now is 192 F. Pritchard Place, Fort Knox, Kentucky. Mr. and Mrs. Griffin were formerly our leaders at the Bay View Church, Norfolk.

The Community Church of Hendersonville, N. C., is giving consideration to becoming a part of our Congregational Christian fellowship. Dr. Scott is to visit this church in early August.

Mrs. O. D. Poythress, wife of the pastor of the South Norfolk Congregational Christian Church, recently underwent a major operation in the Leigh Memorial Hospital of Norfolk, Virginia. Mrs. Poythress has returned to her home, 1214 Guerriere Street, South Norfolk, and, we are glad to report, seems to be on the road to recovery.

This week our feature article, if we may call it that, "The Minister's Use of Scripture," is addressed to the ministers of our constituency. Dr. Henry E. Robinson, the minister of Burlington, North Carolina, Christian Church, is the author of this enlightening article. It is interesting enough, however, to be readable for laymen as well, and we especially recommend its study to deacons and deaconesses of our churches.

The Scotts Have Returned Home

Dear Southern Convention Friends:

The Stature of Liberty was a most welcome sight as we sailed into the New York harbor on the morning of July 14. We were coming home! It had been a wonderful experience to go abroad, but to get back home safely was even more wonderful.

We look back upon our trip to England, Scotland, Ireland, France, Italy and Switzerland as rewarding and enriching. The International Council at St. Andrews was among the highlights of our Christian experience. To see and know our Congregational Christian brethren from all over the world gave one a sense of universality in our fellowship. Since THE CHRISTIAN SUN has already carried stories on the Council, we will not dwell further on it now.

We landed at Southampton on June 8, and proceeded to London, where we had a week. The city was still decorated, of course, for the Coronation, and we saw much of the color without the "crushing crowds." The Coronation was a real "lift" to the British. We Americans don't know anything about the sorrow, tragedy, and frustration caused by the bombing of London. They had done a good job cleaning up, and the Coronation gave an added impetus. Britain is trying desperately to "come back," but only the future can reveal what is to happen. During our week in London, we saw many of the historical shrines and literally walked in the past. We owe much to the heritage we have received from old England.

We proceeded by bus—twenty Congregational Christians from America—through England into Scotland. We saw many shrines, castles, cathedrals, etc. It was a lovely experience to visit Shakespeare's home and see where he went to school, and to go to the old Country Church where Grey's "Elegy" was inspired and written. In this ancient Church and Church Yard was inspiration. We were impressed by the beauty and marvel of the great cathedrals at York and Peterborough, but they are works of a past generation. We did not see much life in them! Edinburgh was an inspiration, especially the visit to St. Giles Church, where John Knox labored. It was there that the "free" Church of Scotland (Presbyterian) had its birth. We just preceded the Queen on the royal visit. At St. Andrews we had a week of inspiration in a great Congregational world assembly. Incidentally, we nearly froze in Scotland! While America sweltered, we wore winter clothing—plus "woolens"!

Following the International Council, we went to Belfast, Northern Ireland, where we were guests of relatives of Dr. and Mrs. Will B. O'Neill for three days. What a lovely country Ireland is, and the people are so hospitable. We found a vital piety among these people. They love the

(Continued on page 15.)

Former Teacher of Men's Bible Class Speaks at South Norfolk Church

Mr. W. B. Daniel, a former teacher of the Onward Friendship Bible Class of the South Norfolk Congregational Christian Church, and now of Athens, Alabama, was the guest speaker at a Special Service conducted by the Men's Bible Class, last Sunday evening at 8 o'clock.

Mr. E. E. Henley, assistant teacher of the class presided; Mr. Gordon Peebles acted as head usher. A special musical program was presented by a 20-man choir, and a quartet composed of Mr. Milburn Hines, Mr. William Lane, Rev. O. D. Poythress, the pastor of the church, and Amos Lee Poythress, rendered two selections. The evening prayer was led by Mr. R. D. Holland, former superintendent of the Sunday school and president of the class.

Mr. Daniel was introduced by Mr. William Pulmmer, the newly elected president of the class.

Recent Events at Timber Ridge Christian Church

Several recent events of the Timber Ridge Church in High View, W. Va., may be of interest to the rest of the Southern Convention. While many churches honor their public school graduates, not many—at least that we know of—honor their public school teachers. Our worship service of June 7 was designed to do both.

At this service, five graduating high school seniors, Phillip Larrick, Glen Morris and Harry Spaid, from the Capron Bridge, W. Va., High School; Miss Ruby Seldon of the James Wood (Frederick County, Va.) High School, and Donald Seldon of the Handley (Winchester, Va.) High School, were presented with pocket copies of the Revised Standard Version of the New Testament by Mr. Leyburn R. Brill, superintendent of the Sunday school. Ruby Seldon, by the way, was valedictorian of her class at James Wood.

Then Mr. Elray Seldon, our assistant Sunday school superintendent, presented letters of appreciation to the principals and faculties of the five public schools which most of our children attend. These identical letters expressed our appreciation for the work of these friends of our children, repeated our deep concern for the public education system, and asked

(Continued on page 11.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. DANIELEY, Editor, 428 Westwood, Chapel Hill, N. C.

The Editor Writes a Letter

Dear Friends:

I have often been tempted to write a letter to the editors of some magazines and some daily newspapers. Sometimes the material which they print stimulates me to such desires; other times some of the editorials which they carry fairly make me boiling mad. But this is not a letter to the editor—this is a personal letter to the people, how many I have no way of knowing, who have the habit of reading this column. First, blessings on you!

It was just four months ago that we announced in THE SUN that the Board of Publications had given us permission to have this space each week. At that time we announced some of the plans which we had for utilization of this space. We have tried to carry through with those plans. You have had each week for your reading the results of our efforts.

Getting this column together each week has not always been an easy matter. Many times the week has past and time has arrived for copy to be typed and there was nothing to send in. Under those circumstances we may have been guilty of "manufacturing" news; there seems to be little that we can do other than this. Today is one of those days. The deadline has already past; the copy should have been mailed yesterday but we had nothing to mail. I worked at my job for twelve hours yesterday and that leaves very little time for original thinking; ingenuity and imagination don't thrive on a busy schedule. But I am not writing this letter just because I have nothing else; I think that there is a real need for this letter.

Why this letter? Let's face the facts. Very few people have taken the time or trouble to send material to me for publication. This column should not become an editorial column; we have a page for editorials so I must refrain from lecturing to you at length in this space. Nevertheless, the question arises in my mind: Why no news? Why don't our men report? Is it that you think you have no news? If you are doing anything, certainly it is worth sharing. Can it be that you think that you are too busy? My answer to that is that most people do all of the things that they really want to do even in these times of hurry, hurry, hurry. Could it be that the column is not needed? that it is not serving its purpose? that we started without thinking through the matter thoroughly? I invite you to please, for the sake of the Men's Fellowship, think about this. This is your responsibility! Do you care enough to do something about it?

I don't want to sound entirely pessimistic. I believe that there is some hope and some encouragement to be found in the reports which we have received. The fact remains, however, that there has been some disappointment in your response to this work. The decision is clearly up to you. Do you want this column continued? Is it worthwhile? If so, send us a contribution of some news item from your group. It will encourage us, enrich the lives of those who read it, and will serve notice that your group is at work—that it really means business. May we hear from you?

Sincerely yours,
J. EARL DANIELEY,
Editor.

A miser grows rich by seeming poor; an extravagant man grows poor by seeming rich.—Shakespeare.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195...

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

GUEST EDITORIALS BY ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

What Kind of God Do You Worship?

That the world is in "a bad way" is obvious to the most unobserving. It always has been in "a bad way"; and because of that fact, God sent his Only Begotten Son into the world to lead men in making the World's Way good.

Mankind alone is responsible for whatever is wrong in the World's Way. We cannot put the blame upon the devil, or upon fate, or upon God. It is an insult to God to address him as "Thou who doest all things," for God does not do all things. He only does that which is good. God is God because he does only "the Good." It might be easier and more logical to lay blame for the world's wrongs on the devil, for we know "there are so many of him," and he is always in "the disguise of man." Man's meanness, man's greed, man's inhumanity, men unredeemed by the grace of God, are responsible for the world's "bad way"—for its disillusionments, its heart-aches, and its hellishness. Men and women like ourselves are to blame for whatever is wrong in the world. And only men and women like ourselves, led by the help of God, can make right whatever is wrong.

People are lamentably wrong who try to dodge their responsibility in helping to set things right by saying that, "Whatever God wills must be accepted," thus interpreting "the wrong" as being "the will of God," for God could not be God if he ever willed "the wrong." How preposterous to contend that God wills human misunderstandings, human injustices, human failures, human disappointments, wars, accidents, catastrophies, and all the rest.

The Old Testament frequently presents God in that role. But the New Testament never does. And the New Testament is the Christian's Bible. The Old Testament is from the Bible of Judaism, and shows us "the pit from whence we have been digged." Often the Old Testament presents God as being a god of wrath, a god of vengeance, the author of war, the instigator of barbarity, a god characterized by partiality, and as being for less good than are many men who walk the earth today. Read the story of "Elisha and the bears," the dealings of Israel with their enemies, and some of the countless other records in the Old Testament. Then compare the portrayal of God as presented in the New Testament—a God of Love—a living Heavenly Father, whom to believe, appreciate, love and serve with all our heart and mind and strength, sustains us daily as we walk life's way, and assures us of Life Eternal.

Why We Should Love the Church

We should love the Church because it has made God's love and power known to the world, and because it offers to all mankind salvation for every life and for all of life.

We should love the Church because it declares that regardless of man's meanness, his weakness, his selfishness, his duplicity, his unbelief—that deep in the heart of every man and every woman is a constant hunger for something better than they have yet experienced—a longing for that better something which one may have "loved long since and lost awhile."

We should love the Church because it alone holds before mankind the idea of the unity of life, the divine purpose of life, the harmony of life. It calls men and women to seek unity of personality—an integrated life, a oneness with God, a oneness with mankind. We should love the Church because it alone calls men to seek God's way, that their way may be more largely his way.

The Church calls men and women, boys and girls to seek harmony in all of life's relationships—to live in harmony with other people, to live in harmony with God—"in tune with the infinite"—and to live in harmony with life. To commit one's whole life, one's entire interests to the oneness of mankind with God is the challenge of the Church.

The so-called "personal gospel" and the so-called "social gospel" are one and the same. They are the two sides of the same coin. People who talk about a personal religion as distinct from a social religion; and people who talk about a social religion apart from a personal religion, fail to look at the other side of the coin. Religion is both personal and social, or it is nothing.

Christian salvation is not a matter of "letting go and letting God," but of "taking hold and helping God." It is not content to wait until "God's good time" to realize the right. It contends that "any time is God's good time"—and only by man and God working together can God's Kingdom be established upon the earth.

The Minister's Use of Scripture

By REV. HENRY E. ROBINSON, D. D.

Pastor of Burlington, North Carolina, Christian Church

"Thy word is a light unto my feet and a lamp unto my path." Ps. 119: 105.

No matter what conception one may have as to what the Bible is, this old familiar passage is comprehensive and satisfying. God's word is a light shining in the darkness to guide on their way all who look to it for direction. One is much tempted to try to answer the query: What is the Bible? I must leave this intriguing question as summed up by our text and devote my time to the use of scripture.

First let us consider the Bible in worship. In our Protestant sanctuaries the Bible is invariably placed in a position of prominence as a symbol of faith and authority. Our Reformation forefathers, having turned their backs on Rome, rested down on holy writ as a worthy warrant for their doctrines. Even today some of our parishioners of Puritan ancestry squirm a bit or even protest at a cross on an altar, while they rest in a secure frame of mind with an open Bible on the reading desk. Even though this switch in seats of authority gave rise to divided loyalties due to varying interpretations, the open Bible stands for God revealed, and every minister of our strain can count on a healthy respect for scripture on the part of his people. Mind you, this is not to say that his people know scripture or bother to read it as they should, but they respect it.

Every service of public worship rightly gives a place to the reading of scripture. This part of the order of worship needs to be set apart and exalted more than it commonly is. Careful habits should be cultivated in the actual handling of the pulpit Bible. If the written word is all that we claim for it, then let the opening and closing of the book symbolize the beginning and end of worship. By all means let the passages of the morning be read with expression. Stumbling over proper names, or the failure to observe punctuation reveals lack of preparation and indicates that actually the minister hasn't considered the lesson worthy of his previous attention. I firmly believe that our people respect the Bible and will resent keenly a shabby reading from it by a man who has spent several years in training to conduct worship.

As to the choosing of the lesson, two systems are prevalent. One is set up on the supposition that the Bible speaks for itself. The people need to hear its message unadulterated by supplementary remarks. The minister following this system is assisted by the aid of a lectionary which provides suggested readings from both Old and New Testaments for every Sunday of the year. The sermon may or may not be related to the scripture, though I venture to say that it usually is. But if it isn't, that is all right. The scripture has brought a message. The minister has also brought one, and the congregation is doubly blessed. Some lectionaries follow the Christian Year, thus capitalizing on the prominent Christian festivals and saints' days. The system of the lectionary has the advantage of including a full scope of Christian doctrine, avoiding the danger of overplaying the minister's pet leanings. The parson who does not use the lectionary ought certainly to keep a chart of his scripture selections to guard himself against the hazard of reading about 80 per cent of the time from a very narrow scope of scripture. Some men I know would be in Daniel and the Revelation most of the time. Others would tire their people with certain theological passages recurrent in the letters of Paul. Others would stay within Mattheu 5, 6 and 7, when they might better widen their selections; and still others would do well to give the Psalms a rest, good as they are.

The other system is that used by many preachers who wish to link the scriptures and the sermon in a supporting unit, one upholding the other. Not only the scripture but the hymns and prayers are likewise chosen to lend emphasis to the theme of the morning which finds its climax in the sermon. I think that I have already pointed out the dangers of this system in recounting the advantages of the lectionary. Let me say a few words in support. The text of the sermon may often require the context from which it is taken. Why not let this context be the scripture of the morning? The scripture then becomes the foundation for the sermon. If the sermon topic as printed has an obvious connection with the scripture, might not the people take a keener interest in its reading than if the lesson and the sermon are separate entities in the order of worship? Personally, I can become more excited about a passage upon whose theme I am to preach. Therefore, I believe I can read it with more earnestness and appreciation, qualities which may be caught by the hearers.

I have no brief for either of these systems. If I were to offer advice it would probably be that which ever system you are wedded to, drop it for six months and use the other. You will either find some hidden values which you had previously passed by, or you will be convinced for all time that you were right in the first place.

The other part of the service which involves scripture is the text of the sermon. Personally, I preach from a text invariably. Again, I repeat to your weariness, that people respect the scriptures. You may choose a passage with which few of your hearers will agree (such as turn the other cheek), but because it is scripture, they will give you a hearing. The authority of scripture is a tremendous asset to the preacher. We need to capitalize upon it. I know the arguments on the other side. Someone will say, "I didn't get this topic out of the Bible, I got it out of a life experience. Why should I labor trying to find a proof text which on the face of it was dragged in and hitshed on?" Someone else will pick up a book of sermons such as Fosdick's "Living Under Tension" and point out that no texts are used. Someone else will say, "I do not want to be limited by a text. I want to be free to incorporate sections in a sermon that are not within the scope of the text." Let me say, in answer to these objections to a text, that the so-called "life topics" may soon degenerate into secular essays. Is the advantage gained in choosing such a topic able to offset the disadvantage of forfeiting the Bible as a source of authority? Maybe Fosdick doesn't use texts. I am not convinced that his preaching is better for it. If he preaches without the aid of texts, ministers of his calibre are about the only ones that can do it. If a text limits you, you probably need to be limited. Your congregation will thank you for sticking to something. Finally, no matter how poor the sermon, the people can take

(Continued on page 8.)

"The Strange Strength of the Weak"

A Sermon

By REV. CHARLES CECIL THOMAS,
Pastor of First Christian Church,
Portsmouth, Va.

TEXT: "... and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty . . . that no flesh should glory in his presence."—I Corinthians 1:27-29.

The recent riots occurring behind the Iron Curtain have touched off a flame of hope in the weary hearts of millions throughout the world. The workers in East Germany and Poland, pressed beyond their capacity to endure by their power-mad masters, have thrown caution to the wind and attacked these oppressors with "stones and slogans." In spite of the ostensible weakness of their ability to resist, their action has immeasurably shocked the Russians. Because of the strange power of their movement, these unarmed men have exploded the theoretical myth of invincibility which the Communists have sought to exploit.

On the basis of the success of these two skirmishes, the mayor of West Berlin predicted that a "grass-roots" rebellion throughout the slave countries would throw off the iron collar of slavery imposed upon them by the Reds.

Such a statement seems incredible when we see Russia sending tanks to the Polish border and hear of wholesale executions in Germany. Yet we must not, in our fear of and our trust in armed force, forget that history speaks indisputably of the truth of great armies which have forged proud empires in a rough-shod terrorism, only to crumble before the strange, indomitable strength of the spirit of freedom-thirsty men. Say what you will, trust however thoroughly you may in brute force, there is always present the irrefutable evidence of that strange strength of the weak to resist until proud armies have been destroyed and arrogant tyrants have smothered in the dust of their own ruins.

Recall the high points of the struggle for liberty in human history and you will find your mind jumping from peak to peak of triumph of the weak over the apparently strong and proud. The history of the struggles of Christian peoples from the cross to the present day, is a glorious and beautiful story of the strange strength of the weak in triumph over oppression, misunderstanding and deliberate exploitation.

Now that we might see this raw strength manifested in our modern world, we are a bit puzzled, for we in America have followed the lure of materialism until we have been lulled into a false security by the stockpiling of fearful weapons and the assembling of great armies, superior navies and faster air forces. Secure in our trust in the authority of these instruments of war, we forget, or fail to learn some of the simple lessons that life has to teach, and we find ourselves, like the Roman Emperor in "Quo Vadis," puzzled and uneasy to the point of hysteria, by the strange strength of the weak. What is its source? What great power is tapped to lift an ordinary man out of an humble anonymity and make him an expendable firebrand whose white-hot spirit infects a whole generation for some just and righteous cause? From whence cometh this strange strength of the weak?

I think that St. Paul has written the answer to this disturbing question in his throbbing letter to the Corinthians. Writing under the sting of the knowledge that his authority as an apostle had been challenged and of contentions arising in his cherished church at Corinth, he hastens to assure them of his authenticity in Christ and to remind them that the wisdom of this world can be foolishness in the eyes of God. Then in a burst of eloquence, so characteristic of this remarkable man of God, he answers the question before us today. As if seeing the momentous struggle ahead for the followers of Christ, he said, "... and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty."

So, in words reminiscent of much from the Hebrew prophets and of the words of Jesus, the great Apostle sums up one of the most startling facts of God's nature and of his handiwork in human history. Yes, in seeking the source of the strange strength of the weak to confound the arrogant and mighty, we have come face to face with one of the rock-bed facts of life itself. God is concerned for justice and righteousness, and, if the need arises, can inspire, and strengthen, and fire the weak with an invincible power. Oftimes the mills seem to grind slowly; but, the irrefutable fact remains, righteousness and justice ultimately prevail, and the tyrant is brought low. Trust, if you will, in armed, brute force; but remember that might, exploited for oppression and slavery, never makes right. Remember, too, that God with the weak who hunger for righteousness, constitutes a majority against which it is folly to fight! "... and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty!"

This truth, almost too simple to be learned, is demonstrable as well as prophetic. God is the unfailing source of the strange strength of the weak which spoils the pride and the might of the worldly wise. He uses the weak, the humble, the despised for his purposes; for many men, arrogant and proud in their trust in material strength, have taken themselves completely out of the influence of God. St. Paul's own life is illustrative of the truth he wrote. Physically weak, not handsome, yet possessed with staggering power, his influence upon the world is immeasurable!

Again, when God sought to purify man's thought of himself, he chose not the governor's palace nor the high priest's home, nor the rich man's house nor the scholar's circle through which to speak. Rather, the Christ came to the home of humble parents in a small village. Then, when Jesus was taken away, the task of the redemption of the world was left to a few fishermen, a tax collector, a few housewives and a few tradesmen. Yet from this humble beginning Christianity has spread to the ends of the earth!

The miracle of the strange strength of the weak changing the course of history occurs often in man's experience. The Christian Church held the world together when the proud Roman Empire crumbled. The weak, defenceless Hollanders brought the proud armies of Spain, after thirty years of fighting, to settle for a truce. It is said that, when in that war, the invading Spanish soldiers lay siege

(Continued on page 13.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The Eastern Virginia Sunday School Convention

When it is convenient, I always attend the annual meetings of our Sunday School Conventions. They have interesting programs and a lot of good church people present. When given the opportunity, I always speak briefly concerning the work on the campus and the opportunities of our young people at Elon College, our own college.

The eighty-fourth annual session of the Eastern Virginia Christian Sunday School Convention was a very interesting one. Mr. J. Letcher Eley of Franklin, Virginia, is the president. He presided well and spoke interestingly. Mills Godwin and Jesse H. Dollar both made excellent addresses. There seemed to be no special theme for this session of the convention, but rather the program centered around superintendents and instruction in the various departments.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill spoke regarding the use of materials. Mrs. E. G. Middleton of Christian Temple, Norfolk, spoke of the opportunities and responsibilities of the adult teacher in the Sunday school. Mrs. J. Everette Neese of the Second Church, Norfolk, dealt with problems of young people in presenting the Sunday school lessons on Sunday morning. Miss Ruth Dunn of our Rosemont Church, Norfolk, emphasized the work for children in our Sunday schools. These presentations were interesting and helpful.

I should say that the entire spirit of the convention was excellent, and the fellowship was good; but if I should be permitted to give further appraisal of this one-day session of our church and Sunday school organization, it would be the lack of a challenge for the future. What has been done and that which is being done is very satisfactory, but if we are to accomplish what this age demands, we must lay plans and project obligations that will challenge the best that is within us. The horse on the race track runs faster because the one next to him is trying to beat him to the goal. Our Sunday schools will move faster, enroll more people, and accomplish more good for the church and community with assumed responsibilities that tax their capacities to the limit. We shall certainly not go faster or further than we plan.

Continued success and growth to our Sunday schools in the Eastern Virginia Conference and throughout our church!

* * * * *

Prof. Danieley Is Appointed Acting Dean at Elon

Prof. J. Earl Danieley, a member of the Elon College faculty since 1946, will serve as acting deane of the college during the coming 1953-54 term.

PROFESSOR DANIELEY

Prof. Danieley succeeds Dr. D. J. Bowden, who resigned the deanship recently to accept a post as head of the School of Religion at the University of Indiana, and will assume his new duties September 1.

After graduating from Elon with the A. B. degree in 1946, Prof. Danieley joined the Elon faculty that fall as an instructor in chemistry, and he gained full faculty status in 1949, after being awarded the Master's degree in chemistry at the University of North Carolina.

He held the Ledoux Fellowship in Chemistry at the University of North Carolina during the 1951-52 college year, and he is now a candidate for the Ph. D. degree from that institution, where he has been a visiting professor during the current summer term.

Already well known in scientific circles in North Carolina Prof. Danieley has had articles published in the Journal of Chemical Education, the North Carolina Education magazine, and in the Mathematics Teacher.

He is a member of Phi Delta Kappa, national honorary education fraternity; of Sigma Xi, honorary scientific society; of the North Carolina Academy of Science, the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society, the American Chemical Society and of the National Association of Parliamentarians.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Danieley of Burlington, Route 4, and is married to the former Miss Verona Daniels of Beaufort, North Carolina.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

It was my privilege to attend the recent annual sessions of the Sunday School Conventions of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference and the Eastern Virginia Conference. The programs were very interesting and helpful to all who were present. One interesting thing about the reports was that in both conferences the Sunday schools contributed more money for Convention purposes and Christian education than in any previous year. If this could be taken as a yardstick, other causes and institutions of the church might be encouraged.

So far as Elon College is concerned, our offerings to date are slightly under the offerings of a year ago. Even so, receipts for the college during the summer months this year have exceeded the offerings during the summer of previous years. If our Sunday schools and churches could realize what help these weekly offerings are, they would certainly be generous and punctual in giving this type of support to their college.

Elon College is grateful for all assistance.

Previously Reported	$ 5,637.02
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Bethlehem	$ 6.00
Liberty (Vance)	66.00
Fayetteville	7.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Elm Avenue	$ 28.00
Suffolk S. S.	75.99
Union (So.)	77.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Albemarle	$ 15.00
Flint Hill (R)	15.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Hines Chapel S. S.	$ 7.48
	297.47
Total to date	$ 5,934.49

Missions at Home and Abroad

Morning Starlets for Micronesia

Dear Friends:

So many requests for information about the future of the Morning Stars has come to the American Board that it seems wise to prepare an answer for the many who are interested, and who have contributed so generously to Morning Star IV, which sank last November. You have all seen accounts of the heavy storm which was too much for our small schooner, and grieved with us over its loss.

It seemed providential that I was in Micronesia at just that time, having been sent by the American Board to take part in the One Hundredth Anniversary Celebration of the beginning of Christian work in those islands. When word reached us of the sinking we could hardly believe it, for only three days before we had waved gayly to it as it started on its way to the Marshalls.

The annual meeting of the Micronesia Mission was convening the very day we heard about the Star. Naturally one of the main items of discussion was how to plan for transportation in the islands, and whether the Board should be asked to replace the Star. That the opinions varied was not surprising, for some of our missionaries are in locations where there is commercial transportation available, while others are in such isolated places that they are sometimes marooned for many weeks, even for months at a time. The most extreme case of this is a minister who was assigned, in June, 1951, to a post in the Northern Marshalls. When I met him in November, 1952, he was still trying to get to his church!

In spite of this, due largely to the fact that we have not been able to get a captain who will continue to serve in that area, the missionaries came to the conclusion that if each of our four island groups could have a motor boat sufficiently large to carry people and materials throughout their own area, they would try out that scheme for a year, and then once more see whether the Star should be replaced. These motor boats, about thirty to thirty-five feet long, are to be called Starlets, thus carrying on the long historic name and tradition in Micronesia.

It is still too soon to know whether this plan will be adequate or not. In the meantime a Starlet is already serving in Truk, another in Ponape, with a small sailboat, equipped with an outboard motor, carrying supplies, missionaries, ministers and school children around in the Marshalls. For all local purposes these seem to fill the immediate need. The Marshalls should have a real Starlet in the near future. Many gifts are coming in for these smaller boats, and we hope it will not be long before another can be bought.

Travel on a Starlet can be comfortable; it can be exciting if the waves are high and there is a strong breeze. A good sailor need feel no anxiety in traveling that way. Winds and waves in Micronesia are tricky, as I found out for myself. In that warm climate, however, who cares if one is soaked to the skin by salt water from below and rain coming down in torrents from the sky? That only adds to the thrill. Climate is hard on any kind of machinery in the tropics; repairs must be made constantly, and funds for upkeep are needed all the time. For these, and for at least one new Starlet costing about one thousand dollars the help of friends is asked. We are grateful for the children in our church schools who still think of the Star as their project and are glad to contribute to the smaller and younger relatives of Morning Star IV, in the form of Starlets.

ALICE E. CARY.

Boston, July 7, 1953.

THE MINISTER'S USE OF SCRIPTURE.

(Continued from page 5.)

home the text. At least that will have a value.

The one other place at which scripture is used in the service is the responsive reading. Some ministers are omitting this ancient part and proclaiming that the people find great relief in doing away with this trite and meaningless sing-song. I would suggest to these ministers that they could leave out half the service to the delight of some people. I am also interested to see if what they insert in place of the responsive reading is going to wear any better. I will admit that the selections in some hymnals are so poor that the pastor gives up in despair. But if the choice of scripture is good, and properly divided for responsive reading, and the congregation is reasonably well trained to read together, I feel that the responsive reading affords another contact of the people with scripture in a time when too few people read their Bibles.

It is obvious that if the minister is going to deliver a sermon each week based upon a scripture passage, he himself must live close to the Bible. Frequent readings, and better still, Bible studies, should keep the Bible's rich materials foremost in his mind. Sermon series on the Commandments, the prophets, the Lord's Prayer, the Sermon on the Mount, etc., require extensive Bible study. A study of the pulpit masters reveals how much dependence they placed in illustrative material taken from the Bible. If we are to avoid using the same quotations and stories too frequently, regular reading is necessary. I feel that expository sermons, frequent quotations, and Biblical sermon series are not optional, but are expected by our people. As we look back on seminary days, recalling how many hours we spent searching the scriptures—doing the ground work of our OT and NT courses, we should do no less now, pressing though the demands on our time may be.

One of the finest current aids to Bible study I know is Fosdick's "Understanding the Bible." His little book, "The Modern Use of the Bible," is very fine to place in the hands of people who are having growing pains with the scriptures. Quite an old, but exceedingly useful book for the minister is Nave's "Topical Bible." One chapter of Douglas Stere's little book on "Prayer and Worship" is devoted to devotional reading. It is worth reviewing as it digests in brief form the great classical devotional literature with which we should be acquainted. I dare say its suggestions would make an excellent winter's reading course for the most of us.

Then there are times when the minister needs to read his Bible without thought of texts or illustrations. Let the Bible bring its own message to the soul of the reader. It is a loss when a man slips into a mechanical or professional attitude toward this great body of holy writing. The ig-

(Continued on page 13.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

News Items Wanted!

I know that many of our societies have not sent in a news item concerning their group during this conference year—and that the year is rapidly drawing to a close. Why not send in something right away, instead of waiting until September 15, and then rushing to get an item in a little late.

Some of our societies have no August meetings, so that month the secretary or president or reporter could use some time in writing up their activities for THE SUN. Items will reach me more promptly if sent to 1055 Stamper Road, Fayetteville, N. C., for the next month.

* * * * *

Plan September Meeting Now

All societies should remember that reports to their district superintendents and to their conference treasurers are to be mailed so as to reach those people not later than September 15. You may need to plan ahead in order to do this.

If you send a certain amount to the conference treasurer each quarter, why not go ahead and mail that in now. That will relieve some of the rush on her at the last minute.

If your meeting will ordinarily come after the second Sunday, that means it will be too late for the reports to be mailed in this time—for the second Sunday is the 14th. You may need to move the meeting date up to the week before. And then you will want to remember that in your community Labor Day (September 7) may be a holiday, which you will want to avoid for your society meeting—and before you know it, you may have to move the meeting up to the week of September 1. This will need planning ahead to arrange and publicize.

It is fine if at the September meeting, when your officers for the new year are probably installed, they can have ready to present to you a year book for the coming year's activities. In every society this is not possible, as officers are elected and new circles are drawn at the September meeting, etc., and plans have to be made after this date. However, if at all possible, make the necessary adjustments and do your planning ahead. This means a meeting of the new officers in August.

* * * * *

Take Time to Take Stock

Every business organization "takes stock" at some time or another, in one way or another, to determine just what its assets are, what are the liabilities, and just how it "stands."

In like manner, our women's societies need to "take stock" every now and then. This time of the year, when we are closing our books and beginning to plan for our next year's work, is an excellent time for that "stock taking."

Here are some of the questions that we might ask ourselves:

1. Does my society give as much as it possibly can for missions?
2. Have we increased our giving during the last five years to missions in keeping with the increase in prices? (And we must remember that inflation in many countries is much higher than here.)
3. Have we had a missionary visit our society recently?
4. Have we invited our district superintendent to visit our society?
5. Have we offered to help our district superintendent by being willing to visit some new society or some as yet unorganized group to put on a program or tell them about our women's work?
6. Have our leaders attended the state conference and district rally and the School of Missions?
7. Do we have variety in our programs, or are they always done in the same old way by the same people?
8. Is our minister invited to come to our society and present the program for one meeting during the year?
9. Have we learned about any of our missionaries and mission stations in the last year?
10. Do we really have missionary study provided for our children and young people, or do we just blindly check that item on the report blank?

11. Does our cradle roll help our young parents, or is it only a way of getting some more money?
12. Is our Bible study presented in an interesting way? (See special suggestions for this in next year's packet.)
13. Does every member have an opportunity at some time during the year to participate in a program? (This requires skillful planning, but it can be done!)
14. Do we use THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Advance, Social Action, The Church Woman in our society, so our women will see their value?
15. Do we see that every woman in our church gets an urgent invitation to join our women's group—or is ours a "closed corporation"?

These, and many other questions you will think of, may stimulate the thinking of your group and help in making next year's work the "best ever." I hope so.

* * * * *

Impressive Service at Liberty Spring

One of the most impressive services held by our Woman's Auxiliary of the Liberty Spring Congregational Christian Church was the World Day of Prayer service on February 20, when our neighborhood churches: Whaleyville Methodist, Great Fork Baptist, Cypress Chapel Christian and Holy Neck Christian, joined us in a sincere and very meaningful service of prayer and praise.

We have seen our auxiliary advance in membership and service since our four circles were organized last fall. There is a keener sense of fellowship and a greater joy in service. Our quarterly meetings enable us to meet all requirements in a very satisfactory and enjoyable way. Our plans for the coming year make us look forward to an even greater year of service in His name.

MRS. J. E. HARRELL, JR.,

Reporter.

* * * * *

Quarterly Report of the Treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Convention

The following is the Report of the Treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Convention of Congregational Christ-

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

Your Editor Rings a Bell!

Before we came to Elon to spend our summer, Mrs. James Booth had asked me if I would say a few words at Elon's Community Church commencement, which I did. It so happened that Dr. John G. Truitt of the orphanage was presiding that day, and he heard me tell the boys and girls a story about a church bell.

Now, one of my lifelong ambitions has been to ring a bell, to pull the rope and hear it peal, but I have missed several good chances to ring bells. When I finished talking that Sunday, Dr. Truitt told me that I was to come to the orphanage one night and ring the railroad bell they use to call the boys and girls to meals. And last Thursday night I did!

It was a very special night, for birthdays in past weeks were being celebrated. There were two beautifully decorated cakes at each end of the main table. The boys and girls were excited and happy (all except one little boy who was trying to get acquainted with new people and ideas at once), and there was food and milk aplenty.

After the candles were lighted, we sang happy birthday, and enjoyed cake and cream. Dr. Truitt talked a bit and told a story, but best of all—I rang the dinner bell that night!

We came back to the campus thinking of the children for whom we care and who grow up under the guidance of our church.

We enjoy college life. The girls with whom we live and work are fine and mean much to us. Sunday morning we heard Dr. W. W. Sloan, professor of religion, preach. We celebrated the Fourth of July, with the Sloans, eating watermelon and other good things, on top of their roof. It is a flat one and much like the ones used when Jesus was a boy.

On Sunday morning we had an unusually fine worship experience, when we joined the Primary Department under the leadership of Mrs. H. H. Cunningham. In this service, the children reviewed their previous work and it was fine to hear them sing, talk, read and pray. It has been pleasant to visit in the home of Dr. and Mrs. Cunningham and to play with their little daughters: Ann and Margaret.

Sunday evening we heard Dr. W. T. Scott preach in Burlington at union services, when he was reporting on his European trip. We were with the Truitts and went home with them for a little snack. Andrea Lee summed up the day when she said: "There is something good in each one of our days!"

* * * * *

"A Day in the Park"

By LAURA GRAY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Little Don, four-and-a-half, his hands in the pockets of his dark-blue jacket, strutted impatiently about the kitchen. "Go, watch for Grandma's car," said Mummy.

"We're going to the park in the bus, not the car!" Don answered, but Mummy was so busy bathing his twin sister she did not seem to hear. Then, a little woman with a pink and smiling face stepped in.

It was Grandma! And soon she and Don were walking down the country road. Sunshine was everywhere. Golden dandelions nodded in the breeze, while the feathery ones softly brushed the boy's bare legs. He took little skipping steps; it was so exciting going for a trip like this—in a bus. He had never been in one before. They came to the corner and stood by the white post with black letters. A huge yellow car with many windows rumbled up, stopped with a kind of sneeze and leaned over, inviting them to enter.

Don climbed up the big steps, dropped the ticket Grandma had given him into the receiver and watched it slide to the bottom of the glass box. Then they were on their way, swaying and rocking along the road. In a few minutes, they stopped to let some people off. And, what do you think? A door in the middle of the bus opened and shut all by itself. Why, how could it do that? he wondered. It was magic. Soon Grandma and he got off. Then he saw a big, fat ferryboat that sat puffing smoke from its funnel; its tongue was out for people and cars to use as a bridge. Grandma and he walked on this bridge and entered the ferry. A man with a funny hat waved his arms to direct the traffic. The boat tooted, took in its tongue, and they glided out on the shining water. White gulls shrieked overhead. One perched on the flagpole. Don laughed when it nearly toppled off. He and Grandma walked all over the huge boat. They looked down into the engine room and smelled the hot oily odor that came up. A man with a longnosed can went about squirting oil into the works.

Soon they had crossed the inlet. The boat sidled into a floating warf, stuck out its tongue—why, it must have two tongues!—and passengers went ashore. Now they were in a big city with its bustle and noise. Don and Grandma climbed into another bus which was so full of people there was no room to sit down or see out. Grandma held Don's hand lest they lose each other. The boy stood patiently dodging the hard edge of a woman's shopping bag which kept jabbing into his ear. The bus stopped to let some passengers off and to take others on, every little while. At last Don and Grandma pushed their way out and found themselves in a park with great shade trees and miles and miles of green, green grass. Boys and girls ran about and played together. Some were splashing in a pool. Don used one of the swings and then had some fun on a seesaw with another boy. After this, Grandma and he walked on, and there were more swings and some slides. It was wonderful!

Now, Don and Grandma scrambled down a slope right to the sea. This was a trifle disappointing, for there was no sand, only stones. Grandma sat on a log and took out her knitting. Don sat beside her for a while. It was lovely there—the water so blue and pretty, little white fishing boats chugging about.

When Don turned over a stone something flat and round, with a lot of legs, ran out. A crab, Grandma said it was, and she showed him how to pick it up by the shell. There were more crabs, big and small, under other rocks. When a spurt of water hit his bare leg Grandma showed how to dig up the clam that had caused this. Don dug up more clams.

Then Grandma called him to eat a lunch of fruit and sandwiches. It was fun sitting there on the log with the sea and the sky and Grandma smiling and all so happy.

(Continued on page 14.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Memories That Linger

Ninety-three campers, twenty-three teachers and helpers, three children, three hailstorms, nine miles to Signal Knob and back, two drenchings in the Shenandoah Park, two nights without electric lights, three moonlight swims, three cokes and three candy bars a day, cabins four and seven won neatness contests, Seniors won two ball games over Junior-Highs, five morning watches, five chapel services, six vesper hikes, upteen songs by Paul Rohart and his squeeze-box; John Rohart and Bob Enswiler home from Navy, but back in the water as life guards; Winnie and Jane and their Junior vesper service; Pattie Lee and how much money do you want to deposit; Hank Harman and no you cannot have a moonlight swim tonight; Peene Harman and can't read, where it says silver you don't put dishes; Fran Hall and I think we ought to be a little more quiet in here, boys; Mr. Rohart and the punch cards; Mr. Galt and social problems, plus Junior boy problems; Mr. Bozarth and what do we believe—anything? Grace Raju, her sari and her smile; Mr. Newton, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Bryant, and assorted helpers, and if we didn't eat so much, we wouldn't have so many dishes to wash; Mrs. Hall and does anyone remember where I left that; Audrey Zircle and you girls will have to stay in bed a little longer—or as the Juniors in their final report put it so well:

"Hiking: study nature, gather flowers, sing songs, found moss, found a turtle, pick plants, read poems, picnic. Swimming: took swimming lessons, played with ball, learned to dive, learned to float, didn't like splashing, learned about swimming under water, had lots of fun, learned to take showers and foot bath, had to have buddies, life guard was afraid of water, water was sometimes cold, learned to obey, got out of pool before cold. Eating: good things, couldn't eat too much or else stomach ache, need food for energy, good cooking, didn't like washing dishes. Quiet Time: good time to be alone, study and think about God. Chapel: learned to take part, liked singing, poems, learned to pray. Classes: studied nature, learned about God, learned poems, songs, prayers, finding and writing things out of the Bible, learned about India from Grace. Counselors: nice, they taught us, willing to help, gave fair chance, make sure campers are O. K., kissed girls and helped them to bed . . ." (Last item refers to Mothers Short and Whitlock.)

What are we talking about? Why the Virginia Valley Conference Summer Camp, of course.

HANK HARMON.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

"What has your boy learned at school so far this term?"

"He has learned that he'll have to be vaccinated, that his eyes aren't really mates, that his teeth need repairing, and that his method of breathing is entirely obsolete."

* * *

I work, I putter,
I push and shove,
Hunting little molehills
To make mountains of!

* * *

The new office boy was not much good. The boss, becoming thoroughly disgusted, said to him, "I never saw such a boy as you are! The boy that was here before you was worth twice as much as you are!"

The new office boy looked at the boss and enquired: "Did he get it?"

* * *

The jokes above were sent me by Mrs. W. A. Newman of Henderson, North Carolina. I have met so many nice people in this job. I certainly do appreciate this, but I know there are lots of other nice people, and I would certainly like to hear from them too.

* * * * *

Let Us Pray

That my church may grow
As He would have it,
And for the strength
To help it do it!

RECENT EVENTS AT TIMBER RIDGE.

(Continued from page 2.)

forgiveness for occasional excessive criticism growing out of that concern. On hand to receive these letters were: Mr. Robert Muse, member of the Frederick County, Va., school board; Mr. Harold Henderson, principal of the Capon Bridge, W. Va., High School; Mr. Seymour Hahn, principal of the Capon Elementary School, Lehew, W. Va.; Mr. Leyburn Brill of the Capon Bridge Elementary School, and Mrs. John Watt of the Gore, Va., Elementary School. The last two are also active members of our church.

The next regular worship service, on June 21, was also the time of our annual Memorial Sunday Service. Between 350 and 400 persons from at least six states and the District of Columbia were present for this morning and afternoon affair. We were particularly glad to have the Rev. W. J. Andes, son of our beloved former minister, the Rev. A. W. Andes, to give the afternoon address. In speaking of "Destination, Death" he clearly reminded us that the distinctive features of men's lives is not their end—the same end for all—but the means by which they live out those lives.

The morning message was brought by our own pastor, the Rev. H. V. Harmon. Assisting in the services were the Rev. Walton Brill, the Rev. Daniel Spaid (Brethren) of Eglon, W. Va., the Rev. Morris Cather (Baptist) of Gore, Va., and the Rev. S. J. Goode (Disciples) of Winchester, Va. Special music was furnished by our own choir in the morning and by various visitors in the afternoon.

During the two weeks following Memorial Sunday, our church joined with the Shiloh Methodist Church in having a Vacation Bible School. Excellent cooperation was had in enlisting pupils, in furnishing teachers and in transporting of pupils. Mrs. Seymour Hahn and Mrs. Paula Nesmith (Shiloh) taught the kindergarten; Mrs. John Watt and Miss Ruby Seldon taught the Primary Class, and Mr. Harman the Juniors. In addition there were about six assistant teachers and over a dozen parents helping with transportation and refreshments. The Judson Press literature recommended by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill was used and found to be excellent. A closing program reviewing the work of the course was held at the Timber Ridge Church on Friday, July 3. Altogether, some 62 pupils were enrolled, about 80 per cent of those available in the area.

REPORTER.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"The Christian War"—Temperance Lesson

LESSON VI—AUGUST 9, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "It is not right to eat meat or drink wine or do anything that makes your brother stumble."—Romans 14: 21 (RSV).

LESSON: Ephesians 6: 10-20; Romans 14: 19-21.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Proverbs 4: 10-19.

Parade Ground or Battlefield?

Some Christians think of the Christian life as a parade ground. We "put our armor on" for a parade and nothing else. We seldom, if ever, come to grips with evil. We fight, at best, a defensive campaign. We think of the Christian life in terms of comfort and ease and protection and safety. We are all wrong.

The Christian life is a warfare. It involves constant and critical conflict. The Christian has to fight evil both from within and without. There is no truce or armistice. We have to fight the "good fight of faith," if we are to lay hold of eternal life. This does not mean, of course, that a man earns salvation. It does mean that eternal life is equated with a certain kind of character, and character is won, not given. The Scriptures abound with references to the martial aspect of the Christian life. And they are full of the stories of men and women who were good soldiers of Jesus Christ, enduring hardness for his sake and fighting battles in his name.

The Enemy.

The enemy of the Christian is the devil. Whether one thinks of the devil as a personal spirit, or simply as the spirit of evil, every sensible man knows that the devil is the enemy of all that is good in the world. And he is no puny enemy. He is powerful, shrewd, cruel, merciless, crafty, mean, unscrupulous and persistent. He will do anything from lying to committing mass murder to get what he wants. And there is no man strong enough and shrewd enough in his own wisdom and strength to contend successfully with the devil. But there are ways in which men can prepare themselves for fighting this arch-enemy of men, and certain resources which they can utilize in waging warfare against him.

Paul urges men to put on the whole armor of God, that they might be able to stand against the "wiles of the devil." And he reminds his hearers that they do not fight against mere flesh and blood, but against principalities, and the world rulers of darkness, against spiritual wickedness in high places. "The wiles of the devil"—there's the danger. He dresses the evil up in the garb of the good; he makes the evil to seem harmless; he makes it to appear most desirable; he misrepresents things; he uses indirect instead of direct attacks; he employs fifth columnists; he makes one think that while others were dumb to be caught by his wiles that he will never become tricked thereby; he promises good things; he is, indeed, the arch-deceiver, the slickest, the oiliest spirit with whom man has to contend.

Fighting Equipment.

Using language familiar to everybody in that day, Paul gives us a picture of a soldier who has put on the whole armor of God and who is ready to go out to fight the devil. It is to be noted that they are spiritual weapons—for mere force or superior power cannot gain a victory. Loins girded with truth—the girdle which holds all the other pieces of equipment in place, truth, sincerity, honesty. The breastplate of righteousness—one's heart must be kept with all diligence for "out of it are the issues of life," and when evil gets within it one is headed for defeat. Feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace—one needs good footing if he is to wield the sword of the spirit effectively, and even as the Roman soldier needed good sandals on his feet, so must the Christian be shod with the gospel of peace. The shield of faith—a large piece of equipment with which the soldier was able to ward off blows and fiery arrows and other instruments of destruction, thus must one's heart be strengthened and protected by simple faith in God and in righteousness. The helmet of salvation—the helmet was the heavy piece of armor which was worn on the head as protection for the brain and the organs of sight and hearing. And "the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God"—the best defense is offense. Christians are not to sit in camp, or to parade on the parade ground; they are to take the field and the initiative. They are not to be overcome by evil but they are to overcome evil with good. And the Word of God, which is the sword of the Spirit, is quick and powerful. That was what Jesus used when he vanquished the devil during his temptation. We ought to hide God's Word in our hearts that we might not sin against him.

Morale.

The decisive factor in warfare is not material resources but morale. Military men know that, and they do everything they can to keep up the morale of the men. Thus it is also in the Christian warfare. Morale is important. Therefore Paul adds that soldiers of Christ are to watch and to pray with all perseverance. It is "not by might nor by power," but by God's spirit that the victory is won.

One Sector of the War.

There are many sectors in this eternal warfare between the Christian and the devil. One could make a long list of them. But today's lesson is specifically a Temperance Lesson—the one Temperance Lesson for the quarter, and these Notes are concerned with this one issue this time.

Now let's be honest about this matter of the liquor traffic. All this baloney about being able to take a drink or leave it alone, this defense of serving cocktails in the home and on a social occasion, this argument that people are going to drink anyway, and the state might as well get taxes from the industry, and other such statements and arguments are beside the point for Christians and members of the church. Let's be frank and honest about the matter. Can anyone name a single thing which the liquor traffic and the Church of Jesus Christ have in common? Is there conceivably any place in the Kingdom of God for the liquor traffic? Is there any sanction in the Bible for drinking liquor? In the great warfare between good and evil in the world today, on which side does the liquor traffic stand? Can anyone imagine Jesus Christ giving his blessing to the liquor traffic, or sanctioning anything it does? The liquor traffic stands condemned on all these, and on many other counts. This is a hard, stubborn fact, even though an unpopular fact.

Well in the light of these facts, what about a Christian or a member of the church buying liquor and drinking liquor? The great issue is Christ and the Church and the liquor traffic. Who gets your vote? Come now, who gets your vote? Argue as you will, excuse yourself as you may, it comes down to just this. Every time a man or woman buys liquor or supports in any way the liquor traffic, he casts his vote against Christ!

The writer of these Notes does not believe that a Christian ought to buy liquor, or to support in any way the liquor traffic. This does not mean that the man who buys or drinks liquor may not be a Christian. That would be an unfair statement and an untrue statement. But it does mean that a Christian ought not to have any part in the liquor traffic in any way. This is not an easy thing to write, and of course it is not a popular thing to say to many people today. But it needs to be said again and again. We have become too much at home with the modern liquor traffic. There is all too much drinking in American life today, and church members are doing more than their share of it.

The consumption of liquor in America is increasing by leaps and bounds, chronic alcoholics are increasing in like proportion, arrests for drunkenness and kindred crimes are multiplying, advertising is winning new addicts every day, the liquor traffic is spreading itself like a green bay tree over the nation, and is sending its roots deep into our social life with sinister results. The Church of Jesus Christ ought to take the aggressive against this giant in our land. The modern situation is a call to action.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons," Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

"THE STRANGE STRENGTH OF THE WEAK."

(Continued from page 6.)

to the city of Leyden, the resistance was so prolonged that the enemy contemptuously accused the Dutch of eating cats and dogs to keep alive. The answer came back from the walls of the city: "So long as you hear a cat meowing or a dog barking in our streets, you will know that we will never surrender." As one hears these words and feels the invincible strength of the hearts from which they emanated, he hears again the words of St. Paul: "... and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty!"

Take heed then, O men of Russia, and you of America who would use armed force to vanquish your enemies. God is that strange strength of the weak, and righteousness and justice will prevail. Take heed, you men of the Christian Church who trust more in A-bombs than in the power of love and patience. We who trust in the materialistic stand in judgment before this strange strength which relentlessly destroys the proud and arrogant. We need to be sure that we are not among those whose false security has made them proud, for "... God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty!"

THE MINISTER'S USE OF SCRIPTURE.

(Continued from page 8.)

norant chore woman who reads her Bible with devotion and gains unmeasured strength from it, gets what the critical scholar sometimes entirely misses.

Finally, there is the use of scripture in calling on the sick or on others in time of trouble. The surest cue that scripture will be welcomed is the presence of the Bible on the bed stand. When there, I usually pick it up and begin to thumb through it as the conversation proceeds. Stopping at a Psalm, or a parable, or a beautiful passage such as John 6:1, I begin reading. A quick glance at the patient usually indicates if I have done the right thing. I find this use of the Bible very acceptable as a rule. To the lover of scripture, another's reading of a beloved passage is a medium of rich fellowship. Where no Bible is present, it is well to be supplied with a little book of devotions which the minister can leave with the patient. Such a gift not only inspires a daily devotion, but it symbolizes the pastor's call and reminds the patient of all that he stands for: the gospel, the church, a parish whose concern has been expressed in his call.

In making regular calls where there is no particular trouble or illness, I am not often called upon to read scripture; I wish I were. Perhaps parishes differ in this regard, or perhaps I have not discovered how to make scripture reading in the home a natural and normal thing. I rather suspect that it is far easier to do this in a home which observes a form of family devotions, than in one where this habit has been lost a generation or two ago.

If any of us were called upon to conduct our ministry without benefit of scripture, what a dismal future, a spiritual drought, a thin pastorate would be in store for us. This is a negative way of paying tribute to the rich gifts the Bible makes to our spiritual life, whether in the pulpit, in private study, or in our pastoral relations with our people.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 9.)

tian Churches of the Southern Convention, for the second quarter, first year, biennium 1953-54:

RECEIPTS.

N. C. Conference:
Women	$1,704.36
Juniors	55.71
Cradle Roll	22.84
	$ 1,782.91
Virginia Valley Conference:
Women	$ 103.10
Young People	15.00
	$ 118.10
Eastern Va. Conference:
Women	$1,450.55
Young People	139.19
Juniors	85.70
Cradle Roll	46.95
	$ 1,722.39
Total	$ 3,623.40

DISBURSEMENTS.

Home Missions, General
Fund	$1,222.59
Young People's Home
Missions Fund	77.09
Thank Offering, Carroll
County, Va.	100.02
	$ 1,399.70
Foreign Missions, General
Fund	$1,222.60
Young People's Foreign
Missions Fund	77.10
School for girls in
India, Rachanyauram	9.00
Mrs. Moulton, India .	10.00
Foreign Missions, Special
Fund	15.00
	$ 1,333.70
Check George D. Coleough Treas.,
S. C. C.	$ 2,733.40
Check Mrs. Leathers Treas., Life
Memberships and Memorials,
35 Life, 24 Memorials	590.00
	$ 3,323.40
Balance in Bank	300.00
	$ 3,623.40

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. W. V. LEATHERS,

Treasurer.

July 25, 1953.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Thank you for your contributions this week. I was quite interested in the letter which accompanied the check sent us by Mr. and Mrs. Ollerhead of Chapel Hill, N. C. It said: "This being our twenty-fifth anniversary, we decided that the best way to celebrate was to give the orphanage a dollar for each year of our happiness together." Happiness! Yes, happiness, because of the spirit of thoughtfulness and gratitude. May they celebrate many more anniversaries and may they have much joy in all the years to come.

Another very happy couple, Mr. and Mrs. G. O. O'Berry, came up last Saturday to get their son, Walter, at the close of the first session of the Elon Summer School, and they called on our orphanage children. They are the bighearted kind of people that make you happy. They give others happiness, and happiness comes to them. After a pretty speech, they handed me $25.00 for the orphanage. Their encouragement same at a time when it was needed. Thank the good Lord for such good friends!

This evening at suppartime we are having our monthly birthday dinner, with candles, cakes, ice-cream, songs, speeches and fun. Mrs. June Joy House and her three children will be with us. Mrs. House is going to ring the farm bell calling all the children and matrons to supper. Never has rung a farm bell, she said not long ago in our college chapel, where she spoke at the 11:00 o'clock service one Sunday morning. I told her then that we would have her and her children over for dinner, and that she could ring the beautiful bell which the Southern Railway gave us a few months ago.

We have had some rain. Of course, our corn was already just about gone, but it will be a blessing to hay crops and pastures, and will do us much good. I am so thankful for it. I was so thankful I could not sleep. I came down stairs and sat on the porch to hear it falling. I lifted a prayer of gratitude to God for his goodness to us. Things were looking very discouraging. We hope now that other showers will follow until there is a good season.

If you feel that God has been particularly good to you and you wish to express thanks to him in turn; share with the children a part of his blessings. He has said: "Inasmuch as ye do it unto one of the least of these, ye do it unto me."

I wish you could see little Roger Proffitt. He comes running up to me calling my name although by the time he gets the whole name out he has had quite a mouthful. I say, "Come here, Proffitt, you are no prophet." "Yes, I am 'Poffit,' too." "What sort of a prophet are you?" Then there is that inevitable reply: "I'm Poffit." Yes, bless him; he is a fine little boy, and if I'm a prophet, any fine little boy is a profit! Who knows, he may become God's man in years to come.

Help us with your prayers and your gifts. Thank you.

JOHN G. TRUITT,

Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JULY 23, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

Miss Vero V. Van Cleave, Wadley, Ala., Clothing.
Mrs. Mae H. Des Roseir, Pine Bluff, N. C., Coupons.
Woman's Fellowship, Pfafftown Church, Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 8,623.35
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Wake Chapel$ 3.50
..... 3.50
Eastern Va. Conference:
Cypress Chapel$ 22.21
Newport News, S. S. 13.15
Spring Hill S. S. 7.26
..... 42.62

Western N. C. Conference:
Bailey's Grove$ 5.00
Zion 30.00
..... 35.00
Total $ 81.12
Grand Total $ 8,704.47

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $11,141.30
Woman's Fellowship, Bay View Church$ 5.00
Holt Trust Fund 150.00
Mr. & Mrs. E. Willard Duke, Walters, Va., in memory of Charlie W. Carr 3.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. E. Ollerhead, Chapel Hill, N. C. 25.00
Mr. & Mrs. G. O. O'Berry, Harrellsville, N. C. 25.00
Special Gifts 115.00
..... 323.00
Grand Total $11,464.30
Total for the week $ 404.12
Total for the year 20,168.77

FOR OUR CHILDREN.
(Continued from page 10.)

When at last the sun began to dip into the sea the two went home as they had come. Don is a grown man now with a wee son of his own, but the memory of that day still lives in his heart as something wonderfully good and sweet.
To give a little one memorable happiness requires not money or excitement but understanding and the giving of our selves.

We are apt to say that money talks, but it speaks a broken, poverty-stricken language. Hearts talk better, clearer and with wider intelligence.
—William Allen White.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt

Christian Orphanage

Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through July 30, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardecastle	$ 372.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo .	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes . . .	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Gran-
ger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette
Neese	877.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell . . .	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eu-
gene Tally	704.00
Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein .	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Union, Southampton—Clyde
Fields	928.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood . .	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register . .	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown..	127.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey . . .	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal . . .	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowder-
milk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal . . .	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr.	82.50
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth . .	2,450.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisse-
man	3,292.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson . .	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice . . .	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren .	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman	364.00

Reidsville—T. G. Humphries . . .	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen . .	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register . .	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes . .	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrean (Student)	75.00

†Paid.
What church will be next to send in its Declaration?

THE SCOTTS HAVE RETURNED HOME.
(Continued from page 2.)

church and support it. We attended a Congregational Church on Sunday morning and that evening we attended the Church of Ireland. Both showed vitality.
From Belfast, we flew to London and Paris; and in Paris we joined our Congregational Christian study tour of the refugee camps. We visited Protestant groups in France and Italy, where a wonderful Christian witness may be seen. The World Council of Churches is uniting the Protestant forces in a way which makes Christ felt. Europe will not be won to Christ through competing denominations. Divided we cannot succeed.

We are sorry that time would not permit us to go to Naples and Rome, and into Germany and Belgium, but our ship sailed from Cherbourg on July 9, so we returned to Geneva for a couple of days in that beautiful city, and made our way back to Paris and Cherbourg and the Queen Elizabeth.

We are deeply grateful for the high privileges that were ours. We will tell you more later.
Gratefully,
REV. & MRS. W. T. SCOTT.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND
Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
BySecretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

A PULPIT PRAYER

By REV. WILLIAM ROBERT CATTON

The Call to Prayer: "Seek ye the Lord, while he may be found. Call ye upon him while he is near. Let the wicked forsake his ways, and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord."

We would find thee, here, and now, our Father and our God. We have come—to find thee. We pray. We lift up our spirits. We open wide our minds, that we may find thee. Thou art here. Thou art ready to receive us. Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord.

We bring all our needs to thee. With confidence and trust we come. Thou hast never hidden thyself from us. Thou hast never disappointed us. Always we have known we could depend on thee. "The law of the Lord is perfect, reviving the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple; the ordinances of the Lord are true and righteous altogether."

And so we bring to thee this day our needs, our little store of desires and ambitions; our sins, that they may be forgiven; our lives, that they may be blessed.

We bring our sorrows, that we may be comforted. We bring our hurts, our wounds, that we may be healed. We shall be healed. If we can but touch the hem of thy garment, we shall be made whole again.

We bring our mistakes and our failures, for thou dost understand, and thou dost love thy people, every one, even when they fail.

Give us more strength and courage, our God. For these are times in which we must not fail. Great matters are at touch and go these days. Fateful decisions must every day be made. And we are called to face these times. We are called to do thy will these days. We must be wise, because the perils of folly are so vast. We must be good, for the results of selfishness are devastating. We must follow the ideal, we must see the goal, for the pit-falls await the blind on every hand, and there are so many who will not see. So make us strong, our God, to live as men and women ought to live these days.

Make us strong and wise and brave to face each day's common need. There is danger in the wear and tedium of the commonplace. Let us not be lost in littleness, at home, at work, or anywhere. Help us make each day splendid, each place beautiful. May we be valiant and heroic; never futile or complacent.

Now, let our prayer be more than speaking. We would listen, now, to thee. Thou has a word for us. Thou hast some great and splendid word for each of us. Speak to us now, and we will hear. Our spirits with thine will meet. And we will hear thee now.

In the name of Jesus, our Saviour, now, we pray, "Our Father, who art in heaven . . ."

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY, AUGUST 6, 1953

NUMBER 31

The Old Hymns

There's lots of music in 'em—the hymns of long ago,
And when some gray-haired brother sings the ones I used to know,
I sorter want to take a hand—I think of days gone by—
“On Jordan's stormy banks I stand and cast a wistful eye!”

There's lots of music in em—those dear, sweet hymns of old,
With visions bright of lands of light and shining streets of gold;
And I hear 'em ringing—singing where Memory dreaming stands,
“From Greenland's icy mountains to India's coral strands.”

They seem to sing forever of holier, sweeter days,
When the lilies of the love of God bloomed white in all the ways;
And I want to hear their music from the old-time meetin's rise
Till “I can read my title clear to mansions in the skies.”

We never needed singin' books in them old days—we knew
The words, the tunes of every one—the dear old hymn book through.
We didn't have no trumpets then, no organs built for show,
We only sang to praise the Lord, “from whom all blessings flow.”

An' so I love the good old hymns, and when my time shall come—
Before the light has left me, and my singing lips are dumb—
If I can hear 'em sing 'em, I'll pass without a sigh
To “Canaan's fair and happy land, where my possessions lie.”

—Frank L. Stanton.

News Flashes

Born to Rev. and Mrs. William T. Scott, Jr., a son—William Tate Scott, III, at Cornwall, Connecticut, July 29. Bill, Jr., is the son of Superintendent and Mrs. Wm. T. Scott, and is the pastor of the Congregational Church at Cornwall.

The Massanetta Springs Bible Conference, Harrisonburg, Va., August 17-30, offers an excellent opportunity to ministers for study, relaxation, and Christian fellowship. Many of our Congregational Christian leaders will be there this year. Miss Lois Scott and Miss Karen Martin, both of Elon College, are on the Massanetta Springs Hotel staff this summer and will be glad to greet you there.

In all of our Southern Convention, hasn't some church, Sunday school, laymen's group, women's society or youth group, besides the two that report this week, done something worth telling others about? If you have, then report it to the proper department. Jesus was serious when he said, "Let your light so shine, that others, seeing your good works, may glorify your Father." Why not take it seriously?

Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Neese, who have been directing the activities at Moonelon (the Convention's Assembly Grounds), located near Elon College, N. C., will leave for their home in Bradenton, Florida on August 6. Mr. and Mrs. Neese have been faithful servants of their church, and we are grateful to them for their untiring services this summer. Moonelon will continue to be operated through the month of August for the use of our church, Sunday school and youth groups. Reservations should be made through Mrs. Howard Geringer, Elon College, N. C., who will be in charge for the rest of the summer.

Korean Truce Increases Need for Used Clothing Overseas

Winter is coming, and the need for used clothing, yard goods, knitting and sewing materials is greatly increased by the "truce" in Korea. Millions will suffer untold hardships next winter unless we act now.

In the last six weeks, 75,000 pounds of clothing have already been trucked to the Church World Center, New Windsor, Maryland, for sorting and packing and overseas shipping. Tons and tons more are needed for winter distribution.

Those who read this are urged to make plans to help these needy people now. Do it by collecting used clothing through a community-wide organization or a committee in your church. Then truck it to one of the continuing Clothing Centers in your state.

For further information, materials and assistance in organizing a clothing collection, write to the North Carolina CROP Clothing Project, Box 6637, College Station, Durham, North Carolina.

CARL R. KEY,
Director.

Note.—Churches in Virginia can get full information by addressing the CROP Office, 109 W. Grace St., Richmond, Virginia.

News From Amelia Christian Church

Amelia Christian Church held its annual Vacation Bible School during the week of June 15. We had four classes, with fourteen workers, and each class had an individual project. There was an average of eighty children present each day, and they always looked forward to the refreshments served during the recreation period.

Commencement was held on Friday night so as to give parents and friends an opportunity to see the accomplishments of the week.

On Saturday afternoon the Sunday school and church enjoyed a picnic at a local park.

During this same week the men of our church conducted four nights of visitation, with The Evangelism Visitation Chart as their guide. They wanted to at least partially canvass the community, have fellowship with, and invite friends to share with us the spiritual blessings of our church.

Following this Visitation Week, we had Cottage Prayer Meetings, during which time many families participated.

Next was our week of Revival, with our Rev. John Littiken delivering the message and Mrs. Littiken directing the Junior Choir. During this series of services we had an addition of twenty-two new members, who were either on profession of faith or letter of transfer. Approximately fifty of our members rededicated their lives at the altar. We feel that this was one of our greatest revivals, and we know that it was the result of earnest prayer.

Our Sunday school attendance has greatly increased since the revival. A church-wide awakening has begun.

MARY JOHNSON,
Reporter.

Historical Data Wanted

Dear Christian Church Friends and Co-Workers:

Our denomination has organized "The Congregational Christian Historical Society." A group of persons has been appointed to gather all the early history of the Christians possible. Such historical materials may be books and pamphlets written by our people, State and Conference minutes, files of Christian Annuals, Herald, magazines and papers and anything that will help preserve the rich history of our people, so that it may be assembled and deposited in centers for research, for these in Theological Seminaries, church history, etc. This is a very important matter as we see it. We urgently request your painstaking effort to assist us to do a commendable job for future generations. We shall find out what is already available in strategic centers and then supplement such list by what we can gather. The probable centers will be Defiance College, Elon College, Chicago Theological Seminary, Boston Congregational Library and the office of Frederick L. Fagley, the Secretary of this "Historical Society," in New York City. The Christian Churches have had a noteworthy history. We must preserve it and make it available.

We come to you to ask if you have any books, pamphlets, records, etc. that you will donate to this vital work by sending them to me. We will place all such in these strategic centers, list them in the "Historical Society" office properly filed, etc.

We are purely a voluntary committee to see that our history may be preserved, rather than dissipated and lost. Will you kindly help? Maybe you know someone else who may have such records. Kindly give us name and address. We thank you in advance for promptness and for your donations and constructive help.

Very truly yours,
WARREN H. DENSON,
Chairman.

Grinnell, Iowa.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. DANIELEY, Editor, 428 Westwood, Chapel Hill, N. C.

"The Congregational Christian Layman and His Business"

PROGRAM FOR AUGUST

SUGGESTED HYMNS: "Work, for the Night is Coming"; "Trust and Obey."

SUGGESTED SCRIPTURE: Romans 12: 1-21.

PRAYER: We come to thee, O Judge of all men and things, asking for thy constant presence in all that we try to be, say and do. Help us. Amen.

MEDITATION:

Vocation Christianity is a new term to lots of churchmen today, but the idea was quite common to the preaching and practicing of Jesus. One of his expressions was "As a man thinks, so is he."

"Your Other Vocation" is a recent book by Ellton Trueblood which also introduces this trend. We have one job whereby we earn our livelihood, but if we are Christians in intent and on Sunday, we also have another job in being Christians every day at work.

Is there any difference between a Christian farmer and a non-Christian farmer? The Buffalo conference in 1952 of over 350 people from the United States and Canada, who met in nearly twenty different vocational groups, agreed that it was high time some churchmen looked at their daily jobs from a Christian viewpoint.

If Christianity is real and is given a chance, it will do something to and for a man in business. In the first place, he will see his job as making a contribution to the betterment of all his fellows. If he can't see that, he may want to change jobs. Many men have. In the next place, Christianity can make a man grow in his own job through the daily application of Christian principles in all of his contacts.

"It Works" is a book by Melvin Evans of hundreds of instances in which men have attempted to put Christianity to the test and found that it works. Financial betterment is involved, but is far from the whole story. Even Jesus said "Seek ye first the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you." Note that the verb is not may, but is SHALL!

The business of modern churchmanship is a good one. The Sunday worship of God in church is the modern power house contact for the inspiration, challenge, power and commitment for the six day week. Too long the preaching and pew relationship has overshadowed the practicing and business experience. Christianity today is being seen in a new setting and given a first hand trial experience.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION:

1. How can I be more Christian in my business?
2. What are the problems facing a modern Christian businessman?
3. Why is the churchman interested in business ethics?
4. What can be done when business and Christianity conflict?
5. Why does Christianity demand all of a man, even his business?

Associate with men of faith. This tends to be reciprocal. Your faith will communicate itself to them, and their faith to you. Do your work in a "faith" atmosphere, and you will work at a maximum advantage. You impress others by your own faith, and they will have faith in you only in the degree that you have faith in yourself.—Grenville Kleiser.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195 . . .

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $ for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

A Loss That We Can Ill Afford

In the death, the past week, of Senator Robert A. Taft, the country has lost a statesman whom, in these times of trying it could ill afford to lose.

Writing shortly before his death, but after the Senator had given up his place of leadership in the Senate, Ross Valentine, veteran newspaperman, had this to say about him: "Senator Taft's retirement from active participation in government has about it the quality of tragedy. Now that serious illness has brought him low, the spotlight is suddenly focused on his qualities as a statesman. . . ."

Valentine called him "an unglamorous, homely man, but strong and courageous, conscientious to a fault—a statesman of the highest caliber." And he continued: "His is not the kind of gold that glitters. True gold does not glitter. Only fool's gold does. True gold (and I have panned it) is lusterless."

It was perhaps this lack of luster which caused him to go down in defeat three times as he sought the nomination of his party for the Presidency. He had nothing to offer them but "hard-headed realism, devotion to duty, and a militant integrity of character." What they demanded was the glamour and glitter that might "win the votes" of the people.

Taft in his latest defeat had shown himself a greater man than he could have proved himself in victory. Denied the nomination he deserved, he offered his friendship and support to the man who had defeated him, and in the few months which had intervened had become the man above all others on whom the President had come to lean.

Others will assume the leadership, and the wheels of time will continue to turn, but his party and the nation will be the poorer by his going.

Bishop Oxnam and the Un-A. A. Committee

The Committee on Un-American Activities of the House of Representatives has recently caused much furor by its investigations in the fields of education and religion. Possibly the pyrotechnics reached their zenith in the opening to the public of the "files" concerning Methodist Bishop Bromley Oxnam, concerning whom one member of the committee said: "Bishop Bromley has been to the Communist front what Man-O-War was to thorough-bred horse-racing, . . . Having served God on Sunday and the Communist front for the balance of the week over a long period of time, it is no wonder that the Bishop sees an investigating committee in every vestry."

It was possibly this statement that caused the Bishop to "request" an opportunity to appear before the committee in public session "to obtain redress for the damage done me by the release of information in the 'files' of the committee." He added, "If a member of the committee can be so misled by this material, it is no wonder that uninformed citizens are similarly misled."

"Methodist Information," of 150 Fifth Avenue, New York City, has sent out the statement made by Bishop Oxnam before the committee on July 21, as a news release, and we are reprinting excerpts from the statement in this issue, in so far as we have room. The complete text of the committee hearing is available to the public, and we would urge our ministers especially to obtain a copy of the hearing and study it. It is not pleasant reading material, but it paints a picture that all of us must needs contemplate.

Certainly Communists would have achieved a major victory if they could have successfully undermined the Church, and there is evidence in this hearing that they have been able to place their followers, if not their members, in strategic places, within its portals. We do not believe they have had near the success in their attempt at infiltration that some have claimed for them, but one Communist in the ranks of our ministers would be too many. A minister must, like Caesar's wife, indeed be above suspicion.

Excerpts from Bishop Oxnam's Statement Before the House Committee on Un-American Activities

I have requested opportunity to appear voluntarily before this Committee, in public session, to secure redress for the damage done me by the release of information in the "files" of the Committee. I deeply appreciate the grant of this privilege. Such releases made at various times for a period of nearly seven years, have contained material, much of which is irrelevant and immaterial, some of which is false and some of which is true, but all prepared in a way capable of creating the impression that I have been and am sympathetic to communism and therefore subversive.

These "files," so released, have been used . . . as evidence of communist sympathies. A member of this Committee apparently drew that conclusion. . . . If a member of the Committee can be so misled by this material, it is no wonder that uninformed citizens are similarly misled.

When I declare, "I believe in God, the Father, Almighty," I affirm the theistic faith and strike at the fundamental fallacy of communism, which is atheism. I thereby reaffirm the basic conviction upon which this Republic rests, namely, that all men are created by the Eternal and in his image, being of infinite worth, members of one family, brothers. We are endowed by the Creator with certain inalienable rights. The State does not confer them; it merely confirms them. They belong to man because he is a son of God. When I say, "I believe in God," I am also saying that moral law is written into the nature of things. There are moral absolutes. Marxism, by definition, rules out moral absolutes. Because I believe the will of God is revealed in the Gospel of Christ, I hold that all historically conditioned political, economic, social, and ecclesiastical systems must be judged by the Gospel, not identified with it. This is to say, I reject communism, first, because of its atheism.

When I declare, "I believe in Jesus Christ, His only Son, our Lord," I am affirming faith in a spiritual view of life. By so doing, I repudiate the philosophy of materialism upon which communism is based, and thereby undermine it. I reject the theory of social development that assumes social institutions and even morality are determined by the prevailing mode of production. When I accept the law of love taught by Christ and revealed in His person, I must, of necessity, oppose to the death a theory that justifies dictatorship with its annihilation of freedom. I am not an economist, but have studied sufficiently to be convinced that there are basic fallacies in Marxian economics. Believing as I do that personality is a supreme good and that personality flowers in freedom, I stand for the free man in the free society, seeking the truth that frees. I hold that the free man must discover concrete measures through which the ideals of religion may be translated into the realities of world law and order, economic justice and racial brotherhood.

As a result of long study and of prayer, I am by conviction pledged to the free way of life and opposed to all forms of totalitarianism, left or right, and to all tendencies toward such practices at home or abroad. Consequently, I have been opposed to communism all my life. I have never been a member of the Communist Party. My opposition to communism is a matter of public record in books, numerous articles, addresses, and sermons; and in resolutions I have drafted or sponsored in which powerful religious agencies have been put on record as opposed to communism. It is evidenced likewise in a life of service and the sponsorship of measures designed to make the free society impregnable to communist attack.

Loyalty to my family, my church, and my country are fundamental to me; and when any man or any committee questions that loyalty, I doubt that I would be worthy of the name American if I took it lying down.

There are three considerations I desire to lay before this committee.

First, this committee has followed a practice of releasing unverified and unevaluated material designated as "information" to citizens, or organizations and Members of Congress. It accepts no responsibility for the accuracy of the newspaper clippings recorded and so released; and insists that the material does not represent an opinion or a conclusion of the Committee. This material officially released in official letterheads and signed by an official clerk, carried no disclaimer, in my case, and the recipient understandably assumed it did represent a conclusion. I am here formally to request that this "file" be cleaned up, that the Committee frankly admit its inaccuracies and mis-representations, and that this matter be brought to a close.

It is alleged that the Committee has "files" on a million individuals, many of whom are among the most respected, patriotic, and devoted citizens of this nation. This is not the proper place to raise questions as to the propriety of maintaining such vast "files" at public expense; but it is the proper place, in my case, to request that the practice of releasing unverified and unevaluated material, for which the Committee accepts no responsibility, cease. It can be shown that these reports are the result of inexcusable incompetence or of slanted selection, the result being the same in either case, namely, to question loyalty, to pillory or to intimidate the individual, to damage reputation, and to turn attention from the communist conspirator who pursues his nefarious work in the shadows, while a patriotic citizen is disgraced in public. The preparation and publication of these "files" puts into the hands of irresponsible individuals and agencies a wicked tool. It gives rise to a new and vicious expression of Ku-Kluxism, in which an innocent person may be beaten by unknown assailants, who are cloaked in anonymity and at times immunity and whose whips are cleverly constructed lists of so-called subversive organizations and whose floggings appear all too often to be sadistic in spirit rather than patriotic in purpose.

I had planned, at this point, to set forth specifications of what I believe is false. The rules of this Committee give me but fifteen minutes for this statement. The specifications cannot be listed in fifteen minutes. Therefore, I must respectfully request the Committee members, or its Council to question me concerning some of the material released by the Committee, namely:

(Here follows the list)

If I may be asked questions concerning these items, I will leave it to any fair minded man whether I have

(Continued on page 13.)

Stewardship of the Grace of God

By REV. RICHARD K. MORTON

Pastor of Union Congregational Church, Jacksonville, Florida

Believers in Christ and workers for Christ must be stewards—stewards of the manifold grace of God.

Speaking as one born and brought up in the Congregational Christian nurture and tradition, I am wondering today, more than ever, whether our stewardship, as individuals and as a denomination, is what it should be and could be.

In the tumults and vexations, yet expanding opportunities, of today's life, it is in the field of stewardship that we are often most severely tested. We may have found a personal Saviour. We may be loyal to the Church of Christ in many ways; but we may not be serving fully as stewards of the manifold grace of God.

What do we more than others—even the publicans of our time? Have we taken up many a banner, but no crosses? Have we enjoyed the satisfaction of serving on many projects, but without ever having to deny ourselves anything or sacrifice? Have we enjoyed the comfort of Christianity, meaning the social "belonging" which it provides, without accepting any of its risks and struggles?

I have no statistics which clearly show us, as a group, to be worthy of condemnation. I have no jeremiad to utter. But I have served, in one way or another, for thirty years, as boy and man, in the church and community life of my region; and I have been wondering whether we are, relatively, keeping pace with other servants of God whose faith and policy are shaped a bit differently.

In I Peter 4:10-11, there is this timely passage: "As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God. If any man speak, let him speak as the oracles of God; if any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth; that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ: to whom be praise and dominion for ever and ever."

We shall do well to remember these verses in our fevered promotion of so very many interests today and as we ponder the flamboyant and triumphant successes of those whose ways in religion are so strikingly different from ours. In Paul's words (I Corinthians 4:1), "Let a man so account of us, as of the ministers of Christ, and stewards of the mysteries of God."

A steward should be found faithful. A minister should love and serve, in the pulpit or in the pew. All who genuinely love our Lord should be willing to testify boldly for him and to work sacrificially on his behalf.

In our giving, our attendance, our labors, our witnessing, and in many other fields, are we really doing this?

Through so many years, in the church life that I have been familiar with, it has always been other denominations that gave so much more sacrificially—not only of money, but also of much else. If it rained, more of our people would stay at home. If the summer were a bit hotter than usual, more of our people hustled to places of enjoyment and coolness. If the program called for hard work or studying or an exacting analysis of church problems, a handful of our people would appear. Extra meetings they would very unwillingly attend. If our church were in a poor location, if not well heated or lighted, our people would stay away in larger numbers. But I would hear of other groups making the best of such a situation, or sacrificially doing something about it.

Now, maybe I have gotten hold of this matter unfairly, and my experience may not (I hope) have been typical at all. But would you not say that too often my testimony could be repeated justly by others?

Are we frankly as good stewards as we ought to be, as free and privileged disciples of our Lord? Are we doing what we ought?

Are we as stirred by the disease and poverty and ignorance found in other lands? Or is our Christianity strictly of the local-church type, where only the local field and its welfare is of any real concern to the people?

Are we willing to give some real work to the church, in addition to our Sunday morning attendance? Is our giving something more than a pittance thrown heedlessly to a Divine Beggar?

Are we at all concerned about taking any time to learn of Him. Would we ever attend special meetings, study classes, committees, to hew out some program or project? Does our Christianity provide at best a brief invocation to the pagan selfishness of the day?

Are not other people affected by economic stress, the weather, other engagements, and so on—but they support their churches. In what way are we different?

Not only do we need, in my estimation, to become better stewards in economic affairs, but we need to do much more in study, in evangelism, in witnessing, and in the expansion of our program to meet special needs.

We do not study enough; we do not witness enough; our evangelism in many areas virtually does not exist. We enjoy the relative peace and propriety of a cloistered fellowship that is largely out of touch with the heart-aches and the longings of the world. This, of course, is an extreme generalization—but to my mind it applies to the local scene all too often.

We protest at the force exerted by a united and devout Catholicism in promoting what it cherishes—but we won't work as hard at our tasks. We grow at times even resentful at the inroads made by highly evangelistic and dogmatic denominational groups—but we won't take the trouble to organize our work so that we can be as articulate and persuasive in the modern world.

The time has gone when we can expect either God or man to be so impressed with our liberal and intellectual and moral background, our traditions and our group excellence, that we do not need to do any more than announce our presence!

I should like to see our Congregational Christian belief and polity more articulate, witnessed to by many enthusiastic and energetic people, willing to sacrifice and strive. I should like to see us develop a real evangelism and a real spirit of giving. I do not think we have any of this in the measure which is possible and required.

In the national secular magazines, and on radio and television, there is often more that really captivates and persuades, than is found within our formal religious circles. This is often due to the fact that the real vigor of living is taking place outside of our churches and church affiliations.

We are not going to win the world,
(Continued on page 14.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The College Faculty for 1953-1954

The faculty at Elon College for the ensuing year in complete with the exception of an instructor for dramatics. We have several applications for this position and doubtless a selection will be made within the next day or so. When I say the faculty is complete, I mean for the present. It seems that there is little assurance that faculty members will continue at the college even though they have accepted in writing for the next year. We have had two unexpected resignations—Dean D. J. Bowden and Professor J. L. Pierce.

Earl Danieley of the Science Department has been made Acting Dean for the year. In addition to administrative duties, he will teach one course in Chemistry, his major field. The Science Department, including mathematics, has rearranged the schedule for these departments so that the present teaching force will be able to instruct all courses offered. The Department of Philosophy and Religion has arranged its schedule so that Drs. Reynolds and Sloan will take care of all courses that are offered in this department.

Mr. Scott Boyd, a graduate of Elon College in the Class of 1934, has been employed as Director of Physical Education and coach in minor intercollegiate sports at Elon College. Scott, after graduation, taught in high schools in Mecklenburg and Vance Counties. He served in World War II. After receiving an honorable discharge he entered the University of North Carolina and was awarded the Master of Arts Degree in Physical Education. He was employed as Physical Education Director and Director of Intercollegiate Sports at Louisburg College for four years. He resigned this position and entered the University of Indiana where he is completing all requirements for the Ph. D. Degree in Physical Education with the possible exception of the completion of his dissertation. Scott comes to Elon College well trained and with intense interest in the institution. He is a nephew of Mrs. L. E. Carlton. His mother lives in Henderson, North Carolina. All of his brothers and sisters are graduates of Elon.

Mrs. Ruth Gamble Boyd, Scott's wife, has been employed by the General Alumni Association as Alumni Secretary. Mrs. Boyd is an alumna of Elon College. Leaving Elon College in 1934, she took advanced training in secretarial and office work, and has served in that field since. At Louisburg College she served as Personnel Director and Field Secretary. At present she is Secretary in the President's Office at the University of Indiana.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd will enter their duties at the college on September 1. They will live in the Atkinson Apartments. These two Christian educators will be an addition to the Elon College faculty and community.

Miss Elizabeth Nelms of Jacksonville, Illinois, has been employed as voice instructor in the college, succeeding Miss Virginia Groomes. Miss Groomes was married during the summer and will not return. Miss Nelms is a graduate of Juilliard School of Music and has her Master of Arts Degree from the University of Indiana, where she has done considerable work toward the doctor's degree. She is an accomplished musician and beautiful singer. Miss Nelms will enter upon her duties September 1.

Mr. H. L. Lawless, instructor in Accounting, asked for leave of absence to complete requirements for the doctor's degree. Mr. William Reece of Reidsville, North Carolina, has been employed by the college and will be added to our Business Administration staff. Mr. Reece is a graduate of the University of North Carolina and has had three years experience in tax and accounting work for the government.

Elon College is fortunate in having been able to secure the services of these competent and well trained men and women for our faculty.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

We should remind ourselves that many of the great fortunes of this country have been built by small purchases. One purchase that nets only a few cents is not particularly important but thousands of such purchases are of great importance. The five and ten cent stores of this country are convincing examples of what a large number of customers will mean to any particular business. The offerings of one Sunday school on fifth Sunday of themselves would not mean very much to Elon College, but one hundred ninety nine other schools joined in a like contribution for Elon College on a given fifth Sunday with the total in the treasury of Elon College would be of great assistance. Let no individual or any Sunday school look with disfavor on a small contribution, if this contribution is its best. No Sunday school or church should make an offering that would embarrass it, but on the other hand no Sunday school or church should make an offering to Elon College of which it would be ashamed.

Cooperation universal and united giving will make Elon College a strong institution. Let no individual or school withhold his offering, but let's all give our support gladly, freely, and generously.

Previously Reported	$ 5,934.49
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Mt. Herman	$10.00
New Hope	27.00
Plymouth	9.75
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Shallow Ford	$20.00
Union (N. C.)	97.00
Zion	5.00
	168.75
Total to date	$ 6,103.24

National Council of Churches Hopes for Just Peace

The National Council of Churches of Christ, in a telegram to President Eisenhower, upon the occasion of the signing of a truce in Korea, expressed the hope that "forthcoming negotiations will establish the conditions of a just and durable peace in Korea."

"In fulfilling its obligations under the charter of the United Nations, our country has shown its determination to strive for a world freed from the terror of aggression and at the same time, its consistent readiness to seek solution of international issues by negotiation," said the message signed by Dr. Samuel McCrea Cavert, general secretary of the National Council.

It further said: "The people of our churches have been saddened by the many thousands of casualties in Korea. With profound gratitude they acknowledge their debt to those who from our own and other lands offered

(Continued on page 11.)

One Year as Pastor-at-Large in the Virginia Valley Conference

By REV. HENRY V. HARMAN

One afternoon in March of 1952 found Peene (Mrs. Harman) and me in the living room of the Galt's parsonage near New Market, Virginia. With us in that room were Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Wesley Hotchkiss of the Home Mission Board, and all of the Valley Conference ministers and their wives.

I was concerned lest the Valley ministers feel some resentment at having a young "whippersnapper" fresh out of seminary in this new position; the ministers were concerned that we sense the need for this job and their desire to get it started, and the ministers' wives were concerned lest their husbands tell of so many "needs" that we be frightened away. Enough to say that we were not frightened away, and that those who are now my "fellow ministers" have exceeded my hopes in being cordial and helpful.

Another afternoon in July of 1952 found these same ministers, Dr. Scott and myself in the Whitten's basement in Winchester, outlining the work of the new pastor-at-large. The six areas of endeavor were to be: (1) Youth Work, (2) Christian Education, (3) Evangelism, (4) Stewardship, (5) Laymen's Work, and (6) Church Extension. In passing, they also named a few things that this new creation was not to do—how considerate!

An account of this first year's work could be a recital of various conference events in which I have taken part. That would include such gatherings as district youth rallies, revival meetings, and the Annual Conference itself. Frankly, if that was all the pastor-at-large's work had consisted of in 1952-53, then the Mission Board's money should be withdrawn. More important than putting in appearance at functions has been the general sizing up of the conference and the delightful business of "getting acquainted."

"Sizing up" the Valley Conference has been an interesting job, because it is an interesting area and contains many interesting people. It is even more rural than our predominantly rural Southern Convention, with only one urban church out of a total of twenty-one. And it contains many of the problems and the opportunities that confront the rural church in America today.

Our churches here are small and spread thin. In three cases it takes five of them to support one minister. Eleven of our churches have but one room, and the others have only a few more. That means that they cannot carry on the program of their larger sisters. But it also means that they are neighborhood churches, as one man proudly said, "built up against the mountain where other churches wouldn't go."

How can we keep the churches serving the intimate needs of neighbors in a small community and yet preparing these same people to make a Christian witness in a world where the Queen of England sits in your own parlor, and your neighbor drives daily fifty miles to work in a synthetic textile plant?

Our churches here are conservative and slow to move. But they are moving. They will not desert their solid biblical foundation; but they know that preaching once or twice a month and a Sunday school with all classes in the same big room will not communicate the Word of God today. So Bethlehem completes its new church building; Bethel is erecting a two-story educational structure; Mount Olivet, in Greene, creates a beautiful new sanctuary; Newport adds three large Sunday school rooms, Mount Lebanon breaks ground, and so on.

And we are learning—too slowly perhaps—that the dedication our parents and grandparents gave to the church must be given again and in greater measure. We in the Valley are not well-to-do people. In a denomination whose members average out in the higher economic brackets, we are in the lower. I know one church that cannot count a single landowner among its members; another with but one. Yet, in those two churches is a devotion to the Lord and a willingness to dig deeply that puts some of our wealthier churches to shame. We are learning—again too slowly—that stewardship is not just the giving of money, but the knowledge that in everything, our strength, our minds, our time, as well as our possessions, we are merely stewards of God.

As our sense of stewardship is developing, so is our leadership evolving. We still do not have enough leaders, either lay or clergy, but you can see them coming. I wish I could name those under 45 upon whose shoulders the load is gradually—and sometimes swiftly—shifting. In some cases, only one to a church, or two, or three; but they are here. Notice that the Valley is the only one of our five conferences where either president or secretary is a layman. Our Kenzie Dofflemeyer and Clarence Phillips are doing good jobs in those offices. Our Sunday School Convention does not have a single minister among its five officers. And in the Woman's Convention, the ministers' wives bear no more than a normal share of the work.

This carrying of more than usual of the ordinary load of the church may be one reason why we are lax in starting special laymen's groups. But we do need more such groups to interest new laymen in the work of the church. The Linville group and the Winchester church have made good beginnings here; the rest of us need to follow.

But don't think the pastors do not work. One big reason for the pastor-at-large was to lighten the load of men with five churches to serve. And as a fledgling pastor in this conference, I wish to express my deep gratitude to my brother pastors for their patient and kind cooperation. We are located in different communities and do not see too much of one another. Yet there is a warm and an open spirit of brotherhood amongst us that has made this work of pastor-at-large a real joy.

In February I realized that to serve adequately as pastor-at-large, I could not wait for a call from a church or minister, but needed to go about and visit more individuals in the conference. Making such trips on the average of once a week means a trip of some two hundred miles with ten or a dozen stops. With two small children at home (and home at the Timber Ridge parsonage is in the same climate zone as Connecticut), I have tried to make the trips all in one day. This has been hard on the family and appears to be leading to my giving up—at least temporarily—the pastor-at-large work.

But these trips have led to a better
(Continued on page 9.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Hines Chapel Is Having Very Successful Year

The Hines Chapel Woman's Missionary Society has been enjoying a very successful year under the leadership of the new president, Mrs. J. R. Carter. We are achieving the goals that rate our group as a standard society.

One of our outstanding achievements was our Thank Offering service. We had Mrs. Carl Dawson of Elon College, spiritual life superintendent of the North Carolina Conference, to conduct the service. She did a beautiful job. The inspiring and challenging way that she presented the cause deeply impressed all of her hearers, and as a result our offering for the church in the Carroll County hills amounted to $110. Our prayers and best wishes go with our offering to this project.

Another enjoyable and very helpful occasion was a joint picnic with the Monticello group. After the meal Dr. and Mrs. Sloan gave a very interesting account of their travels in Africa. A very generous donation was secured at this meeting and presented to Dr. Sloan to send wherever he felt the need was most urgent.

Our Christmas party had a special meaning to us as we tried to share a part of the Christmas cheer with the immigrants at Ellis Island. The tree was decorated with little flags of many lands. We played folk games of other lands also, but the rewarding experience came when we received the "thank you" note from those in charge of receiving and distributing the bundles to the immigrants. The note said that if we could only have seen the beaming faces of the recipients, from the child of two years to the grandmother of eighty-two, we would have been more than doubly rewarded for our efforts.

Our May Fellowship meeting was an enjoyable occasion, as well as helpful. This, too, was a picnic supper with the Monticello group. After the picnic, we enjoyed the picture, "More for Peace."

Our group gave a generous donation toward Mrs. Scott's trip abroad with her husband, Dr. Scott.

When we held our July meeting, about ninety per cent of our members were present, and we all came away with a peculiar kind of uplifted feeling. I really think the thing that brought this about was that we went to the home of one of our members who had not been able to attend either church or the missionary society meetings for quite some time. She had had sickness in the home and had suffered a badly sprained ankle herself. This might be a suggestion to some other group that has a similar situation, and where circumstances will permit, they might plan such a visit. When we share these better things of life with others, it certainly enriches our own.

BESSIE ISELEY,

Reporter.

* * * * *

Bible Study for Next Year

In the packet you will find suggestions for helping you in your Bible study next year—a study of the Psalms. These suggestions will provide variety for your Bible study programs.

You will also find "Suggestions for Use with Mirrors of the Soul." This in mimeographed form contains the suggestions referred to in your study book, "Mirrors of the Soul." You need order nothing else this year.

Briefly, these are the methods suggested in teaching:

Chapter 1—Psalm 139—"Buzz" session.

Chapter 2—Psalm 103—"Directed Study"—silent reading and discussion.

Chapter 3—Psalm 23—Use Slides available from Convention Office. Use hymn, "The Lord's My Shepherd."

Chapter 4—Psalm 51—"Interview Method."

Chapter 5—Psalm 22—Choral reading.

Chapter 6—Psalm 42—Questions from work sheet.

Chapter 7—Psalm 8—Illustrations, make scroll, use in worship.

Chapter 8—Psalm 147—Lecture and discussion.

All of these methods have been tried with groups and they will work. The "buzz session" you may think cannot work in your small group, but Hubert Beane has used it very successfully in a men's Sunday school class in the Asheboro church—and I believe women like to "buzz" as well as men do!

* * * * *

Reports Are Important

Although it may seem a lot of unnecessary "paper work" to you, the reports from our women's societies on their activities during the past year are important. They enable the district superintendent and the departmental superintendents to know just what has been going on in our various women's groups.

Soon the president of your society will be receiving these report blanks—one copy of which she will keep for future reference, and the other copy of which is to be sent to the District Superintendent by September 15.

The copy kept in the society is important, too. It ought to be carefully studied by the incoming president to see just where the society has failed to come up to the standards set by the Convention. Then the new president will know what things need to be started or stressed, as well as continuing the things which have been done with success.

And of course we will not fail to get in our money for this quarter to our Conference Treasurer, so that it can be reported at the fall conference.

YEAR AS PASTOR-AT-LARGE IN VALLEY CONFERENCE.

(Continued from page 8.)

knowledge of our conference and the people in it. As I think back over a year's work, I don't so much remember the conferences or major services, but the friendly chats in all the seven Virginia and West Virginia counties our churches serve. More than faces seen from behind the pulpit are the scenes of hiding Norman Morris' treasured birthday cake (Mt. Olivet, Greene), kidding Donny Litten about his love-life (Wissler's Chapel), or talking with Mrs. A. W. Andes about the days her husband drove his buggy eighty miles to Timber Ridge.

And these very thoughts make me optimistic about the future of the Valley Conference. In many ways we are "behind" other churches, but it is this very spirit of Christian neighborliness coupled with a desire that our children, who need this spirit more than we, shall learn it better than we, that shall revive us.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

A List of Mission Study Books

Days are very hot now, but cool ones aren't too far away. When fall comes, we will be through with vacationing and ready to work on new and interesting things at school, home and church school.

The mothers, teachers and leaders who were at Elon for the School of Missions know all about the mission books for boys and girls, but for those who don't, here's part of the list and a bit about them.

All of them are published by the Friendship Press and may be ordered from Boston or Richmond.

THE ROUND WINDOW by Elizabeth Allstrom is for primary boys and girls. It costs $2 in the cloth edition. Here are twelve tales about boys and girls who have "Three Surprises," "Peanuts for Church," "A Tree Watcher," and other exciting things. The book is dedicated to Jeanette Perkins Brown, whom some of you know, and is good reading, for one seven-year-old has read the book twice this summer! Mrs. Allstrom is a mother and teacher. She has told delightful tales about Peru, Lebanon, Alaska, Africa, Brazil and China, and . . . you find out for yourself! Jeanyee Wong did the illustrations which you will like too.

THE SECRET SUITCASE by Dorothy Andrews and Louise Scott. Everyone knows how fascinating the contents of a suitcase can be. What do you pack in a suitcase? What secret do you suppose was in this suitcase? Juniors will want to find out. This is really a Western story, but it has more than cowboys in it. There are Spanish-speaking Americans about whom some of us do not know very much. There's a dog named Tippy, a boy named Rusty (Ricardo), and his little brother, Dodo. Illustrations are by C. L. Baldridge. This one costs $2, too; but its contents will thrill your boys.

Older boys and girls will like Nelle Morton's THE CHURCH WE CANNOT SEE. Many of us knew Miss Morton when she visited Raleigh and Richmond as secretary for the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen. She graduated from Flora McDonald College, and Moore County churches will be glad of that! Jim Lee did the simple, but lovely designs. The book is divided into parts: "The Church is Everywhere" (far away places); "The Church is People" (so it is!); "The Church is Work and Worship" (that is what we believe, too); and another, "The Church is Wherever You Are."

We keep on saying that Friendship Press books are tops in their field. They are a good investment and a good tool for teachers and parents.

J. J. H.

Contest Essays are being Considered. Will Let You Know About Winners Soon!

"You're Just Being Silly!"

By HELEN GREGG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

As I was leaving a favorite restaurant recently, I paid the young cashier a sincere compliment.

"Now you're just being silly!" she pertly replied, as she gave me my change.

I smiled, a bit wryly. I have heard varied replies to kind compliments, but this one, I thought, heads the list of glib, pointless replies. But what right had I to judge her? What did I know of her past experiences? Had she, more than once, been offered compliments by rough and crully rude patrons, who, when she had accepted their seemingly kind words with a smile, had thrown them back at her in reversal—their idea of a joke?

In her desire to protect herself, perhaps to appear sophisticated, this poor girl is spoiling a personality that has delightful possibilities. She is talented; she arranges, most gracefully, all the flowers for this well-known restaurant. Her appreciation of the artistic is shown, also, in her distinctive dress. If she can become intimate with friends who will help her to follow her own type—a gentle-spoken, natural young woman—she will be outstanding in attractiveness. But, in what may be a spirit of resentment, she at present is behaving with a rudness which altogether ignores the dignity and charm of which I feel she is capable.

Courtesy is a quality which needs to be assimilated in the early years, and in this way to become so much a part of the individual that separation is next to impossible. The child, throughout his years of growth, should be constantly exposed to the manifestations of true courtesy. Father should show it when driving his car, dismissing an unwanted book agent, or waiting for the opportunity to use his own telephone when a long-winded neighbor is borrowing it. Mother has a chance to exhibit courtesy in her dealing with the merchants, with the child who does errands, and in answering the second and third request of the morning for subscriptions. The weak, the needy, and the irritating are all invitations for extra courtesy efforts. As you know:

"Politeness (courtesy) is to do and say The kindest thing in the kindest way."

Small Janie had a great love for her grandmother, a frequent visitor at her home. For years, Grandmother had been the confidential secretary to one of the South American ambassadors in Washington. Without a doubt, this grandmother looked and acted like somebody of distinction—with her silver hair, gentle ways, and great fund of knowledge. But how many children of seven, unless, like Janie, they were being taught to take courteous interest in others, would have been discerning enough to observe these characteristics in her grandmother, or would have been sufficiently responsive to them to comment, proudly, as they walked along, "Do you know, Grandmother, you look beautifully different from everybody else on the street?"

Grandmother gave Janie's hand a squeeze, as she answered, "Why, thank you, Janie. What a sweet thing to say!"

Had the lady in any way refuted the compliment, either by making it a joke or by showing embarrassment, sensitive Janie might have crawled into her shell, as it were, hesitating in the future to speak of her observations. But her dear grandmother's gracious acceptance, of the praise, made what had been her unstudied reaction appear proper and right.

Another mother of my acquaintance encourages her twin boys to be "sophisticated" and "knowing." She does not realize that most of her friends avoid her sons. Yet they do,

(Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Valley Conference Young People Planning a Retreat

On August 22 (Saturday) there will be a planning retreat for the Virginia Valley Conference young people's officers plus one leader from each local youth group. They will meet at the Bethel Church at 1:30 p.m., and go to the Merek Company Rod and Gun Club's cabin for the retreat. The following Sunday afternoon, August 23, there will be a picnic for all young people of the Valley Conference on the Skyline Drive. Further details will be sent to those concerned.

HANK HARMON.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

A little boy was making his way to his desk when the teacher stopped him: "You're late, Tommy," she said. "Why?"

Tommy looked a bit tearful. "It was late when I left home," he said.

"But why didn't you start earlier?" the teacher wanted to know.

"Because," said Tommy, astonished, "it was too late to start early."

* * *

When his health began to fail, an astronomer decided to go west to the wide open spaces. In a small town in Arizona, he approached an old man sitting on the steps of the local store. "Say," he asked, "what's the death rate around here?"

"Same as it is back East, brother," replied the old fellow, "one to a person."

* * *

A small boy was being sent to summer camp much against his will, and was making no bones about it.

"Why, you'll just love camp," his aunt said soothingly. "You'll have a simply wonderful vacation."

"I won't," was the acid retort, "but my mother will."

* * *

Let Us Pray

That we may live today
In such a godly way
That others will want to know Him,

HOPES FOR JUST PEACE.

(Continued from page 7.)

their lives that the hand of the aggressor might be stayed."

In greetings to Christians of Korea, Dr. Cavert pledged full support of measures looking toward reconstruction and rehabilitation of the Republic of Korea. Said he: "The people of our churches have steadily supported the objectives of a united and independent Korea, and our purpose in this respect is reinforced by the armistice agreement.

Dr. Cavert cabled the message to the Rev. Yu Hochun, general secretary of the National Christian Council of Korea, which includes the major Protestant churches of that country.

FOR OUR CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

and no wonder! These youngsters repeatedly interrupt during a conversation, they sit as if glued to their chairs when their mother's friends enter a room, they are not taught to hold doors, nor do they discipline themselves in any way. They are, also, evidently indifferent to the most simple requirements of refinement. I myself observed these twelve-year-olds actually each giving himself a manicure as they stood by the marquee leading to a church, where the fashionable wedding of their cousin was about to take place. Would no one tell them that their tailored white linen dinner coats, set off by silk cummerbunds and red lapel-carnations, were not in keeping with their public act of hand grooming?

When I was a tiny girl my grandmother—lovely beyond words—frequently admonished, "Pretty is as pretty does!" Ah, Grandmother dear, there was wisdom in that small sentence!

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through July 30, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Harcastle	$ 372.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown	127.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presnell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr. . . .	82.50
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth	2,450.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wiseman	3,292.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wiseman	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

†Paid.

What church will be next to send in its Declaration?

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Christ Above All"

LESSON VII—AUGUST 16, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "He is before all things, and in him all things hold together." Colossians 1: 17. (R.S. V.)

LESSON: Colossians 1: 3-6, 9-20.

DEVOTIONAL READING Psalm 67.

It is doubtful whether there is any one chapter in the whole Bible in which there are packed more spiritual treasures than in the first chapter of Colossians, a part of which comprises today's Scripture Lesson. It is impossible, in the space allotted to these notes, to do more than "scratch the surface" and to pick out a few of the many fine things which Paul writes. Only a few of the many nuggets in this gold mine can be picked up by this writer, or for that matter by the teacher of this lesson.

Thanksgiving Before Intercession

It is customary for Paul to give thanks for things and people, before he presents his petitions or intercessions. It is a true instinct. All too much of our praying is in the spirit of "Give me" instead of "Thank you." Paul has some things to say to his Colossian friends, and some criticisms to make of them, but he first of all commends them on their good points, and thanks God for the good things he has heard about them. Our lives would be blessed if we introduced into our prayers more thanksgiving and less petition.

A Church With A Fine Reputation.

Three things elicit Paul's spirit of gratitude and thanksgiving: The faith which the Colossians had in Christ. As a Church, and as a group, they believed in Christ in the sense that they had committed themselves to Him. Then there was their love for the saints. "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples," said Jesus, "if ye have love one for another." Boy, oh boy, what a difference it would make in many churches if the members really loved one another. And finally there was "the hope that was laid up for you in heaven" the hope which they had heard preached to them in the gospel, a hope which was bringing fruit in them and increasing in a fine way. Faith, love, hope, these three abiding qualities. As Dr. Frank Mead says, "Faith describes the perfect Christian life on its religious side; and love on its ethical side. And faith and love are based on hope. The quality of a man's life depends on what a man hopes for in his heart. Tell me what a man longs for, and I will tell you how good or bad he is!"

Petition and Intercession.

Having thanked God for some of the good things in the life of the Colossian Christians, Paul proceeds to intercede for them, to pray that they might have other things. Look at the things for which he makes request to God in behalf of his friends.

a. That they might be filled with a knowledge of His will in all spiritual wisdom and understanding. How important it is that we know what God's will is for our lives. Many young people miss the meaning and the fulness of life, because they do not, in the act of choosing a career ask "What wilt thou have me to do, Lord?" And all of us make grievous blunders because we do not understand what the will of the Lord is to do it.

b. "To walk worthily of the Lord unto all pleasing." Paul was deeply interested in the philosophy of the Christian religion. But he was more deeply interested in the practice of the Christian way of life. He never allowed his readers or his hearers to forget that they were Christ's people, and as such they were to walk worthily of the high calling wherewith they had been called.

c. "Bearing fruit in every good work." Christians are to be good, but they are also to be good for something. Jesus said that it was as we bore fruit that we glorified God and proved our discipleship. But we cannot bear fruit apart from Christ.

d. "Increasing in the knowledge of God." Not knowledge about God or Christ. But knowledge of God. Do you know God or Christ more intimately than you knew Him ten years ago? Is the relationship between you more intimate and personal than it was when you first met Him? Are you increasing in the knowledge of Him?

e. "Strengthened with power according to the might of his glory, unto all patience and longsuffering with Joy." Come think of it, what most of us need is not more knowledge of the right, but power to do the right. We must be "strengthened with power in the inner man." Our wills must be bolstered by His power.

f. "Giving thanks unto the Father, who made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light . . ." Thanks be unto God who by His great love and mercy has given to us salvation in Jesus Christ, and has given us an inheritance of things incorruptible. We Christians just do not realize or appreciate what God in Christ has done for us, or we would be more grateful, and more fruitful. We have been delivered from the power of darkness, translated into His kingdom, redeemed from the bondage of sin, and been forgiven of our sins. Our lips and our lives will show forth our praise to God.

The Image of The Invisible God.

"No man hath seen God at any time," said Jesus, that is with the physical eye. But in Jesus Christ we see the image of the invisible God. "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father" said Jesus. The men of the New Testament felt sure that in Jesus Christ there dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. He was full of grace and truth, and they beheld in Him the Glory of God as revealed in his face and his functions. If a man wants to know what God is like, let him look at Jesus Christ. He revealed God, made Him known, incarnated Him, declared His glory.

Christ Above All Things.

"And he is before (or above) all things." For Paul, Christ was above all. He was above (1) "Things visible and invisible," the material universe and that therein is. Christ is Lord of Nature. In him were all things created . . . all things have been created through him and unto him.

He is above (2) "thrones and principalities and dominions and powers." He is Lord of the world of the spirit, and all powers derive their powers from him and are answerable to him. Power is a sacred solemn stewardship and men must give an account of their stewardship.

He is above (3) "The Church . . . He is the head of the body, the church." The Church is the body of Christ, and he is the Head of the Church. (Continued on page 15.)

"What's Your Name?"By S. M. SMITH.

Your name is more important than you think. You don't like for anyone to misspell or mispronounce it. You don't hesitate to show it. Your name is a part of you. When you were born the first thing your parents were concerned about was the name they would give you. When a young lady marries she gives up her name to take that of her husband. It's easy to become proud of our family name. In announcing himself before a strange audience the speaker says "My name is John Brown," or if a lady "My name is Mary Smith." The two most common names are John and Mary—both of biblical significance.

The Chinese identify a ruler's name so closely with his position that they never stamp it on their coins, as this might help evil spirits to find him. In the Bible the name of a thing usually indicates its character. Thus we say in the Lord's Prayer "Hallowed be thy name." We connect a name with the character of the thing it represents. The word "snake" creates a creepy feeling entirely different from the word "rose." In Genesis the Bible tells us how God gave to Adam the difficult task of naming all the animals. Poor Adam must have scratched his head more than once trying to decide what he would call some of them.

Give a man a bad name, whether he deserves it or not and you do him harm.

We are free to make the kind of a world we want to live in. Look for the good and we help to create it. Think health and we get it. Think sickness and it finally comes into being.

There's a hymn we like to sing:

"Take the name of Jesus with you
Child of sorrow and woe.
It will joy and comfort you,
Take it then where'er you go."

Two women were told that they had internal growths. One of them went to her lawyer and made a will. She said, "I know I am going to die." She did. The other one said, "I'm going to look on what the doctor calls a growth as an opportunity for spiritual growth."

A hungry man came to a back door and asked for food. "You're a tramp," the lady said. "Nothing doing." He went on. The next lady said, "I'm glad to see you. I want my lawn mowed. I'll prepare your dinner." The man did a fine job. Later the two women met. "You have such a beautiful garden," one said. "Where did you find the man?" "He's the man you turned away. He was Swiss—couldn't speak good English."

What's your name?

EXCERPTS FROM STATEMENT OF BISHOP OXNAM.

(Continued from page 5.)

been misrepresented. In this connection I would like to file with the committee a bibliography covering my personal position relative to communism. . . .

Can the philosophy of an individual be determined by a scissors and paste process of cutting out clippings that damn? Why did the individual who clipped derogatory statements concerning me fail to clip such announcements as the following: My appointment by the Joint Chiefs of Staff to visit the Mediterranean Theater and the European Theatre of Operations during the war; or my appointment by Secretary Forrestal as member of the Secretary of the Navy's Civilian Advisory Committee; or the announcement that the Navy awarded me the highly prized Certificate of Appreciation for service during the war; or that I had been invited to be the guest of Archbishop Damaskinos, then Regent of Greece, and that the King of Greece has awarded me the Order of the Phoenix; or that I had represented the American churches at the Enthronement of the Archbishop of Canterbury; or that I had been appointed by the President as a member of the President's Commission on Higher Education; or that I was chairman of the Commission approved by the President to study Post-War Religious Conditions in Germany? This might be called "pertinent" information. I have held the highest offices it is in the power of fellow-churchmen to confer upon me, such as the presidency of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. I am one of the presidents of the World Council of Churches, perhaps the highest honor that can come to a clergyman. I hold positions of responsibility in the church I love and seek to serve, among them Secretary of the Council of Bishops.

We cannot beat down the communist menace by bearing false witness against fellow Americans. The communist wants a divided America, an America whose citizens are suspicious of each other, an America without trust, an America open to infiltration. I believe this Committee will wish to end a practice that plays into communist hands.

Congress is considering proposals for the reform of Investigating Committee procedures. It may, at first, seem drastic to propose that the so-called "Public files" be closed out; but is there any need of any file other than the investigative files, as they have been recently described? Could not all the material that is of value in the public files be included in the investigative files? If, for purposes of education or exposure, the Committee decides that public statements must be made, is there any reason why a careful statement that will stand scrutiny cannot be made by studying the material in the investigative files. The Committee informs us that it does not vouch for accuracy of the public files, that everything in these files is available to the public elsewhere. Why, then, should public money be spent in maintaining such public files. . . .

I respectfully ask the Committee to order that my "file" be corrected so as to tell the truth, if that is all that can be done; that it publicly announce its mistakes in my case; but better, that the public files be closed out, and the release of unverified material described herein be discontinued. . . .

I conclude. I believe the churches have done and are doing far more to destroy the communist threat to faith and to freedom than all investigating committees put together. I think the chairman of this Committee, after a friendly interview, concurred publicly in that statement when I made it in his presence. This Committee might well have the cooperation of millions of citizens who belong to the churches, if it would cease practice that many of us believe to be un-American, and would turn itself to the real task and the real threat. But these citizens will never cooperate in practices that jeopardize the rights of free men won after a thousand year struggle for political and religious freedom. They will cooperate effectively with agencies everywhere that honestly seek to build the free society, where free men worship God according to the dictates of conscience, and serve their fellow men in accordance with Christ's law of love.

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Recently we have received into the orphanage Dorothy Taylor, Donald Taylor, Micheal Heritage and Everette Heritage. They are three fine boys, and one lovely girl. They are adjusting to the life of our big family in a good way. We are real proud of the response they make to the life here and have good hopes for them. It is a tragedy to have to turn to a child-caring institution, but one can not realize until he has direct connection with such a home how good it is to come to their rescue. Seven other children whose father is dead and whose mother is trying to make existence bearable for the seven of them are making applications to us. They range from two years old to 13 years old. We cannot take the two years old but if they come up with proper recommendations and health certificates we shall consider six of them. Their case is very urgent and they are being interceded for by the Rev. John Lackey of our Apple's Chapel church.

Sorrow, poverty, and not knowing which way to turn with such a large family of children is a burden most of us know nothing of. I hear these stories and see the need and am proud of a church that wishes to do its share in real help. When I see the expressions of the poor little children, observe their need of clothes, food and banishment of anxiety and fear my heart goes out to them. I know you want us to do what we can for destitute little ones. It is a real responsibility to take them under the tender care of such a good home as we have here. They will find happy playmates, well-fed and clothed with bright happy faces.

Little Donald Taylor was crying and fretting over his plight when he first came here. He is a little fellow ready to begin school this fall. Little Brenda Proffitt who is only—not quite four—but who likes it here very much came to him and in her baby talk told him not to cry he would like it fine here in a day or so. Whereupon through his tears he roughly pushed her away. He didn't want any baby telling him how to do! Little Brender took it in her stride with the laconic comment: "He popped me!" By now Donald is all right and as busy as any body being good and taking his place among the little folks. In the meantime Brenda's nearly seven year old brother, Roger, has helped him to see the right way to treat a little girl and it seems everybody is happy. Wise handling of the little ones by kindly matrons smooths the way for everybody.

In Deut. 32: 2, I read: "May my teaching drop as the rain . . . my speech as gentle rain upon the tender grass." It is a worthy prayer. God has given many people who love Little children a gracious answer to that many centuries old prayer. Is there anything gentler than gentle rain falling on tender grass. I like to pray that prayer, and the words are so beautiful they are in a song, and that song having lived for centuries is just as good today as it was nearly 3,000 years ago. God's teachers live and their works do follow them.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR JULY 30, 1953.

Commodities for the Week.

Cradle Roll Mothers, Holy Neck Church, Quilt.
Vacation Bible School, Apple's Chapel, Gifts.
Mrs. J. H. Burgess, Jr., Leaksville, N. C., Coupons.
Woman's Fellowship, Shelton Memorial Church, Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 8,704.47
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Catawba Springs$ 43.04
Liberty (Vance) 61.61
Wake Chapel 45.53
150.18
Eastern Va. Conference:
Antioch$ 9.00
Liberty Spring, Special . 10.00

Suffolk S. S.	150.00
Union (So.)	14.00
Union (Surry) S. S.	24.00
		207.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Hines Chapel S. S.	$ 6.00
Mt. Zion S. S.	7.38
Union (Va.) S. S.	5.00
		18.38
Western N. C. Conference:
Albemarle	$ 15.00
		15.00
Total	$	390.56
Grand total	$	9,095.03

Special Offerings

Amount brought forward	$11,464.30
D. M. Davidson, Jr., Gib-sonville, N. C., in mem-ory of A. W. Thomas	$ 10.00
Progressive Bible Class, Newport News, Va. for Betty Oakes	20.00
Philathea Class, Reids-ville Church	10.00
Irvin Sharpe	40.00
J. H. Webster, Pittsboro, N. C.	10.00
Special Gifts	98.25
	188.25
Grand total	$11,652.55
Total for the week	$ 578.81
Total for the year	$20,747.58

STEWARDSHIP OF THE GRACE OF GOD.

(Continued from page 6.)

and we are not going to find fulness of life, simply in hewing out a rational and modern religious belief—unless we put it into our life and into action. We are not going to find the greater power in faith by building churches or by establishing new programs, unless we also are willing to lose our lives for Jesus' sake.

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

.....
(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

.....
(Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Have
You
Read?

CRUX ANSATA. H. G. Wells. Free
Thought Press Association. $1.50.

The author, a foremost writer of modern times, early won the reputation of dealing with facts and not with fancy. Though the numerous books he wrote during the past three decades are all heavy reading and his style is somewhat involved, nevertheless his books have been read with eagerness by the rank and file as well as by students and scholars throughout the world.

His book, "Crux Ansata" is a classic review and evaluation of the genius of the Roman Catholic Church and the part it has played in "The Human Drama," or to some "The Human Tragedy," down through the centuries. Every minister ought to read "Crux Ansata" for his own enlightenment in the facing of the facts of history and of contemporary life.

ROY C. HELFENSTEIN.

Richmond, Va.

THE LATTIMORE STORY. John T. Flynn. Devin-Adair C. New York. 1953. 118pp. $1.00.

The author says of the story he has unfolded about Owen Lattimore and the betrayal of China to Communism, that "It was unbelievable." It was just that. By the record, however, he has related this strange Dantesque tale from the work of Americans and their treasonous helpers: Americans taking orders, eagerly, from Communist Russian leadership. It gives the account of the surrender of hundreds of millions of human beings to the hell of nihilism, which also plans to destroy America and the entire Western civilization, in the communization of America.

It is unbelievable, but true that the Rockefeller Foundation should have financed the work of the Institute of Pacific Relations, as did the Carnegie Foundation.

It is unbelievable that Japan's offer of surrender, on the same terms that were accepted later, placed in the hands of President Roosevelt two days before his departure for Yalta, should have been refused because the plans of Communist Russia did not countenance that early a peace in the East.

Many more proven facts were unbelievable—but they all synthesize into one harmonious whole, the surrender of Asia and the use of America's strength for the purposes of Communism. Unbelievable it was and is that truthful, patriotic Americans who expose treason should be pillorized for their services! And that the religious press and platform of our country should have given such aid and comfort to the enemy!

JOHN F. C. GREEN.

McKeesport, Pa.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

Church. It is the visible and invisible organization, or organism, through which Christ expresses his mind and his heart and his will and members of that Church. Christ's body, the Church, will be effective in the world only as you and I allow him to express his mind and heart and will and purpose through us.

(4) That in all things he might have the preeminence. In all things, education and art and science and music and family life, and business and religion, in all things that he might have the preeminence.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING
LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

STEWARDSHIP NUGGETS

BY WARREN H. DENISON

Grinnell, Iowa

Christian stewardship must begin with me before it can get into my home, group, board, church. This applies to a father, a pastor, a trustee, a deacon, a denominational secretary, a church school teacher, a committeeman.

A pastor sustains the same relationship to the Finance Department of his church as to any other department of it. He is the pastor of all his people. Their giving is a vital spiritual life matter and not a secular matter, as some seem to think.

It is exceedingly interesting, and very revealing, to note the intimate relationship between a church's stewardship teaching and atmosphere and the corresponding enlistment, or lack of it, of the full man power of the church, as to talent, finances and executive ability.

It is an error to think that Christian Stewardship is an elective course, that it is like dessert at a meal, nice, good, all right, not a necessity or a basic philosophy of life. On the other hand, it is vital, fundamental, and undergirds all our relations to the material area of life, the economic, the "oikonomas" area.

When churches reduce their benevolent budgets below what they should be, they almost invariably find that they have a more difficult time in securing them, and they are further finding that instead of helping to secure their current budgets, it is more difficult to underwrite them. When will we ever learn what a mistake it is to minimize benevolent giving!

It is quite common for one to think that his giving to Christian causes is expense. This is a basic error. Giving is investment rather than expense. It gives one a far different attitude of mind when he realizes that his giving is investment rather than cost and expense. God is a bountiful God. He multiplies spiritually and materially what we invest in his work. Behold every harvest field! Such a change of attitude will give a new joy to the giver. Stewardship does not subtract from life and purse.

Many Christians think of stewardship merely in relation to giving. True, it has to do with giving, which is the supreme Christian grace, but primarily, Christian stewardship has to do with all our relations to the world of material things, possessions: their acquisition, use, expenditure, saving or hoarding, final distribution by wills, as well as the matter of giving, as important as that is. There are right ways and motives and wrong ways and motives in doing all these. What are you and your church teaching and doing as to these relationships?

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

AUGUST 6, 1953 AUGUST 13, 1953

NUMBER 32

God Answers Prayer

I know not by what methods rare,
But this I know—God answers prayer.
I know not when he sends the word
That tells us fervant prayer is heard;
I know it cometh soon or late,
Therefore we need to pray and wait.
I know not if the blessing sought
Will come in just the guise I thought.
I leave my prayer to him alone
Whose will is wiser than my own.

—Anon.

News Flashes

The August 27 issue of THE SUN will be the "Virginia Valley Conference Issue." Rev. Henry V Harmon, pastor-at-large of the Conference will have charge, and we look forward to a most interesting paper.

Rev. M. T. Sorrell, pastor of Third Avenue Christian Church, Danville, Virginia, for the past twenty-seven years, announced to the congregation on Sunday morning, August 2, that he would close his ministry with the church on November 15, 1953. Mr. Sorrell did not give his future plans.

Largest Class of Navy Chaplains Since World War II

Only recently a group of thirty-three chaplains, including men from thirteen different denominations, have been undergoing an indoctrination course at the U. S. Naval Schools Command, at Newport, Rhode Island. Two new church groups were represented for the first time. They were the Greek Orthodox Church and the Seventh Day Adventists.

These new "sky-pilots" hail from a wide variety of different backgrounds. Chaplain Robert A. Canfield of the United Presbyterian Church in Alameda, California, a former Master Sergeant with six years marine duty, served with the First Marine Division at New Britain, Peleliu and Okinawa. His decorations include a Silver Star and two Purple Hearts. He has had practical experience, serving as Athletic Instructor at San Rafael Military Academy, and as Intern Chaplain at the State Prison, San Quentin, California. LTJG John Carroll Condit is a Catholic Chaplain who was a former organist at Kenrick Seminary in Webster Groves, Missouri.

LTJG Jack V. Crawford, a Chaplain of the Evangelical United Brethren, had previous duty in the navy as a Storekeeper Third Class. Chaplain J. A. S. Fisher, a Southern Baptist from Shreveport, La., saw action at Kiska, Tarawa, Kwajalein, Saipan and Tinian; his decorations include the Navy Commendation Ribbon and Navy Unit Citation. LTJG Thomas is another Southern Baptist from Louisiana who served on the Marshall Islands and on Tinian. Chaplain W.

(Continued on page 12.)

"Passi Flora"

By REV. JOHN F. C. GREEN,
Pastor of Evangelical Congregational Church, McKeesport, Pa.

Pastor Schmidt, for many years, gave comments on the life as time passed. He called them by our title, "Wayside Flowers."

To report a month's journey abroad, in a dozen countries, were beyond this available space. But—something may be said: We peoples learn from and with each other. And the barriers that keep peoples apart are the most dangerous of enemies to the well-being of all. . . .

On the night of Mrs. Green's and my arrival in London, the radio made an elaborate announcement. After a glowing introduction about a coming extra food allowance for the people, on the occasion of the coming coronation, the net result was: A pound of sugar and a quarter of a pound of margarine per person! The significant thing is that the Food Ministry would dare to make this eclat over so trivial a matter. What has Britain come to! Investigation showed that the food situation in Britain is deplorable. And that raises the question of why! After all the promise of something for less, via the road of socialism, with unnatural and unwarranted subsidies from America (which is being disliked more and more!) the British see their economy deteriorating! and we, of America and the church, who have suffered the New Deal propaganda, that it was to our advantage to waste our substance upon foreign economy, realize the fraud perpetrated upon us. . . .

That raises the question again: Why and by whom is leftism and ruinous "internationalism" being foisted upon us?

People are everywhere the first concern: "the greatest study of mankind is man." And here the picture is not good abroad. True, one can find signs of affluence and even of riotous living. We were comfortable in the hotels. London provided us heat and ample food, at reasonable rates. (Which was not the case on my visit in 1949.) This is better publicity for American dollars. But the people are not doing well in the heaven of something for less. And in Spain there was visible no bright light on the horizon. The workmen received 14 pesetas a day (48c). Road construction showed not a trace of power machinery. The group of women did their washing at a coldwater trough and spread the laundry for bleaching upon the wayside. The army, the feudalists, a mediaeval church, the Falangist Party have, it appears, the conditions in hand and intend to remain in the Middle Ages. Persecution of Protestants in full force. But the dean of Protestant pioneers holds the future for religious freedom to be brighter than ever, in that those who now profess it, against their own advantage of Roman Catholic conformity, do so out of conviction; and that the blood of martyrs is ever the seed of the church. Our attitude, in America, must not be the blindness of mere refusal to recognize Spain, but to include Spain in our Sisterhood of nations and to press for over-due changes for liberalism and social progress.

We have—our leftist leadership—never hesitated to collaborate with dictatorships, provided they were left! Bloody Tito was again given tacit approval in the leading Christian Century, by one of the religious leaders (always left!) in a recent issue. . . . Germany is the key to Europe, and to American security! And our leftist leadership has done everything to weaken our defense and to compromise the unity and restoration of Germany. It is a road of defeat, for them and for us. The surface looks good. The stores are filled with goods. Prices, however, are unreachable for the masses. Meat is at our level—with German, lower income. My niece buys three pounds of meat a week for her table of ten. More is beyond her reach. Coal is being taken (the old-fashioned word is "stolen") from the Ruhr, by Allied control, below world-market rates. This robbery equals a quarter of a billion dollars per annum. Against this and other exploitation the vaunted aid to Germany becomes a mockery. In fact, America has not replaced values taken from that country. The result is economic disadvantage to the masses. One-half of the Germans cannot afford the 1,400 pounds of coal allowed per year for cooking and heating.

Charity is a true grace. And the great kindness of many Americans in meeting this Allied-made want in Germany is supremely commendable. The gratitude of Germans is one of the bonds of Christian fellowship. But it had been better, were better, to make this charity needless, instead of creating it and then saying, "Look, how good we are to those people."

(Continued on page 8.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. DANIELEY, Editor, 428 Westwood, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Western North Carolina Laymen Will Meet in Liberty

The Laymen's Fellowship of the Western North Carolina Conference will be meeting with the laymen of our Liberty Church, August 29th, in the Town Hall, Liberty, N. C., at 7:00 P. M. An interesting program is being planned for this occasion. As our men recall it was at Liberty that we got our fine beginning. So let's celebrate by everyone coming back to Liberty on August 29th. Now before you get there we would like for you to be thinking about what your Fellowship will be doing about Moonelon. At our meeting at Coleridge it was voted to bring to the next meeting our decision as to what part we would accept of the goal of $2,500.00 toward the erection of a central building and development of the Moonelon site.

The time is drawing near for us to be thinking about our officers for the next two years. A committee will be appointed at Liberty to make nominations at the meeting in November. If you have men in mind for any office please let the committee know about them.

I feel sure that you will not want to miss this meeting for there will be some mighty good eating, singing and fellowship, if you will be present to add your bit to a good time together. Now let us not forget the Laymen's Bell. Pleasant Grove got it last time. Who will be the winner this time? Bring visitors — they will help you get it.

S. H. PELL.

* * * * *

Report on Moonelon

The treasurer of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention, S. H. Pell, reports having received from the Asheboro Church $103.00 and from the Albemarle Church $50.00, making a total of $153.00 for Moonelon. These churches are from the Western North Carolina Conference. Hats off to them as being the first to lead in sending their contribution.

J. E. D.

Harsh counsels have no effect; they are like hammers which are always repulsed by the anvil.—Helvetius.

Criminal Jurist Believes Prohibition Cycle About Due

A leading Boston criminal jurist foresees a strong public sentiment by the early 1960's for prohibition, and he exhibited charts and statistics at a recent meeting of the Institute of Scientific Studies for the Prevention of Alcoholism to bear out his prediction.

The speaker was Joseph T. Zottoli, associate justice of the Municipal Court of Boston, a recognized authority on crime as affected by alcoholism.

He believes that prohibition sentiment comes to the fore in 30-year cycles. When the public is convinced through facts and figures that drinking is the major cause of ever-increasing criminal cases, it will demand prohibition again, said the judge.

He said that 60 per cent of all cases in his court were related to liquor. There is about a 60 per cent difference in the number of drunkenness arrests during prohibition and during repeal, he added.

His address was followed by a panel discussion concerning medical, religious and legal measures that would effectively prevent the spread of alcoholism.

Toward the cheerful home, the children gather as clouds and as doves to their windows, while from the home that is the abode of discontent and strife and trouble, they fly forth as vultures to rend their prey.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardestel.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Coleclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year	$3.00
Two Years	5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195....

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Consider Investing in Elon

In approximately three weeks, September 8 to be exact, Elon College will open her doors for the sixty-fourth time to the boys and girls, men and women of the Southern Convention.

During those sixty-four years many changes have been wrought at Elon, and many changes have occurred in the Southern Convention. Indeed, many of those changes in the convention may be traced directly to the fact that Elon College was opened sixty-four years ago.

There is little need to recount the number of ministers she has trained, or the number of lay leaders she has produced for our church. We all know that story by heart. And, incidentally, it is a worthwhile story. But what is of concern to us now is what will Elon contribute to the church in the future.

In the final analysis, that is dependent upon what we as individuals and a group do for Elon now. None of us is under compulsion to invest one cent in Elon College, but each of us should consider seriously whether an investment placed there would not bring us handsome returns. We believe it will, judging by the past record. Will you not look over that record, and see what is your judgment?

According to reports which have appeared from time to time in The Sun, we as a church, are behind in our contributions on three counts: The Apportionment, the Sustaining Fund, and the Campaign Fund. We know that that is entirely too many funds for one objective. Let's get busy and get them out of the way. Let's give our church college an opportunity to give back its best to us.

Religion and Rest

By REV. STANLEY C. HARRELL

One cannot but wonder at times whether or not our religion is bringing to us the rest which the Master intended for us to enjoy. It is surprising how much the Bible has to say about rest. And there is nothing that the people of this modern age so urgently need. One of the first lessons that we need to learn is that cessation of activity does not always mean rest. Rest has more largely to do with the mental and spiritual than it does with the physical. There are times when rest can be found only in activity. There are multitudes of inactive people who would find relief for their weariness should there be opened up for them a channel of activity that promised to change the conditions that have become so wearying to the soul.

It would be most interesting if we might have testimonials from those who attend the worship services of our churches, as to whether or not they are receiving spiritual refreshing from the program of worship. It might be of interest to know whether those who are making our worship programs are formulating them with the end in view that they may bring rest to tired souls. The sort of rest which is desired can come only with an increasing faith in the goodness, love and power of God. Worship should serve to bring to the soul a consciousness of God's presence, a realization of his willingness to help, and to inspire in the worshipper that faith which will cause a yielding of the self to God's hands.

All that man has learned of the working of the laws of this natural universe has not removed the consciousness of the responsibility which rests upon his shoulders, nor diminished his sense of the need of help in the bearing of his burdens. It is just such a promise of help which religion offers; and it is the province of worship to bring this help to bear upon the human heart. There are times when it may seem that it is the chief work of the church to bring to the attention of men the work that needs to be done. But of what use is a realization of the work to be done unless there be also a realization of the power by which it is to be accomplished. Rest does not necessarily mean a laying down of the burden. Tired soldiers, on a long, weary march, frequently stop by the roadside and, without unslinging the pack, rest its weight upon some friendly bank, while strength is being renewed to carry it on. Many are the souls who need to hear the Master say: "Come ye apart, and rest awhile."

Can We Justify a "Christian" Education?

By GILBERT L. GUFFIN
President, Eastern Baptist College

Is it possible in this modern day to justify the existence of a college that admits a Christian bias?

We interpret a Christian college to be an institution of higher education which, while adhering to accepted academic standards, employs active Christians only as its faculty members and administrative officers, accepts the teachings of Christ and the ethics of the New Testament as its motivating principal and basic philosophy and as the most important element in its curriculum, gives Christ preeminence in its entire life and program, and maintains as its chief goal the promotion of Christianity universally, especially through the means of affording to society trained lay and professional Christian leaders.

Accepting this definition of a Christian college what justification may be pointed out for the establishing of a college of this character?

Obviously, it would be difficult to justify the enormous effort and expenditure required to build such a college unless there is some unusual and significant motivation for it. Evangelical Christian educators believe such a motivation exists. That motivation is, while providing an educational experience to the student academically, the peer of that which can be obtained in the same area elsewhere, also to afford a certain "over-plus" which can be found in all too few schools today.

And what is that "over-plus"? It is to give, or at least expose the student to, an ethical and spiritual experience and philosophy of life, essential in our judgment to the development of the whole man and thus to the well-being of society.

To those who insist that the Christian bias we give the student is only a prejudice and not an essential "over-plus," our rebuttal is that we believe it can still be defended. In fact, we believe it is sheer folly to claim any teaching can be done without a bias. No matter how objective the teacher or institution may attempt to be, either by neutrality or negation, by personality or identification, by attitude or by lifting the eyebrow, some kind of bias is unavoidably expressed. A mathematics teacher may lean over backwards to teach objectively, but either his silence or his sneer, if not his overt act, will inevitably subject the student he teaches to the influence of his own bias. As President Shearer of Alderson-Broadus College has well said, "Neutrality and objectivity in instruction simply do not exist. Just the tone of a teacher's voice can easily betray her personal stand . . . I submit that the more vicious position is the one which claims neutrality, but cannot carry it out, rather than the one that claims a bias and attempts to build a staff and program around the claim. The very existence of a human being presupposes a subjective bias."

Since biases in our judgment are inevitable, the problem is not to avoid them but instead to evaluate them and frankly try to give the kind of bias that will be for the greatest good to the greatest number. The Communist, to be sure, accepts this principle at its full value but the point at which we part company with him is the basis on which the bias we choose to teach is selected. The Communist's bias is based upon the view of man as an economic animal, while the Christian view sees man as created in the image of God. The bias of the Christian interpretation of life and Christian ethics, we are convinced, must somehow be given to a sufficiently large percentage of mankind to influence the direction of history, if man be saved from appalling suffering and perhaps from racial suicide.

We believe our position is defensible and that the bias we readily acknowledge we intend to give the student will afford a distinct "over-plus" to each student who responds to it and through him to mankind. For example, if the student is influenced by Christian conviction, to such a strong bias against stealing that he will avoid it and even abhor the motive, we have helped both the student and society, certainly the latter. If that student had not been given this bias, he might have stolen your savings, your vote, your freedom, your income tax or your wife.

Ex President Conant, of Harvard University, in a speech which received wide attention awhile ago, declared the private and especially the church-related school is a menace to democracy. He claimed it creates division in our society and works against national unity. We strongly disagree.

An educator in writing the history of one of our states referred to the church related colleges as "monuments to sectarian prejudice." Evidently the educator's vision was blurred. Actually, I think the facts of history reveal they are stones of another kind—the foundation stones in fact upon which our democracy and the sustaining of moral ideals at the heart of our nation in large part rest. It must not be forgotten that the great schools of our land which ante-date the birth of our nation and out of which mighty influences came to shape the destiny of America in its early days were in the main church-related schools or else were established directly or indirectly by Protestant religious groups. Such were Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, William and Mary, Columbia, the school which became the University of Pennsylvania, Princeton, Brown and Rutgers. These schools were much more than monuments to sectarian prejudice. They were, to change the figure, the seed-bed out of which democracy and moral idealism grew. It is our conviction that democracy can be successfully nourished only if schools maintaining the same Christian convictions these schools manifested in the early days of the nation are perpetuated. Their Christian bias, far from dividing the people, as some people fear, cultivates the very principle which make a nation strong. They are for example the recognition of the supreme worth of the individual as a creation of God with certain inalienable rights, the necessity of morality and righteousness in personal practice and human relationships, the sacredness of possessions, the right of human freedom of religion which is basic to all other freedoms, the responsibility of the strong to help bear the burdens of the weak, the fact that all men and especially those who govern are accountable to God.

The very foundation principles of democracy are drawn from Christian teaching. Sound Christian schools where these principles continue to be enshrined in the hearts of young citi-

(Continued on page 13.)

Survey Shows Religious Programs Help Thousands in U. S. Penal Institutions

By DR. R. H. MARTIN
In The Christian Statesman

We have just completed a very interesting study to find out the place given religion in the penal institutions—penitentiaries, prisons, reformatories—of our country.

From the information obtained from the penal codes of the various states and directly from superintendents, wardens, and chaplains of these institutions, it can be stated unqualifiedly that religion has a place of first importance in these institutions.

Religious worship, religious instruction and spiritual ministrations are provided for in all the states, and required by law in the majority of them.

By the laws of 11 states, Bibles purchased at state expenses are placed in the hands of the convicts.

These states are: Alabama, Illinois, Maine, Massachusetts, Michigan, Nebraska, Nevada, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, and South Dakota.

In nearly every other state they are provided for the inmates by chaplains, the Gideons, the American Bible Society, or other organizations.

We find that 38 states have chaplains, most of them appointed by requirement of law and giving full-time service and, with rare exceptions paid from public funds.

States Listed

These states are: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Missouri, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Jersey, New Mexico, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Wyoming, Washington and West Virginia.

Apparently a number of these states have only one chaplain. A majority have more—two, three, four—and some of the larger states many more. Illinois has at least eight chaplains. The Commissioner of the Department of Corrections of Michigan reports:

"We have five full-time chaplains whose salaries are paid by the state, one part-time chaplain—a Jewish rabbi—paid by the state, two voluntary Protestant chaplains, and in addition, voluntary groups at the prison camps scattered throughout the state."

The supervising chaplain of the Department of Corrections of California writes:

"There are 13 full-time chaplains, three half-time chaplains and one quarter-time chaplain serving on salary for the Department of Corrections. In addition, the program is supplemented by the assistance of eight student chaplain assistants at the San Quentin prison. Visiting clergymen also assist."

Report Cited

As for New York State, the Deputy Commissioner of Corrections reports:

"Within the 16 institutions under the jurisdiction of this Department, Protestant and Catholic chaplains are engaged on a full-time basis. Jewish chaplains are engaged at each institution on a part-time or visiting basis." This would make a total of 48 chaplains.

The laws of some of the states are quite definite in specifying the duties of the chaplains. For example, the Illinois law requires that each chaplain shall:

1. Perform religious services . . . and attend to the spiritual wants of the convicts.
2. Visit the convicts in their cells for the giving of moral and religious instruction.
3. Furnish at the expense of the state a Bible to each convict.
4. Visit daily the sick in the hospital.
5. Give an annual report to the Department relative to the religious and moral conduct of the convicts, stating what services they have performed and the fruit of their instruction.

In the prisons of the remaining states, religious worship and spiritual ministrations are provided for either by requirement of law, or without it by custom. Chaplains are not employed by the state to render this service but clergymen—Protestant, Catholic, Jewish—perform this service on a voluntary basis and usually, though not always, without financial remuneration.

Study Impressive

One cannot study the prison laws and requirements of the states without being deeply impressed with the importance which the state, its public officials and citizens, give to the Bible and religion as a means of rehabilitating lives that have gone wrong—so wrong that for the safety of society they had to be shut up within the four walls of our prisons; so essential to their reclamation that the state secures and pays for Bibles to place in their hands, and employs and pays chaplains to minister to their spiritual needs.

The bearing this has upon the issue of the Bible and religion in our public schools is so manifest that it needs only to be suggested.

If the Bible and religion are so essential in the reclaiming of lives that have gone wrong, are they not equally essential in preventing them from going wrong? Wouldn't it be wiser and saner to use the Bible and religion in forming the character of our youth in the public schools than in reforming their character later when they get into prison? Why wait to lock the stable door until after the horse is stolen? "O, consistency, thou art a jewel!"

Isn't it passing strange that Illinois, California, New York and some other states make such elaborate provisions for the use of the Bible, for religious worship and instruction in their penal institutions, and make no provision for, but exclude the Bible and religion from their public schools?

If constitutional and legal to have the Bible and religion in state prisons and reformatories, how can it be unconstitutional and illegal to have them in our public schools? Both are institutions of the state, under state control and maintained at the state expense.

Has anyone opposed to the Bible and religion in our public schools ever opposed them in our prisons on the ground of religious liberty or of the union of church and state, or for any other reason? Why do not these opponents of the Bible and religion in our schools busy themselves in having our Legislatures enact laws to prevent their use in the penal institutions of the state, or in testing the legality of their use in our courts? Hasn't the time come to use some common sense and give the Bible and religion the same place in our schools that we give them in our prisons?

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Summer Commencement

For a number of years Elon College has conducted summer school but not until recently have we held a second commencement. Previously the students who completed requirements for graduation in summer school were graduated with the class of the ensuing year. This was very inconvenient to the graduate, since all graduates are required to be present and receive their diplomas in person. During the intervening months, these graduates might scatter to the four ends of the earth and they found it difficult and expensive to return for graduation in May. Consequently, the faculty recommended to the Board of Trustees of Elon College that a commencement be authorized at the completion of the last term of summer school. The recommendation was approved and on two previous occasions, Elon College has held the summer commencement.

The summer session of the Sixty Third Annual Commencement of Elon College will be held on Friday evening, August 21, at eight o'clock. There will be thirty in this section of the graduating class. Dr. Charles F. Carroll, Superintendent of Public Instruction for the State of North Carolina, will be the commencement speaker. Reverend William T. Scott, Superintendent of the Southern Convention, will offer the prayer and Reverend Tucker Humphries, pastor of our Reidsville Church, will deliver the Bibles. Fletcher Moore will be the organist and Roger Gibbs the special soloist. The general public is invited to attend.

* * * * *

Prospective Enrollment for 1953-54

North Carolina is experiencing the worst drowth on record. Crops have suffered beyond repair. In certain sections there will be but little corn, if any. Fields are parched and corn is drying in the stalk. Tobacco has suffered greatly. Rains came last night and changed the temperature, refreshed the earth; late corn is coming out of the wilt, and the tobacco is beginning to spread. This is good news. When the farmers are hopeful, they will send their sons and daughters to college. When they are discouraged, it is difficult for them to see their way clear to assume the financial responsibilities of an education for their children.

The government is still exercising its authority to commandeered students for military service. Actually more of Elon College's students have been drafted than were in the previous two years. Certainly war is no respecter of persons. Students of all types and grades are leaving for camps. With cease fire in Korea, you would naturally assume that the draft boards would be more lenient, but not so; they seem to be more austere and commanding.

Even though we will face the results of the disastrous drowth and stepped up military inductions, still prospective enrollment for 1953-54 remains hopeful. Last year Elon College had an increase of nearly fifteen percent over the previous year. We may not have an increase over last year but we shall not fall too far behind. There is still room at the college, and there are a number of students who have expressed an interest in Elon College, but will delay the decision to apply for admission.

With better times on the farm, in business, and industry, we shall have better times on the campus of our college. Cooperation of our ministers, Sunday school superintendents, teachers and laymen, will be greatly appreciated in these closing days of summer.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

There are two hundred churches and five conferences in the Southern Convention. These churches have been apportioned a total of $15,000 for the college. To date, including this week's report, we have received a total of $6,346.72. We are quite a way from the goal, but we are confident that eventually we shall reach it.

Looking over the report this week, you will find that we have one contribution from Eastern North Carolina Conference, two from Eastern Virginia Conference, one from the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, and one from the Virginia Valley Central Conference. That is five churches out of two hundred which contributed this week. The size of the contributions are most encouraging.

If our churches could form the habit of contributing regularly to conference apportionment for the college, the totals would be most encouraging. As we think of the record made by the Sunday schools and churches during the summer months, we are made to marvel. Considering the total amounts contributed, they have done very, very well and their contributions have been most helpful to the college.

Previously reported $ 6,103.24

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Piney Plain $ 38.00

Eastern Va. Conference:

Rosemont $ 40.00

Christian Temple S. S. ... 134.14

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Graham, Providence Memorial $ 23.00

Virginia Valley Conference:

Winchester S. S. $ 8.34

243.48

Total to date $ 6,346.72

"Love is the active principle of Christianity. A man may climb the mountain of faith to its highest peak, reaching such a height that it seems but a step into heaven itself, and he may sit down and close his eyes to the needs of those about him. Hope may burn at white heat within the heart, but produce no deeds of service. These are passive virtues. But the soul filled with love cannot be still. Love will liberate the energies which pride represses. Love will hear no voice but that which says, 'Go and minister.' Love will not be confined to the limits of the church, nor to the limits of any aristocracy such as that of intellect or of wealth. Nay, it will be confined to no nation and to no race, but will freely spend itself for the extension of the kingdom throughout the earth."

In the business of life, Man is the only product. And there is only one direction in which man can possibly develop, if he is to make a better living or yield a bigger dividend to himself, to his race, to nature or to God. He must grow in knowledge, in wisdom, in kindness and in understanding.—Kitchen.

Capacity never lacks opportunity. It cannot remain undiscovered because it is sought by too many anxious to use it.—Cochran.

Missions at Home and Abroad

Freedom and Christianity in India

By QUENTIN LEISHER

India is an ancient land but a new democracy. Only five years ago she obtained her freedom. Her history, however, goes back into the dim past. Recently two cities, Harappa and Mohenji-daro, were discovered in India dating back to 3000 B. C. These cities show all the culture and understanding of modern gardening and sanitation. Since that time of ancient Indian culture, the country has passed through centuries of wars and foreign occupation. Throughout all this period of India's history there has persisted a great noble hankering, hunger and thirst after God. She has her difficulties accumulated for centuries but she has power and faith and capacity to solve them. "With the help of Jesus Christ" says Dr. B. P. Hivale, "India can do more than is expected." Within the last five years in spite of floods, earthquakes, civil war and famine she has made progress but there is a monumental task ahead.

I.

The lack of water for year around use has been a major problem. As much as 500 inches of rain will drench the land during four months, leaving the country a desert the remainder of the year. This devastating situation is being alleviated by a cooperative program on the part of the Governments of India and America. By 1956 the Bhakra Dam will irrigate 1,360,000 acres.

In addition the Tungabhadra Dam will irrigate 700,000 acres by 1957. Big dams alone are not enough. Villagers are building dams to conserve the water of the little streams running through their communities. Also in order to meet the tremendous needs for water, deep tube wells are being sunk to tap the subsurface water.

II.

The lack of efficient farming methods have retarded development. The farmers of India use poor wooden plows, but an iron plow will do better work with one-fifth the effort. The people of India eat the big potatoes and plant the small ones. Now they are learning that good seed produce big crops. The people of India burn the cow manure. Now they are learning to utilize the compost pits and mix the manure with the leaves and put it back into the soil. The poor cattle eat more than they are worth. Now by breeding good stock, stronger bullocks are produced which can give a hundred times more milk.

III.

The problem of illiteracy has blocked the way of building a new land in India. The people are still 85 per cent illiterate.

We are proud of the contribution made in India by our own Congregational missionary, Frank C. Laubach. For the past year he has been in charge of educating illiterates. A recent edition of Life magazine stated:

"Like generations of their ancestors, the villagers of Saptur in the south Indian state of Madras have always toiled away their days in the rice fields. But now when night comes they depart from the paths their fathers knew. Each with his lantern, they assemble on the clean sand of a dry river bed, set to work learning to read, write and do arithmetic. They are putting in double time to help effect an orderly revolution."

IV.

Sanitation posed a real problem to India's people. The students of the American Board Ahmednagar College in India have given their time and energy in reconstructing a few surrounding villages.

The women of the villages let the dirty water run out from the houses into the streets. This filth contributes to the spread of disease. The Ahmednagar College students construct Soak Pits (dry wells) in order that the dirty water may not contaminate the streets. Village wells are constructed on ground level. Winds and rains wash debris into these wells. Retaining walls are now being built to keep the drinking supply from being polluted.

Candies and cakes are displayed in the open streets. Flies and insects swarm about until the produce can hardly be seen. The college students teach the villagers to display their goods behind glass or screen.

The government in India also is doing its utmost to work on these problems. However, it will take many years before these problems are solved.

Dr. Frank Laubach says, "If the Christian Church lets it be known that she stands ready to help India solve her poverty and disease, there is open to us such an opportunity as we have not had in two thousand years. The masses on the march out of poverty will adopt Christianity if we help them up. The government of India and of every country in the East is threatened by communist revolutions and will welcome our help in satisfying their unhappy people. And unless we help them improve the social and economic condition they don't want the missionaries at all. We have no choice any longer. If we don't feed the multitude, heal the sick and open the eyes of the blind, we can't be in most countries at all."—The American Board News Bulletin.

"PASSI FLORA."

(Continued from page 2.)

Again, we have looked in vain for any word from the church leadership in this department. One wonders why always it has been with the political-economic leadership! Truth and justice, in mercy, are the best guarantors of peace. . . . We are the most loyal Americans when we appeal to truth and fair dealing. . . . Two over-all observations: One, that artificial, well-planned methods have been used to keep peoples apart, by those (including American leaders) who have directed the affairs of nations: that the peoples are woefully un-informed and misinformed. And that is bad for the future peace. Second: that the Christian fellowship is a reality. Wherever one may meet people as Christians, in the enclaves of their churches, he is at home, in a familiar atmosphere.

Thus it is truth and gospel that our faith binds us together in the Christian fellowship. And one who has the sensitive faculties of feeling this fellowship rejoices to be a member of this church, with all who profess the name of the Christ. It is a good work that the peoples of the church do in all lands. It is a privilege to come to know Christian friends. Many send their love and greetings to our people who have done a great work, in the unity of the spirit and the bond of peace.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

"Coffee Hour" in Winchester

As we drove home from the School of Missions at Elon College, Mrs. H. F. Nelson and Mrs. Ernest Pugh decided that they wanted to entertain our Women's Missionary group in Winchester at a "Coffee Hour" as soon as possible, to discuss ways of increasing attendance in our local work. This dream was realized on Tuesday morning, July 14. Let us visualize the scene.

It is ten o'clock in the morning at the home of Mrs. H. F. Nelson. Picture a spacious terrace, with a delightful breeze. Add for background lovely blooming flowers and green trees, a clear blue sky and bright morning sunshine. And for objects, more than thirty housewives, mothers and career women. This was the scene of the first "Coffee Hour" for the women of the Winchester Congregational Christian Church and their friends.

Mrs. C. L. Whitlock, president, led the morning meditation and unison prayer. Preceding the "buzz" sessions, fruit juice, coffee, tea and doughnuts and cinnamon toast were served to the group.

Constructive suggestions for the increasing of interest and correcting our faults that were derived from the "buzz" sessions were:

1. Begin meetings promptly.
2. Keep business sessions brief and to the point.
3. Place more emphasis on the weekly Prayer Circle.
4. Give young people more support—sponsor them at youth meetings.
5. Have a committee of three or four members to visit monthly the aged and ill members of the group.
6. Place more emphasis on home mission projects.
7. Stimulate interest in packing overseas boxes.
8. Interest more local church women in missions.

The meeting proved so stimulating that when on the same evening at eight o'clock, we met for our regular monthly meeting, we had an increase in attendance over last month. We also had a new member, one of those who had been invited to the "Coffee Hour."

We began using the first two suggestions at our next monthly meeting and expect to use all of the others in the near future.

Why not try having a "Coffee Hour" in your own local society, in the summer or early fall to plan for the coming year?

MRS. ADA WHITLOCK.

* * * * *

Pleasant Ridge (R) Reports

The Women's Missionary Society of Pleasant Ridge (R) Congregational Christian Church has had varied activities throughout this last year, including many that have been shared with other church groups.

The Holly Springs Friends and the Ramseur Christian church societies met with us for a World Community Day program. Our group attended a meeting of the Holly Springs society and took part in the program on "Equality and Human Rights." The World Day of Prayer was also observed in a service at Holly Springs, and May Fellowship Day was observed at the Spoon's Chapel Christian Church.

Our pastor, Rev. Max Vestal, presented a program on the meaning of church symbols, which was very much worthwhile.

The society presented corsages to the oldest mother, Mrs. Donna Cox, and to the youngest mother, Mrs. Charles Williams, on Mother's Day.

We served a picnic supper at the church on April 20, when the Church Building Loan Fund Committee met, and turned the proceeds over to the rug committee. Funds from other activities turned over to that committee permitted the rug to be put down in the sanctuary by Memorial Sunday. These other activities were the sale of Christmas cards, serving supper to the Lions' Club in November, and a bazaar held at the Ramseur Town Hall in December. The rug adds beauty and quiet to the worship services.

One of the most interesting meetings was that at which Mrs. Carl

Judy, a returned missionary from Korea, gave sincere and interesting reports on life and worship there both before the war and after it had begun. Our own country means very much more to us when we hear about the hardships of others, as we did on that evening.

We sent gifts to Ellis Island as one of our Friendly Service projects.

Our society is selling plates with pictures and history of the church engraved upon them. This has been a great success.

We are now saving towards the purchase of a goat for Puerto Rico, to help the children there have milk.

This has been a full year—and we have many plans and hopes that in the coming year we can give more service and receive much joy in His name.

MRS. J. C. NEWELL,
Sec'y-Treasurer.

* * * * *

Fit Bible Study to Program

For the coming year our Bible study consists of eight Psalms. Each of these is complete within itself, of course, and there is not the continuity in the entire study that we sometimes find. For that reason, it is not necessary to use the Psalms to be studied in the order in which we find them in our study book, "Mirrors of the Soul."

In thinking about the year's program, it has occurred to me that in societies which use the Bible study as part of their monthly program, it will be possible to use a Psalm which fits in with the time of year or the remainder of the program. For example, Psalm 103 would be fine to use in November, for it has to do with "Gratefulness." Psalm 145, which is entitled in our book, "The Soul's Concern for the Healing of the World," would be appropriate to use with one of the foreign mission study programs, like "The World Wide Witness" (found in Rejoicing in Our Task, page 36), which does not have a worship service with it. Psalm 23 might be used in May, when we observe Family Week, borrowing the slides that go with it from the Convention Office.

Let's be intelligent this year in the use of our Bible study, and it will be more meaningful.

Toleration has never been the cause of civil war; while, on the contrary, persecution has covered the earth with blood and carnage.—Voltaire.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

Dear Boys and Girls:

Part of our summer's fun has been swimming and picnicking at Moore-lon. It was a gift to our convention and it isn't too far from the college campus. Twice a week the college students go swimming and a grand time they have had too!

There is a pond, stocked with fish, turtles, tadpoles and watersnakes. Across the pond a lonely muskrat has a den and often we see him swimming about in haughty style.

For most of the summer, the Neeses (retired minister) have been resident overseers, but they have gone now for a bit of vacation before returning to Florida. The Howard Gerringers have come to spend the rest of the summer with their youngsters: Kay and Howard Wayne. 'Most forgot to tell you that Dippy, the family dog, came along too.

Our last trip to the pool we saw a fish (that Kay had caught) that was swimming as best he could in a bucket. The Gerringer and House children tumbled, floated, kicked and swam. I asked Sally Kate, (Mrs. Gerringer) what she liked best about staying there. I liked her reply: "It's seeing the expression on youngster's faces when they first discover they can swim—really stay afloat." After a thoughtful pause, she added: "I like to think spiritual life is like that too, just as water holds us up, our faith in God will keep us on top." Good thought for young or old.

We are fortunate to have such a spot as this for a convention center. Here is hoping that it will grow and develop and have many years of usefulness for all of us.

Elon Community Church had a thrilling service Sunday morning. You boys would have liked it very much. The Rev. Howard Bozarth, minister, presented Mr. Ken Davis, a Scout Executive of the Cherokee Council of Boy Scouts; who in turn, presented Eagle Scout awards to three young men of the Elon Church. They are brothers: John and James Powell, twins; and their older brother, Edward Powell. Just think of it—three boys in one family achieving the highest rank in Scouting. It was a proud moment for them, their family, troupe, community and church.

Their father, Dr. T. E. Powell, owns the Elon Biological Supply House which is one of the largest supply houses of its kind in our nation. It is such a fascinating place that we could devote a whole page to it alone. These boys really had a chance to know plants, insects and small animals well.

Congratulations to the young Powells and Elon Community Church.

J. J. H.

* * * * *

"Give Them Both"

By FLORENCE JANE OVENS.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

On the bus, four-year-old Harold was pinching and punching his aunt because she would not allow him to have his head out of the window. Most of the passengers who noticed the incident were sorry for the aunt and condemned the child. But was he really to blame?

Character development, as you know, follows plain paths. The little child sees, hears, and thinks. Certain desires arise from time to time and he makes some kind of response to satisfy each one. His early reactions to the success or failure of his endeavors are extremely important, for they are apt to be repeated over and over and so become habits. This is but one of the many reasons why a kindergarten is of so much value in a community.

Perhaps you will remind me that, in the homes of today, many children are carefully guided. Then you may ask, "In communities where the home life is ideal, why try to have kindergartens? Why not be satisfied to let the boys and girls begin school in the first grade?" A good home, without question, is the greatest of all earthly blessings, but the children need both a good home and a kindergarten. One cannot take the place of the other. Our boys and girls are entitled to the best of homes, and they are entitled to a good kindergarten, too.

Without kindergarten experiences much that the elementary curriculum takes for granted is missing, so the demands are too difficult to be understood by the average child who has had no pre-grade preparation. The first-grade teacher is usually patient and most willing to repeat her explanations, but children who have not been to kindergarten are seldom mentally adjusted to the task of taking directions. Even the ability to listen carefully is often undeveloped.

Again and again, children in the first and second grades will fail to answer when questions are put to them, partly from lack of understanding and partly from embarrassment. A child at such times, imagines that all eyes in the room are fixed upon him. If timid, he becomes increasingly unresponsive, and if he is forward he is apt to take on a "don't care" attitude or to find consolation for his chagrin in misbehavior. Is it any wonder that where there is no kindergarten a large proportion of the firstgrade pupils become repeaters? Many who are promoted suffer retardation, later on, as a result of poor reading ability. This leads to discouragement—sometimes to truancy and delinquency.

A child's ability to adjust to new and more difficult conditions comes from experience, and the best experiences can be prepared for boys and girls only by one who has learned the art through careful study and practice as a kindergarten teacher has done. She knows that very little children can learn, in the kindergarten, the basic principles of a democracy. There, in groups and individually, they are free to choose the materials with which they will, at that time, work or play, and they know they may use them in any way they prefer so long as they do not interfere with the rights and privileges of anyone else. There, too, they become willing to await their turns, and they learn to enjoy sharing. They judge their own work and grow to appreciate the efforts of those about them.

Does it matter that the children learn all these things? Yes, and that they do is our responsibility. The kindergarten really is an active agent in strengthening the foundations for a strong democracy.

It is our part to see that, wherever possible, all little boys and girls may have kindergarten experiences. Let us be personal. If there are enough children in your community for a kindergarten and none has been provided, could you not interest the Parent-Teachers Association or your Club members to change this condition? The National Kindergarten

(Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Summer Activities at Rosemont

Several of our young people helped with the teaching and one served as secretary of our Bible School which has already been reported. Our church picnic was held July 1 and our young people had charge of the Vesper Service at the close of the day.

We have had several beach parties and the young people have enjoyed them very much. We are now planning a tennis tournament at the City Park.

Sunday night, July 26, the young people sponsored a special service with the Rev. Arthur W. Pain, non-denominational missionary in Cuba, as the speaker. The young people led the worship service and invited the entire church to worship with them and to hear Mr. Pain.

We are planning a Retreat at the beach in September to begin our fall program. We are hoping we will have some of our Eastern Virginia and Southern Convention officers with us to help us understand Pilgrim Fellowship better and to help us work out our plans for the year.

RUTH H. DUNN,

Director of Religious Education.

* * * * *

Lebanon Reports

The young adult class of Lebanon Christian Church, Semora, N. C., held their regular meeting Thursday, July 23, at 8:00 o'clock on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Stowe, with Mrs. Otis Lockhart and Mrs. Joe Fuller as joint hostesses. The meeting was well attended. Mr. Ezra Stowe, our president, with Mrs. Frank Hudson, Jr., leading the devotionals, using as the theme, "What Can One Do to Make His Community a Better one." Following routine business, a social hour with outdoor games and the hostesses serving delicious Brunswick Stew and soft drinks was enjoyed by every one.

On August 4 the young adult group met at the church for a hamburger fry on our newly built outdoor fire place. About fifty people were present. After the hamburger fry everyone gathered in the church for an hour of fellowship and song service.

The young adult class held a prayer service on Wednesday, July 29, at 8:00 o'clock at the church. It was well attended and everyone was very much impressed and inspired with the service. The class will hold prayer service on Thursday night before the third Sunday of each month. The whole community is cordially invited to attend these services.

ALLICE WELLS,
Secretary.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Someone gave me a smile today.
I tried my best to give it away
To everyone I chanced to meet
As I was going along the street.
But everyone that I could see
Would give my smile right back to me.
When I got home beside one smile,
I had enough to reach a mile.

* * *

While on a motor trip with a friend through Georgia, I met a local character who spent most of his time on the porch of a "Fork-in-the-road" settlement in the turpentine region. His slowness of speech and deliberate actions caused me to ask him the why and wherefore of his outstanding characteristics.

"Wal, Son," he drawled, "hit don't pay nobody to be in a hurry. You allus pass up more than you catch up with."—Millard Miller in Country Gentleman.

* * *

Clerk: Now that you've seen all the blankets in the store, which one do you wish?

Lady: Oh, I was only looking for a friend. I don't expect to buy.

Clerk: Well ma'am, if you think she's in that remaining blanket up there, I'll take it down for you.

* * * * *

Let Us Pray—

For a lot of hope, and a lot of love,
And a little bit of faith—
Because it can move mountains.

"A Cheerful Home"

A single bitter word may disquiet an entire family for a whole day. One surly glance casts a gloom over the household, while a smile, like a gleam of sunshine, may light up the darkest and weariest hours. Like unexpected flowers that spring along our path, full of freshness, fragrance and beauty, kind words and gentle acts and sweet dispositions make glad the home where peace and blessing dwell. No matter how humble the abode, if it be thus garnished with grace and sweetened with kindness and smiles, the heart will turn lovingly toward it from all the tumult of the world, and it will be the dearest spot beneath the circuit of the sun.

And the influences of home perpetuate themselves. The gentle grace of the mother lives in the daughter long after the parent's head is pillowed in the dust of death; and the fatherly kindness finds its echo in the nobility and courtesy of sons who come to wear his mantle and to fill his place; while on the other hand, from an unhappy, misgoverned and disorganized home, go forth persons who shall make other homes miserable, and perpetuate the sourness and railings that have made their own lives so wretched and distorted.

The class of men who disturb and distress the world are not those born and nurtured amid the hallawed influences of Christian homes; but rather those whose early lives have been a scene of trouble and vexation—who have started wrong in their pil grimages and whose course is one of disaster to themselves and trouble to those around them.—Exchange.

FOR OUR CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

Association, 8 West Fortieth Street, New York, will be glad to assist any group in the United States in an endeavor to get a class open in the public school. Advice, leaflets on kindergarten values, for distribution, the use of a silent motionpicture film—"A Day in the Kindergarten"—and a prepared program for a meeting may be obtained. There is no charge whatsoever.

That one's success or failure in later life is largely determined during the first six years has been reiterated to us by so many authorities and from such varied sources we really should begin to believe it. Yet do we? If we do, should we not seek out and use every available means to make certain that young children are provided with the best possible education? For five-year-olds, kindergarten experiences need to be included. They will be lifelong blessings. In a manner that the child comprehends and loves, the kindergarten presents, day after day, a way of living that is in happy harmony with the spirit of democracy.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"The Christian's Prayer Life"

LESSON VIII—AUGUST 23, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "I urge that supplications, prayers, intercessions and thanksgivings be made for all men, for kings and all who are in high positions, that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life, godly and respectful in every way."—I Timothy 2:1-2.

LESSON: I Timothy 2:1-8; Romans 8:26-28.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 32.

"I exhort, therefore, first of all, that supplications, prayers, intercessions and thanksgivings be made for all men; for kings and all that are in high place . . ." There are fine shades of meaning in the various words used by Paul in exhorting Timothy, the young minister, to emphasize prayer in the conduct of public worship. But Paul was not emphasizing these shades of meaning, so much as impressing upon Timothy the fact that prayer and praise should have in view all classes and conditions of men. Prayer in public worship, as well as in private devotions, tends all too often to become narrow and exclusive, rather than inclusive.

Paul, strangely enough in view of the fact that Nero was on the Roman throne, "that evil man," as Churchill said of Hitler, urges prayer for kings and those in authority, as one particular object of prayer. We do well when we pray for the President of the United States, and the heads of other nations, including Malenkov, and for all those who are in high places. Things might be different in the world and in our nation if Christian people really prayed for those in authority.

"That we may lead a tranquil and quiet life in all goodness and gravity." This seems rather selfish, but such is not the case. There is an intimate relationship between order and tranquility and peace, and consistent and constant prayer and supplication. And it is to be noted, too, that Paul emphasizes "thanksgiving." Gratitude for blessings already received is the finest preparation for receiving new blessings. Such prayer, with thanksgiving, "is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Saviour."

God expects and is pleased with such devotional life.

"Who would have all men to be saved, and come to the knowledge of the truth." Jesus himself said that it was not the will of the Father that any man should perish. All men are included in his love. Salvation is not limited by his willingness, but by the reluctance and unbelief of men. Men may be lost, but they are not lost by the will of God. Christ is the Saviour of all, and would have all men to be saved.

"For there is one God, and one mediator also between God and man, himself man, Christ Jesus." Christ is the One who brings God and man together. Men are reconciled to God by Christ. But it should be said that God does not need to be reconciled to men. God himself took the initiative. In Christ, and especially in Christ's death on the Cross, God seeks to reconcile men unto himself, not imputing to them their trespasses and sin, but forgiving them and bringing them into a new relationship with him. Christ gave himself a ransom for all, the testimony to be borne in its own times. It was a source of unceasing wonder to Paul that he had been called as a preacher and an apostle and a teacher of this great truth.

"I desire, therefore, that men pray in every place, lifting up holy hands without wrath and disputing." He ends as he begins, exhorting men to pray; and to pray with clean hands and clean hearts. Or lacking these things, to pray for them.

"But," says someone, "I do not know how to pray, or what to pray for." That is no reason why men should not pray. Where there is the willingness and the will, the Holy Spirit himself helps us. He makes intercession for us, even if we are not conscious of it. Furthermore, searching our hearts, he makes intercession for us according to the will of God.

One thing is certain. Christians do not pray enough. All of us need to pray the prayer of the disciples, "Lord, teach us to pray." There can be little, if any, growth of the spirit without prayer. Our lives, too, are often powerless because they are also prayerless. Nor need prayer to be thought of simply as asking. Prayer may be simply waiting. It may be simply fellowship. It may be silence. Prayer must be cultivated. Men learn to pray by praying. Men can do but little before they pray; they can do much after they pray.

After writing somewhat at length about prayer as recorded in Timothy, words of Paul to the Romans are added. And they are words that have stirred up a lot of discussion and debate. "And we know that to them that love God, all things work together for good, even to them that are called according to his purpose." Notice that Paul says that all things work for good to them that are called, that is for those who love and know God. The forces of life seem to work against those who deny God, that is in the long run at least. One thing is sure, the older we grow in the Kingdom, the more we see the hidden purposes of many things, which of themselves seemed grievous, which worked together for good as we loved and trusted God.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

NAVY CHAPLAIN CLASS.

(Continued from page 2.)

R. Howard served in the navy as a Quartermaster, Third Class, and later taught in a high school in Frankfort, Ky.

Chaplain Nick Steve Karras, Greek Orthodox, graduated from St. Paul's Religious College, Corinth, Greece. After seven years in a pastorate, he enlisted in the U. S. Navy. He served at the Communication Center, Guam, just prior to reporting to the Indoctrination School for Chaplains. Chaplain Robert Lee Mole, Seventh Day Adventist, was treasurer and professor of History at the S. D. A. Mission College in Beirut, Lebanon.

There are in this group many other student Chaplains with interesting backgrounds, including a Congregational Christian Chaplain from Massachusetts, Lt. Valery Edwin Sundt, who was former pastor of the Community Church, Shanghai, China; and he holds the class record for having the largest family, six children.

These Navy Chaplains, along with the members of their class, look upon their work in the Navy as, summed up in the words of Student Chaplain Asa W. Jones of Hodgenville, Ky., "an unlimited opportunity for rendering service to an unlimited number of people." They will graduate from the Chaplains School on August 27.

Have You Read?

UND FUEHREN WOHN DU NICHT
WILLST. Helmut Gollwitzer. Chr.
Kaiser Verlag. Muenchon 1953.
546 pp. 12.50 DM.

Dr. Gollwitzer has come into a leading place among German theologians and church leaders, and deservedly so. His range of perception, his obvious trained ability, together with his penetrating religious feeling and faith are obvious throughout this great book. A member of the Confessional Church and an opponent of Nazism, the author served in the German Army and was captured by the Russians in Czechoslovakia, at the end of the war, when the American dream of "Russian democracy" permitted the surrender to a Communist hell of endless thousands of soldiers and civilians. Five years of Soviet slavery with its harvest of every inhumanity and death taught the author the ultimate verity of the Christian faith.

The apocalyptic has entered world history. The norms established by western, Christian culture in two thousand years of history are voided by the new Satanic religion. Any discussion of the application of values and ideals, from Western viewpoint, is meaningless in the light of Communism, which denies God, human rights and freedom. For only in freedom do these ideals have meaning.

Here is one of the best stories of this demonic system ever written. Yet the author is fair, despite the worst experience and tragic observations. He sees the good that is inborn in men, even in Communism, because it is of God.

There can be no truce with Communism. It is a substitute religion in control of a State which must seek to be a world-state. And that control is in the hands of a minimal group of leaders, who by the nature of this religion will seek to exterminate each other.

In every way, therefore, the system breaks the individual of his humanity and encourages his will to live at its cost.

Space is wanting for a worthy presentation of the range of the sentient observations, such as the comment on the continuance of anti-semitism among the masses, a subject shunned by the Western press. Since the middle-class was liquidated, the Jews naturally flowed into this vacuum of managers. There, however, they became the immediate burden of the masses, obvious to every one, with the consequent results of hatred, which may, in time, repeat the ever tragic tale. Believing Jews are persecuted, like all the faithful, for the reason that this intolerant faith cannot, by its nature, tolerate any deviation from total loyalty.

Ever again made clear is the account of the liberation wrought by the spirit, through faith in God. The Communists realize this, of course, and are compelled to remain at war with any form of faith that derives from God in Christ, in whom alone is freedom.

The blindness of blind leaders has given, in the West, allies to this anti-Christianity. They would be liquidated, should Communism win the West, for they acted from the advantage of Western freedom, as their kind has been destroyed in every country taken by this demonism; as was Benes in Czechoslovakia.

The millions of slaves who have experienced Communism and have become immunized are the best missionaries of freedom.

Christianity, the source of Western culture must meet this unfaith in mortal combat. This story is superbly told. It should come out in English translation.

JOHN F. C. GREEN.

McKeesport, Pa.

"CHRISTIAN" EDUCATION

(Continued from page 5.)

zens of our land seem to us a national necessity.

I have tried to say that schools that have a sound Christian bias are intellectually defensible and that from the standpoint of the well-being of society as well as perpetuation of democracy, their existence is fully justified.

It is now appropriate to ask, what does the Christian college have to offer American Youth in today's world? My answer is that it offers, first of all, a center of higher education where freedom of thought and discussion may take place under teachers of high Christian ideals—this is especially true in political and economic areas of thought—without fear of political interference. Private non-church related schools are farther removed obviously that state schools from the reach of the demagogue and political tryant; but to be independent and not church-related may allow a school to swing to any dangerous opposite extreme. The church-related private school, however, is under an influence which, while independence is not impaired, keeps it from turning to radical views whether in politics, economics or other matters.

Second, the church-related college affords to youth a more purposeful and positive emphasis upon moral and ethical principles than is customary or even possible on other campuses.

Third, the church-related college that is positively Christian creates an atmosphere upon the campus conducive to moral living.

Fourth, the sound Christian college ordinarily establishes a stronger motivation than other schools for high moral and ethical conduct. This is done both through positive teaching of Christian principles and through making it the accepted, normal thing to do right rather than to "get by."

Fifth, the Christian college through its curriculum, chapel, and other religious activities sponsored by the school, deliberately endeavors, as state schools are not allowed to do, to build the spiritual side of one's personality and to inspire one to grow toward spiritual maturity.

Sixth, the Christian college endeavors purposely to lead all non-Christians on its campus to the discovery for themselves of the great resources available to them in a genuine Christian experience.

Seventh, the Christian college helps to make youth aware of the power for good in the world of Christianity and of the worth to humanity of the ministries of the church and denominations.

Eighth, the Christian college builds high ideals of citizenship and of one's responsibility for one's own nation and the world.

Ninth, the sound Christian college is likely the nation's strongest fort against the inroads of Communism. Its graduates go out as Christian leaders in every community that is fortunate enough to have them.

—United Evangelical Action.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

People do the nicest things. For instance, our Apple's Chaped Church, at the close of their Daily Vacation Bible School had a "Christmas Tree" party, to which every child brought a beautifully wrapped gift for the orphanage children. The children received a blessing by thinking of little folks so much in need of friendship and care, who had no home of their own, but were being taken care of by church folks all across our Convention. Mrs. R. M. Cook and Mrs. Tom Oliver and her little son Tommy, brought the gifts to the orphanage to be given out to the children here. It made a beautiful party. Everybody was so happy, as we always are when we do something nice for folks who are really in need. Later Rev. John Lackey, pastor of the church, came in to see me and he was just as thrilled as I was, and as the children are on account of this thoughtfulness.

Many who read this column will remember Miss Fannie Newman, and her sister, Mrs. Gertrude Hinshaw, faithful and efficient matrons here. Mrs. Newman has served here eighteen years, and a few years ago Mrs. Hinshaw came along to be her assistant and to remain as long as her sister did. They retired from the orphanage recently. They are greatly missed here and beloved by us all. Miss Fannie, "Aunt Fannie" to the boys and girls, was dietitian and senior matron at the time of her resignation. It will be difficult to find one as capable and kind as she was.

Mrs. Estelle Knight of Whaleyville, Va., came here several months ago on a temporary basis until we could find someone to take Miss Hattie Brakefield's place in the Girls' Building. Now that we have been able to secure someone, Mrs. Knight is leaving us. She has rendered faithful service and will bear the goodwill and gratitude of us all for the service she has rendered.

We had a good rain last night, and we feel sure it will freshen up our pastures and hayfields, but it is too late for the corn. We were very glad to see it, and were grateful to our Heavenly Father for the refreshing rain. It has been so dry; and we were getting quite discouraged.

Now let me thank you for the good report this week. How I do appreciate hearing from several Sunday schools and friends. So many of our friends are suffering from the dry weather just as we are, and yet they know our predicament and help us. We have to depend on the voluntary contributions — contributions graciously given out of love and consideration for homeless children, and in appreciation to God for his blessings. It is a good thing for us all to be reminded how dependent we are, and to learn to show more and more gratitude for every good gift from our heavenly Father. All of us have so much in this country for which to be thankful.

For your faithfulness to the orphanage I am very grateful, indeed.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR AUGUST 6, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

Liberty (Vance) Christian Church, Coupons.
Philathea Class, Suffolk Christian Church, Coupons.
Mrs. Perle Terry, Mebane, N. C., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 9,095.03
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Mt. Auburn S. S. $ 9.00
Mt. Herman 3.50
Plymouth 9.75
22.25
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Greensboro, First $ 58.85
Hopedale 16.62
Mebane 5.00
Reidsville S. S. 57.00
137.47
Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Cross S. S. $ 6.75
6.75
Total $ 166.47
Grand total $ 9,261.50

In Memoriam

UNDERHILL.

A noble life ended when Mrs. Florence E. Underhill slipped away quietly on May 24 after a short illness.

We the members of the Women's Fellowship of Liberty Vance Congregational Christian Church wish to pay tribute to her memory.

She was a devoted and loyal member of our church, and Sunday school teacher of children who loved her. Spiritual leader in our own Women's Fellowship, she gave of her time and means to help build God's kingdom on earth. She was interested in our college, our orphanage, missions and all enterprises of our church.

She was loved and held in highest esteem by a large circle of friends.

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father.
2. That while we mourn the loss of this friend we rejoice in the triumph of her re-

(Continued on page 15.)

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $11,652.55
Mrs. H. K. Benson & family, in memory of Mrs. J. A. Morrison $ 10.00
Gasoline Refund 82.50
Miss L. Kennedy, Worthville, N. C., in memory of Julian C. Jenkins .. 2.00
H. C. Byrd, Suffolk, Va., For Woodie Byrd 10.00
New Hope Christian S. S. Roanoke, Alabama 3.80
T. D. Shoemaker, Ashesboro, N. C. 15.00
Special Gifts 335.51
493.81
Grand total $12,146.36
Total for the week $ 660.28
Total for the year $21,407.86

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through Aug. 13, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardcastle	$ 372.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Gran- ger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial— Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eu- gene Tally	704.00
Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein ..	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register ..	†166.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown ..	127.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowder- milk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder ..	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr. ...	82.50
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisse- man	3,292.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00

Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman ..	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student) ..	75.00

†Paid.
What church will be next to send in its Declaration?

IN MEMORIAM.
(Continued from page 14.)
lease from pain to enter into life eternal with the Lord.
3. That we extend our love and sympathy to her family and pray God's blessing may comfort them.
Mrs. HENRY MITCHELL,
Committee.

ATKINSON.
On July 15, 1953, our dear Heavenly Father, in his great love and wisdom, saw fit to take Mr. Archie Atkinson from his loved ones, friends, and church.
Therefore be it resolved:
1. That God's ways are always best.
2. That we bow in humble submission to our Father's will.
3. That we extend to his family our deepest sympathy and earnest prayers that God's promises may give them comfort and consolation in their sorrow.
4. That acopy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to be recorded in the minutes of the church, and a copy to The Christian Sun for publication.
Mrs. W. D. HARWARD,
Mrs. W. O. WHITMORE,
Mrs. J. R. BISHOP.
Committee.

Character is not made in a crisis—it is only exhibited.—Freeman.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND
Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
 - [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
 - [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
 - [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.
- Church
BySecretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

FOOTHILLS

By REV. RICHARD K. MORTON

Travel literature, with its alluring photographs, drawings and glimpses of scenic pleasure spots, certainly stirs emotions within us—and we wish we were going to a lot of them!

A folder caught my eye the other day, as it told of the delights of a location in the foothills of lovely mountains. Somehow, the word “foothills” began suggesting a number of ideas to me. In the first place, I could well admit that foothills of all kinds have their attractions. It is enough, in a way, to get to them, without thinking of anything farther away or bigger. But many of us never do get beyond the foothills in our living, our thinking, our serving, our discipleship. The minute the land begins to rise and the hills grow steep, we grow weary and we stop.

How many of us Christians are foothill dwellers? We admire and stand in awe of the great mountains beyond, but we do not struggle to attain them. We enjoy the foothills and we convince ourselves that it is enough to serve God there and to conduct a worth-while work which has the best possible conditions for success.

We so often fail to understand how attainable some of those mountain peaks yonder really are, and how wonderful it would be for us and others if we would climb until we reached them. We grow pleased with the situation in the foothills, and our pilgrimage stops there.

Sometimes, as we serve in the foothills of Christian life, we come against some problems which baffle us. And this is partly due to the fact that our Christian study and preparation never went beyond the foothills. Comfortable orthodoxy can be an easy position to take. Shallow piety can sometimes be concealed for quite a while with its lack of efficiency in meeting people's daily problems. But we are forced, at times, to go beyond the foothills in our thinking on Christian principles.

Likewise, we must often go beyond the foothills in our Christian living. For most of us, life has more of the pleasant than the unpleasant, and we may delude ourselves into thinking we have a strong, well-rounded faith. But then along comes some misfortune—and our faith virtually collapses. It is then we see that we should long ago have gone beyond the foothills of patience, understanding and courage.

Then again, we must go beyond the foothills in Christian service. Foothills are very pleasant, and one can do much good in them; but every real Christian is ultimately a mountain climber. He has to climb mounts of difficulty and temptation, of doubt and hardship. He knows the mountains are off there in the distance; and their very presence is a challenge to him. He must press on. We cannot travel just part of the distance toward the Kingdom if we are really consecrated Christians. We cannot put a limit on our service or the extent of our effort.

Let's go beyond these pleasant foothills. Let's accept the challenge of those mountains in the distance. Let us pursue Christian thought until we have probed unto the deeper riches of God's revelation in Christ. Let us pursue Christian living and not temporize and compromise with the world. Let us pursue the journey in service unto the very mountaintops of attainment through a Christian society and a redeemed world!

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, AUGUST 20, 1953

NUMBER 33

We "Belong"

By BESSIE P. SLOAN

God is ours; we are his; we "belong."

God wants us to live the fullest possible life, and to use all our talents; he needs them.

We want all our abilities to be used for him, to express his truth and his love.

We desire to express ourselves; God gives us something worth expressing.

We want to express beauty and courage, and freshness and harmony.

That is why he has inspired us with blue and golden days, with snow flakes and wild roses, wild winds and dawn of day, the rythm of the seasons, our own heart beat, and the rain.

I will be a message from him to all men all my days.

He wants all men to be happy, to grow, and to be strong.

I want my appearance, my voice and actions to be pleasant and genuine, with a meaning which those who run may read.

He wants for all the brim-full life.

I, too, long for every other "me" in the world to know abundant living.

This day, this hour, this moment, God, I will make OUR dreams come true!

News Flashes

Discarded stockings make wonderful material for weaving in the craft shop of the State Industrial Farm for Women. Send old nylon, silk or rayon stockings to: Craft Shop, P. O. Box 1, Goochland, Va.

Within twenty-four hours after receiving its first calls for aid from the earthquake-shattered Ionian Islands of Greece, Church World Service was distributing emergency supplies to the disaster victims, on behalf of the American church people this relief organization serves. Immediate action was made possible by diverting to the emergency area supplies en route through the Mediterranean to other needy countries.

Rev. Emmet M. Frazer, director of the Virginia Interdenominational Religious Work Foundation, with headquarters in Richmond, reports: "We recently received one of the greatest gifts that has ever come to this work. An elderly woman, who has been active in her church throughout her life time, and who earns her living by scrubbing floors, sent in a contribution of 15¢, with a request that it be used to help carry the Gospel of Christ to those in our state institutions. We were reminded of the comments of the Master as recorded in Mark 12: 43-44."

Last Sunday Dr. F. C. Lester finished his six months of work at the Eutaw Community Church, Fayetteville, and is returning to Asheboro to resume his work there. During the month of July Miss Bouneva Farlow, a member of our Sophia Church and an attendant at the Greensboro, First, Church during her Woman's College days (where she is a rising senior) worked in the Eutaw Community. She was the director of a two weeks' Bible school, and did recreational work as well as visiting. The Rev. Warren Matthews, graduate of Elon College and a student at Hartford Seminary, member of our Greensboro, First, Church is working in Fayetteville for the month of August. He has been centering his activities on community survey work and visiting and has assisted in several of the worship services. He will be the acting minister there for the next several weeks. Both of these young people, provided for by Student Summer Service funds of the denomination, have done an excellent job in Eutaw, proving themselves willing to tackle any job that was suggested and adapting themselves to the needs of the work there.

Inter-Continental Seminar on Church and Rural Life

For the first time in history, church and rural life leaders of four continents will come together for mutual study and exchange of information in a world seminar, to be held at Chateau Bossey near Geneva, Switzerland, August 24-28.

The study conference will be sponsored jointly by the World Council of Churches' Ecumenical Institute and National Council of Churches' department of town and country church, Dr. Don F. Pielstick, executive director of the department announced.

"This five-day meeting is not only a 'first', it is also a 'must' for all who recognize that the church and rural life is a universal problem which needs an ecumenical approach," Dr. Pielstick said.

One of a party of 21 Americans attending the meeting, Dr. Pielstick will deliver a major paper at the seminar on the role of the churches in American rural life. Dr. Clyde Rogers of Columbus, Ohio, director of rural life work for the Ohio Council of Churches, will address the conference on the church in its relations with other rural agencies.

Delegates from many countries of Europe, Asia and Africa as well as the U. S. A. will consider three major topics at the meeting: (1) The rural setting of today as a human problem. (2) The responsibility of the church toward rural life. (3) A critical review of the various approaches in meeting the present rural situation, materially and spiritually.

"In dealing with these questions," Dr. Pielstick said, "those participating in the seminar will have a cherished opportunity to learn at first hand what is happening in the rural church movement in other lands—where it is headed and what it can accomplish, spiritually, economically and socially in the lives of rural people everywhere."

To broaden understanding of church-related rural problems in Europe and efforts to solve them, Dr. Pielstick said the American group will go on a twelve-day tour of rural areas in France and Germany, prior to the seminar. After conferring with French Protestant clergymen in a two-day meeting at Paris, the party will travel by chartered bus to Strasbourg for a first-hand look at churches and farms in the area, culminating in a conference with the Protestant faculty of the University of Strasbourg. The itinerary will also include Stuttgart and other points in Western Germany.

People Are Living Longer Today Than They Did in 1900

Any number of elderly persons are glad to tell you just how they happened to live so long—"I eat only vegetables," or "I never had a cup of coffee in my life," are just some of the explanations you may hear. But perhaps the man who had the best explanation was the one who, when asked why he'd lived so long, quipped, "Dunno. I guess it must 'a been because I didn't die young."

Corinne Justice Grimsley, North Carolina State College extension specialist in family relations, says that doctors are helping us to live longer today. In 1900 the average person in the United States lived to celebrate 45 birthdays. Today the average person lives 22 years longer.

But even though medical science is prolonging life, many people who don't die until they reach their 70's or 80's actually aren't living longer. They don't enjoy being alive, that is. They continually find fault with their families, friends and relatives. They criticize the young and withdraw entirely from all activities. Such an existence really isn't living.

Growing old is a complicated process, says Mrs. Grimsley, and no one likes to think that he is getting old. Naturally you will change as the years go by, but there is no one day on which you will suddenly become old. Your body doesn't begin to age all at once—it's a single organ or tissue that starts. Your eyes actually begin to age during your teens, your hearing becomes less acute during your twenties, and muscular strength decreases in your thirties.

And it's hard to admit it, but there comes a time in your forties or fifties when you can't do as much work as you once could. Staying young, says Mrs. Grimsley, isn't dependent upon pep pills, but upon keeping your mind alert and interested in the activities going on around you.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. DANIELEY, Editor, 428 Westwood, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Virginia Valley Issue

The work of the laymen of the Virginia Valley Conference will be written up for this page in the next issue of THE SUN, August 27. The Rev. Henry V. Harman is in charge of getting the information assembled.

* * * * *

Report from Hopewell

The Congregational Christian Church of Hopewell, Virginia, has organized a Laymen's Fellowship. Officers who were elected to lead the new group include the president, John Powell, vice-president, Bentley Crichton, and secretary-treasurer, Frank Sodomke. The group is holding a meeting each month.

* * * * *

Old Fashioned Ice Cream Social

The Men's Fellowship of the United Congregational Christian Church of Chapel Hill has just sponsored a second ice cream social this summer. The men, and of course their wives, prepare home-made ice cream for sale on these occasions. Vanilla, peach, strawberry and banana are some of the delicious flavors which have been prepared and hand-cranked to perfection. Ice cold lemonade and home baked cakes are also a feature of the program. Well-advertised in advance these socials have attracted large numbers of people. Townspeople and students are eager and enthusiastic about obtaining their dessert in this most pleasant fashion. The social lasts from seven until nine o'clock. Generous servings are given; the money realized is used by the Men's Fellowship for the improvement of the church and its program; the people fellowship with each other in an enjoyable fashion and "a good time is had by all." Plans are being made for the group to have a booth again this year in Kenan Stadium.

* * * * *

Another Call for a Retreat

Very few of you have had anything to say about the idea which was advanced in these columns some time ago regarding the possibility of a Layman's Retreat to be held next summer. I want to think that this does not mean that you do not favor the idea but that you have just not taken the time to express yourself. The idea is this: We need a time when we as a group of Christian men can get together in real Christian fellowship. It is true that we have our rallies—that is all well and good. But some of us think that we need more than that . . . we have been thinking that if we can possibly do so we should set our goal to have a weekend retreat next summer at Moonelon. We have taken the development of this camp site as a project; why not do the work and at the same time make concrete plans for using the facilities for our own Fellowship? If a hundred or more of our Laymen could gather there for a weekend of spiritual rejuvenation, Christian fellowship, and genuine worship it would start a movement in the Southern Convention which could not be quenched or even slowed down. Here is a real opportunity for us to plan to get away from the pressures of our everyday lives and associate with others of like mind; here is the opportunity to do what so many in other sections have found to be most helpful; here is the opportunity to give the church life of the Southern Convention a transfusion which will cause to pulsate throughout her whole being a new vitality, a new awareness, a new zeal for the work that we should be doing. Here is the means of rendering a service to our local church, our denomination and our God. The challenge is ours!

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardestel.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195...

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

How Bear Witness for Christ?

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

How Our Homes Can Bear Witness for Christ

We can have our homes bear witness for Christ by welcoming him as "the unseen guest at every meal, the quiet listener at every conversation." If we speak his name only in reverence, if we take time to read his Gospel, if we practice his spirit of love toward the other members of the home and toward other homes, if we observe the Golden Rule—which is the rule of life—doing unto others as we would have others do unto us, we can have our homes bear witness for Christ.

How Our Churches Can Bear Witness for Christ

We can have our churches bear witness by letting them have priority claim on our loyalties, by loving the church as we should, by attending its services faithfully and reverently, by worthily contributing to the support of our church and by recommending our church to other people. To take an active interest in the welfare of the church, to pray each day for its progress, to be interested in having the church secure whatever it needs, to exercise sincere reverence for the church building as the "House of God," to put the fellowship of the church above every other fellowship, and to put the interests of the church first in our consideration, will help our church to bear witness for Christ. If we, in our homes, in our daily work, and in all our planning, are committed to giving Christ's spirit right-of-way, we can thereby assist in having our church bear witness for Christ.

How Communities Can Bear Witness for Christ

If our personal lives bear witness for Christ, we can thereby assist in having our communities bear witness for Christ. The Kingdom of God has its rootage and its opportunity for growth in the human heart, in the personal life; but its branches spread out into all human relationships, bearing fruit in human society. As the people who live in a community bear witness for Christ in their daily lives and in their business and social contacts, the community itself thereby bears witness for Christ. The more devoted the people of a community are to Christ and his Church, the more interested they will be in serving all the interests of the community life effectively. The larger the proportion there is of Christian people in a community, the larger the percentage of Christian homes in a community, and the larger the expression of Christian cooperation in a community, the more effectively does the entire community bear witness for Christ.

How Nations Can Bear Witness for Christ

The Bible tells us that "Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord." Christ has little voice in a nation whose God is not the Lord. We can assist our nation in bearing witness for Christ, by having our personal lives bear witness for Christ, by having our homes bear witness for Christ, by having our churches consistently bear witness for Christ, and by having our communities honor and respect our Lord. The nation is only the sum total of its individual citizens—their homes, their businesses, and their commitments. And we can each have a part in having our nation bear witness for Christ by living the right kind of personal life ourselves, by maintaining the right kind of home life, and by promoting the right kind of community life. To have proper respect for the laws of the nation and to help effect and promote Christian legislation for our nation, assists in having our nation bear witness for Christ.

How the World Can Bear Witness for Christ

If nations would practice the teachings of the Christ in their relations to other nations, if nations would express the mind and Spirit of Christ in all their laws, if nations would practice the Golden Rule—Christ's rule for nations as well as for individuals—then the world itself would thereby be bearing witness for Christ. Only as individuals enthrone Christ in their personal lives; only as homes make Christ welcome within their portals; only as communities promote Christian ideals in the community life; only as nations sincerely seek through their leaders the leadership of Jesus, can the world bear witness for Christ.

All who believe in and pray for international justice and good will; all who believe in and pray for universal and perpetual peace; all who believe in and practice Christian brotherhood; all who believe in and worthily support the Church that bears Christ's name; all who love God and sincerely desire to honor God's will, his word and his world, are having an important and vital part in having The World Bear Witness for Christ.

Meeting Unpleasant Problems

By REV. RICHARD K. MORTON

Serving Christ and standing up for Christian principles is likely, at times, to bring us into contact with unpleasant situations and to evoke unpleasant responsibilities. We live in a pagan and selfish world, and we meet, at times, selfish and unpleasant people.

What follows is in no way an attack upon Christian grace, forgiveness, courtesy, or anything else of that kind. It is an attempt to face situations which arise in one's ministry and one's daily Christian living.

First of all, let me say that in my ministry of over 22 years, since ordination, I have come to admire many people for the clarity, firmness, beauty, and practical activity of their Christian faith. I have come to be very grateful for their many expressions of charitableness, understanding, forgiveness, and faith.

On the other hand, I have become quite disillusioned about the wisdom of being afraid to bring people to account when they display unchristian and harmful attitudes and champion harmful policies and ideas. For instance, I have seen committees and church schools and even churches hampered, weakened, and distraught over the egotism, domination, bigotry, or other weakness of some individual or group. And no one dares or cares to put a stop to it in an understanding but firm way. And maybe no one thinks it would be Christian to try it.

I believe a true disciple of Jesus will often discover that, like the Master, he must at times come to unpleasant encounters with people and he must say or do the unpleasant thing which others will quickly brand as unchristian. I happen not to believe that to be Christian one must never say an unpleasant word to anyone or oppose his policies.

All over this land, especially in our free churches where congregations are autonomous and create their own rules and leadership, we can see the harm done by unbridled actions of those who, at least for the moment, forsake the Christian way. Sometimes they must be outvoted or campaigned against. Sometimes they must be publicly held to account. And on many other occasions Christian people should go to them, as the Scriptures indicate, privately, and try to resolve the difficulty and enable them to see others' points of view.

No one wants to advocate strring up trouble in a personal relationship, a home, a church, or anywhere else. But I maintain that there are times when it is better to abandon courtesy than to abandon principle. Jesus Himself had some severe arguments and points of tension with the Pharisees and with the money changers in the temple—and undoubtedly with many others.

Following in the tradition of those who seek to interpret His way to our own times, I do not equate the religion of Jesus with a timid, forever-smiling, perennially courteous manner, which maintains a superficial and cheap harmony at the expense of deep and abiding issues and principles and convictions.

On a number of occasions, I have known people who expressed unchristian beliefs and followed unchristian ways to be highly indignant when opposed. And they even went so far as to say that our very act of opposing them was unchristian. This I could never accept. One can be too harsh or can fail to understand. One can be unforgiving or contentious or unjust—and so on. But I do not believe that a Christian should keep smiling and keep still, maintaining an artificial atmosphere of sweetness and light, when someone ought to be roundly condemned or some policy ought to be vigorously opposed. I believe that our religion should have beauty and kindness, but also that it should have strength and integrity and justice.

We shall almost surely encounter, at times, people who do not think or live in a Christian way who resent being reminded, even in the kindest and best way, of the inconsistency between their words and their deeds. There will be others who want to run everything—and consider every act of opposition an unchristian one. There will be those who show prejudices and warped views, and cannot abide failure of others to go along with them.

Let us be loving and courteous and kind. Let us be diligent in trying to resolve every situation by peaceful and pleasant means. But let us remember that there are values in Christian living, in Christian traditions, and in Christian faith that cannot be sacrificed on the altar of someone's defects of personality.

I am sincerely groping for the best way, as I present these words. What does Christian action mean? Can one, should one, always without exception, to everyone and before everything, be pleasant and polite?

One should be meek and conciliatory. One should not be pugnacious. Oftentimes by simply letting the warlike go ahead and fight we can show them best its futility. But it seems to me that there are still times when a Christian disciple should be in truth a "soldier" of Jesus Christ—not afraid to fight when evil is asking for it. If a Christian's faith or personality is attacked, he can be forgiving and generous, but he can hardly in all things remain pleasant. To maintain the Christian faith is not always pleasant. It is at times controversial and brings situations highly disturbing and sometimes regrettable.

It appears to me that we have really misunderstood or have only partly understood what is required of a Christian in the face of some attack or injustice or outrage.

There are certainly times, for instance, when one should deny himself, take up his cross, and follow Jesus—remaining silent and displaying only love, kindness, and humility. But these are lost on some people at some times, in my opinion. There are indeed many "little" people in all our areas who derive what seems to be a kind of sadistic pleasure by going around setting up little crosses and expecting us simply to impale ourselves on them without question, because we are Christian. I think one shows himself to be little if, with a misguided sense of martyrdom, he tries to take up all of these unnecessary crosses set up for him. Not everything stuck up in the earth, not every obstacle, needs to be turned into a cross.

There is a time for a cross, and a time for a fight. There is a time for courtesy, and there is a time to stand firmly on principle. There is a great need to show love and forgiveness, but these are hollow indeed unless they stand for strong principles of life. Let us not shrink from the unpleasant when to maintain the semblance of the pleasant in the face of abuses would make a mockery of our faith.

Our Churches Report . . .

The Last Six Months at Asheboro

Two weeks ago the managing editor made a plea for news from local churches—and here is some from Asheboro.

During the last six months, while the pastor, Dr. F. C. Lester, has been "loaned" to the Eutaw Community Church in Fayetteville, the Asheboro church has had the great pleasure of hearing a variety of speakers. These included Elon college professors—Dean D. J. Bowden, Dr. W. W. Sloan, Dr. F. E. Reynolds, and new dean-to-be J. E. Daniele. Dr. John G. Truitt, his son-in-law, the Rev. C. Baxter Twiddy, the Rev. Carl Key of N. C. CROP, the Rev. Wm Q. McKnight of Japan, and the Rev. Clyde Fields were all greatly enjoyed. And so were three ministerial students from Elon—David Crowle, from Pennsylvania, Curtis Young from Durham, and Matt Currin from Burlington. And two pastors of our Western Carolina Conference who arranged their schedules to be with us—Max Vestal and Winfred Bray. Last, but not least, we heard one of our own laymen, Dalton Harper, who, we are sorry to say, has since moved with his wife, Blanche Coghill Harper (our women's society treasurer) to Greensboro.

Special services for three of our Sunday morning services we did not use a "preacher," but planned and carried them out ourselves. The first of these was on Palm Sunday, when we broadcast a service of scripture and music, using the events of the last week of Jesus' life on earth as the basis for our program. Hubert Beane was the reader, and music was furnished by our children's, junior, and chancel choirs, plus a stringed quartette of guest artists.

A second service was a combination Whitsunday and Memorial one, when we thought of the beginning of the church on Pentecost and its continuation down through the formation of the World Council of Churches, with its eternal meaning brought home to us through members who had passed to the Great Beyond. Mrs. E. P. Boroughs, Mrs. Hattie Cox, and Jim Flynt, who had died during the year, were especially remembered, memorial certificates being presented to the families of the two women from the missionary society and a book, Christ and the Fine Arts being presented to the church library in memory of Mr. Flynt. Participants in the service included Dalton Harper, H. L. Beane, J. L. Davis, W. H. Hughes, Jr., Mrs. Kenry Keeling, Mrs. Alston Williams, and Mrs. L. E. Pritchard. Soloist was Mrs. John L. Davis.

The first week in June the church held a revival meeting, with the Rev. Clyde Fields of Hunterdale, Virginia, doing the preaching and Mr. Joe Stephenson of Fuquay, Varina, N. C., as the song leader. They did a good job under the rather unusual circumstances. The pastor was present on the last evening to receive the six new members into the church.

The second week in June we held our Vacation Bible School, with nearly 100 enrolled. Teachers included Mrs. Roy Moore, Mrs. L. E. Pritchard, Mrs. David Burns, Mrs. Chester Branson, Mrs. J. L. Davis, Mrs. Alton Williams, Mrs. F. C. Lester, and Misses Sylvia Cox and Martha Boling. A combined Children's Day and Vacation Bible School program was held on the second Sunday in June in lieu of the regular church service. Each group presented a part on the program, showing what they had been studying in both places, woven together by the hymn "We Would See Jesus." W. H. Hughes, Jr., superintendent of the church school, presided.

Family Events.

Two "family events" have been held during the six months. The first was on a Sunday evening two weeks before Easter, when a "covered dish supper" for our church family was held at the church. Following this we used the picture of the life of Christ, with some fifteen persons reading the appropriate scriptural dialog to go with them. This proved to be very effective—a simple form of a "pageant" which we recommend to others.

The final event was our Sunday school picnic held on August 8, when about sixty of our people gathered at the Franklinville Park for fellowship and supper. A heavy shower of rain drove us to shelter, and cut short the period of games, but lighthearted spirits made us conscious of each other's friendship and of our church and we forgot the weather.

Back to Asheboro.

All in all, if the on-leave-of-absence-Minister's wife and one of the "program planners" for the period can be impartial judge, (which is doubtful of course), it seems to me that the Asheboro Church has "carried on" in a fine way and with good attendance during this past six months.

The Lester family has enjoyed its stay in Fayetteville, where the members of our church have been friendly and cooperative, but is moving back to Asheboro this week, where Mr. Lester will preach again on the fifth Sunday in August, a service which will be broadcast over station WGWR, 1260 on your dial.

EMILY C. LESTER,
Reporter.

"Give Ye Them To Eat"

In this land of plenty, we are in the midst of one of the greatest harvests in history. The granaries and storage bins are bulging. Dare we let our hearts do less? Out of Christian compassion we must hear the cries of the hungry overseas. There are literally millions of them in Western Europe, Greece, Palestine, India, Pakistan, Korea and elsewhere—38,000,000 in desperate need of food now.

Our Lord and Master says, "Give ye them to eat." For us the loaves have been multiplied immensely by the miracle of American production and "know how." To keep faith with our heritage and our brother man, we must "give them to eat."

The hands of hungry millions are outstretched to you and to me. How can we do less than fill them? A few years ago a poster appeared showing a little girl, one of the hungry millions. The poster's appeal was, "Let's fill her cup." How much will you give to help fill it.

If you will help Church World Service can send the 12,500,000 pounds of government surplus powdered skim milk to those who need it. It is truly a bargain: Ten cents (a candy bar) will deliver a cup of milk a day for two months; 60c (a movie ticket) will deliver a cup a day for a year; $6 will deliver a cup a day for two average sized families.

Along with this information comes the call to "Be Their Milkman." The job of CROP is to deliver it. It costs

(Continued on page 7.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Forces For Education

During and since World War II the government by precept and example has inspired the youth of our country to get an education. It appropriated large sums of money, erected buildings, provided equipment, employed teachers, and allotted funds to students for subsistence and tuition. Our government tried to make all young people of college age education conscious, to make them want an education and to inspire them to acquire a liberal arts education or technical training according to plans or ambitions of the individual. As a result thousands and literally hundreds of thousands have gone to college in these recent years; and the country is beginning to reap the results. Education—intelligent information—is the best builder of democracy available. It is the most effective enemy of communism. Democracy thrives on intelligence. Communism thrives on selfish intelligent leadership with the masses without information. They know nothing but autocratic authority and complete domination. The hope of America lies in her system of education. Beginning as early in life as is practical, becoming intensified in youth and continuing to grow and expand in maturity, will create a well rounded citizen.

There is a feeling on the part of some that the government's enthusiasm for the education of our youth is beginning to wane. There is a reduction in funds made available for education. A tightening of draft laws taking students out of college not to meet an immediate danger but to satisfy political and military plans is a detriment to the nation as a whole. I would not for a moment speak against the interest of our country nor would I be quiet to its detriment. Experience has proved that a trained young man is worth more to the armed forces of our country than one who is not. It is a good investment to make it possible for a young man to prepare himself and then to create situations that compel him to take advantage of the opportunities created.

In recent weeks a large number of Elon students have been drafted.

They were already enrolled in college. They were anxious to complete their education but their draft boards under compulsion had no choice in the matter. They were compelled to call them for military duty. There must be no let up on the part of the government or the general public in the matter of providing facilities creating opportunities for the education of the youth of our country. Herein lies the hope of democracy, the hope of Christianity, and the hope of man.

* * * * *

Getting Ready

It is always quite a job to get the campus, dormitories, buildings and other facilities at Elon College ready for the annual opening of school in September. It was difficult enough when the summer months were free, but after the inauguration of a year round curriculum, the problem of getting things ready for the reception of new students became even more complicated. Carpenters, painters, and cleaners have been busy for weeks and weeks and the end is not near. There is always plenty to do to ready the class rooms and grounds but when you tackle dormitories where students have lived for nine months and more, it is an entirely different question. Mr. Butler, the Business Manager, has had a competent force at work during the summer months and everything will be in order by September 8 which is the date of the opening of the fall quarter. The Field Secretary and his organization have been working faithfully during the summer to see that former students are properly enrolled and that new students in satisfactory numbers will be here at the beginning. Mr. Danieleley, Professor Hook, and Dr. Bowden have revised the schedule for the regular college session which will be printed and ready for distribution. The faculty will be called to the campus on September 5 for an orientation period to make sure that the curriculum is understood and properly arranged for them; that the program of counselling for all students entering in September is complete and all preparations made to answer students' questions.

Every effort possible is being made to see that all things at Elon College are ready for the opening, the reception of new students, and a program of instruction is complete.

* * * * *

Summer Graduates

Those scheduled to graduate this Friday night at the summer commencement exercises include: Darwin Bailey, Snow Camp; Marvin Bryan, Burlington; Richard Carli, Vineland, N. J.; Clifford Cherry, Draper; Joseph Deaton, Greensboro; Charles Garrett, Roxboro; Frederick Grant, Manchester, Conn.; Ralph Harris, Burlington; Bryce Burd, Mayodan; William Hawkins, Spray; Jack James, Fayetteville; Annie Kate Kernodle, Burlington; Glendon Lackey, Greensboro; Clara Loy, Burlington; Margaret McBryde, Reidsville; Donald Merrimon, Fieldale, Va.; Agnes Miller, Reidsville; Parks Morgan, Suffolk; Ned Morrison, Graham; William Renn, Hampton, Va.; Norma Roberts, Jamesville; Lewis Shaw, Jonesville; Albert Stephens, Leaksville; Paul Shepherd, Cooleemee; Garnett Shropshire, Draper; Jesse Taylor, Burlington; Richard Thompson, Graham; and Virgie Truitt, Jr., Reidsville.

"GIVE YE THEM TO EAT."

(Continued from page 6.)

2½ cents a pound to deliver this free milk to those who need it. We have to get it to a port for ocean-going vessels; pay for ocean freight to areas where we cannot get government reimbursement; and pay net distribution costs through Christian channels in the areas of need.

If your neighbor's barn or house burns, every means of assistance will be used to help him rebuild. Many of our neighbors overseas have lost more than home and shelter. All means of livelihood are gone with it. That is why we must help now. That is why we must be "good neighbors" to those across the world who cannot help themselves. We cannot pass by on the other side, can we?

If a hungry child were on your doorsteps you would feed him, would you not? If his cup is empty you will fill it, will you not?

CARL R. KEY.

The Disciples of Christ of Virginia are planning on having 1,500 delegates and visitors at their State Convention to be held in Lynchburg, October 13-15, 1953.

Missions at Home and Abroad

India Letter

Dear Friends:

I am writing this letter in India, but it will be mailed in America.

It will be an account of one of the most eventful six months of my life and perhaps the most fruitful. I lay the tribute of my gratitude at His feet. I was advised by the doctors not to go to Japan for this trip. But my inner voice said: "Go, and I will give you maximum of result with a minimum of strain." The last time I was in Japan, two years ago, I went to 41 cities in three months and I thought that was strenuous, but the promise held true—there was a minimum of strain with a maximum of result. There were thirty-one thousand non-Christian who signed the decision cards either for immediate baptism or for preparation for baptism. In addition there were eight thousand Christians who signed saying they would give up everything Christ could not approve, would keep the Quiet Time and would endeavor to win others. Some thought that with the lifting of the Occupation the interest in Christianity would fade. It was not so. The quality of response was better. This is important. For it shows that the interest in Christianity was based on a need for a new dynamic faith and not upon the Occupation. It is therefore a permanent need. The way is open for the future. I am going back again in two years.

When I returned to India it was under the cloud of a possibility that evangelistic missionaries might not be allowed in India in the future. I wrote an Open Letter to the Government of India and sent it to the leading members of Government, most of whom were my personal friends. I had replies from practically all of them and the consensus of replies was that if evangelistic missionaries would do evangelistic work in the spirit and outlook in which I was doing it there could be no objection. I am grateful that the matter has been clarified and that I am now apparently free to carry on my evangelistic work. I will get back to India for six months of evangelistic work beginning in January.

When I arrived in Japan I wondered if I could work on my book, Growing Spiritually in view of the strenuous program of 72 cities in less than three months. But the promise of the Father, that, "There will be a minimum of strain with a maximum of result," has happened. When I arrived in Japan I had only 35 weeks of the 52 done on the Daily Devotional, but at the close of the campaign I had finished the writing, had put in the Scripture references and the Affirmations. Only the polishing remained. I found I could write on Japanese trains which run smoothly. I came on to India, got two good secretaries and finished up the book and sent it off on June 10 by airmail. It should be out by November.

I was on more or less of a diet, reduced 20 pounds and have never felt better in my life. We have just finished this month's Ashram and though it was very strenuous nevertheless I have come through not even tired. It has been all of Grace.

The Murmanzil Psychiatric Center which we have established at Lucknow is going on from strength to strength. It has gone beyond our expectations. We thought it would take a very long time to build up the demand for the center. The response has been immediate. The psychiatrists have more than they can do now. We are in the process of enlarging.

Some of my needs: (1) Scholarships for theological students in the theological college. (2) The support of a psychiatric social worker to follow up patients in their homes. (3) The cost of the ambulance running and maintenance. (4) The cost of bringing to the Ashram at Sat Tal pastors and new converts. (5) Scholarships for teachers in training, students in high school and college.

I will be in America from June 26, until the middle of January holding six Ashrams, a crusade for a United Church and evangelistic missions.

This has been the best year of my life and the most fruitful. Thanks for your prayers and help.

Gratefully and sincerely,

E. STANLEY JONES.

That which each can do best, none but the Maker can teach him.—Emerson.

Appointed Career Missionaries To the Philippines

Philip Andrew Brink of Topeka, Kansas, and Pennngrove, California, World War II veteran who served in combat duty in France, Germany and Czechoslovakia as an officer in the U. S. Army Field Artillery, and his wife, Consuelo Dayoan Brink, have been appointed career Congregational Christian missionaries by the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, and assigned for work in the Philippine Islands.

Mr. and Mrs. Brink hope to sail for their new work, which will be under the United Church of Christ in the Philippines, in the early fall. They will probably be located somewhere in Northern Mindanao.

Philip Brink was born in Topeka, and was educated in the local high school. Later he attended Park College, Parkesville, Missouri; Kansas State Teachers College, Pittsburg, Kansas, and the Pacific School of Religion.

Following graduation from Teachers College in 1941, he went to Officers' Candidate School at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, and then served for five years as an officer in the U. S. Field Artillery both in the United States and overseas in Europe.

After finishing his military service, Brink was office manager for a landscape and city planning company, and later helped his brother establish the Security Abstract Company of Greeley, Colorado. Unsatisfied with a business career, he decided to enter the Pacific School of Religion at Berkeley, California, to train for full time Christian service, and received his B. D. from that institution.

During his seminary course, he was Youth Assistant in the First Congregational Church of Martinez, California, and also served two churches as assistant pastor. Since September, 1952, he has been pastor of the Community Church, Pennngrove, California.

Consuelo Dayoan Brink was born in Sinait Llocoos Sur, Philippine Islands. She is a graduate of Union College, Manila, and the University of Manila (LL.B.). She practiced law in the Philippines before turning to religious work as a career. She later came to the United States to take work at the Pacific School of Religion.

During World War II, Mrs. Brink, her parents and other members of the family were prisoners of the Japanese.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

A Challenge to Each Society

Mrs. David McKeith, who spoke at the Valley of Virginia and North Carolina Rallies, has remembered that she promised to send some material for our women's page occasionally. While attending a women's conference in Massachusetts—and not long before sailing for France on September 16, from whence she and her husband will fly to Ceylon in 36 hours—she took "time out" to send us a challenge as we make plans for beginning our new year's work.

I believe that this message might be read in every women's society, either at our September meetings when we install officers for the new year, or at the October meetings when we actually begin that new year's work.

Says Mrs. McKeith: "I have just read the latest letters from the field. This quotation seems to me a fitting challenge to our church women as they begin another year, filling their Friendly Service quota, giving their Thank Offerings as their second-mile gift, answering calls for CARE packages, multi-purpose foods, powdered milk, and clothing, and most of all giving money for the regular on-going missionary enterprises of our church.

"Peggy Thomas writes of the recent American Marathi Mission Council meetings in Bombay:

"The highlight of the meetings came at the end, before the benediction. The chairman, S. Pundit, took the gavel and presented it to the new chairman, Pramankiarao Gaikwar, who rose, six feet tall, and faced us all with eyes shining and a wonderful, deep smile on his lined face. For many years pastor of the church in Wai, father of ten children—each of whom I would like to tell you about—he came as a little boy trudging across the fields with his smaller brother, a famine orphan, to the mission station at Wai. There he was nurtured in body and spirit. He said as he stood before us: "I never dreamed this day would come. I will do my best."

"Day by day, as there are so many needy ones who come to our mission stations all over the world, the thought often comes, 'What are the potentialities of this child?'"

And as we acknowledge this challenge of helping "these little ones," whom the Master referred to, we will go forward with joy and service in our new year.

Send Your Mail

Send your mail for this page to Mrs. F. C. Lester, 801 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, North Carolina, again. The Lester family is moving this week—from Fayetteville back to Asheboro.

While in Fayetteville it has been my pleasure to attend two women's meetings, both of which I enjoyed. Mrs. K. M. Linder, the outgoing president, is the new district superintendent for the Sanford District. Plans are under way for a good program for the Eutaw Community Church's society for the coming year, and year books will be ready for distribution at the September meeting, when Mrs. Verdie Godleski will "take over" as the new president.

Fathers Attend Cradle Roll Party

Recently the missionary society of Greensboro, Palm Street, Church held its annual Cradle Roll Party. The parents were invited to bring their children and enjoy the party with them. More fathers than mothers came to enjoy the ice cream and cookies with the children.

We have ten members in our Cradle Roll Department, and the offering from the mite boxes amounted to $13.00. This was sent to our conference treasurer.

The women's society sponsors missionary work for all the children of the church, hoping that their missionary vision will continue to grow through the years.

MRS. M. V. WELCH.

* * * * *

Retreat for New Leaders

Those of you who know Pattie Lee Coghill or Graham Wiseman very well will understand what I mean when I say that neither of them often write down anything to go on this page in THE SUN, but if I can "corner" either of them for a minute, they can usually tell me something that should be reported here. The news of the "retreat" at Greensboro, First, Church, given below, may have mistakes as to names of people involved, as it came to me via the telephone from Graham Wiseman when I had no pencil to take notes. If there are mistakes, please just blame her for not writing it down and sending it to me, rather than me for having a poor excuse for a brain!

Greensboro, First, Women's auxiliary has eight circles. Each circle has a spiritual life chairman and a missionary chairman. These sixteen people attend a one-day retreat at the country home of Mrs. R. F. Craven in July to plan their work for the coming year—note that every leader was present!

Mrs. Russell Powell led the planning for the spiritual life leaders. Using Mirrors of the Soul, the Bible study booklet for the coming year, she presented in an "out of this world manner" (Graham's expression!) the eight Psalms for special study. She suggested a variety of techniques, and she led the women present to a thorough understanding of their subject matter.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill was the leader of the group who are to present in some vital fashion the cause of missions at each circle meeting. (It is my understanding that the monthly programs suggested in the packet are not used at the circle meetings, but at the monthly general meetings.) They discovered a lot of new resources for use, such as the monthly letter from our mission fields available from the Missionary Council, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts, and Facts from the Field from the same source, as well as new ways of presenting old sources of material like THE SUN and Advance.

The opening worship was led by Mrs. H. G. Ballinger, retiring president, and the closing worship by Mrs. Carl Monroe, the incoming president, both of whom attended the School of Missions this year.

Lunch was served to the group by Mrs. R. L. Caviness, Mrs. W. M. Paris, and Mrs. W. E. Wiseman.

And who had the original idea for this retreat? "Graham Wiseman, of course," says Dorthy Powell. Anyhow, we think it is a fine idea to use in any society—and it is not too late to do it yet for the year beginning in October. Let's hear reports if any other society has done or yet will do a "retreat."

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

The Small Town Boy Goes to the City

By MRS. W. W. SLOAN.

Jesus, the small town boy, knew about God, for all around him were things God had made. There was the sun which day after day brought warmth and light so that one could be comfortable, could see to work and play. Then there was the rain, which made the seeds sprout in the ground, helped the grain and vineyards to grow.

One day when Jesus and some other boys had taken a hike up into the hills, a rain and thunder storm came up so suddenly they couldn't get back to the village of Nazareth, and no place to which they could run for shelter. The other boys were afraid; they shivered and complained. But Jesus was not afraid. He stood on the very top of the hill, and laughed at the wind and the rain. How fresh and clean it felt! God was washing the world; How could one be afraid?

But Jesus had learned other things about God. He had seen the men bring in the harvest at the end of the summer, and had marveled at how one grain of oats or wheat could produce a stalk with many grains on it. It was because God had planned it so. Each spring Jesus watched the shepherds bring their flocks down from the hills so their wool could be shorn and made into warm clothing. He liked to watch the baby lambs playing around their mothers. They seemed to be having such fun! He was glad God had planned life that way.

But there were some things Jesus did not know. How many people lived in the big cities, how crowded and close together, how unhappy. He did not know that some men and women were slaves sold from one master to another. He had never seen people so very rich—and so very poor. So when Jesus came from his home town of Nazareth to the capital city, Jerusalem, you can imagine he kept his eyes open for anything there was to see.

First there was the beautiful temple, where he went with his father and mother and friends from Nazareth. At the temple there were countless numbers of people gathered to worship, from Jerusalem itself and from other cities, even from faraway countries. In the temple were wise rabbis or teachers who were glad to answer questions about God.

Jesus didn't spend all his time at the temple. There was the market place where bright cloth and beautiful jewels and clever gadgets of all kinds were being sold. He never tired of watching the people who came to buy, an endless stream of them moving through the streets. Some were pushing and shoving each other, scowling and complaining. Jesus wondered why they were unhappy instead of friendly and neighborly like the folk at Nazareth.

As he made his way through the crowds on the main street of the city, suddenly a cry was heard!

"Here comes the Roman governor. Everybody scram!"

There was the clatter of chariot wheels over the rough stones as the horses dashed through the narrow streets. A faint scream—and when the glittering chariot had passed, a lame beggar, an old man, lay motionless in the street where he had fallen under the wheels.

That was not the only sight to chill the heart of the boy from Nazareth. As he wandered about the maze of streets he passed through a gate leading to a low hill beyond the city wall. At the top of the hill was a cross with the body of a man hanging from it. It was the hill of execution, and the man was some criminal put to death by the rulers. Jesus must have wondered what the man had done to bring on himself such a horrible punishment. We can imagine him thinking to himself.

"Do people have to be killed for doing a bad deed? If a man has done one wrong, why make another wrong by killing him? Does God want people to live that way? God must want the world to be different from this, and I'm going to help him make it different. I can help bring God's rule by letting him rule in my life. Then wherever I go, his kingdom will be there."

NOTE.—This is the first of several stories that Mrs. Sloan has promised for the Children's Page. J. J. H., Editor.

"Overland With the Children"

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"How well you look, Pamela! One would never imagine you had just completed a long cross-country trip with two small children!"

The words were addressed to Pamela Cartwright, who had just come from a distant state for a visit at the home of her sister. I was one of a group of old friends who had gathered on the day following her arrival to bid her welcome.

"I am not very tired," Pamela replied. "We had a good trip, and it's wonderful to come back to Barnard to see my sister and all of you good friends. The only way we could afford to bring the whole family was to drive our car."

"Doesn't it take a great deal of patience to travel with young children?" one of the group questioned.

"Yes," the visitor replied, "it does take patience, but much that would be wearisome can be avoided if plans are carefully made before starting out."

"Won't you please tell us how you plan an auto trip across the continent?" urged my cousin, Sarah Glynn. "My husband's people live two thousand miles away, and he wants to take us all to visit them this summer. Our children often become so tired and irritable when we travel only short distances that I dread the long journey."

"I'll be glad to tell you some of the things that have helped us," Pamela answered. "A few of them I have learned from experience, and friends have given me useful advice from time to time."

"First, the clothes the children wear ought to be simple and easily cleaned. Nowadays one can secure garments that are easily washed and dried and require no ironing. Comfortable walking shoes for each child are extremely necessary."

"There will be stops for sight-seeing and viewing places of historic interest. It is important that everyone be given an opportunity to walk about during all rest stops. I've seen children left in the car, during an interval at the service station, while their parents walked up and down for relaxation. The little ones were unhappy and were increasingly restless when the journey was resumed. Of course, with so many cars about,

(Continued on page 13.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

New Series of Filmstrips Will Soon Be Available

Members of church youth groups throughout the U. S. soon will be watching a new series of filmstrips designed to supplement the teaching of youth leaders, and to lend continuity to groups with a rapidly-changing series of leaders.

The seven new filmstrips, financed cooperatively by 12 Protestant denominations first will be shown this autumn at 40 youth work institutes in the U. S., to be attended by youth leadership from community and state levels. The institutes will be conducted during September and October.

Purpose of the filmstrips, according to Rev. A. Wilson Cheek, director of the United Christian Youth Movement, is to provide emphasis on certain aspects of youth work in the church which the 12 denominations agreed were of overall importance. Points dealt with include Christian faith, Christian citizenship and Christian world outreach.

The United Christian Youth Movement is the youth arm of the National Council of Churches.

"Denominational leaders have been concerned because the rapid turnover of church youth workers tends to destroy a sense of continuity on the part of youth groups," Mr. Cheek observed. "It is hoped that these films, emphasizing certain points in the youth program, will offset any lack of continuity in youth leadership."

The filmstrips are: "We Have This Fellowship," an introduction to local church youth fellowships; "Faith of a Guy," about the Christian faith; "Too Big to Tackle," concerned with cooperative church work and specifically how to form a United Christ Youth council; "I Found a New World," a color filmstrip on Christian outreach; "How Wide is Your Circle?," describing Christian fellowship; "The Measure of a Man," color cartoon on the ideals of Christian citizenship; and "Gallery of Witnesses," on the Christian witness.

The 12 denominations which financed the filmstrip project, at a total cost of more than $53,000, are Presbyterian U. S., Presbyterian U. S. A., United Presbyterian, Church of the Brethern, Congregational Christian, Evangelical and Reformed, Evangelical United Brethern, Methodist, American Baptist, Disciples of Christ, Church of God (Anderson, Ind.), and United Church of Canada.

Denominational Publishing Houses will distribute the films on a national basis. They will be available in sets after September 1, and singly after January 1, 1954.

* * * * *

Letter to N. C. and Va. Conference Pilgrim Fellowship

Howdy Folks:

It has been quite sometime since we were in touch with each other; hasn't it? Here it is nearly time for school to start, time to start back to work in another year of P. F. activity and August 28-30 is the time for our Planning Conference. I hope you haven't forgotten about it.

This conference will be held at Crabtree Creek State Park, Camp No. 3. The enrollment will be limited to 64 people; therefore it will be necessary for us to limit each group to two representatives. This conference is for the purpose of planning our program for next year. You know we are changing from the four commission plan to the three commission plan; so this is a very important meeting.

We will have to pay 75 cents per person for the use of the camp. Meals will be 50 cents each. If you bring a picnic supper for Friday night, this will make us have five meals for which we will have to pay. The total cost will be $3.25. Since those attending will be representing their entire group, I would suggest that your group help with the expenses.

Our program for next year will only be as good as you make it. So please send your representatives. Be sure to write me a card as soon as possible letting me know that you will be represented and if there will be one or two persons from your group.

If you are coming on the bus, come to Durham; and someone will pick you up. Be sure to let us know what time you will arrive. Try to be at Crabtree by 3; 30 p. m., Friday. If you can not possibly come Friday afternoon, come Saturday morning.

I am looking forward to seeing you and working with you.

In Fellowship,
CURTIS YOUNG,
President.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Spoken 88 Years Ago.

We have been the recipients of the choicest bounties of heaven; we have grown in numbers, wealth, and power as no other nation has ever grown. But we have forgotten God. We have forgotten the gracious hand which preserved us in peace, and multiplied and enriched and strengthened us, and we have vainly imagined, in the deceitfulness of our hearts, that all these blessings were produced by some superior wisdom and virtue of our own. Intoxicated with unbroken success, we have become too self-sufficient to feel the necessity of redeeming and preserving grace, too proud to pray to the God that made us.

—A. Lincoln.

* * * * *

Let Us Pray

For a pure and unselfish heart,
That sees the good in others
And forgives that which is evil.

Parents Help Youth Prepare For Christian Homemaking

By W. CLARK ELLZEY.

Christian parents are helping their children prepare for Christian homemaking from the moment they are born. All of a child's experiences up to a wedding is preparation for homemaking. The only question is what kind?

Christian parents may be credited with the best of intentions but they vary in knowledge and skill in their relationships with their children. And many do not realize that the best thing they can give their children is a good marriage. Research tends to show a correlation between the happiness of parents (as estimated by children) and the happiness of the children's own marriage.

Christian parents love their children. But there are many kinds of love, some wholesome and healthy, some vicious and exploitive. All parents need to know and understand the nature of their own love relationship with their children.

Successful marriages and happy homes are built with the resources of the persons in them. Christian parents
(Continued on page 13.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Standards for Christian Leaders"

LESSON IX—AUGUST 30, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Let no one despise thy youth, but set an example to the believers in speech and conduct, in love, in faith, in purity."
—I Timothy 4: 12 (RSV).

LESSON: I Timothy 4: 7-16

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 37: 3-40.

This letter was written by a minister to another minister. One was an old man, the other was a young man. The younger man had been led to Christ, and brought into the ministry by the older man. And as a father to a son, Paul is writing out of his head, and his heart to his spiritual son in the faith about standards for Christian leaders. And although the letter was from a minister to a fellow-minister, the principles apply to all Christian leaders, whether ministers or laymen in the Church of Christ.

Profane And Old Wives' Fables.

There were those in Timothy's church at Ephesus who were teaching a lot of silly stuff—that abstaining from marriage, practicing withdrawal from the world, and abstaining from certain foods brought piety and salvation. It was a lot of nonsense, and Paul warned Timothy against such trivial and troublesome piffle. It is so hard for some folks to distinguish between the things that are important and unimportant in religion. Folks spend so much time and energy in discussing the difference between tweedle-dum and tweedle-dee, and neglect the weightier matters of faith and hope and love, and sacrifice and service. Many a preacher and teacher spends so much time on the details of a sermon or lesson that he has no time, or perhaps does not see, the great moral and spiritual truth in the lesson. Christian leaders ought to be able to separate the chaff from the wheat.

This Matter of Exercise.

"Bodily exercise is profitable for a little, but godliness is profitable for all things, having promise of the life which now is, and of that which is to come." Paul was not minimizing the importance of exercise. It is important to physical and mental health. Indeed it has religious significance. A man ought to take exercise, some kind of exercise, regularly, as a means of developing his body and toning up his physical condition. Bodily exercise does profit a man. But as good as it is, it is a means to an end. And it is not as important as godliness or the exercise of the spirit. One of the facts in our modern world which would be comic if it were not tragic, is the way in which thousands of people give so much thought and time to the exercise of the body, and so little to the exercise of the spirit. Much thought to the body, little or no thought to the soul. They feed the body, groom it, exercise it, pamper it, lavish time and money and thought upon it. But they do little or nothing for their immortal souls.

And yet godliness is profitable for all things, both for the life that is, and for that which is to come. This does not mean that godliness always pays in dollars and cents. It does mean that there are dividends, real dividends, rich dividends in a good life in this world. And such a good life also pays dividends in the world which is to come. Here again, Paul does not mean that a man's piety is to be practiced for self-advancement. Godliness is its own reward. It comes out of consecrated living.

A Word of Wisdom For Young Preachers And Teachers.

Timothy was a comparatively young man, perhaps in his early thirties. He was called upon to preach and to teach to many who were much older and wiser than he. Like many a young preacher or teacher, he probably felt some hesitancy and even embarrassment because of this fact. How could he presume to speak to those who were his elders concerning the things, both of this life, and of the life to come? Well, Paul had the answer. In addition to reminding Timothy that age is a comparative matter, he suggested two principles that are sound and workable. First of all, let a man, a young man (and an older man too for that matter). live a consistent Christian life. Folks may look upon him as a "boy preacher," they may smile at his immaturity, they may disagree with his judgement, but if he lives a consistent Christian life, they will respect him and love him and follow him. The young preacher, or teacher, who is an example to the people of his church and his community in, "word, in manner of life, in love, in faith, and in purity," will win and hold people. They may argue with him about his theological beliefs, or criticize him for some of the things he does in his youthful enthusiasm, but they will not be able to argue against him. There is compensation for youth, or for the inexperience of youth; it is genuine goodness.

The second thing which Paul suggested, is faithfulness and diligence in assigned tasks. "Till I come give heed to reading, to exhortation, to teaching . . . be diligent in these things, give thyself wholly to them, that thy progress may be manifest to all." "Continue in these things."

The word "reading" here refers to the public reading of the Scriptures. How few ministers read the Scriptures well in public! So often the Scripture lesson is read in a perfunctory manner, in a dull and deadly way, and almost as if it were something to be got over with as soon and harmlessly as possible. And yet here is one way in which God speaks directly to the congregation. Let every preacher, and teacher give heed to "reading." When he reads the Word of God let him do it well.

The injunction might also apply to the reading habits of the preacher and the teacher. Both should read, and read and read, so that out of the treasures of his head and his heart, he can bring forth treasures both new and old.

Furthermore faithful attention to preaching and teaching is another way for a young man to win the respect and the confidence of his people. Let him study to show himself approved to God and he will win the approval of men. Here again youth does not count against a preacher or a teacher if he is faithful and diligent in his preparation for his public service. The combination of a good life, and good work, well done more than outweighs the mere fact that a preacher or teacher is young.

The Growing Teacher and Preacher.

"That thy progress may be manifest to all." Show me a young man who lives a good life, and does his work faithfully and diligently, who

(Continued on page 15.)

A Letter from A Former Missionary

Shenrock Parsonage,
R 1, New Market, Va.
August 6, 1953.

To the Editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.
Dear Sir:

Atrocity stories are in the news again as prisoners of war are exchanged in Korea. Human suffering is hard to witness, and it is not surprising that newsmen are shocked when they see that men have suffered during imprisonment.

However, before we lay all the blame on the men in charge of the prisoners we must consider some of these facts. Prisoners are taken at the farthest point of the battle line—and they must be moved to points behind the lines. Often in the heat of battle transportation facilities are limited. So, a "forced march" is the only means of getting prisoners to prison camps.

Such a march is hard on men who may already be suffering battle fatigue and war injuries. Should they not be given first aid and medical care immediately? Yes, if such is available.

But we Americans must realize to our shame that even civilians in many countries live their whole lives through and die without any sort of medical care. For weeks the Presbyterian Mission hospital in Pusan, Korea, has been trying to accommodate 30 patients in a 20 bed hospital; and the doctors are almost exhausted from day and night duty. That is a civilian hospital far from the actual fighting lines. There are just not enough trained doctors, nurses and anaesthetists to care for the civilian population, or the regular army, let alone extra prisoners of war in a country like Korea. So when our men show lack of medical care, it may not be due to brutality. It may just be that there was no medical care available.

Here is a challenge for us as Christians: we have failed in support of our mission work. For the suffering of our soldiers is an indication that an effort for increased medical training and facilities is desperately needed in all parts of Korea and China as well as in Japan, and India and Africa.

We Americans are used to large quantities of good food. The diet of the average Chinese or Japanese or Korean is a great hardship to our men. Yet they may be eating better than the civilians outside the prison walls! Japanese soldiers found it hard to believe that American prisoners could not march on the same rations that the Japanese were used to. Our old cook in China, when I asked him to wring out the mop for me, said, "Do you eat so much food and still not have enough strength?" Even though we tried to live simply our food consumption was much greater than his. Rice, wheat, millet or ground corn are the staple foods—often the only foods—for many families in Korea and China. As a matter of fact, rice is a luxury in some sections. So when our soldiers are fed a rice diet they are getting the best food available! Meat is a "feast food" to be bought only for special occasions in many Oriental families.

So, much as we regret the suffering of our American soldiers, let us look behind the situation and realize that they may have had the best care available. Let us consider that millions of civilians in Korea and China suffer starvation, tuberculosis and lack of medical care. And let us remember that war is in itself an atrocity that breeds atrocities.

Herein lies our responsibility: to see that food and clothing are shipped to Korea and China and other countries; to see that medical supplies and medical training are provided; and to work to eliminate war and causes of war, so that men may raise food, build homes, care for the sick and live in peace.

MRS. RALPH M. GALT.

"OVERLAND with CHILDREN."

(Continued from page 10.)

when the children are walking on the road they need to be closely watched, but a change of position is even more necessary for them than for adults.

"The most trying situation comes at mealtime. Young children find it hard to eat in strange places. They are so much interested in the new surroundings that they pay little attention to their food. I am convinced that such behavior is not naughtiness on the child's part. It distresses me to hear parents in restaurants scolding children because they do not eat. We've found it best not to pay too much attention to the children's seeming lack of appetite at the first stops we make. Very soon they learn that we cannot linger long at a restaurant table, and their natural hunger asserts itself. We carry a little food for them in the car—crackers and cookies, not too rich or too sweet, along with milk in powdered or tablet form, and sometimes fruit that is not overjuicy.

"It seems advantageous to start out very early in the morning after a light breakfast, stopping for a heavier meal after we have ridden a number of miles. We take along pillows and blankets, because young children usually sleep well in the auto. A tiny baby sleeps as soundly in a car-bed as if he were at home. By stopping before it is late in the evening we find it less difficult to obtain accommodations for the night, and all of us are rested and ready for another early start the next day.

"Each child takes a few soft, smooth toys. It relieves the monotony of the ride for a little girl if she can put her dolly to bed on the seat beside her, and her brother likes to have his own toy rubber car to service and care for just as Daddy cares for the real car."

At that point we all arose to answer the summons to dinner. As we moved toward the dining room, I heard Sarah say, "Thank you Pamela. You have given me courage for that trip."

PARENTS HELP YOUTH.

(Continued from page 11.)

ents, therefore, should recognize the meaning of individual differences in their children. They should know how and increase their skills in helping their children develop those personal resources which contribute to the highest degree of marriage-ability. Good intentions and wholesome love will not supply this knowledge. They will motivate parents to secure it.

By the time children reach the stage of growth called "youth" parents have already contributed most of what they will contribute toward the preparation of their children for marriage, and homemaking. Nevertheless parents can be sensitive to their children's growing needs to live their own lives and help them to examine themselves with respect to their readiness for marriage. Young people need help to recognize the personal resources which are reassuring and those which are threatening. Parents can point them to persons and other sources (books) which may be of use. As young people discover their own needs for growth they may be encouraged to seek information or consultation.

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Home Coming, September 6, is the big item on our agenda right now. We have had nearly seven hundred (700) boys and girls at the orphanage; and we do not have the correct addresses of nearly all of them. I wish we did have them, for nothing would make me happier than to see all the children who have been benefitted by the orphanage come in here September 6, with their families. They would have a good time, and if there were that many we would come out all right, too. Those who do come back here bring us really great inspiration. They tell us such nice things. They seem so happy with seeing others, and it is a real "party," believe me.

For instance, a charming young man walked into my study "without knocking," held out his hand and said "Dan A. May." "Are you one of our boys?" "Yes, sir, and proud to say so." Well from then on we had a most delightful visit. He and his brother, "R. M.", and his sister, Sarah, were here six years. His brother served in the U. S. Navy during World War II and gave his life for his country. His sister is married, has a nice home, good husband, and fine son; lives in Worcester, Mass. It was a wonderful story of what the orphanage had done for him and his brother and sister. He and his wife are to be here Home Coming. He doubts if his sister and her family can visit their old home at that time.

Wouldn't it be nice if we had some way of getting all our former "boys and girls" who are still living to let us hear from them and give us the privilege of keeping up with them. So many of them do. I wish they all would. It is true that some of them were not here for a long time, but all are given a place in our hearts and in our records. You who read these lines, if you know of any one who should be contacted and whose address we do not have please let us know right away.

Horace Lee brought us twenty-one beautiful watermelons and I wish you could have seen the entire orphanage family enjoying them. They were so happy as they ate them, and Mr. and Mrs. Lee came when they were eating them to enjoy them with them. (Anyone reading this can take out one or two of those "thems" if they can understand what I mean without "them"). Our kitchen matron knows how to make apple pies if anyone has more apples than they will need, or that they would like to share. She knows how to make apple sauce, too. Those summer apples in nearby orchards, when coming this way just leave a bushel, or two at our kitchen. Our children will be happy and our kitchen matron, too.

Liberty Spring Church ladies are providing funds with which to dress up some of our children's windows. They are nice to us. The two adult classes of Moore Union Church will visit us Sunday afternoon, and learn how we are doing. Several packages of coupons have come in this week, and that means that many good friends have not forgotten our little folks at the orphanage. I thank you everyone.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR AUGUST 13, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

Mrs. B. G. Snow, Dyke, Va., Coupons.
Miss Vella Brown, Asheboro, N. C., Coupons.
The Ladies Aid, Winchester Church, Coupons.
Hines Chapel, Coupons.
Monticello Christian Church, Coupons.
Horace Lee, Elon College, N. C., Watermelons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 9,261.50
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Morrisville$ 8.02
8.02
Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Spring S. S.$ 20.00
Newport News S. S. 10.95
Christian Temple S. S. .. 54.61

Windsor S. S.	10.00	95.56
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington S. S.	$ 70.06
Durham S. S.	23.17	93.23
Western N. C. Conference:
Pleasant Union	$ 15.61	15.61
Virginia Valley Conference:
Winchester S. S.	$ 8.34	8.34
Total	$	220.76
Grand total	$	9,482.26

Special Offerings.

Mrs. W. M. Downey, So. Boston, Va. for George, Dewey & Phyllis Morningstar	$ 15.00
Mrs. Ethyle O'Connell, Ormond Beach, Fla.	10.00
C. V. Hooper, Morehead City, N. C.	50.00
Ladies' & Men's Bible Class, Winchester Ch. for Barbara Jean Arnold	10.00
Philathea Class, Suffolk Christian Church for W. C. and Raymond Harvell ..	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. Robert C. Goodman, Va. Beach, Va., in memory of Mrs. J. M. Darden	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. C. M. Fields, San Leandro, Calif. ..	5.00
Rev. R. L. Hendrickson, Lincoln, Kansas	60.00
Mary Sue Brittle S. S. Class for Woodie Byrd ..	5.00
L. C. Vaughn, Jr., Greensboro, N. C., in memory of Mrs. J. M. Darden ..	20.00
Special Gifts	117.20	312.20
Grand total	$	12,458.56
Total for the week	$	532.96
Total for the year	$	21,940.82

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

..... (Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

..... (Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund
Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through Aug. 20, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardecastle	$ 372.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardecastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ..	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ..	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder ..	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr. ..	82.50
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00

Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisseman	3,292.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

†Paid.
What church will be next to send in its Declaration?

Headlines in this morning's papers say: "Russia explodes H Bomb." Goodwill is man's only sure defense against himself.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING
LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.
(Continued from page 12.)

reads and studies regularly, and I will show you a young man who grows and makes progress. And his progress will be manifest to all. He may not know it, but others will know about it. And both he and they will come into a large meaning of salvation in Christ.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

Carl R. Key, North Carolina State director of CROP, calls attention to the fact that the signing of a "truce" in Korea has actually increased the demands for relief in that needy country. He urges that everyone who can, help on this project.

"Love That Never Faileth"

I know a home which is the abode of poverty, toil and constant pain. Yet one cannot remain there, even for one brief hour, without feeling that something fine and sweet and good abides in that place. There is an atmosphere of love, kindness, courtesy, gentleness, contentment, such as one seldom finds on this earth. The poor furnishings are forgotten in the presence of this greater thing, which, indeed, is priceless.

There is an invalid mother in this home who knows that she will never leave her couch until her spirit is summoned to the better and higher life.

There is a father who toils long hours for a small wage.

There is a son, just entering high school, who delivers papers both morning and evening, proudly placing his earnings in his mother's wasted hands.

There is a daughter who, aside from her household duties, is a stenographer for a business enterprise.

Each day is filled to the brim with tasks that must be done. Still there are bright smiles, clear, ringing laughter, pleasing jests, cheerful optimism and undimmed hope.

A visitor, lingering for a happy moment, noted the precious deeds, all done with a natural grace which marked them as habitual.

The son entered his mother's room with twinkling eyes and one hand held behind him.

Said the mother: "What have you in that other hand, you blessed boy?" It was a bunch of violets, fresh from the woods, which he held gently to her pale, sunken cheeks.

The daughter came with a book from the public library, and, with a kiss, placed it in her mother's hands. "I think you will like it, mother," she said.

The father sat by the bed and told an interesting story he had heard that day; yet one could see that he was worn with toil.

"What a wonderful home you have!" said the visitor. "What makes it so rich and full?"

"It is mother," said the son.

"It is love and mother," said the daughter.

"It is Christ and love and mother," said the father.

"It is the love of Christ, the mind of Christ, in all of us," said the little mother.

—Anonymous.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, AUGUST 27, 1953

NUMBER 34

The Virginia Valley Conference Reports to the Convention

The Winchester Church is unique in being the only city church in a conference of progressive rural churches

News Flashes

Credit for this issue of THE SUN should go, almost in its entirety, to Rev. Henry V. Harmon, Valley pastor-at-large. We believe our readers will agree with us that he has done a good job.

Virginia Valley Conference Pastors Meet

The Virginia Valley Conference pastors met with Superintendent W. T. Scott for lunch and business at Bethlehem Church on August 17. Plans were made for the fall session of conference and other business was transacted. Present for the meeting were Pastors Ralph M. Galt, R. E. Newton, E. J. Rohart, R. A. Whitten, and H. V. Harmon. Rev. Wm. J. Andes, native of the Valley, was also present for the meeting, as were Conference President K. B. Dofflemeyer and Conference Secretary Clarence A. Phillips.

"The Hidden Heart"—Feature Film of the Year

We have in the Southern Convention three copies of the feature film of the year, "The Hidden Heart." Mrs. R. E. Brittle, Route 1, Suffolk, Virginia, will handle reservations for the Eastern Virginia copy. Please write or call her to clear schedule. Churches in other parts of the Convention should write to Miss Doris Boswell, Box 336, Elon College, N. C., to make reservations. It is hoped that churches will use the film as early in the year as possible, as the Missions Council has asked us to return the films to the New York Office to be rented to other denominations in the spring.

One of the services of the Missions Council during the past few years is the production of a film jointly by our denomination and others, and these have been widely used free of charge in our churches. They are designed to help a local church in every member canvasses and in general missionary promotion. The film this year is called "The Hidden Heart" and is excellent. The Missions Council and the Southern Convention as well would like to have the film presented in each of our churches. All who have seen it recommend it very highly. Please make your reservations early. PATTIE LEE COGHILL.

Dr. and Mrs. Smith Take a Vacation

It isn't easy for a college president to take a vacation. History proves that! That is, in the case of president L. E. Smith. For the first twelve years as president of Elon, Dr. Smith—amid the demands of the College—didn't seem to find time to get a vacation. The last ten years he has endeavored to get away from the college two weeks in August. That hasn't always worked, because on two occasions either Dr. or Mrs. Smith, or both of them, have been laid up in the hospital about vacation time. This year early in the spring, feeling weary from the year's grind, Dr. and Mrs. Smith concluded they would take three weeks this year.

As vacation time approached, the time was cut down to the usual two weeks. Then the time was cut down to just one week. Finally President and Mrs. Smith did get away on Saturday, August 8, and arrived at Ocean Terrace Hotel at Wrightsville Beach, Sunday afternoon. They were settling down for a good rest when on Thursday morning the hurricane ("Barbara") hit Wrightsville Beach. By four o'clock in the afternoon it was terrific. Dr. Smith contends that the hurricane didn't cause his early departure from the beach on Thursday. He says it was "premonition." They left the beach intending to go via Norfolk but instead changed their plans and drove directly home. And fortunate it is that they came home! Upon arrival at the president's home they found it difficult to get into the house, and even more difficult to get into their bedrooms. Many times when a pastor returns home from vacation he finds that he has "been pounded" by his devoted parishioners. Not so for the Smiths this time. They "had to pound" to get into their own house, and when they did gain entrance they found the rooms filled with steam, and hot water on the floor going through the plastering to their rooms below, ruining the furnishings. The hot water pipe in the bathroom had exploded, and hot water was pouring like a hydrant. Evidently, this had been going on for about two days. It was a most unusual welcome home! To increase the tragedy, the insurance policy had not been written to help with the terrific loss. The Smiths have forgotten about a vacation and have been busy clearing away the debris, drying out bedding and the entire south side of the house, counting the cost of "a would be vacation," and trying to get the house liveable again.

We sympathize with Dr. and Mrs. Smith in their loss, and we hope they may yet succeed in getting a much needed vacation.

WM. T. SCOTT.

Southern Convention Dates to Remember

September 22-24—Southern Convention Rural Church Institute
Bricks, N. C.

October 1—Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference
Waverly, Va.

6—North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference
First Church, Greensboro, N. C.

8—Virginia Valley Woman's Missionary Conference
Place to be announced

14-15—Virginia Valley Annual Conference Session
Bethlehem Church

20-21—Eastern North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Shallow Well Church

28-29—Eastern Virginia Annual Conference Session
Rosemont Church, South Norfolk, Va.

November 3-4—Western North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Pleasant Hill Church

10-11—North Carolina & Virginia Annual Conference Session
Place to be announced

December 8—Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association
Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. DANIELEY, Editor, 428 Westwood, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Laymen's Fellowship of The Harrisonburg Group

We have a Laymen's Fellowship composed of laymen of the churches of our group, viz., Antioch, Linville, New Hope and Mayland. We meet on the first Tuesday evening of each month in one of the churches, and the men of that church provide the program.

The programs are always centered around some spiritual theme. By having as many taking part as possible, everyone is spiritually strengthened.

At each meeting an offering is received which goes to the support of a student in a missionary school in Madurai, India, which is managed and operated by our missionary, Miss Oline Nicholson. Of this, our latest project, Miss Nicholson writes that due to our laymen's group, she is able to care for and educate one more helpless child who otherwise would be lost to starve to death.

While this costs us only three dollars a month, it is money well spent; she and the child both appreciate it, and we will be blessed by giving it. We, as a group of laymen, get a great thrill out of having a part in such a project.

We hope that each church or group of churches will organize a Laymen's Fellowship. It will mean much to strengthen the laymen of our various churches, and through such an organization greater things can be done which will give our laymen more spiritual strength.

O. W. ANDES,
Secretary.

* * * * *

Rockingham County Council of Religious Education

NOTE.—Since Mr. Showalter and other laymen of our Rockingham County churches are active in this work, we are including his article in the "Laymen's Column."—H. H.

* * *

This council is sponsored by the churches and Christian people of this county in the Valley of Virginia.

The eight Congregational Christian churches of the county take an active part in the work. For example, the Rev. Silas E. Madren was the president of this group before leaving us for North Carolina.

The council consists of twenty-four board members, eight of whom are elected each year. The main job of the council is to organize the churches and people to support the Weekday Religious Education work in our public schools. Our goal for this work this year is $15,000. Our campaign for funds this year will take place during the first week of September.

To carry on the teaching work in the schools we have five full-time teachers working in the third, fourth, fifth and sixth grades. Only about five per cent of the public school pupils do attend these classes, although about thirty per cent of those who do attend do not attend a Sunday school.

The teachers' salaries have been raised to compete with the regular school teachers. Their transportation to the schools is also sponsored by the council.

Our work has grown each year for the advancement of Christian education in this county.

E. A. SHOWALTER.

You can get along with a wooden leg, but you can't get along with a wooden head. It is the brain that counts. In order that your brain may be kept clear, you must keep your body well and fit. That can't be done if one drinks liquor.—Dr. Mayo.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195....

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

A Thought for the Churches

By K. B. DOFFLEMYER, President
Virginia Valley Central Conference

The Church is one of the greatest social institutions; with a potential usefulness far beyond its present limited service. When the Church can be awakened to realize its opportunities—as some few churches have—it can stand first among the institutions of society for the upbuilding of the community and for the improvement of its moral tone.

If any church is to render real spiritual service to its people, it must first make itself an efficient earthly institution. If any church is to be strong and influential, it must labor to build a strong, healthy community rather than just a big church and a big church program.

The church must plan a program of useful service. Unless this is done, the church will bear little relationship to a living community; its influence on youth will be small; and its mission of moral and religious leadership will be forgotten by the people.

Stewardship and the Grace of Giving

By REV. EMERSON J. ROHART

Stewardship implies a trust committed to one's care and charge; a responsibility owed to another. God entrusts his people with his treasures, and they are responsible to him for the way they use them. The Gospel is given as a trust to his own; the faith is once for all delivered unto the saints. Then God also gives to his people talents or capacities for ministry and service as well as precious moments of time and material gifts. Everything the Christian possesses belongs to the Lord, as does the Christian himself. The recognition of this truth should bring a joyous responsibility, not a mere sense of duty, into the hearts of all true followers of Christ.

Dr. Warren Denison says, "It is an error to think of Christian stewardship as an elective course, not a necessity or a basic philosophy of life." He adds that it is vital, fundamental, and undergirds all of our other relations to the various areas of life.

There are many different phases of stewardship, but space permits to enlarge upon only one, the stewardship of money. It is itself a marvel that God should permit us to give him anything; all things are his already, and all things came and come from him. But because we need to practice the grace of giving for our own spiritual development, God asks us to give back to him that which is his already.

The doctrine of Christian giving, its nature, inspiration and reward is set forth in the eighth and ninth chapters of Second Corinthians. Several important facts from those chapters are these:

First. Stewardship is a grace to be learned from God.

Second. It is to be preceded by the giving of self.

Third. It is sacrificial and generous.

Fourth. It should be systematic, regular and cheerful.

A merchant who was a Christian was once asked to contribute to a certain work of a church. He gladly wrote a check for two hundred and fifty dollars and gave it to the visitor. At that moment a cablegram arrived. The merchant looked troubled as he read it.

"This cablegram," said he, "tells me that one of my ships has been wrecked and the cargo lost. That makes a difference in my business. I'll have to write you another check."

The visitor understood, and handed back the check. The merchant wrote out another one and gave it to him. When he read it, he was amazed. It was for a thousand dollars.

"Haven't you made a mistake?" the visitor asked.

"No," said the merchant, "I haven't made a mistake." Then, his eyes filling with tears, he added, "The cablegram was a message from my Father in Heaven. It read, 'Lay not up for yourself treasures upon earth.'"

The Rural Church and the Rural Community

By REV. RALPH M. GALT

All except one of our Valley Conference churches are rural, and that one—Winchester—has many members of rural background.

Therefore, we are strenuously and prayerfully seeking to revive and to strengthen our rural churches. But perhaps we have not been attacking this problem in the most effective way.

Let us keep in mind that church and community are inseparably and directly related. In a prosperous community the church is generally well off and strong. In an impoverished community the churches are most likely to be small and struggling. In a transient community, in which the people are always moving, the church is unstable and weak. In a divided community there will be factions in the churches or too many small churches.

Therefore, it is not the churches alone, but also the communities, which need reforming and reviving. We, who are Christians, must not pass by on the other side of the road and leave the beaten and half-dead community without help.

We might well adopt the slogan the "new rural church movement" of China had before the Communist revolution, "To serve the whole man in all his relationships."

There are many good examples of church people helping both their churches and communities at the same time. At the South Waterloo (Iowa) Church of the Brethren in the open country, the older farmers encourage their sons to enter into farming partnerships with them. Then the older members do not move to town, but while gradually retiring from active farming, they build new homes for themselves near the church. A few years ago they had about forty father and son agreements in effect, and twenty new homes for retiring farmers.

Calvary Church, at Big Lick, Tennessee, started study clubs on community improvement, organized a farm machinery utility cooperative, and encouraged "tree farming." The church obtained a fund with which it bought hundreds of acres of mountain forest land, and then divided the land into fair-sized farms to be sold on easy terms to young families. In a short time twenty-seven families had settled on farms of their own. In appreciation of the revival of both hope and income, the people built a beautiful native-stone church with their own hands.

In a number of church communities, both Protestant and Catholic, the church people have helped one another buy homes, land, machinery, etc., by forming "credit unions." A credit union is a group of people who pool their savings as a cooperatively controlled fund. Then the members of the union may borrow from that fund for good purposes.

Two major problems affecting the people and churches of the Shenandoah Valley at the present, are: (1) low wages, and (2) migration from the Valley. A great many of our people receive wages lower than the standard minimum of the national Wage and Hour Act. This causes a feeling of difference and conflict between the rich and the poor. It is one reason why we have been unable to persuade the wealthier to attend most of our Valley churches.

Here is an example: There is a millionaire who owns most of the richest land in one of our church neighborhoods. He has a mansion and beautiful gardens. He refused his gardeners their request of a raise from sixty to sixty-five cents an hour, so most of them quit their jobs. This wealthy man has never given a cent to our church. If we do something to raise wages or to provide land for the poor of our community, we will benefit both the church and the community.

One of the main reasons for migration from the Valley is lack of employment. If more industries, both private and cooperative, and related to the local economy, could be established here, all would benefit. Then our young people, whom we try so hard to bring up to love the Lord, would not leave us just when we need their adult leadership.

God Has Blessed Our Winchester Church

By MRS. R. A. WHITTEN

It is encouraging to read in THE SUN of the progress being made by our churches in new construction and building improvement programs. Many of our Valley churches have come a long way recently.

Winchester Church as one of these is happy that the last few years have seen much accomplished and our people have been happy in the tasks to which they have set themselves.

Not too many years ago the lot adjacent to the church was bought and paid for in a short time. Five years ago in September the new parsonage was occupied by the minister's family and two years ago the note was burned which left us with no debt at all. During this time a lovely Moller organ was presented to the church by one of the members of the church and his wife and the choir loft enlarged to make place for the organ, all a gift.

The parsonage fund of the church has recently paid for the painting inside and outside of the parsonage, making it more beautiful than ever.

A new heating plant is being installed in the church which has already been painted outside and is to be redecorated inside immediately. For this purpose there is considerable money on hand to date. We do need an educational plant and hope to start that project in the not too far distant future.

The church has accepted her quota of the church Building and Loan Fund, paid $150 and plans to do her share of this work.

But these are not the most important realizations of our people. The joys that go deeper and that are far more satisfying are those that have come from working together, the joys of tithing, of presenting a gift for our work in Shaowu at Easter time—$600 each of five Easters. These are real joys and the true foundations upon which spiritual and even material structures are to rest if they would endure. It is the conviction of many of our people that our improvements and increased budget at home date from the time that our foreign missions interests caught new vision.

God has blessed us in Winchester and we are grateful. It is our prayer that He shall be pleased to lead us into paths of greater service.

Our Virginia Valley Conference Churches Report . . .

Old Friends Visit Antioch

Seven new members were recently received into the church membership at Antioch. They received a warm welcome.

Also we were recently visited by the following old friends and members: the Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Andes and David of Winston-Salem, N. C.; the Rev. and Mrs. Mark W. Andes of Virgilina, Va., and the Rev. and Mrs. R. J. Harding, John and Barbara of Brattleboro, Vermont.

MRS. B. F. FRANK.

* * * * *

Dedication Service Highlights Bethlehem News

No doubt you readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN know that the high light of Bethlehem's year was the building of our new church. The ground was broken on February 17, 1952 and the first service held in the church on May 10, 1953. The dedication service May 31, 1953 was a glorious occasion.

Since this dedication our church has grown. Offerings have increased twenty percent and Sunday school attendance ten. During the past year there have been sixteen additions to the church and a number of babies christened and dedicated to the Lord. Fourteen young people attended camp at Powell's Fort and enjoyed it very much.

The activities of the church have increased. We entertained the Ruritan Club and held our Sunday school picnic supper in the church social hall. We are planning a fellowship supper this month with the movie, "The Hidden Heart" to be shown afterwards. The annual Missionary Conference and annual Conference for the Valley will be held here this fall. A successful Daily Vacation Bible School was held the last of June with the Rev. and Mrs. Galt and Miss Dorothy Foltz in charge.

MISS ELLA PICKERING.

* * * * *

Concord's Few are Faithful

Although the members on the roll of Concord are few in number we feel that the faithful few have done well.

Our parsonage debt was liquidated in recent months.

A young people's group has been organized and are holding regular monthly meetings—one devotional and business meeting and one social meeting a month.

By the purchase of stools and rearrangement of pews we have more suitable accommodations for the younger children.

MRS. RUSSELL SMITH.

* * * * *

Dry Run Has Just Closed Revival

Rev. E. J. Rohart was the guest minister at a revival meeting which closed August third. The services were well attended; the message inspirational and practical. Good music was enjoyed each night with the Candlelighters, a chorus of men's voices at one service.

Dry Run Church also entertained the Valley Sunday School Convention in June of this year.

REV. R. E. NEWTON.

* * * * *

News from Linville Church

With the help of our good and faithful pastor, the Rev. E. J. Rohart and his family—who serves five churches—we have had a very busy and successful year.

Pre-Easter week services were held with a visiting minister each night. Deep spiritual sermons were enjoyed by large audiences. The film, "Seven Last Days of Christ's Life" was shown. On Easter Sunday twelve persons united with the church.

The Young People's Missionary Society, with a membership of fifteen, takes care of the social activities for the younger members. Five young people with their pastor were at Powell's Fort Camp for a week in June. They are now planning a hay-ride to Massanutten Caverns with a moonlight swim and a wiener roast, with the Rev. and Mrs. Rohart as chaperones.

The ladies served a picnic lunch at the annual homecoming, August 23.

The Sunday school, with an enrollment of 110, is healthy and active in all branches of its work.

An audio system has been installed in the church as a memorial to Mrs. Ora Scott Earman by members of her family, with earphones in several pews for the hard of hearing.

REPORTER.

* * * * *

Attendance Increases at Mayland

From six members attending Sunday school and the same or less at preaching services, our church has increased to fifty-one at Sunday school with some fewer at the preaching services. Much credit is due our superintendent, Thomas Stover for the wonderful work he has done in drawing in the members for services. He is a wonderful worker and leader in the church.

We have remodeled our church, put in a basement and moved the building over on its new foundation; equipped our kitchen and dining room, and put in a furnace. All this has been done in the past five years. We have good cooperation among our members. They truly enjoy working together for the good of our community and for the furthering of God's work. Thanks should also go to our assistant superintendent, Bobby Spitzer, and to our minister, Rev. Rohart.

MRS. FLORENCE SPITZER,

Secretray.

* * * * *

Mount Lebanon

No report has come, but we rejoice with the Mount Lebanon people over the ground-breaking for the new church building.

* * * * *

Mount Olivet (Greene) Shows Progress

The most visible development at Mount Olive Church during the past year has been the renovating and enlarging of the building. This has produced a beautiful new chancel with the pews facing a picture window; also, two new and needed Sunday school rooms. Those who attend homecoming sometime next month will notice the substantial changes.

Much help has been given to the building fund by the Ladies Aid. Various projects have been undertaken by individuals and the whole group to raise money. Nor have other Christians been forgotten. The society sent relief boxes, sent a contribution to Dr. Scott's trip, coupons to the orphanage, and have been of help to shut-ins, the aged, and needy of the community.

We held a Bible School this summer even without help of a minister. Forty were enrolled with five workers and two "bus" drivers. There was a picnic on the last day of the school, and a program the following Sunday. The various groups in the Sunday school are aiding the church in different ways. The Young Adult class, organized about a year ago, is sponsoring a program to help rid the church of its debt. This includes the selling of cards and the holding of a community party. Absentees, on their return to Sunday school, make a volutary contribution to the Flower Fund. The children's group lend their voices for special music in Sunday school or church. Two children, aged eight and ten, sold potato holders to make twenty dollars for church improvement.

Other events during the year have been the Christmas pageant, the annual picnic at Verbena with other churches of our group, and the summer camp which four of our girls attended.

WINONA MORRIS.

* * * * *

Mount Olivet (Rockingham) Doing Good Work

Your special editor served this church for the months of April and May noting the good care which is taken of its hall of worship and Sunday school rooms. A carpet has recently been put down.

The Sunday school is doing well under the leadership of Mr. Jesse Lamb. On Mother's Day, a large group of men from the Junior Order, U. A. M., attended the services.

* * * * *

New Hope News Items

The New Hope church, served by Pastor Emerson J. Rohart, has had one of the most successful years in its history.

A new wall and concrete steps have been built in front of the church while inside beautiful memorial windows have been placed and new pews installed. Plans are being made to paint both the interior and exterior.

A well attended revival was conducted by the Rev. Ralph Geil with Rev. Rohart acting as song leader. It was a great spiritual help to the community. Five new members were received into the church at Easter time.

A Vacation Bible School, with the largest attendance on record, closed week before last. The local E, U, B, church united in this project. Mrs. E. J. Rohart was the director with Rev. Butler, Rev. Rohart and five women as superintendents and teachers.

The church has an active Young Married People's class that has been responsible for many fine projects of the church. It also has a good Missionary society. Monthly meetings are well attended not only by women but also by men and children. They are meeting all goals.

REPORTER.

* * * * *

Newport Has Made Improvements

The Newport Congregational Christian Church has undergone many improvements during the past few months. We have built an addition of twenty by fifty-two feet in the rear of the church which provides three more large Sunday school rooms. These rooms have been partitioned by folding doors arranged to throw the whole addition into one compartment for the use of social gatherings, etc. Two stained glass windows have been placed in the west end; one furnished by our faithful and efficient Sunday school superintendent and his wife; the other was placed by the Sunday school in honor of our beloved pastor, the Rev. R. E. Newton who has been serving us for the past twelve years. An arch has been built in the main auditorium over the pulpit and choirs; new ceilings placed, walls painted, floors sanded, and lighting system improved.

We now have a thriving Sunday school of 148 enrolled and average attendance of 125.

Our monthly missionary meeting is held just after Sunday school on the fourth Sunday when the entire school has a part in the program. Two of the junior groups usually take up the offerings. The men have a part in the responsive readings and certainly a liberal response in the offerings. Consequently it is not a woman's missionary society but a monthly church missionary meeting.

* * * * *

Wood's Chapel Wants to Build

In many ways our church is looking forward to the building on of needed Sunday school rooms. The young people have given forty dollars to the building fund. The women are taking orders from anyone interested, for pictorial plates.

On the seventh of August, the young people invited the whole Sunday school to a picnic at Endless Caverns. On the second Sunday of August, the young people and children presented a lovely program for homecoming. The crowd there filled the church and the church yard.

MRS. DALE KIPPS.

* * * * *

Oakdale, Our Associate Member, Reports

Oak Dale became an associate member at the Valley Conference last October. James E. Thomas who was our pastor at that time has since resigned to devote more time to his education—at Davis and Elkins College. We are sorry to see him leave; he did much to build up the church. To replace him, the Rev. A. N. Moats is coming to us two Sundays a month from Parkersburg.

We sent an Easter Offering to the
(Continued on page 8.)

Bethel Is Building

By SUPT. WM. T. SCOTT

Sunday, August 23, was an important day in the life of Bethel Church. For several years, the church has felt the need of more room for the Sunday school and church activities, and two years ago plans were made for an educational building. Work was immediately started on a "pay as you go" basis. Several members have generously given of their money and labor.

It was estimated that the building would cost approximately $18,000. About $8,000 has already been spent, leaving $10,000 to be raised. Sunday was "Home Coming" and the day was set apart as a time to get the needed amount underwritten. Before the morning service closed, the full amount had been subscribed, including $2,300 previously pledged. Now the church can go ahead with completing its building. Superintendent Scott was the speaker at the morning service and assisted in obtaining the pledges.

The new building will be 36 by 66 feet. It is being constructed of concrete blocks and will, with the church, be brick veneered later. It will have two floors, with eight classrooms on the first floor, and on the second floor will be a recreation and dining room
(Continued on page 9.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Fifth Sunday

Years ago the convention planned for support for the college in addition to the regular conference apportionment. In light of the fact that many of the Sunday schools of the convention were giving one Sunday's offering to missions, and one Sunday's offering to the orphanage, all Sunday schools in the convention were requested to send fifth Sunday offerings to the college. This is to serve a two-fold purpose—first, an opportunity for church and Sunday school officials to put the college, its contributions to the church and its need for support, before the entire Sunday school population of the convention, and second, to provide additional funds for the college which are badly needed.

When this plan was initiated, it was not the Convention's intention to permit fifth Sunday offerings to count on conference apportionment. Since the churches were not raising conference apportionment in full, later it seemed advisable to permit fifth Sunday contributions to count on conference apportionment. Since then more Sunday schools have cooperated in the plan for the Sunday schools to give the fifth Sunday offerings to the college and, as a result, a greater number of the churches pay their conference apportionment for the college in full.

By reference to the calendar, it is evident that two fifth Sundays for 1953 have come and gone. The third fifth Sunday is coming up at the end of this month, August 29. This is a splendid opportunity for all superintendents of our Sunday schools to give information concerning our college and to give to pupils in Sunday school an opportunity to make a contribution to the college. If your church has not paid its conference apportionment in full, this is an opportunity to reduce the amount owing. If your Sunday school has paid its conference apportionment, it is a splendid opportunity to go the second mile and give the college additional assistance in this time of great need.

In supporting Elon College you are supporting your church's program of Christian higher education. This type of education needs to be supported that it may continue to make its contribution to the church and to civilization. Your contributions, however large or small, will be greatly appreciated and will add to the fund for the college.

* * * * *

September 8 Will Mark Beginning of New College Year at Elon

Elon College will begin its 1953-54 sessions on Tuesday, September 8. At that time members of the incoming freshman class will report for the annual orientation program.

Members of the Elon faculty will report three days earlier and will lay final plans for the new college year in meetings on Saturday, September 5, and Monday, September 7. These meetings will be climaxed by the annual college dinner on Monday evening.

The freshmen of the class of 1957 will report for a series of placement tests on Tuesday, September 8, and will be registered on the following day. The new students will also participate in a series of meetings designed to introduce them properly to life on the Elon campus.

Many of the returning upperclassmen have been pre-registered for the fall term, but those who have not already registered will register on Thursday, September 9. The regular class schedule will begin Friday morning, September 11.

* * * * *

Elon College Faculty

Since Elon College conducts a summer school for the entire summer months, it is a favor to the college for members of our faculty to be willing to teach during the summer. If you have ever taught in college or public schools, you realize that after nine months teaching, you welcome a brief respite. The faculty of Elon College works pretty strenuously and diligently for nine months. They deserve a rest. However, the majority of them have families and receive salaries inadequate for the needs of the home. They find it necessary to teach somewhere during the summer. It is an accommodation for the members of our faculty to be willing to teach these extra sessions.

We have had a very good summer school. Commencement will be held Friday night of this week. An additional report on the Summer School, including a full report on Commencement, will occur in next week's SUN.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

Alamance County and surrounding counties are in the grip of disastrous drought. Hot winds and scorching sun have played havoc with crops. A drought, of course, is caused by the lack of moisture. When the rains fail, the crops fail.

Elon College is being threatened with a drought—the lack of funds and the scorching appeals from creditors provide an unfavorable atmosphere. Rains for the crops come from outside sources—the clouds above. Funds for the college come from outside sources—Sunday schools and churches throughout the Convention. When they fail, there is a dearth of funds and a drought ensues. When the rain fails to come, we say that by and by it will rain, and it does; it always has. When funds for the college fail to materialize, we say that they will come by and by, and they always have. The rains, if they come this year, will come too late. We trust that it will not be true with our Sunday schools and churches for the support of the college.

Previously reported $ 6,346. 72

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Niagara$ 10.00

Oak Level 31.00

Eastern Va. Conference:

Berea (Nans)$ 73.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Belew Creek S. S.$ 6.00

Western N. C. Conference:

Ramseur S. S.$ 60.00

Zion$ 10.00

Virginia Valley Conference:

Bethel$ 2.00

Wood's Chapel S. S. 19.00

211.00

Total to date $ 6,557.72

OAKDALE REPORTS.

(Continued from page 7.)

Southern Convention Mission Board and have been giving our fifth Sunday offering. We are preparing to finish the overhead, sides, and flue for the Sunday school room built last summer.

This summer we helped the local Presbyterian Church with their Vacation Bible School. Many of our children attended; we supplied one teacher and the use of our building for some of the two weeks school.

MRS. JEAN SIMMONS and MRS. GLADYS HARDY.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Fifteen of the Valley's Twenty Churches Have Women's Organizations

Of the twenty churches in the Valley Conference, there are fifteen that have women's organizations. An effort is being made to organize the others, and it is our hope that this year, all of our women's work will be unified, that all of our churches will support the cause of missions, and that some report of the women's activities will be made from all of our churches. In the past we have reported only the activities of the mission groups, and much real work has been done by our women which has not been reported.

The churches of the Valley Conference are on the march, and the women of these churches are playing an important part in that forward march. It is indeed a wonderful privilege to serve in this corner of God's vineyard.

MRS. C. L. WHITLOCK,
President.

* * * * *

Linville Women at Work

The Women's Missionary Society of the Linville Christian Church, with a membership of twenty-seven, meets each month in the homes. They sponsored a visiting missionary, Mrs. Gladwyn Childs, in a public appearance and lecture at the church, showing pictures of her work as a teacher in Africa. The sick of the community are remembered with fruit, flowers, cards, and visits. They also held a bake sale and sold Christmas Cards. Two packages were sent to Ellis Island. On July 28, they entertained members of the cradle roll and their mothers at a party on the church lawn. The Cradle Roll superintendent, Mrs. Meryl Hosaflook, has thirty-two babies on roll. The party was well attended and enjoyed by all.

* * * * *

Antioch Women's Fellowship Meets Monthly

The Women's Fellowship at Antioch has an average attendance of ten. We meet once a month, usually in the homes. We have a business session and a devotional period. We found the book Africans on Safari very interesting. Our pastor, the Rev. E. J. Rohart, led the study in Colossians.

This year we gave a Memorial Certificate for Mrs. J. A. Berry, also we sent gifts to Ellis Island and to the Migrant Mission. We helped pay for painting the interior of our church, a project which has helped us all.

The Cradle Roll party was held in July, when sixteen children enjoyed songs and games led by the Rev. and Mrs. E. J. Rohart at the home of Mrs. William Minnick and Mrs. Russell Blosser.

MRS. B. F. FRANK,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Bethlehem and Concord Have Goat Campaign

Bethlehem and concord churches in their cooperative Bible School began collecting funds to send "a Goat to Puerto Rico." This is one of the Friendly Service projects suggested for our churches. The children voted on the second day of the five-day school to use their daily offerings for a goat, so that boys and girls in Puerto Rico may have milk to drink. It is appalling to realize that some children have never tasted fresh milk!

The superstition that goats eat anything is quickly exposed as false propaganda, if one ever keeps a goat—but it is true that they require much less feed than a cow, and will eat leaves and shrubs, especially your pet rose bush, if they get a chance! So they need less grain than a milk cow.

Two milk bottles, each with a small picture of a goat pasted on, were used to take up the offerings. After the closing period of the Bible School the milk bottles have remained in the church, ready to catch the offerings of anyone who wants to "help get this goat to Puerto Rico."

This project so caught the imagination of the children that they gave very generously. In only four days they brought in over fifteen dollars. So the goat is already half-way to Puerto Rico. We understand that the goat herself will be donated by a Christian farmer; but that we are to pay for her boat trip to Puerto Rico and her feed on the ship.

One group of children was so interested in getting the goat to Puerto Rico that they staged a circus and announced to their parents that there would be a five cent admission fee. Since these home-talent performances were usually produced free of charge, the parents asked, "Why the admission fee?" "For the goat!" was the prompt answer. One might prefer that they had trusted the adults to donate freely and gladly for such a worthy cause—and the parents did choose to give "over and above" the stated fee—but their enthusiasm for the goat and the children of Puerto Rico indicates the degree to which the idea caught on.

Now we wish we had a map of our eastern sea-coast and the shipping lanes to Puerto Rico. Then as additional money comes in to speed our goat on her way, we could trace her progress on the map—until we have the whole $30.00 to land her safely.

MRS. RALPH GALT.

BETHEL IS BUILDING.

(Continued from page 7.)

35 by 35 feet, a classroom, a pastor's study and toilet facilities. This building will be a credit to Bethel Church, the Valley Conference and the Convention.

Bethel Church was organized in 1896, and it has played an important part in the work of our denomination in the Valley Conference. They have a devoted membership totaling 211, with a Sunday school of 150 members. There is an active young people's organization and a Women's Society. The laymen are actively supporting the work of the church.

Approximately 15 persons from the church have attended Elon College, and one ministerial student has gone from the church in recent years—Rev. W. W. Snyder, pastor of the Beverly Hills Church of Burlington, N. C., who is also the president of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

The members of Bethel are to be commended for their active and interested church. They are loyal to all the work of our denomination, and despite the fact of their own building program they have recently accepted their full quota for the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign, and have paid their first installment.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

"Follow Me"

By BESSIE P. SLOAN.

Two young men were mending a fish-net in their boat which they had drawn up on the shore of Lake Galilee. "You know, John," said one to the other, "I've been thinking about a great many things lately."

"Well, what?" his brother asked.

"Oh, fishing, for one thing. I don't believe I want just to catch fish all the rest of my life. I'd like to have my hand in something big, exciting, adventurous."

"Well!" said John, "so you have ambitions, too! But," he added more thoughtfully, "what is there important or thrilling around here?"

His brother interposed, "I heard Mother ask Father that very thing only yesterday. Yes, what is there to do day after day besides hauling in fish, then mending the breaks in the net, so we can throw it out for another catch of fish? Always the same old fish. Would there were something to catch besides fish once in a while!"

"Tell you what! Let's take a half day and go down along the Jordan to hear my name-sake preach. Father even suggested the other day that he would let us off if we wished to go."

"Yes, but who wants to go to all that trouble just for the privilege of being told he's a sinner? What I'd like—" he looked at his brother doubtfully—"I'd like to get acquainted with this Jesus that Andrew and Peter were talking about yesterday."

"Who's that? I must have missed it." John was interested.

"Well, you were away yesterday and this net wasn't fit for fishing with these big holes in it. I didn't feel like sitting around mending fish nets all by myself, so Peter asked why I didn't go with them in their boat. Even if Peter is older than Andrew he's a good scout. That's why Andrew told him about Jesus right away."

"But how did Andrew know about him?"

"Oh, Andrew had been hearing that preacher, John, you know, but never could get his brother to go. No sir, Peter didn't put much stock in preachers. Always said he'd manage the business and let his kid brother tend to the family's religious duties. The last time Andrew went down to the baptizing the preacher pointed out this Jesus as the Messiah."

"That's going pretty far, isn't it?" asked John, startled.

"Maybe; but anyway Andrew and another fellow followed Jesus to his home, and then Andrew hurried after his big brother and brought him to Jesus. The way they talked about him yesterday you'd think they'd forgotten all about the Baptizer."

"That's easy to understand," said the other; "Father has often criticized Peter for his impulsiveness. But what's the man like?"

"Don't be too hard on Peter's impulsiveness. We've come in for plenty of criticism on that score too," James grinned ruefully. "Why, it seems he isn't the morose type like John, but full of life and enthusiasm. That sort of man could make things happen. I wish—"

"Say, why don't we take a run down the beach, soon as we finish this, and find out more about him? The fellows are just drawing their nets in." A few deft twists of their fingers and the work was done.

"O. K. Let's go," cried James, leaping from the boat. "Hold on! Who's down there talking to them?"

"I don't know—a stranger. Do you suppose it could be—"

"Look!" James exclaimed, clutching his brother's arm, "Peter and Andrew have dropped their nets; they are following him. They are coming this way! It might be—it must be—Jesus!"

Swiftly, confidently Jesus approached, his face alight with the joy of adventure. James, turning to his brother, saw an answering light in his eyes. They were both ready for the challenge when it came.

"John, James," said Jesus, pausing beside the boat, "There is something bigger for you to do than catching fish, from now on I want you to help me catch men."

A Game That Paid Off

By JANET T. VAN OSDEL.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Susan Foster and her children—John, who was eight, Ellen, seven, and Cathy, not quite five—delighted in making up and playing unusual, active games. A particular favorite was the one that began with the question, "What would you do if—?" A different condition was supplied, of course, to follow the "if" each time the game was used. The players, one by one, always had to act out his or her idea of the best solution.

When John propounded the question, "What would you do if you were lost in a woods?" the thought was frightening to Cathy, and she answered quickly, "I'd run home to Mama, as fast as I could go!"

"But if you were lost you wouldn't know where Mama was!" Ellen pointed out.

"I could never not know where Mama is!" answered Cathy, beginning to cry.

Mrs. Foster, comforting Cathy, advised trying another "if."

"It's a good question, Mom," said Johnny. "Cathy should learn to think what she would do; each of us ought to take that question seriously."

"Well then, you and Ellen show us what you would do," said Mother. "Cathy doesn't need to play this time."

John, proudly cubscout-wise, demonstrated leaving markers along his trail.

"But you're not lost if your trail is marked!" corrected Ellen.

"Okay!" agreed John. "Forget the markers; my compass would direct me! I always carry it."

"If you were really lost you wouldn't know which way home was!" objected Ellen again. "A compass shows only directions."

"Right you are!" agreed John. "Now suppose you let us see your own answer!"

"When I knew I was lost I'd stop right there," said Ellen. "Why? because the farther I went the more lost I'd be."

She turned over two chairs so that their straight backs were horizontal, explaining, "These are pretend bushes, and the backs are for branches to make a roof of a house. This crumpled paper I'm putting under them

(Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Twelve Youth Groups Are at Work In the Virginia Valley

At least twelve of our valley churches have organized youth groups, Concord and Mayland being the newest additions to the list. These meet from once a month to every Sunday evening; their programs being designed to help their local churches as well as the young people themselves.

The conference youth group meets once a quarter for various activities. During the past year we have held a rally at Palmyra in October, a conference on Making Vacations Christian at Bethlehem in December, a joint rally with Evangelical and Reformed Youth at Woodstock in April and the summer planning retreat and rally this past week. Officers for this year have been: Donald and Carroll Litten, co-presidents, of Wissler's Chapel; Nancy McWilliams, vice-president, of Bethlehem; Gail Carper, secretary, of Winchester; and Betty Showalter, treasurer, of Antioch. Adult counselors have been Mrs. Dewey Dofflemyer of Bethel, Mr. A. N. Green of Wissler's Chapel and Revs. Galt and Harman.

Our last event was a planning retreat and rally. For the retreat we had the use of the fine Merck Rod and Gun Club Cabin near Elkton. The conference officers and representatives of local groups met there with adult leaders, Pattie Lee Coghill, Anna May Dofflemyer, Ralph Galt, Hank and Peene Harman, Jane Short, Winnie Whitlock and Ruth Whitten. We discussed openly ways of making both our local and conference groups more effective. We also had a very good time together.

The day following the retreat (on Sunday, August 23) the same group plus other Valley young people had rare treat of hearing the preaching of Dr. Chappell and the singing of Crusader's Male Chorus of Hampton, Va. at the Sunday service of the Massanetta Bible Conference. Although most of our time was spent with the rest of the Bible Conference, we ate our picnic suppers and had a short meeting together on the Massanetta grounds.

HANK HARMAN.

What Is Alcohol?

By DR. ANDREW C. IVEY, V.-Pres.
University of Illinois.

There are five members of the alcohol family . . . methyl, butyl, amyl, propyl, ethyl. All are colorless, have pungent odor, are inflammable, vaporize at a lower temperature than water, are injurious to living tissue. Ethyl alcohol, which is also called grain alcohol, is most abundant, and generally meant when the term alcohol is used.

Ethyl alcohol is produced from decaying fruits, grains and other vegetable material. These are crushed, heat is applied, and a microscopic organism known as yeast is introduced either naturally or artificially. The yeast feeds on the sugar in the mass. As it does this, it gives off carbonic acid gas. This rises to the surface in the form of bubbles, and leaves a liquid residue, which is alcohol. The process is called fermentation. When the concentration of alcohol in the mass reaches 14%, the yeast is killed by its own excretion, and the process stops. Beer and malts are made in this manner. The hops plant which is used in making beer belongs to the same family as marijuana.

To obtain a higher concentration of alcohol, distillation is used. Heat is applied to the mass in a closed vessel from the upper end of which a coiled tube or "worm" leads off. The alcohol in the mass, having a lower boiling point than water, vaporizes and is condensed again in the worm, which is kept cold. So called hard liquor—whiskey, etc., is produced by distillation.

Alcohol is a powerful solvent and dehydrant: alcohol dissolves fats, greases, oils, and causes them to mix with other substances; alcohol extracts water from substances—is a drier. Alcohol is valuable in industry; is used in making rubber, inks, perfumes, cosmetics, medicines, enamels, paints, synthetics, antifreeze and many other commodities.

From a medical standpoint, alcohol is an anesthetic (causes unconsciousness), an analgetic (causes insensibility to pain), a narcotic (in-

(Continued on page 15.)

FOR OUR CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

is for pretend branches with thick leaves for bed covers. For food, I'd eat berries that I was sure were not poison. I'd play keep-house and other games. At night I'd say my prayers and go to sleep."

Cathy, her fright forgotten, went and sat on a hassock beside her sister. "Wouldn't you be scared?" she asked.

"Maybe—a little—but that would not help! I'd ask God to take care of me and to show Mama and Papa where I was. Then I'd just wait for them to come."

"I am playing this game!" announced Cathy. "I'd do just like Ellen."

"Copycat!" teased John. "You should work out your own way!"

"Like Ellen does is my way!" insisted Cathy.

On a hot Sunday, several weeks later, the family took a picnic dinner to the mountains. Even there, despite deep shade and cold spring-water streams, it seemed too warm to breathe. After eating, they stretched out on the pine needles and slept. A clap of thunder aroused them. Gathering his family quickly into the car, Papa discovered that Cathy and her doll, Ragged Annie, were not there! The rain stopped in about ten minutes, and they all began an anxious search for the missing child.

It was the second day before she was found. But there she was! fast asleep in a hollow that was almost hidden by trailing raspberry runners. She was hugging Ragged Annie very close. Cathy's blue eyes opened at her father's kiss.

"Hello, Papa!" she said. "Kiss Ragged Annie, too! God did show you where I am. It took you a long time to get here, but I suppose you were busy."

When asked why she had run away, Cathy replied, "I wouldn't run away, not ever! Ragged Annie wanted to chase a squirrel, so I went with her. Then you were all lost and I couldn't find you! So I did like Ellen said. There was this little house all made with a cover, and we lived in it. Some squirrels and rabbits came to see us. A snake came, too, but I asked him to please go away, and he did. We washed our faces at a spring, two times. At night we said our prayers and asked God please to tell you where we were, and he did!"

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"The Christian's Use of Possessions"

LESSON X—SEPTEMBER 6, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "The love of money is the root of all evils; it is through this craving that some have wandered away from the faith and pierced their hearts with many pangs."—I Timothy 6:10 (R.S.V.).

LESSONS I Timothy 6: 6-19

DEVOTIONAL READING: Proverbs 8: 10-21.

Real Gain.

"Godliness with contentment is great gain." It is not wrong for a man to get gain, if he gets it in the right way. But gain in itself does not insure contentment. Some of the most discontented people in the world are rich people. Contentment is primarily a matter of inner resources rather than of material resources. Character, good character, is one of the surest guarantees of happiness and contentment. Godliness, good character, with contentment, is great gain and real gain.

One of Life's Certainties.

There are many uncertainties in life. Indeed it sometimes seems as if there are too many certainties in this thing called life. But there is one thing that is certain, and that is death. It is appointed unto all men once to die, and after that the judgment. That is certain. There is another thing that is just as certain: even as we brought nothing into this world, it is just as certain that we will carry nothing out. There is an old saying "Shrouds have no pockets." Even if they did, what good would the pockets be. No matter how much a man may possess in this world, no matter how rich he may be in material things, he never carries anything out of the world with him. Sometimes the question is asked "How much did he leave?" The answer is simple: "He left everything he had." Material things are temporal. It is certain that we can carry none of them with us when we leave this life in the flesh.

But if man does not carry anything with him when he goes, he goes. Ah, there's the rub. And those who live only for things will be "out of luck" when things are taken from them. That is the tragedy of life—so many people spend their time and their money for the things, as Jesus said, "that are not bread," things "that satisfy not." He urged men to labor for the treasures that survived the ravages of time, the treasures that abide.

The Contented Life.

"But having food and covering, we shall therewith be content." One wonders if the King James Version is not nearer the truth when it reads, "And having food and raiment, let us therewith be content." The fact is, the elemental needs of man are few. One of the indictments against modern advertising is the fact that it is constantly trying to make people want more and more things, many things which they do not need, many things which they cannot afford. The contented man is the one who reduces his wants, instead of increasing his desires. This is no plea for poverty. It is a sound principle of a simple and contented life.

They That are Minded to be Rich.

There is both a danger and a delusion in riches, and the Scriptures constantly put up a sign "Danger" concerning them. Today's lesson contains an example. "They that are minded to be rich fall into a temptation and a snare, and many foolish and hurtful lusts, such as drown men in destruction and perdition." They are serious words, and there are thousands who know that they are true. One has to laugh, or would laugh, at some of the foolish things that rich people do, if it were not so tragic. And as "to hurtful lusts"—money makes possible so many indulgences that are denied ordinary men. Many a man has started out to get rich, or to make money, only to find that he has been deluded, that he has fallen into a snare, that he has missed the secret of contentment and happiness altogether. Vanderbilt, the railroad king, was once asked if he were happy and content. He replied, "I have not had an hour's happiness in my life . . . my millions cause me ceaseless anxiety day and night." Many men start out to get money and find out that their money has got them,

The Love of Money.

"For the love of money is the root of all kinds of evil," or of all evils, as the R.V.S. has it. The love of money, the inordinate desire for money, greed, avarice, cupidity, covetousness, is the root of all kinds of evil. Men and women will lie and steal and cheat and chisel for money. They will sell their honor and their virtue for money. They will betray their country for money. They will sell their souls for money. Many of mankind's worst sins stem from the love of and the desire and determination to get money.

And, as Paul says, "some, reaching after money, have been led astray from the faith, and have pierced themselves through with many sorrows." Many a man, who when he was poor, or in moderate circumstances, took an interest in the church, and gave heed to the things of the spirit, has been led astray when he became rich or well-to-do. And many a man who thought that his money would bring him happiness has found out to his sorrow that it has brought him unhappiness.

A Man and His Money.

The Scriptures do not condemn money. They do not put a premium on poverty. They do not say that it is a sin to be rich. They simply teach that money or material things, are a trust. They are to be used in such a way that the man who has them will become a greater soul himself, and for the benefit of others. Money is neither moral or immoral. It is amoral. The way in which men get it, the way in which they use it, the way in which men share it, is the thing that gives it significance.

And it is significant that Jesus had so much to say about possessions, more about them than almost any other thing. Jesus saw the snare of riches. He knew the power of covetousness. He knew that threat to a man's soul which they posed. He therefore constantly warned men against the danger of riches, and the wisdom of seeking the treasures that had eternal value and abiding satisfaction.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

Men are more important than tools. If you don't believe it, put a good tool in the hands of a poor workman.

—John J. Bennett.

Leaksville Congregational Christian Church Makes Progress

By R. O. ROTHGEB, Secretary

The Leaksville Church is located in central Page County, not far from the famous Luray Caverns and the Shenadoah National Park. The church was reorganized in 1880 by Elder W. A. Dofflemyer, one of the pioneer pastors of the Valley Conference who made his circuit on foot or by horseback.

Of the twenty-four charter members only Brother G. W. Rothgeb survives. He is now in his ninety-fourth year, yet deeply interested in the welfare of the church; attending and taking part whenever possible.

At first an old schoolhouse on the west side of the village was used as the meeting house and continued as such until 1891. At that time a lot was purchased and a church built there next to the main road through the village.

Originally the building had only the one hall for worship with a balcony and vestibule. In 1935 four nice Sunday school rooms and a choir loft were built. Then this past spring a basement under the whole church was completed. These various additions have been a great help to the Sunday school and other parts of the church's program. The latest addition was the installation of two large exhaust fans.

For the past twenty-three years, Leaksville has been holding an annual Home-Coming and Memorial Service in June. This service tends to strengthen church ties among absentee members and creates a deeper interest by others of the community.

Close by the church is the church cemetery with a substantial endowment fund to provide for its maintenance. The cemetery was provided primarily for families of the church, but has been enlarged several times, and now is a burial place for several denominations.

All of these various visible and tangible accomplishments are important and good, but far more so are the men and women, boys and girls who have been led to the Saviour through the ministry of our church. Only eternity will fully reveal these results.

Quite a few pastors have served Leaksville Church since its organization over seventy years ago. They are: W. A. Dofflemyer, J. W. Dofflemyer, D. A. Barney, W. A. Garland, Mrs. Draper, P. W. McDonald, E. T. Isley, G. W. Tickle, H. C. Moore, Edward French, W. T. Walters, L. R. Townsend, R. L. Williamson, B. J. Earp, R. P. Crumpler, A. W. Andes, W. J. Andes, C. G. Scannell, and at present, R. E. Newton. Of this number, at least ten have passed on to their reward.

We have just finished a week of revival services conducted by the Rev. O. D. Poythress of South Norfolk.

* * * * *

Palmyra's Planning Pays Off

Palmyra Church was host to an enthusiastic young people's rally last October. The regular Palmyra congregation joined with the young people in their evening service. The speaker at that service was the Rev. Wm. James Simmons, a negro, of Roanoke who received an enthusiastic response from those who heard him. Mr. Simmons was accompanied by four of his students, high school boys, giving a rare chance for interracial Christian fellowship to our people.

The Palmyra Church ladies with the leadership of Mrs. Shirley Oliphant work very hard serving public church dinners, dinners for Edinburg Lion's Club, picnics, etc. They have a wide reputation for excellent food.

The Sunday school under the faithful leadership of Mr. Woodrow Baker has 26 loyal regular members. Yet these few members give so sacrificially that hundreds of dollars were accumulated in its treasury. This money, together with some raised by the ladies through dinners, was used to help finish paying Palmyra's $1600 share of the Shenrock parsonage, and to drain and paint the church basement. Men of the church with the skilled leadership of Frank Bowman and Will Baker broke through the floor of the church basement, laid a good drain around the two upper sides of the building, and then repainted the floor. Most of the men of the church including Pastor Galt donated labor on the project.

A couple of special song services have been held at the church, led by Deacon Clarence Rush. A rally was held May 31 at which former pastor, Clyde O. Koon preached. Other guests speakers of the past year were the Rev. H. V. Harman, pastor-at-large, and Francis Hall who was teaching at the young people's camp. A special service and fellowship dinner is planned for August 30.

REV. RALPH M. GALT.

* * * * *

Timber Ridge Reports Again

A lengthy article about Timber Ridge was in the July 30 issue of THE SUN. That article, however, omitted one important development here—our choir. This choir, organized and led by Vernon Whitacre, meets faithfully every Sunday evening to practice and just to enjoy singing.

There are presently eighteen members; eight sopranos, four altos, two tenors, and four basses. They first sang Easter Sunday; on the last Sunday, August 16, they sang, "Speed The Light," "Since The Saviour Found Me," and "Count Your Many Blessings." Mrs. Goldie Seldon and Miss Ruby Seldon are pianists.

* * * * *

Wisler's Chapel Membership Grows

Wissler's Chapel has regular preaching services twice a month with our pastor, Rev. Ralph M. Galt. Sunday school is held every Sunday at 10:00 a. m. with a good number of eager boys and girls wanting to hear more about God.

We have a young people's society which meets twice a month. We also have had a Lord's Acre project over the past two summers. This summer we raised around a hundred dollars. We are proud of this as it will help us pay some of our bills.

Our membership has increased during the past year; one by transfer and nine by confession of faith. We joined hands for the second summer this year in holding a Vacation Bible School with Wood's Chapel and Cedar Grove Church of the Brethren.

Mrs. Ralph Galt has organized a young people's choir. They sing for special services and at regular preaching services. We are also proud of our pastor, Rev. Galt, a willing and able worker for our church and community. We may not be so big and prosperous but we are proud of our little church.

MRS. NINA WILL.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

"Little Dottie will be four Sunday, August 16, so she is sending you a check for $50.00 for the orphanage," says a letter from J. E. Branch and wife, R. 1, Garner, N. C. The letter continues, "The Lord is blessing us so much, and we thank Him for the many blessings He bestows on us every day. . . . I am so thankful for being reared in a Christian home by Christian parents. Please remember us in your prayers." How good it is when our crops have been a failure, our gardens are dry, expenses increased, to have such a letter. I am so grateful I wish you to share the joy such a letter brings.

Yes, it is something to be reared in a Christian home. It means so much to be able to live with, care for, and train our own children. Whoever has such a blessing is blessed indeed. And often times out of the abundance of this gratitude the helpless, homeless little children here are blessed. All we ask is enough, and a skimpy sufficiency at that, but we do need that very much. We are having the opportunity to let our little folks know what "doing without" means. I knew it as a child, and perhaps I could have done more had I had a little better chance, and on the other hand I might have had less. Be that as it may I too am grateful for all the blessings of God upon my childhood—both those I could see and understand and those which I could not see, and at that time understand.

It does something to me to turn little children down, to see the look of disappointment on their little faces—especially when they put so much stake in my being able to help them. I do not know which is harder to say no to—the little ones or the larger ones. But no is sometimes the very best answer. Try to convince a child of that!

"We are teaching Dottie to save her money, and yet to be generous to the needy," writes Mr. Branch. There is the safeguard against selfishness. There is the spirit which God will honor. That guards against extravagance, and waste; and at the same time builds for thoughtfulness of others. Generous Christian business men and women had such training in their youth. They find it a joy to succeed in business, and at the same time to show gratitude to God for His blessings. How indebted we all are to God. Good health, good homes, good days, good success, the willingness to work and to put forth one's best efforts—all these are very great blessings from God. For these and countless others we should be grateful and glad for the opportunity to show gratitude.

Thank you for this week's report. It shows that you have thought about our needs, and have helped us to meet them. May God bless you because many of you are suffering the same conditions from drought. But let us all be grateful. Across the world there is suffering which would make our condition well nigh a paradise.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR AUGUST 20, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

J. M. Pinney, Chapel Hill, N. C., Clothing.
J. H. Johnson, Norfolk, Va., 50 copies of "The Upper Room."

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 9,482.26
(No report this week)
Grand total $ 9,482.26

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $12,458.56
Philathea Class, Reidsville
Church $ 10.00
Dottie Branch, Garner N.
C. 50.00
Special Gifts 2.38
62.38

Grand total $12,520.94

Total for the week $ 62.38

Total for the year $22,003.20

Virginia Valley Conference Giving For Convention Causes

Year 1952-'53 to August 21, 1953.

CHURCH	Total Appt. for Conv. Causes	Total Paid to Aug. 21 1953
Antioch	$ 696.00	$ 375.44
Bethel	530.00	352.38
Bethlehem	524.00	403.32
Beulah	55.00	62.00
Concord	174.00	42.00
Dry Run	229.00	140.72
Jappa	79.00	17.00
Leaksville	633.00	200.98
Linville	647.00	346.22
Mayland	221.00
Mt. Lebanon	218.00	146.00
Mt. Olivet (G) ...	272.00	119.50
Mt. Olivet (R) ...	206.00	73.55
New Hope	251.00	92.52
Newport	650.00	841.67
Oak Dale		60.16
Palmyra	110.00	58.20
Timber Ridge	536.00	362.00
Winchester	1,348.00	659.00
Wissler's Chapel ..	166.00	70.00
Wood's Chapel ...	156.00	92.00

Total $7,701.00 $4,513.66

EDNA M. FINCH,
Asst. Convention Treasurer.

Choice Necessary

Life in this world is only a choice of difficulties. If we avoid them in one direction, it is but to meet them in another. It will cost us much to be true to our vocation, but the penalty will be greater if we are not. It is "hard to be a Christian," but it is harder not to be! When those who have once seen the vision and "tasted the heavenly gift" draw back, they invite experiences, compared with which the trials of the saint are light and sweet. The really "hard" thing is to "kick against the pricks." The way of the transgressor is hard.

—Robinson.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through Aug. 20, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardeastle	$ 872.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardeastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ...	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder ..	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr. ...	82.50
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00

Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisseman	3,292.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman ..	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrean (Student) ..	75.00

†Paid.

What church will be next to send in its Declaration?

The Church stands for the rights of man. Under Communism, man has no rights.—M. C. S.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

WHAT IS ALCOHOL?

(Continued from page 11.)

duces sleep or stupor), a habit forming, addiction-producing drug, a poison (five drops of alcohol to 1,000 drops of blood in the system may cause death). When taken into the body, alcohol passes directly and unchanged into the blood stream, affecting the nervous system and the brain, befogging the mind, dulling judgment, releasing inhibitions, slowing physical reactions.

Abraham Lincoln said, "The use of alcohol as a beverage has many defenders, but no defense."

Shakespeare says, "O thou invisible spirit of wine, if thou hast no name to be known by, let us call thee devil."

The Valley Conference Over Twenty-Five Years

By MRS. ALFRED W. ANDES

Recently, I was asked a question: "Would you be willing to write an article about the changes in the Valley Conference in the last twenty-five years?" As I began to think about those years, memories flooded my mind, and I decided to try.

When my boys came home for vacation, I sent them up into the garret to locate old Annuals so I could compare today with yesterday. Though there were many copies, I did not find one for 1928, but on the other hand I did not yet have one for 1953, so I chose the Annual of 1927 to put beside that of last year. I soon had the boys interested in helping me note the various figures and activities.

It amazed us that the membership was almost exactly the same, with there being only two more members today than in 1927! To think that the figure of 2,626 is only two more than twenty-five years ago! There must be a story behind this. Surely the churches haven't been standing that still. The population of the Valley must have changed during this time. Why hasn't the membership changed?

The churches haven't stood still in other areas of life and activity. In some matters they have gone ahead. Two more ministers have been called to serve the same amount of membership. Today, there are parishes with churches grouped together, instead of a pastor being called to serve any and every church in the Valley. No longer do the preachers have to go from one end of the Valley to the other, passing fellow servants of Christ, to care for a scattered flock. It's good to see that the salaries have doubled during the years, and parsonages have been built. All this, and the total giving of the churches for all purposes has increased six times and over. It is heartening to note that the Conference Apportionments have shared in this increase and that home and foreign mission apportionment giving has been doubled. Might it not be said that the highlight of the last twenty-five years is in the realm of stewardship? Certainly here the churches have gone forward.

What is growth in some areas makes us wonder all the more at what is loss in other matters. Who can be pleased that the enrollment in the Sunday schools is a third less today, yet without any change in church membership? Close to three-fourths of the members went to church schools in 1927, while barely over half of the members are enrolled today. There must be another story behind this. Why is there a decrease in interest in the Sunday school? Surely there is as real a need today as yesterday.

Beyond all the facts and figures, I remember how my husband's charges were so scattered that he would be gone from home for days. Revival meetings lasted from two to three weeks. Three sermons every Sabbath was the rule. There were no parsonages except the one in Winchester, so we owned our own home near Harrisonburg. I wish I could find a record of the miles he had to travel over unimproved roads at the speed of thirty miles an hour. I'm glad that preachers have smaller parishes today and are not so burdened. Do you know that preachers averaged 275 sermons per year in 1927, and today they average 109? I have many happy memories of the days gone by, but I'm thankful for every improvement of today. It's good to look back, but it is more blessed to look ahead. God goeth before us, even as he was with us in the past.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, SEPTEMBER 3, 1953

NUMBER 35

Elon College Library X

Our Newest Church

THE HENDERSONVILLE CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH

Hendersonville, North Carolina

Reverend C. M. Heymann, D. D., Pastor

(See page 2)

News Flashes

Rev. Carl Wallace has resigned his charge at New Hope and Beulah Christian Churches and has accepted a call to our new church in Fayetteville, North Carolina.

We are indebted to Mr. Raymond A. Dudley, of the American Board, Boston, for the article by Mrs. Joseph L. Moulton, on the Missions Page this week. Mrs. Moulton is known to quite a few of our people in the Southern Convention, and is now in India.

Someone once said, "There is no thing new under the sun." Professor S. M. Smith, it seems, has discovered a new sickness, which he tells us about in this issue. But this disease is probably as old as time. We first heard of it under the name he gives it around 1907 or 1908, when in Dr. W. C. Wicker's Philosophy class at Elon College. However, it will most likely be new to most of our readers.

A successful manufacturing company, in a letter to the trade that it supplies, calls attention to the fact that the average life of a business is only 66 months. It adds: "To keep the wheels turning today, you must have a quality product, an efficient manufacturing procedure, and a good sales program." The Church of Jesus Christ, without question, has the first of these qualifications for a successful business. What is it doing about the other two? The answer is up to you.

Notice of Meeting

The Committee on the Ministry of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference of Congregational Christian Churches is called to meet in the Library Building, at Elon College, on Monday, September 14, 1953, at 2:00 p. m. All candidates for the ministry from the N. C. and Va. Conference should meet the committee. Especially should candidates for the ministry who are enrolling for the first time attend this meeting, bringing a testimonial letter from the church in which the candidate holds membership, stating whether or not the church considers the young man a suitable person for the ministry.

STANLEY C. HARRELL,
Chairman.

Our New Church at Hendersonville Officially Welcomed

Our newest church, the First Congregational Church, Hendersonville, North Carolina, will be officially welcomed into the membership of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference on this evening, Thursday, September 3, in a special service of recognition to be conducted at the church. This church, the 200th in the Southern Convention, was organized in 1950 by the present pastor, the Rev. C. M. Heymann, D. D., and has functioned until now as "The Community Church" of Hendersonville.

DR. C. M. HEYMANN,

The pastor and members of the church have felt the need of a wider outreach, and after consulting with Superintendent Wm. T. Scott, Dr.

Henry E. Robinson, and Dr. Aaron Meckel of our church in St. Petersburg, Florida, voted to affiliate with the Congregational Christian denomination. Application was made by the church to the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, and on August 13, the Executive Committee, acting for the Conference, received the Hendersonville Church into the membership of the Conference.

Dr. Heymann, an ordained minister of the Baptist Church, applied for membership in the Conference by letter of transfer, and upon the recommendation of the Committee on the Ministry, the Executive Committee enrolled Dr. Heymann as a ministerial member of the Conference as of August 13, 1953.

The Hendersonville Church has a small but attractive building near Laurel Park, which is a choice residential section of the city; and the church is in a position to become one of the strong and useful churches of that growing city. Many Congregational Christians from Florida and other states find that section of North Carolina an attractive resort in both summer and winter, and it is felt that this newest membership of our fellowship will render splendid service to these people. We welcome Dr. Heymann and his congregation into the Congregational Christian fellowship.

At the Service of Recognition, Rev. W. W. Snyder, Conference president, (Continued on page 7.)

Southern Convention Dates to Remember

- | | |
|-----------------|---|
| October | 1—Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference
Waverly, Va. |
| | 6—North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference
First Church, Greensboro, N. C. |
| | 8—Virginia Valley Woman's Missionary Conference
Place to be announced |
| | 14-15—Virginia Valley Annual Conference Session
Bethlehem Church |
| | 20-21—Eastern North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Shallow Well Church |
| | 28-29—Eastern Virginia Annual Conference Session
Rosemont Church, South Norfolk, Va. |
| November | 3-4—Western North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Pleasant Hill Church |
| | 10-11—North Carolina & Virginia Annual Conference Session
Place to be announced |
| December | 8—Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association
Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va. |

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

The Congregational Christian Layman and His College

PROGRAM FOR SEPTEMBER

SUGGESTED HYMNS: "Give of Your Best to the Master" ; "Jesus Calls Us."

SUGGESTED SCRIPTURE: Phillippians 4: 4-9.

PRAYER: We would learn from thee, Jesus, the greatest of all teachers. Help us to learn from books and life, especially the way of love. Amen.

MEDITATION :

There will be a lot of laymen in our more than 500,000 members of the Congregational Christian laymen's fellowship who did not go to college and who may say they do not have a college. However, all of us have a stake in the church related colleges, especially our own Elon College.

The early pilgrim fathers recognized the value of education and immediately set up colleges along with other types of schools. These schools were owned and controlled by the churches and their membership. They ran them and supported them by financial gifts and with students from their own homes.

A wide gap has taken place between the colleges and the churches, so much so that it was once quite fashionable to deny any relation between the two. Hard financial times and more straight thinking has reversed this trend today and we have church-related colleges; Elon College is such an institution. The place of Christianity and religion in the colleges is being accorded high honor.

Most men want their children and grandchildren to have a college education. In their better moments, with keen appreciation for the likes and dislikes of the students, they want this education to be given or taken in a Christian atmosphere, generally in a small co-educational institution. To that end, many laymen are serving on boards of management of our colleges and making large financial contributions.

It is very important that the colleges have the interest of parents,

Christian laymen and outside churchmen in keeping our colleges, their faculties, buildings and curriculum in top shape. We in the Southern Convention have an exceptional opportunity to do these and other things for our college. Now is the time to see to it that worthy students from your community enroll in Elon College. This is an important service which we should perform for our college.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION :

1. What is the difference between a Christian and a state college?
2. Why are our church related colleges in such financial difficulty?
3. How can laymen help improve our colleges?
4. Where in life is a college education most important?
5. What are the dangers in federal aid to education?
6. What can we as laymen do for Elon College?

"In working for civil rights, increased production, job opportunities, adequate wages, social responsibility, and a free world community, we are working for each other, for ourselves, and for God who seeks to realize his purpose of justice and freedom in the affairs of men."—Labor Day Message from the National Council of Churches.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing EditorJohn T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardestal.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year$3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195....

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

To Students, As School Opens

By RICHARD K. MORTON

You have heard several valedictories, no doubt. This is a kind of salutory or benediction, from one who graduated from college more than twenty-five years ago. It does not intend to be another one of those moral-advice programs you get every so often. It would simply present a few brief hints that might be of help as your school or college begins with another season of study.

Don't leave God and the things of the Kingdom out of your philosophy or your daily action. We need values and interpretations as well as facts and knowledge—and religion will always be a part of the science of life. No one can be educated who has not wrestled with what man has known and thought about God. The meaning of life is in faith and values and relationships. The facts you learn from your textbooks and instructors will not be properly handled unless you have worked out some philosophy of life and a personal faith.

Learn all possible about what man has thought of the life he lives and about himself. Budget your time and lay out a plan of action, so that you will not be working and proceeding aimlessly as you study your lessons day by day.

Do not neglect those elements of learning not to be found in textbooks and formal instruction.

Discipline yourself according to this plan.

Use your time fully, but vary what you do with it. Don't get lopsided or allow one phase of life—no matter what—to crowd out all the others.

Strive to utilize and realize the very fullest and best within you—don't waste strength or other assets—but don't set your goals higher than your mind and body and nerves can stand.

Behold the heavens and seek the things which are above, but don't hitch your wagon to a star if that means that you will strive to travel to the moon and colonize the planets while neglecting some practical matter on the earth which lies in front of your nose. Many like the glamor of the distant spaces and the high goals, who proceed to ignore the basic responsibilities of earth.

Resolve to train not only your mind but also your entire personality. If it is important for you to improve your mind, it must likewise be important for you to develop the rest of you to keep pace with your brains—your faith, your character traits, your adaptability, your general effect upon others, your view of life.

Don't bring to your studies preconceived notions that will make your way difficult. You may not like some of your teachers, your studies, your assignments, your room, your nearest neighbor, and so on. But don't let this warp your attitudes nor divert you from your path. Realize that coping with these matters is as much a part of your education as the studies whereby you seek good grades.

Seek to increase the number of interests that really command your attention and the skills you have mastered. Seek the thrill that comes with greater awareness of what the world affords and can hold for the believer and the inquirer and the one who serves.

Make a quest after joy and happiness as well as knowledge, for without this you cannot use your knowledge to the best advantage. Keep at your training day by day—don't try to rush the process.

Have in mind that you would serve as well as know; that you would have understanding and wisdom as well as knowledge; that you would have a personality as well as a skill; that you would be able to get along with your fellow men as well as to know what things are good in the world. We must have fellowship as well as leadership; love as well as strength; mercy as well as justice; meanings as well as facts; happiness as well as wealth; self control as well as freedom.

We who have had our day in school salute you. You do not know how great your opportunities and your responsibilities now are. We pray for you. We love you. We place our hopes for a better world in you. You will know more than we. Will you likewise serve more than we? You will enter a bigger world. Will you be bigger in heart and mind and spirit to match the challenge of your day and living?

This is your world. These are your books. These are the raw materials gathered from greater resources than ever before. It is yours to take them, work them over, and through transformations wrought through your lives to fabricate with them mansions of earth that shall be part of the structure of the Kingdom of God upon earth.

"But I Say . . ."

By W. W. SLOAN

Professor of Bible, Elon College

We call ourselves Christians. We are so self-confident that sometimes we refer to our denomination as the Christian Church, although we realize that we are no more Christian than are the Methodists or the Baptists. What is Christianity? Why do we call ourselves Christian? We call ourselves Christian because we recognize the supremacy of Jesus of Nazareth, whom we consider the Anointed of God, the Christ.

Paul's statement in II Corinthians 5:19, sums up our conviction, "God was in Christ reconciling the world to himself." We agree with Jesus' statement as recorded in John 14:9, 10, "He who has seen me has seen the Father. . . I am in the Father and the Father in me." We also recognize the significance of John 12:50, in which Jesus said, "What I say, I say as the Father has bidden me," that Jesus was God's spokesman.

Jesus went far beyond the religious ideas of his time; far, far beyond those of the Old Testament, of Abraham, Moses, David, Amos, Isaiah, or Jeremiah, so far that those who disagreed with Jesus kept backing up their disagreements by saying, "We have Moses and the Law."

"Jesus" is the Greek form of the Hebrew name "Joshua." There were several Joshuas in the Old Testament, but the one who commonly comes to our minds is the successor of Moses. What if Jesus of Nazareth, with his picture of God and his ideas of how God wants us to live had come in the time of the Old Testament Joshua! Would anyone have accepted him? People had not developed enough in their religious thinking to understand or receive the teaching of Jesus. Paul understood this development of thought through the Old Testament. He pointed out that "When the time had fully come, God sent forth his Son." Every sermon we have in the book of Acts before Paul made his Athens address points out the development of religious ideas leading up to Jesus.

What are you and I to do when we find Jesus contradicting the teachings of the Old Testament? What attitude should we take when we discover Jesus out of accord with Moses, or Joshua, or Amos? As for me, I choose Jesus. He is my Lord and Master. One may choose Moses or one of the other Old Testament worthies. That is his privilege, but if he does, he has no right to call himself a Christian.

All good things have primitive beginnings. In Africa, Mrs. Sloan and I time and again heard the tom-tom, an extremely primitive type of music. From it and from scratching on a taunt string has grown the magnificent music we enjoy today, our great orchestras, our beautiful pipe organs, the oratorios and operas that thrill us.

Once, in Hangchow, China, I found for sale a medicine to cure whatever ails you, medicine made of a lion's heart, tigers' teeth and other materials in which you and I put little confidence. From such primitive beginnings have developed medicines that save the lives of millions today, our wonder drugs and our vaccines.

From the boring of holes in men's brains to let out evil spirits has developed the surgeon's skill today, which enables him successfully to operate on the heart or the brain. So in law and art and education, crude beginnings have grown into that of which we are proud today.

This is also true with religion. Our earliest religious forebears evidently were polytheists, believing there were many gods. From this developed henotheism, the idea that although there are many gods, each group of people must worship the one god which for that group is supreme. This idea of a variety of gods is often expressed in our Bible, as for example in the Psalms, where we read in 82:1, "In the midst of the gods he holds judgment,"; 96:4, "The Lord . . . is to be feared above all gods." It was not until the time of Jeremiah that we find a definite expression of monotheism, that there is but one God.

Along with the question of how many gods was the question, "What is God like?" Evidently the Hebrews first thought that God was one way one day and another way the next. It was Moses who pointed out that God can be depended upon, that he is characterized by law and order and system, but Moses seems to have known nothing about the love of God. It was the author of the 23rd Psalm who proclaimed, "The Lord is my shepherd," cares for us. The Israelites thought that God loved their nation when it was good, did God's will. It was the prophet Hosea who went beyond this. Hosea's wife went off with other men, but still he loved her and wanted her back in his home. Then Hosea realized that he was no better than God, that God loved Israel when it was bad, and there came to the world the realization that God loves sinful men. Slowly people began to think of God as a father interested in his children. Six times God is referred to in the Old Testament as Father; but over and over again Jesus used the terms, your Father, our Father, my Father. It was the writer John who put into words the highest expression of God, when he said, "God is love."

Likewise, people slowly discovered what God is. Hagar, in Genesis 16:13, asked, "Have I really seen God and remained alive after seeing him?" and Jacob, in Genesis 32:30, said, "I have seen God face to face"; but our New Testament says in John 1:18, "No one has ever seen God." Jesus explained this by telling the woman at Jacob's well, "God is a spirit, and those who worship him must worship in spirit and truth."

In a similar way, man's understanding of what his relations to his fellow man should be, grew as people came to understand God. Lamech, in Genesis 4:23, 24, exclaimed: "I have slain a man for wounding me, a young man for striking me. If Cain is avenged sevenfold, truly Lamech seventy-sevenfold."

However this philosophy of multiple vengeance did not make Lamech happy. It did not make any one who followed it happy. Moses, in his progressive thinking about the will of God, expressed a better outlook when, in Exodus 21:23, 24, he said, "You shall give life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot, burn for burn, wound for wound and stripe for stripe."

Moses' attitude was much better than that of Lamech, but people soon began to question it, asking if the cause of one's act should not be taken into consideration. Because some people accidentally killed others, six cities of refuge were set up as described in the twentieth chapter of Joshua, to which people who claimed they had injured another by accident

(Continued on page 8.)

Our Churches Report . . .

Special Events for All Shenrock Churches

BETHLEHEM FELLOWSHIP DINNER.

The premiere showing in Rockingham County of the new feature film of the year, "The Hidden Heart," took place in the basement of the Bethlehem Church at Tenth Legion, on Friday evening, August 28. The showing took place immediately following a fellowship dinner in the church. Both the dinner and the film were much enjoyed.

* * *

CONCORD REVIVAL.

Evangelistic services are being held at Concord Church, southeast of Timberville, each evening this week from Monday, August 31, through Friday, September 4. Singing, preaching, and something special for the children have been planned for at each service. On Wednesday evening, the sermon was preached by Rev. James A. Cobb, pastor of the St. Paul Lutheran Church. His message was entitled, "As Your Faith Is, So Will be Your Witness." On Thursday night, Rev. Luther Heist, pastor of Trinity Reformed Church of Timberville, will bring the message.

The Young People's Society of the Concord Church led the worship services on Tuesday. The pastor, Rev. Ralph M. Galt is in charge of all services.

* * *

PALMYRA SERVICE AND DINNER.

A special Sunday morning worship service was held at the Palmyra Church, southeast of Edinburg, at 11 o'clock, August 30. The pastor, Rev. Ralph M. Galt, preached at this service. Immediately following the worship service there was a community dinner in the basement of the church. It was a covered dish meal, and each family was asked to bring a dish of food. Both the service and the dinner were open to the public. They were enjoyed by those attending.

* * *

COOPERATIVE BIRLE SCHOOL.

A cooperative Bible school was held at the Cedar Grove Church of the Brethren, north of New Market, the past two weeks. The cooperating churches were Woods Chapel, Wissler's Chapel and Cedar Grove. There were about 70 children in attendance. The graduation program for the Bible school was held at Cedar Grove Church, Sunday evening, August 30.

* * * * *

Piney Plain

The members of Piney Plain Church of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, and their pastor, Rev. George M. Tally, are to be congratulated on the splendid progress made during the year. An extensive renovation and improvement plan costing $2,221.40 has been made. This program includes turning the church building around so as to make it more accessible; two new Sunday school rooms added; all buildings painted; and the grounds beautified.

In evangelism the church has had a good year. During the revival meeting 18 united with the church on profession of faith and three by letter of transfer.

The attendance both at Sunday school and church services have increased substantially, and the spirit of the church is excellent. Needless to say, they have had a good financial year. Whenever the spirit of a church is right and the responsibility of Christian Stewardship is faced, sufficient funds are always available to do the work of the church. All apportionments for 1952-53 are paid in full.

* * * * *

Mount Carmel Church Reports

The Junior Willing Workers of the Mount Carmel Christian Church have accomplished much good during the past year. They have worked diligently for the coming of God's Kingdom.

They have met their quota, reviewed all study books, and also contributed to our Friendly Service project at Ellis Island.

The group has had eleven monthly meetings and has used much of the program material, also other studies from the Bible.

As we start a new year, we hope for even better attendance, which will help us to do more for missions than we have been able to do in the past.

We realize that the children of today will be the church of tomorrow, and are trying to train ourselves to do a good job.

MRS. LLOYD DUCK,
Teacher.

"Morbus Sabaticus"

It seems that a new disease has been discovered. It is a kind of Sunday sickness. It attacks people only on week-ends. It attacks only human beings, especially those who are supposed to attend Sunday school and church. It is more devastating than the "flu" was a few years ago. The symptoms vary, but it never interferes with the appetite. It never lasts more than twenty-four hours.

No doctor is ever called. In the end it is fatal to the soul. Patients always argue that the Sabbath should be a day of rest. The Sunday newspaper is always interesting. It is highly contagious.

The attack comes on suddenly every Sunday morning. Symptoms are not felt on Saturday night. The patient awakens as usual feeling fine, and eats a hearty breakfast. About nine o'clock the attack comes on. It lasts until nearly noon. In the afternoon the patient is much improved and is ready for a car ride. After supper he has another attack—not able to attend night service at church.

On Monday morning the patient is able to go to work as usual.

Men are more subject to attacks than are women. It is the mother who on Sunday morning, dresses the youngsters and takes them to church. In the average church on Sunday morning there are more women than men present. The majority of the teachers in the Sunday school are women—most of them mothers.

The Ladies' Aid Society can be counted on to stand by the pastor. Why not a Men's Aid Society. But maybe they do their work on the Official Board and the Board of Deacons.

There has been a noticeable increase in church attendance during the war. Now that the war seems to be over, will that attendance and interest continue or decline? Time will tell!

S. M. SMITH.

The lubrication chart of a well-known oil company listed 94 makes of automobiles in 1925. Of that long and impressive list, which included many classic names, only twelve are active today—a casualty rate of over 87 per cent.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Class of 1953—Summer Commencement

Friday, August 21, at eight o'clock in the evening Elon College officially closed the 1952-53 session with a commencement. The regular commencement was held May 25, with the larger section of the 1952-53 class graduating. This summer commencement comes too close to the beginning of the new year. For the convenience of those who complete their requirements for graduation at the end of the summer school, the Trustees authorized a second commencement.

There were twenty-eight candidates for graduation. Dr. Charles F. Carroll, Superintendent of Public Instruction for the State of North Carolina, was the speaker. President Smith presided, Dean D. J. Bowden presented the candidates for graduation, Superintendent William T. Scott offered the prayer, and Reverend Tucker G. Humphries presented the Bibles. Roger Gibbs, Field Secretary for the college, sang and Fletcher Moore presided at the organ. There was an unusually good attendance. It was a good commencement and an inspirational exercise as a whole.

Following is a resume of Dr. Carroll's address as reprinted by Matt Currin, Jr., in the Daily Times News, Burlington, North Carolina:

* * *

Declaring that education today should concern itself with what is the properly educated man is society, Dr. Charles F. Carroll, State Superintendent of Public Instruction, outlined the purposes of education in the world of today to the 28 members of the summer graduation class of Elon College last night in Whitley Memorial Auditorium.

Dr. Carroll, paraphrasing a fifteenth century Spanish scholar, said that history teaches "how we are, where we are, what to do, and where to go.

"The idea of education for all the people is a comparatively recent development," he said, reminding the graduating class of the opportunities of the past few years during which time they had the opportunity of studying great ideas of the past and the present in an attempt to improve civilization.

Emphasizing three major points, Dr. Carroll said: "A nation is what it is because of its endowment from God, native intelligence, and the process of using native intelligence in order to utilize God's endowment."

He continued by reminding the audience of the tremendous endowments of our own land, but he warned "we must be humble and look to the day when all men may have the things which we now possess."

Asking what is the properly educated man, Dr. Carroll said the properly educated man of today should be a well-rounded person who is "never a type but rather a unique individual in himself," and he declared, "education is a process which has gone on before and continues on through our lives and is a system of thought."

Dr. Leon Edgar Smith, president of the college, conferred the degrees, gave the charge to the class, and presided over the commencement exercises.

In his address, Dr. Carroll emphasized that "thinkers are turning more and more to religion, realizing its true place in our world. Pointing out that the thinkers are also turning to more active interest in government, Dr. Carroll quoted Edmund Burke when he said "the best triumph for evil is for good people to do nothing."

In conclusion, Dr. Carroll charged the graduating class to remember that man's life is life a great symphony orchestra playing different parts together in harmony for good.

"Join life's great symphony and play your own part," he declared.

* * * * *

Dr. Smith's Charge to the Graduates

As a final item on the summer commencement program, President Smith delivered a charge to the graduates. The charge as delivered is carried in full:

"The larger section of your class graduated in May and has gone from this campus. Your graduation is none the less important to your college, to you, or to the world. There is plenty of work awaiting you and plenty of problems to perplex you.

"The equilibrium of the world is upset. Its economic life is out of joint. Laborers contend that business gets more than its share of the annual earnings. There are political upheavals everywhere. Social standards are constantly clashing, minority groups are crying unjust discrimination, some religious leaders are calling for complete abandonment so far as the church is concerned of the segregation of the races, contending that there is no color line in the Christian religion.

"This is the kind of society, of world into which you are graduating and into which you go as you leave this campus. We trust that your years in college have given you the information and the training that will help you meet every situation with confidence, every urgency with resolute poise, and every problem with evident ability and a ready solution that will prove effective.

"As we wish for you these abilities and achievements in life, we should remind ourselves that all real successes are determined by the will of God, that your dependency is upon Him and that He will not fail those who trust Him. May you be guided by His spirit in all ways and walks of life."

OUR NEW CHURCH AT HENDERSONVILLE.

(Continued from page 2.)

will preside. Others participating in the service will be Rev. Orville H. White, Tryon; Rev. Frank E. Ratzell, Asheville; Dr. H. E. Robinson, Burlington; Rev. Wm. J. Andes, Winston-Salem; Dr. L. E. Smith, Dr. John G. Truitt, and Supt. Wm. T. Scott, Elon College; and Dr. Heymann.

Following the service, there will be an informal reception at the Skyland Hotel, Hendersonville.

WM. T. SCOTT.

As a Christian nation, we cannot afford to let a single child go without his spiritual heritage. All children need God, and it is the task of parents and churches alike to give them every opportunity to weave spiritual and religious values into the fabric of their lives.

—Dr. Gerald E. Knoff.

Missions at Home and Abroad

"Sirur"

It was a group of new Christians, baptized in Christmas week only three months before, living in a little village seven miles away, to be reached only by the roughest of cart tracks. They had heard that a representative of the Church in America—the church which had made it possible for them to learn what it meant to be "Christian" was coming, and they wanted to see him and thank him for the gift that had come to them. But there was no time—a visit to the village would take a full day, and there were only minutes, not hours!

So it was agreed that if they wanted to come, we would meet them at a little village on the main road, as we took the Dudleys to Poona on the first lap of their journey home. We started a half hour early, but early though it was, they had arrived in their ox carts ahead of us, leaving their village while it was still dark.

It was hot, dry and dusty, but the church yard had been sprinkled with water to keep the dust down and the little church, scrubbed and brightened with flowers, was filled with the singing band, the little children, bright eyed and eager for their part, the women clad in their best garments and down front, the men—the leaders of the group. Have you ever seen a group of new converts? There is a shine in their eyes and a glow in their faces to be found nowhere else.

The program began with the songs—so dear to the hearts of the Indian Christians—and then the little children, illiterate though they were, recited the Ten Commandments and the 23rd Psalm, and the women, for the first time in their lives, took part in a service. Then Mr. Dudley, using an interpreter, told them how pleased he was to see them and that he would take their story back to the home church. A spokesman from the little group of men arose and, with hands together as a mark of respect, presented their request to Mr. Dudley—not for money, not for food, not for clothes, but that another evangelist might be sent who could go to the villages near and far, where their relatives lived—"so that the rest of our families may know the True God."

No skilled orator could have made a more telling appeal than the unlettered villager. For a moment there was silence then Mr. Dudley said,

"We can send you no more paid evangelists, but," and then he stepped forward and placing his hand on the head of the spokesman, he said, "I commission you as an evangelist to your relatives, to go to them and bring them to Christ."

Instinctively the villager turned to the other six men sitting by him, and one by one they came forward and were likewise commissioned as lay-evangelists to their own people. A deep sense of something momentous, something far-reaching happening—gripped us all. The benediction seemed to carry a special blessing. As we left the building, the seven men brought forward another. "He is one of us," they said. "He must be with us."

I wonder if such a service held in the solemnity and silence of a huge cathedral was ever more full of meaning for the Church than that one in the dusty street of a little village. As we started on our way, from the crowd around us, the cheer—"Christ, Maharaj, kee jai!" (Victory to the Lord Christ) rang through the little street.

We rode in silence for a long time—each thinking his own thoughts—each realizing that something important had happened—each believing, "There is the future of the Christian Church in India."

MRS. JOSEPH L. MOULTON.

"BUT I SAY . . ."

(Continued from page 5.)

might go for trial. If it was decided that the act was not intentional, the defendant was protected. The prophets raised further questions about the relation of cause to punishment.

When people discovered that God is a forgiving God, they began to realize that men should forgive as well. Then came the query, "How often should one forgive another?" After lengthy consideration, the rabbis agreed that if one injures you once, forgive him, if he injures you twice forgive him, if he injures you three times forgive him, but if he injures you four times, hit him hard. Then came Jesus of Nazareth. Those closely associated with him realized that he did not keep books, did not stop forgiving after the third time. Finally, one of his closest friends, Peter, asked Jesus, "Lord, how often shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? As many as seven times?" You recall Jesus' answer, "I do not say unto thee seven times, but seventy times seven." Jesus' attitude was not only theory. He also practiced it. On the cross we find him praying, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do." An early Christian who grasped Jesus' attitude, Stephen, prayed as he was being stoned to death, "Lord, do not hold this sin against them."

Jesus is our final authority regarding God and God's will. In the first part of the Sermon on the Mount, the fifth chapter of Matthew, we find Jesus six times saying, "You have heard that it was said," and then quoting some Old Testament thought, "but I say unto you." He was not satisfied with the Old Testament outlook. He insisted upon going further.

Jesus said, "You have heard it was said . . . 'You shall not kill'; but I say unto you that every one who is angry with his brother shall be liable to judgment." And again, "You have heard that it was said, 'You shall not commit adultery'; but I say to you that every one who looks at a woman lustfully has already committed adultery with her in his heart." Jesus was attempting to get to the source of trouble, that it might be removed. If we develop a skin rash, we might cover it with powder, or we might scrape it off with a razor blade; but the physician will do neither of these. He hunts for some poison in the system, some allergy, and prescribes internal medicine to destroy the cause of the rash. Jesus insisted that rules against murder and adultery were not enough. We must find why men murder or commit adultery and then remove the cause.

Jesus pointed out that, "It was also said, 'Whoever divorces his wife, let him give her a certificate of divorce'; but I say to you that every one who divorces his wife, except on the ground of unchastity, makes her an adulteress." Under Jewish law, women could not get divorces. They

(Continued on page 13.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Your Editor "Scolded"

Several weeks ago, by the time this is read, Mr. Kernodle, the managing editor of THE SUN, sent each of the departmental editors a letter in which he reminded us in a very nice way that he needed our material in Richmond on the Friday before THE SUN is published on Thursday. Which, being interpreted, means that material should reach me for this page about two weeks before the time you expect to see it in print.

The time for conference is coming up. Programs will need to be printed in THE SUN. Write-ups of the speakers will need to be published. All of this is just a warning that I am going to try to get my material to Mr. Kernodle as requested, and some you send me late may get left out.

Yes, the "scolding" was in very nice terms, and I for one (who deserved it) am going to try to get my material in on time. Please help me accomplish that!

* * * * *

Woman's Board Meeting

Twice each year the officers of the Southern Convention women meet for transacting business and making plans for the women's work in Virginia and North Carolina. Mrs. Cecil Whitlock, president of the Valley Women, has very recently extended an invitation to the Board to meet in Winchester on September 8 and 9.

If you have suggestions as to ways in which our women's work could be improved, if there are things we need to do that we are not now doing in our women's societies, if you have any ideas "for the good of the cause," please send them immediately to Mrs. W. B. Williams, 1253 24th Street, Newport News, Virginia.

* * * * *

The Women of Shelton Memorial Church Report

The Women's Missionary Society of Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Virginia, has held meetings each month during the year with good attendance.

Mrs. Frank Lewis, our Spiritual Life chairman, has given us inspiring messages at each meeting, following the Bible study as outlined in the packet.

Our Program chairman, Mrs. Grace Martin, has arranged interesting programs during the year, using the packet prepared by the Convention Literature Committee.

We had good representation at the Fall Conference and Spring Rally. We observed World Community Day, World Day of Prayer and May Fellowship Day, cooperating with the other churches in the local council of church women. Mrs. Frank Lewis is the president of the United Council of Church Women of Portsmouth.

We have given a memorial in loving memory of Mrs. Prudence Garner. We had a Thank Offering program and sent the offering to the suggested project. We have made our reports quarterly to the Woman's Missionary Conference treasurer and will meet our apportionment for the year.

We have also sent Friendly Service gifts. We joined with the Young Women's Guild in sending gifts to Ellis Island at Christmas and have sent contributions to Elon Orphanage.

At Christmas time we had a Christmas Shop sponsored by our Guild and Missionary Society, and the Young Women's Society. It was very successful.

We had two very interesting book reviews, using the suggested study books.

As we go forward into a new year, inspired by the splendid leadership of our minister, Rev. Thomas A. Britten, assisted by his very competent wife, we hope to accomplish bigger and better things in Jesus' name.

MRS. H. W. SHAFER,
President.

* * * * *

Variety of Activities at Isle of Wight

The Isle of Wight Missionary Society, with our sixteen active members, has had regular monthly meetings this year with a variety of interesting programs. Some of them have been:

a report on a Caribbean cruise, a book review of Africans on Safari, and a report on Leprosy. Our society also rendered the program to neighboring church women on the World Day of Prayer in a service at our church.

To make money, our society has sold Christmas cards, flavoring, and has had a plastic party. Individual members have used diverse talents, such as sewing, knitting, crocheting and baking to raise money.

To beautify our church, we have bought venetian blinds for a classroom and had our pulpit chairs repaired. Two of our future projects are: to help buy a church carpet, and to improve our Sunday school and enlarge its membership.

In our community, we have helped in several projects, sent cards and flowers to the sick, and given Christmas gifts to shut-ins. We took part in the coupon drive for the orphanage and sent Christmas gifts to the children on Ellis Island. Members of our society visited patients at Patrick Henry Hospital and carried cookies and towels to them.

REPORTER.

* * * * *

Monticello Society Reports

As a Missionary Society, we at the Monticello Church, Brown Summit, N. C., have carried out this year several projects which were a pleasure to us and, we hope, a benefit to others.

As our World Community Day contribution, we bought and made six layettes for Korean babies, and collected used clothing. To our December meeting each one carried a bright colored bag in which they put toys and candies. These were sent to Ellis Island to be given to the immigrants.

We have had several outstanding programs this year. In March, Mrs. Henry Robinson of Burlington reviewed for us our home mission study book, These Rights We Hold. We had Hines Chapel Missionary Society with us at this meeting.

Dr. W. W. Sloan of Elon College reviewed our mission book on Africa and illustrated his review with slides, which made it more interesting.

Our May Fellowship program on Christian Family Life was in charge of Mrs. Francis Faucette. Each of the members of her family took part and discussed the place of each in a Christian family.

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

Levi, the Toll Collector

By BESSIE P. SLOAN.

PART I.

Levi, the keeper of the toll-house, knew a great many people and a great deal about them. He liked people, all kinds of people. Some of them made him laugh, like the self-important priests who strode pompously along in their fine attire. There were others who made him sad, the severe, white-robed men who called themselves Pharisees, walking rigidly, precisely, with obvious efforts to avoid rubbing elbows with any of the motley crowd on the road. Then too there were the children; always there were children running about, squeezing through tight places, sometimes dodging blows.

Levi often had a feeling of bitterness when one of those fat wealthy Sadducees passed. If they spoke to him it was all right; but sometimes they looked at him with a self-righteous smirk that made him want to yell after them: "I'm just as good as you are. What if I do collect this tax for our Roman conquerors? What if most of my friends are never seen inside the synagogue? You, yourself, copy the manners and fashions of the pagans. You imitate the Roman and Greek cultures which are supported by these very taxes I take in. You're no better than I am!"

Once a Sadducee and a Pharisee—strange combination!—walked past, talking earnestly about some teacher: "His disciples do not keep the rules that Moses gave us! They even break the Sabbath!"

"And they eat without washing their hands," the Sadducee put in with a grimace.

The other continued with severity: "He excused them by explaining that man is lord of the Sabbath."

Levi almost laughed right out. The Pharisee looked so important and dignified. "I do believe," thought Levi, "that he considers himself lord of everything but the Sabbath!"

Twice after that, the toll collector heard comments that certainly must refer to the same teacher. One was a statement about persecuted peoples being happy. "Wait!" Levi had called after the speaker; but with a surly look he hurried on. That was a strange idea! He knew what it meant to be persecuted; but it didn't bring happiness—not to him.

The second time, it was a friend of his who stopped to talk: "Did you see the crowd over there on the hill? Well, this man, Jesus, is talking over there. I stopped a minute to listen."

"He certainly draws the crowds," said Levi. "What was he saying?"

"Oh, he said, among other things, that a man's righteousness would have to exceed that of the Pharisees and scribes, or . . ." and he paused, frowning.

"Or what?" Levi asked. Choosing his words carefully, the other went on: "He couldn't get into the Kingdom of Heaven," Levi shrugged.

"True enough," Levi said, handing back the change to a man who had just paid him. "They consider themselves righteous because they keep the Law; but they are stingy and have no mercy, no love for anyone. While we who are in this business—outcasts we may be—at least know how to be kind to each other."

"Not so fast!" exclaimed the other. "The man said something about that, too. He told his disciples they were to be kind to their enemies; that loving their friends was not enough, and that they could expect no reward for that." Levi blinked in astonishment.

"What original ideas that man has!" he exclaimed, glancing up at the small group still gathered on the hillside. "I wonder whether he really knows what he is talking about. Say, would you watch my place for me till I could run up there and hear him for myself?" And, hardly waiting for an answer, he was hurrying up the path toward the crowd that was already beginning to disperse.

As he neared the spot, he barely missed running headlong into a ragged old man, who was rushing down the path, shouting joyfully and waving his staff in the air.

"Praise be to Jehovah, God of Abraham, for the wonders this day has brought!" he cried out fervently, as he met Levi.

In the moment of confusion the tax collector caught a fleeting glimpse from beyond of a man standing out from the crowd, his strong young face and luminous dark eyes turned toward the retreating figure of the beggar.

"Ah yes," thought Levi, turning to look again at the ill-clothed fellow, the beggar! Surely it is the very same beggar who limped daily past my stand, whining for money. I must see what has happened." And as he hastened back down the path after the beggar, Jesus and those with him turned their steps in the opposite direction.

* * * * *

"My Make-Believe Mom."

By HELEN GREGG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Billy and I are writing down some of those things that we especially like in a mother. Billy can tell about his mother, but my mom died when I was three years old; I'm now twelve. I'll have to write about a make-believe mom. I know what I like in the other fellows' moms, so it won't be hard—not a bit.

I'd like my mother to have laughter in her eyes, lots of merry ways, and, when I'd done something I shouldn't have done, to tell me, "I'm sorry about that, Sonny, but I make mistakes, too!" I'd know very well she didn't mean I was to take advantage of her being nice and keep on making the same mistakes.

I should want my mom to talk regular about the things a boy needs to know—both important big things and little things. Sometimes parents seem to forget we start from scratch and have everything to learn. They expect us to know more than we've had any chance to find out. I'd like a mom who'd sit down, gentle-like, and talk to me about religion, explain death, and help me to understand some of the problems I'm going to have. I want to know how wars get started and why we can't stop having them.

Then the mom I'd like would let me play anywhere in the house. Our housekeeper won't let me play here, won't let me play there. She says I might scratch the furniture. I try to ask Dad what's a house for anyway? But he's busy; he looks out of the window, not hearing what I'm saying.

And I'd like my mom to be nice to all the boys I bring home. They don't seem to want to come to our house. Billy Potter says, "Shucks, it's too big and formal." It's like my dad, I guess. When I introduced the neighborhood fellows to her, as I do to Mrs. Black, I want her—my mom

(Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Union (Southampton) Makes Progress

Rev. Clyde Fields, pastor of the Union (Southampton) church reports that the young people of his church made $100 with a Brunskick stew and are going to add an outdoor furnace, outdoor lighting, and shrubbery on one corner of the church grounds. "We still meet on Sunday nights and then on Tuesday night for fun and recreation. Five of our young persons from Union will be in college this fall."

* * * * *

Young Adults Report From Lebanon

The young adult class of Lebanon Christian Church had charge of the third Sunday morning worship service while their pastor was away on vacation for the month of August. Their message was on "Prayer." Everyone was very much impressed and inspired by this message of prayer.

The young adult class held their regular meeting on August 20 in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Willard Brandon with 30 members present. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mr. Ezra Stow, and devotional was led by Mr. Maynard Wells in the absence of Mrs. Frank Hudson, Jr., the devotional leader. Mr. Stickley Taylor led an excellent program with a discussion on rules which make a happy and Christian marriage. A social hour was enjoyed and the hostess served delicious refreshments.

On August 26 at 6:00 o'clock the young adult class entertained the Sunday school of Lebanon church with a weiner roast on the lawn of the church. The attendance was excellent and everyone thoroughly enjoyed the evening.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Noticed in the paper the other day that Glendon Lackey had graduated from Elon, majoring in French and prepared to teach. Her Hubby, John Robert, graduated from Duke Divinity last spring, testing the wings of the "Divines." This was made possible by many hours of studying and many pots of black coffee. Seriously, we are very proud of this young minister and his wife. Congratulations, John and Glendon, upon your graduation! Congratulations are in order too for the Apple's Chapel Church, of which John is pastor. You helped to make it possible for this young couple to complete its education.

* * *

There have been revivals for the past two weeks at the two churches of which I am pastor—Spoon's Chapel and Pleasant Ridge. Two of our fine young ministers were the evangelists—Bill Simmons and Fred Allred. I would like to thank these two publicly, and also express my appreciation to the churches and to neighboring churches for the support they gave through attendance, food, singing, and prayers. I would also like to remind you that each of you needs to accept Christ as your savior if you are to know the abundant life. Many times this column is filled with foolishness to make you smile—but this is dead serious and on the level. Visit your pastor and talk with him about your relationship with God.

* * *

I received a bulletin from the Rosemont church the other day, and right in the middle of it was a quotation from one of the "Relax with Max" columns—of course Abraham Lincoln said it first. Seriously—seems I am serious today—I have tried to put little bits that are of value in this column. If you know a little story or saying that is of value, send it to me. I'll be glad to share it with our readers.

* * *

Let Us Pray—

For a good school year.
For truths to teach, teachers to teach them,
And open minds to receive them.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

I mean—to smile and say, "Yes, I've heard Bob talk about you," or ask them to dinner or tell them she hears they have a new baby at their house. But Mrs. Black sort of freezes up, and pretty soon the boys say they have the grass to cut, or something like that, and I'm left alone in this big house, which is as lonesome as all get out.

A boy has problems. Nobody ever seems to think of that. But my mom would take a lot of interest in me as a boy. My biggest problem is not being allowed to have a dog. Mrs. Black says she won't have one around the house, and Dad and that pretty girl he brings to dinner sometimes, the one with the honey-colored hair, never seem interested in whether a boy needs a dog or not.

Then I want to know what I should do to show my friends' mothers the way I feel about their being so nice to me. I'd like to take them candy or or something special, but no one will talk this over with me. No one seems to listen. I keep thinking about how fine it'd be to have a listening mom. She'd really take an interest in what goes on at school.

My dad wants big grades; but he never talks about school, except in a far-off sort of way. He sends me to camp, but he doesn't know what I do there. And this mom would talk about my going to Sunday school. Dad never takes any interest in it, and Mrs. Black says she doesn't see why I need to go to Sunday school. But I bet if I had a mom, she'd think it a swell idea. I still kneel down every night and say my prayers, the way Gram taught me, but it sure would be great if Dad would do it with me sometimes, the way Ted's father does with him.

Well, I guess I'll have to be content with a make-believe mother for a while. Maybe sometime I'll get a real one. I hope it's not the "yellow chick," because it's plain she doesn't like boys my age. The only time her eyes get bright is when Dad drives out in his big black shiny car. Then she smiles and pats my arm. "I'm coming over to spend a whole day with you, Bob!" she says, but she never does. Never. I wouldn't know what to talk about if she did. It's awful hard to talk to clever actresses. I'd like a different kind of mom—one sort of plain, gentle and sweet, but pretty, too, like Billy's mother. Next to the picture of my mother, Billy's mother is the prettiest woman I ever saw. Specially when she puts her arm around my shoulder and asks, "Bob, will you join us for dinner and a little Biblereading? You shall use the big Bible with the pictures." I like that. I sure do like that.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Courage for Christian Living"

LESSON XI—SEPTEMBER 13, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "God did not give us the spirit of timidity, but a spirit of power and love and self-control."—II Timothy 1:7.

LESSON: II Timothy 1:3-14.

DEVOTIONAL READINGS Psalm 27:1-3, 7-14.

This man Paul had a clear head, but he also had a warm heart. He thought deeply and wrote learnedly, but he also loved warmly and generously. Those who look upon him simply as a great theologian and a great organizer, overlook the man's genius for personal friendship, and his love, not only for his friends, but for his fellowmen. And, of course, one of the most striking examples of Paul's concern and care for folks is his deep and genuine affection for Timothy, his "son in the ministry." It was like the love of a father for his son, a Jonathan and David friendship. Unceasingly, the older man prayed for the younger man, always he missed him when they were separated, and eagerly he looked forward to being with him, "... longing to see thee, remembering thy tears, that I may be filled with joy," he writes in today's lesson.

A Heritage of Faith.

"Having been reminded of the unfeigned faith that is in thee; which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and, I am persuaded, in thee also." Timothy had a simple and sturdy and sincere faith. From whence did it come? What was the secret of it? Well, in a large measure he had inherited it. He had heard it and seen it, both in the life of his grandmother and in the life of his mother. He had been taught it, both by precept and by example. It was one of the greatest heritages which he enjoyed. Underneath all that this young man was, and did, was his faith in God and in Jesus Christ, and in righteousness and goodness. What about our modern youth? Are we fathers and mothers giving them the goodly heritage of faith? Are we passing on to them a sturdy and sincere faith in the things of religion? Are they learning from those of us who are parents, by contagion as well as by conversation, a faith by which to live, and by which to adventure for Christ?

Stirring Up the Gift.

"That thou stir up the gift of God, which is in thee through the laying on of my hands." These words would indicate that when Timothy was ordained there were evidences of gifts and abilities, indeed it was because he was a young man of "gifts and grace" that he was set apart to the ministry by Paul. But it is not enough to have gifts; they must be developed and used. We need not only to remember that God has given each of us gifts and talents, but we need also to develop them and use them in his service. We need to "stir them up," to "kindle them into flame." Unless we use them, we lose them.

Courage for Christian Living.

"For God has not given us the spirit of fear," or of timidity, or of fearfulness, as different versions have it. That is a striking statement. God does not give fear or fearfulness. Fear does not come from God. The gift of God is faith, not fear. "Cowardice springs from selfishness; fear is the result of ignorance, of false instruction, or of a lack of faith in a good and omnipotent God. The gifts of God are not fearfulness, not cowardice, not weakness, but are a strength and courage and a will to care for others and to lift others up, and a spirit to train and discipline ourselves for the ministry and service of others for the Christ." God gives, not the spirit of fear, but of power, and of love, and of a sound mind. The secret of peace of mind, is the peace of God which passeth all understanding. And God gives his peace. He never gives fear. That comes from man's weakness or wickedness.

Enduring Hardnes As a Soldier of Christ.

Paul did not think of the Christian life as a vacation, but as a vocation. And the term which he used more than once, was the life of a soldier. Furthermore, it was not the life of a soldier on the parade ground, or at a rest camp, but on the battlefield. There are too many of us Christians who want to "muster out" of God's army, or to have "weak-end leaves," or easy jobs far removed from the actual fighting. The call of today is for men and women who will endure hardness and hardships for the Lord Jesus Christ, who are willing to serve and sacrifice in his cause. Certainly we should not be ashamed of our Lord, or of those who have committed themselves to his cause.

New Light on Life and Immortality.

"According to his own purpose and grace, which was given us in Christ Jesus . . . who abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." Christ "abolished death" in the double sense that he overcame death and made it of no effect by his own resurrection, and also that for his followers he has taken the sting out of death, its sting, its fear, its power. "The fear of death had kept all the human race in a bondage of dread; but for the Christian the king of terrors has become a slave . . . he is sent to draw back the curtains of mystery, and to lead the follower of Christ into the spacious chambers of the Father's house."

Christ not only abolished death, but he brought life and immortality to light through his gospel. In a sense, folks never knew what life really was like, what it could be, until they saw life in Christ. "In him was life, and that life was the light of men," said John. Life, as Jesus lived it, was more abundant. It had new beauty and power and dimensions, and meaning.

And Christ brought immortality to light through his gospel. To be sure men had intimations of immortality before Christ's time. And Christ did not establish immortality. He simply brought new light to bear on it. Before he came, there were dim hopes, but he made the hope of immortality to stand out in all its glory and grandeur. He showed that it was not a vague, impersonal and shadowy eistence, but continued, conscious, personal existence, a state in which we shall know and be known. "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who hath begotten again in us a lively (or a living) hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead," joyfully exclaims Peter.

(Continued on page 15.)

"BUT I SAY . . ."

(Continued from page 8.)

were the possession of their husbands. Jesus recognized how unfair this double standard was and insisted that it should be destroyed.

Again Jesus noted that "It was said to the men of old, 'You shall not swear falsely . . .'; but I say to you, 'Do not swear at all.'" The Hebrews were very strict in observing their oaths, but Jesus believed that a true follower of God's will would have a reputation for veracity, would find oaths an artificial, distasteful thing.

Jesus went on to point out that "You have heard that it was said, 'An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth,; but I say to you, 'Do not resist one who is evil. If any one strikes you on the right cheek, turn to him the other also . . .; if any one forces you to go one mile, go with him two miles.'"

Jesus knew that it is much more satisfaction to surprise another person by doing more than is required, much greater satisfaction than trying to "get even." One of America's best thinkers tells of how he discovered this before he knew it was in the Bible. As a boy of eight or ten, he wanted to play baseball one day when his mother insisted that first he must pick a quart of blackberries for the family supper. This seemed to be a bad world where a boy who wanted to play ball had to pick berries. Slowly he picked one berry after another. Then an idea came to him. What would his mother's face look like if he brought home two quarts of blackberries instead of one! He decided to experiment, and soon had two quarts of berries. As a youngster he discovered that Jesus knew how to get the most from life when he advises, "If any one forces you to go one mile, go with him two miles."

Jesus went on to note, "You have heard that it was said, 'You shall love your neighbor and hate your enemy'; but I say to you, 'Love your enemies and pray for those who persecute you, so that you may be sons of your Father who is in heaven; for he makes his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sends rain on the just and on the unjust.'"

This teaching of Jesus about turning the other cheek and loving our enemies is not easy to follow, but if we are Christian we do not dare do otherwise. It is the essence of the religion of Jesus. Christianity is not easy. It never has been. But it is rewarding.

There are many who want to go only part way with Jesus. They pick the parts of his teaching that they find pleasant. They want his religion to bring comfort to the comfortless, but not to disturb those who are too comfortable. Some years ago, after I had spoken on this teaching of Jesus, I was met at the door by a deacon who told me, "I don't care what you say. The Bible says, 'An eye for an eye; a tooth for a tooth,' and that is what I am going to do. If a man hits me, I am going to hit him; if a man lies about me, I am going to lie about him."

Yes, he had found, "an eye for an eye" in the Bible, but it was not the teaching of Jesus. If this man wished to follow the teaching of Moses, he had a right to do so, but if he did this he had no right to call himself a Christian.

Elisha experimented with this way of treating an enemy, of destroying an enemy by making him into a friend. He found that it worked. Isaiah and Jeremiah taught this kindness, this non-violence. Jesus practiced it all the time.

Jesus' method can be made to work today. We have many examples of individuals and small groups using this method successfully. It can also be used with large groups. We secured freedom from Great Britain for three million Americans at the cost of seven years of bloody war. Dr. M. K. Gandhi, known as the great soul, the Mahatma, of India, secured freedom for four hundred million people with almost no violence. He learned his method from Jesus' Sermon on the Mount. He found Jesus' way practical. I once asked Mahatma Gandhi if he thought his method would work in the West. He replied, "If a thing is right, it is right everywhere." He used the method of Jesus with the British. He used it with Hindus and Moslems. He used it with the Japanese. The Japanese pushed us out of the Philippines; they pushed the British out of Malaya and Burma, but they stopped at the border of India. They later explained that they knew how to cope with military force, but they did not know how to counteract the soul force used by Gandhi.

Lamech's vengeance seventy-seven times is in the Bible. Moses' tooth for a tooth is in the Bible. Peter's forgiveness seven times is in the Bible. So is Jesus' forgiveness seventy times seven, his "Love your enemies" and "Do not resist one who is evil"! Who is our authority, Lamech, Moses, Peter or Jesus?

Our responsibility is much greater than that of Lamech or Moses. They did not have the teaching and example of Jesus. In James 4:17 we are told that, "Whoever knows what is right to do and fails to do it, for him it is sin."

Jesus' program was to bring the richest possible life to the greatest number of people. That life can come only through doing good, following the teaching and practice of the Man of Nazareth. We all want a good life, a satisfying life. To secure it, we must go forward from the teaching and practice of Lamech, of Moses, to the teaching and practice of Jesus.

We must never go back. We must go ahead with Jesus, with God. Never talk of going back to God. God is not in the back. God is ahead, leading us on. We must never be satisfied with a pre-Christian religion. The good can be the enemy of the best. No Christian can honestly sing, "The old time religion—it was good enough for Moses; it is good enough for me." the religion of Moses was not good enough for Jesus. It is not good enough for the Christian.

The result of going backward in our religion is to live life in reverse. The word "Live" spelled backward gives us the result. We want to live, to get the most possible from our opportunity of life. But if we quit going forward we do not live, but rather we spell these same four letters in reverse. Instead of LIVE, we have EVIL.

No, we do not wish to go back to Lamech or Moses and have EVIL. We shall go forward with Jesus and LIVE!

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 9.)

Our July program was the showing of the film, "The Hidden Heart." We felt that this was a very worthwhile program.

As we near the end of the year, we know that we have fallen short in a great many ways. We have let opportunities pass for helping, when help was needed. We hope that in the new year we may do better work for the Master.

MRS. JENNINGS KERNODLE,
Reporter.

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Every day is begun with prayer. In the office there is prayer that God may direct every step of the way. In the diningroom at breakfast there are devotional readings and prayer for God's grace and help on each child and worker. At dinner and supper grace is said. The spirit of prayer is often observed on the campus, and at the end of the day by workers and children. No child will leave the orphanage without the impact of prayer upon his daily habits and upon his philosophy of life. We do not know, of course, how much it will mean to them but they find it here. They live under the influence and training of it here. And we trust the Lord to grant the strength and blessing of it upon their lives when they are out in life.

We recognize that we are a church institution. We know that our Sunday schools, churches, and Christian friends are behind us and with us in the work of caring for, training, and sending these children out into life as products of the church's care and blessing. To those of us who work here it is an arduous task undertaken in devotion to the Christ and a sense of high calling. It is a pleasure, and a joy. Right now our faith is being tested with the "hard times" we are feeling, but we have never known the Lord to fail us, and we trust Him for friends of homeless little children in sufficient numbers to see that we pay all our bills and have the necessities of life. We are not afraid of suffering and hardship and are willing to help bear the burdens of the weak and thus to fulfil the law of Christ.

To add a child to our family costs around $300.00 per year. The general overall expense is much more than that, but beginning with that already assumed it takes the above figure to add a child. There is need of friends who would like to support a child at the orphanage. It would be a very fine investment. It is not "pouring money in a rat hole." For as the late W. L. Stidger says: "In the soul of a seed is the hope of the sod; In the heart of a child is the Kingdom of God." If you are able to invest the sort of money it takes to help a homeless child to live in a home such as this I can think of nothing that would give more satisfaction than so investing it. And right now it has a very practical appeal because of the seasons we have had here this summer.

To a few friends who feel as I do about helping these children I want to express my humble appreciation. I know your heavenly Father will look on it with His favor. You have already your reward, and your reward will be enhanced accross the years. Says Jesus "In as much as ye do it unto one of the least of these, ye do it unto me." Yes, truly, "In the heart of a child is the Kingdom of God."

As I sat in the little two room house with seven fatherless children and the mother, I thought of those things. I wondered how many of you would hold back a five or ten dollar bill. "You mean I will have a little bed—a whole little bed—all by myself up there?" asked one of the little children as she stood close to me with both hands on my knees. "Yes, honey, a whole bed by your self, and good food, too." "Will I have milk?" It was something to see them. See them deep inside I mean. One little girl slipped over to her larger sister and wispered in her ear, "I like him." Yes, they like you—for it is you who deserve the "liking." I am willing to do the work for you, and just as willing for you to share the joy of it.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR AUGUST 27, 1953.
Commodities for the week.
Pleasant Hill Missionary Society, Glasses and clothing.
Melvin King, Burlington, Clothing.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Amount brought forward	$ 9,482.26
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Bethel	$ 41.10
Niagara	10.00
Pleasant Union	50.00
	101.10
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)	$ 87.35
Bethlehem (Nans) S. S. .	28.74
	116.09
Durham S. S.	$ 28.23
Hebron	12.00
Mt. Zion	7.68
	47.91
Western N. C. Conference:
Zion	$ 30.00
	30.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Mt. Olivet (G)	$ 5.00
Newport S. S.	20.29
Wood's Chapel S. S.	9.00
	34.29
Total	$ 329.39
Grand total	$ 9,811.65

Special Offerings.
Amount brought forward	$12,520.94
Pleasant Hill Missionary Society for shower room$	46.00
Colgate-Palmolive-Pete Co. for coupons	79.80
Miss Nancy Shankle, Troy, N. C.	5.00
Dr. & Mrs. W. C. Goley, N. C., in honor of Mrs. W. W. Sellers	5.00
The Elder Cong. Christian Church, Dadeville, Ala. .	9.00
Special Gifts	2.00
	146.80
Grand total	$12,667.74
Total for the week	$ 476.19
Total for the year	$22,479.39

The number of children under ten years of age has increased 39 per cent since 1940, while the population has increased less than 15 per cent.

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through Sept. 3, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Bethel—Vacant	377.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt . .	60.00

Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardcastle . .	$ 872.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo . . .	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell . .	1,321.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr. . .	1,913.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar . .	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith . .	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein . . .	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Union, Southampton—Clyde Fields	928.00

Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register . . .	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register	1,500.00

Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal	132.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder . . .	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr. . . .	82.50

Elon College—H. P. Bozarth	2,450.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wiseman	3,292.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren . . .	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wiseman . . .	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student) . . .	75.00

†Paid.

What church will be next to send in its Declaration?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

Confidence and Courage.

"I know whom I have believed, and I am persuaded that he is able to guard that which I have committed unto him against that day." Here was the secret of the man's confidence and courage. He knew whom he believed, he had confidence in Christ. And he knew that Christ would guard all that he had committed unto him, even to the end of life, and in the life to come. Wherefore he was of good courage.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:

(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195..
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $., beginning, 195..
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church

By Secretary or Clerk

Address

..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

Highlights of Church Statistics

FROM THE 1953 YEARBOOK OF AMERICAN CHURCHES

According to figures released by the National Council of Churches from the 1953 Yearbook to be published on September 14, church membership in the United States, excluding the territories, has broken into new high ground, reaching an all-time record of 92,277,129.

This represents a gain of 3,604,124 over the previous year, and an unprecedented growth rate of 4.1 per cent—outstripping the population increase by two and a half times. Never before has such a high annual increase been recorded. During the past decade, the annual gain has been about two per cent. The 1952 figure of twice that figure, accelerated an upward trend that has been maintained in this country for the past 100 years, and has resulted in the doubling of church membership in the past 26 years.

These new figures indicate that 59 per cent of Americans in the Continental U. S.—about three out of every five men, women and children—belong to religious bodies.

In 1952 the number of local churches also reached a new peak of 285,277, as compared to 284,592 for 1951. The number of clergymen having charges rose from 181,123 to 183,899.

Of the nation's two largest religious groups, the Protestants and Roman Catholics, the former registered a gain of 3.9 per cent; and the latter increased by 3.5 per cent. Protestants now number 54,229,963, while there are 30,253,427 Roman Catholics.

The third largest religious group are the Jewish congregations, reporting 5,000,000. Next in order of the top six are: Eastern Orthodox with 2,353,783 members; Old Catholic and Polish National Catholic, 366,956; and Buddhist, 73,000.

While 251 religious bodies report on membership in the forthcoming Yearbook, an indication that church membership is less divided than it first seems, is shown by the fact that 18 bodies with 1,000,000 members or more have a total of 78,249,953 members, or 85 per cent.

These 18 bodies reporting 1,000 members or more, are: Roman Catholic Church, 30,253,427; The Methodist Church, 9,180,428; Southern Baptist Convention, 7,634,493; Jewish Congregations, 5,000,000; National Baptist Convention, U.S.A., Inc., 4,467,779; National Baptist Convention of America, 2,606,289; Protestant Episcopal Church, 2,482,887; Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A., 2,441,933; United Lutheran Church in America, 1,962,256; Disciples of Christ, International Convention, 1,815,627; Lutheran Church, Missouri Synod, 1,728,989; American Baptist Convention, 1,550,653; Churches of Christ, 1,500,000; Congregational Christian Churches, 1,269,466; African Methodist Episcopal Church, 1,166,301; Christ Unity Science Church, 1,112,123; Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, 1,077,285, and Greek Archdiocese of North and South America, 1,000,000.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, SEPTEMBER 10, 1953

NUMBER 36

Christianity Indispensable to Development of Personality

By WILLIAM CLOW

MAN is a deformed being without a developed and spiritualized intellect. . . . All life is molded by the mind. It is from the mind of Jesus Christ that the believer is to get his life and his spiritual development.

Within the person of Jesus Christ are the graces and grandeur of the Christian life. As the divine and eternal Personality, Christ is the unique vision and the supreme reality of all believers. Nothing can supersede the Son of God. He is the absolutely perfect universal character. He can touch every other personality. It is within the realm of his mind that the answer to every form of skepticism is found. By his perfect life, his miraculous works, his resurrection and glorious ascension, Christ has answered atheism. By means of his infinite personality, he has touched and transformed man and demonstrated his Godhead.

As the eternal Son of God, he is the cosmopolitan Spirit and the universal Word. He has the true world vision, and some day he will rule as King. He will have universal sway because he is the omnipotent and omniscient Personality. It is to this matchless One that we must look for symmetry and perfection of character.

Jesus the Messiah is the supreme Ideal of the world. Nations and individuals can find in him the elements of supreme delight and satisfaction. To be like our gracious Lord, we must be made partakers of his nature.

Christianity is more than social adjustment. It is more than benevolent activity. It is, also, more than baptized paganism. Christianity is the mother of the world's best scholarship. True scholarship reaches its highest point when it knows Jesus Christ and becomes well trained in spiritual knowledge. The Christian religion is not based on humanistic opinions. It is "not fanciful, it is factual." It is a revealed religion. A certain writer has well said, "Christianity is not a system of negations. It is a system of positive relationship with Jesus Christ, and through him with humanity."

Negations are involved, however, for to be without a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ is to be in a lost condition. Salvation means deliverance. Salvation brings us into a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. This relationship is indispensable to the development of our own personality.

News Flashes

In a "supplement" to Temple Tidings, the weekly news program of our Congregational Christian Temple, of Norfolk, Dr. Millard Stevens outlines the program of services for the month of September. We note that Rev. Quentin Leisher will be the guest speaker on World Mission Sunday, September 27, and will use as his subject "Our Christian World Mission."

Mr. W. P. Nothnagel of our Rosemont Church, Norfolk, Virginia, was elected the "Good Neighbor of the Week," on the week of August 23, by radio station WCAV. Mr. Nothnagel is an active member of the church, and has been Scout Master of the Church Troup for about nine years. The person who nominated him had this to say, "He is active in Scout Work, active in the church, and has an all around good disposition." We congratulate him on receiving this honor.

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference to Meet at Tryon

The North Carolina and Virginia Conference of Congregational Christian Churches is called to meet on November 10 and 11, 1953, at the Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, N. C. The conference opens at 2 p. m., November 10, and closes with the luncheon on November 11. This will enable delegates from a distance to travel to and from the conference without having to spend the night enroute.

This is the first time conference has met with the churches in the Western part of North Carolina. Rev. Orville White is the pastor of the Tryon Church. Recently the church built a new educational building and this will facilitate the work of the conference.

Each church in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference should have at least two delegates. Churches that have more than 100 members are represented in addition by one delegate for each additional 50 members or major fraction thereof, provided that no church is entitled to more than four delegates.

Those attending the conference will send, in advance, their names and addresses to Rev. O. H. White, Tryon, N. C. Since everyone from the Piedmont area of North Carolina and the churches in Virginia will be staying overnight, it will be necessary to make advance registration.

W. J. ANDES,
Secretary.

A Tribute to Dr. Bowden

Elon College and the community lost valuable members when Dr. D. J. Bowden and his family moved on August 2. They have gone to their home in Bloomington, Indiana, where Dr. Bowden will head the Department of Religion of the University of Indiana.

Dr. Bowden, serving as a member of the Elon College faculty and dean of the college for nearly 18 years, was a faithful member of our church. He was a scholar, a good teacher, a friend to young people, and a consecrated Christian minister. Few who have served Elon College have had as great an influence upon so many young people as did Dean Bowden. Literally hundreds of youth will honor him as their friend, teacher and counselor.

Dr. Bowden was a valuable ministerial member of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, serving on the Committee on the Ministry and in other capacities. He was the executive secretary of the Elon College Sustaining Fund during the past year. He served as supply minister in many of our churches and as a preacher was always a popular choice in both city and rural churches. We shall miss him and his valuable counsel and good spirit, but we shall follow him in his new work with great interest and our sincere prayers.

We extend to Dr. and Mrs. Bowden our hearty thanks for their faithful services in the Southern Convention, and we wish for them and their fine family continued good health, happiness and usefulness in the Kingdom.

W. T. SCOTT, Supt.,
So. Convention.

Welcome to a New Church

On September 3, 1953, the Community Church of Hendersonville, N. C., was received into the fellowship of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference of Congregational Christian Churches. This was at a public service, and the church was filled to capacity. Official action had been taken on August 13, 1953, by the Executive Committee of the conference. Henceforth this fine church is to be known as the First Congregational Church of Hendersonville, N. C.

Dr. C. M. Heymann, the pastor, also was received from the Baptist denomination. Through his efforts, this church had come into being. One Dr. Heymann. He is well liked by the people of Hendersonville, and is known by all.

The church building is small, but it speaks worship when you see and enter it. The people and pastor have a vision, and where there is a vision
(Continued on page 3.)

Southern Convention Dates to Remember

- | | |
|-----------------|--|
| October | 1—Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference
Waverly, Va. |
| | 6—North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference
First Church, Greensboro, N. C. |
| | 8—Virginia Valley Woman's Missionary Conference
Place to be announced |
| | 14-15—Virginia Valley Annual Conference Session
Bethlehem Church |
| | 20-21—Eastern North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Shallow Well Church |
| | 28-29—Eastern Virginia Annual Conference Session
Rosemont Church, South Norfolk, Va. |
| November | 3-4—Western North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Pleasant Hill Church |
| | 10-11—North Carolina & Virginia Annual Conference Session
Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, N. C. |
| December | 8—Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association
Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va. |

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Editor of Column Back at Elon

Your editor has had a very interesting summer of work at the University of North Carolina. He taught at the university as a Visiting Professor during both terms of the summer school, continued his research in organic chemistry, and supplied pulpits in several of our churches. It was, needless to say, a busy summer. With the opening of the fall term of Elon College your editor has returned to his duties here. It is good to be back home and at work again at our college; your sending news items to him at the Elon address will make him feel even more at home.

Bethlehem to Organize Men

Sunday, September 6 the men of Bethlehem Congregational Christian Church of Altamahaw, N. C. will meet to organize a Laymen's Fellowship. This is very encouraging. We would like to have more reports of this nature. There are a number of our churches where men could organize and do a very effective and vital work in the interest of the church. Rev. G. C. Crutchfield is pastor of the Bethlehem Church; they have been doing a very fine piece of work in this church. They have built one of the finest sanctuaries in this part of the state for any rural church. We look forward to the contribution which they will make with an alert, active Men's Fellowship. We wish them God Speed and hope that they will be joined by many other similar groups.

Another Questionnaire on the Way

We have mentioned in this column many times the fact that we sent out questionnaires to some men in each of our churches. We have also indicated that the response was not all that we had hoped for. We are now going to send another copy of this questionnaire to the ministers of our various churches and request them to get them properly filled in and returned. It will be very interesting indeed to see what response we get from the clergy. We believe very strongly that they will be prompt in sending back the information which we need and believe to be very important. Won't each of you take it upon yourself to see to it that your church has been reported. As soon as we can receive enough reports we will assemble the data, correlate it in so far as possible, and make it available for you. We are also assembling a list of those who want some information or assistance of any kind hoping that in the near future we will be able to be of some very real help to the Men's Fellowship in each of our local churches. We think that this survey is of vital importance; we would appreciate your helping us to complete it very soon.

We would like to know the news from your group—send it to the editor of this column, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

WELCOME TO A NEW CHURCH. (Continued from page 2.)

there is life and the promise of great things to come.

Hendersonville is half-way between Asheville and Tryon, where we already have churches. These three churches will now have a fellowship of their own that should be helpful. With the North Carolina and Virginia Conference meeting in Tryon in November, this should prove a help in developing our friendship and our church fellowship across the State of North Carolina.

W. J. ANDES.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195 . . .

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $ for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

The Question of Lay Leadership

By JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR.

Periodically sentiment for greater Lay representation among the elective officers of the Convention and the various conferences comes to the fore. A cursory examination of the present situation reveals that the Virginia Valley Central Conference has elected laymen to the offices of president, secretary and treasurer. The other conferences and the Convention are alike in that only the office of treasurer is filled by a layman. That fact could easily give rise to unprofitable but amusing speculation.

One who makes the effort to discuss the situation with the ministers of the Convention early realizes that there is no opposition on the part of that group to greater Lay representation. To the contrary, such representation would be welcomed heartily.

It would be unfair to suggest that the situation reflects reluctance on the part of the laity to assume responsibility. More likely the situation is the result of the feeling on the part of many who would receive consideration that they lack sufficient knowledge of the routine functioning of the conferences and the Convention to undertake the tasks of the president or the secretary. The feeling is understandable. On the face of it there would seem to be less reason for the feeling in reference to the Convention offices. The Superintendent, Educational Secretary and members of the office staff are available for guidance. With the conferences the situation is different.

One way in which the desired representation can be secured and the major obstacles overcome is obvious and simple. The offices could be alternated between the ministry and the laity and the vice-president elected with the expectancy that he will be the next president. Thus there would be a period of orientation. Service on the executive committees or boards also could serve as a period of orientation.

It is the custom to refer to people in general either through neutral or masculine nouns and pronouns. But the intent of lay representation here presented should not be taken to mean "men only." Qualified members of the fairer sex should receive equal consideration and opportunity.

If the present situation is to be changed, it will not be simply because the ministers favor it. There must be an equal willingness on the part of the members of the laity to accept office. Unless there is that expressed willingness the present situation will continue.

"A Letter to the Editor"

We are printing in its entirety in this issue of The Christian Sun the longest letter that we have ever received. While the letter was sent in by Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, it is from the pen of his daughter, Miss Mary Ann Harrell. The request came with it that it be printed in its entirety, possibly in installments, or that none of it be used. We are sorry that its publication had to be postponed until this date because of prior commitments, and we believe it best that the whole letter be printed in a single issue so as to be most readily digested.

While the letter is primarily a "criticism" of what the writer has previously said and Webster says, "Criticism—the act of criticising, especially unfavorably; censure; critical observation," we cannot help but agree with much that the letter contains. On the other hand, we do not think that Miss Harrell has realized the seriousness of the problem which our government is facing. We are of the opinion that Bishop Oxnam received most fair treatment at the hands of the Un-A. T. Committee (he himself said as much), and we do not think the members of that committee can justly be accused of using smear tactics.

We always have thought, and still think, that man for man, the profession of the ministry ranks higher than any other. But that very fact makes it the most desirable field that the Communists could infiltrate. And a Communist has no scruples about posing as a minister.

We believe our differences of opinion are primarily caused by differences in definitions. Our opinion is that suspicion applies primarily to what one is, or is not. We believe that one's profession, whether it be that of being doctor, lawyer or clergyman, or only that of being a lay Christian, should be above suspicion. Otherwise the cause one professes to follow will sustain impairment.

On the other hand, criticism applies to one's actions. It is well to avoid criticism if possible, but not by the sacrifice of ideals or principles. One may be criticized, he will be, but let one know in his own heart that he is right, and there will be nothing to fear!

"A Letter to the Editor"

THE EDITOR
THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Dear Sir:

I am writing to you to comment on the editorial of August 6, entitled "Bishop Oxnam and the Un-A. A. Committee." I believe that the case of Bishop Oxnam calls for more discussion than this editorial provided.

The concluding sentence of this editorial was "A minister must, like Caesar's wife, indeed be above suspicion." I believe that it is next to impossible for us to be guided by the principle "a minister must be above suspicion." This is no principle at all: it is too vague, too difficult to define. It places sober objection and malicious carping on the same plane. Consequently, in practice it becomes meaningless. Where, then, and how, can we find a principle which will define general rules and by which we can judge particular cases?

Let us begin by distinguishing carefully between criticism, suspicion and smear. This is often hard to do in practice, but we can at least be clear in our own minds as to what we mean by each of these words.

Criticism, according to the dictionary, is the art of evaluating merits and faults. For purpose, we may say that criticism has specific and worthy motivations. It devotes itself to the cause of truth—to presenting facts accurately and to reasoning correctly. It believes that thus and only thus can it serve the ends of justice. It lives by a sense of profound responsibility to the welfare of mankind. Therefore, it is impartial, rigorous, and sober. It shuns rancor. It is fervant but not raucous, serious but not pompous. It speaks judiciously, and will not disavow for the sake of expediency what it has said. It is not swayed by dogma, which is snobbery of intellect, or by popularity, which is snobbery of emotion.

Criticism begins with firm convictions in matters of basic principle—such as the rules of the Constitution in our government, or the Bible as "a sufficient rule of faith and practice" in our church. It is profoundly assured of the truth of these principles. It is equally assured that anyone or everyone may sometimes be mistaken in interpreting or applying these principles; and it is willing to assume that these mistakes are made in good faith.

Therefore criticism is unwilling to take particular cases for granted. It deals with each case on its own merits, and brings to bear all its resources of logic and common sense. Its method in each case includes a healthy skepticism. Struggling to overcome the weakness of partisanship, it applies its principles to both sides of the case as fairly as possible.

Suspicion is a very different thing. It is more a mood than a skill. The American College Dictionary defines it usefully as "imagination of the existence of guilt, fault, falsity, or the like, on slight evidence or without evidence." It is "the positive tendency to doubt the trustworthiness of appearances and therefore to believe that one has detected possibilities of anything unreliable, unfavorable, menacing, or the like."

Suspicion, then, is by nature vague and unmethodical, and willing to remain so. It develops from ignorance and does not try to go beyond it. This distinguishes it from criticism: criticism may originally be promoted by a suspicion, but it carefully subjects both the suspicion and its object to study. Suspicion is not discriminating. In generalities, it is guided by prejudices rather than by principles. In dealing with particular cases, it shows an obstinate credulity, and is usually eager to believe the worst.

Suspicion often springs from envy, greed, and conceit. The suspicious person tends to develop blind trust in himself and blind mistrust of everybody else (from which he may extend his blind faith to a demagogue or tyrant). If he is unsuccessful, he will not admit that he may have been responsible for it. To sooth his conceit, he tends to believe that the successful have succeeded by skulduggery and corruption. In any case, he pays little attention to facts and a great deal of attention to his own malice.

Therefore the suspicious person ignores fact, common-sense, and logic; and therefore he becomes exceedingly gullible. The more he indulges his suspicions, the more stupid he becomes, until he will believe the most preposterous assumptions. In spite of this credulity, he believes that men are generally hypocrites. Consequently, instead of being on guard for mistakes, including his own, he is forever sniffing for hypocrisy. He is also a great believer in plots—by the bankers or the communists, by the Jews or the Nazis, by the Catholics or the Masons—and in mysterious enemies, like those who inhabit comic books.

Thus suspicion is a quagmire for careless minds: it turns to cynicism, which, like suspicion, is indiscriminate. And therefore when suspicion is justified by facts, it is by coincidence about as often as not. No one can be above such suspicion, and it is senseless for a man of principle to try: the stronger his convictions, the more suspect he is likely to become; the more cogent his criticisms, the less the simple mind of suspicion can understand.

There is an additional danger in saying that a man who is "an object of suspicion" or "a controversial person" must not be allowed to hold a pulpit or an office of state. It gives the malicious private enemy, the crackpot, the corrupt boss, the gangster, or the Communist a veto power over the most important positions in society. Such persons need only whisper smears and spread rumors—and the minister is "suspect," the public servant "controversial," and therefore ousted and muzzled. Are these the results we want?

Our third category, smear, we may define as the technique by which the unscrupulous play upon the suspicions of the uncritical. It is the demagogue's substitute for intelligent debate. It is practiced by irresponsible persons who do not understand the importance of true criticism in the free society—or who understand it perfectly well and are determined to destroy both criticism and society. Smear is a weapon for the professional Communists and for the professional Anti-Communist: each smears the other and both smear the freedom-loving liberal and conservative. This creates hysterical confusion, on which suspicion thrives. It makes clear thinking and sound judgment virtually impossible. It debauches public opinion and therefore endangers national polity.

We cannot exonerate the smear-monger who is "Anti-Communist" without exonerating the smear-monger who is "anti-capitalist." They operate on the same basis. If the end justify the means of the one, it justifies the means of the other. We will be told, "it is only a question of procedure." Precisely. This is the question that matters most. Limited government, democracy, freedom—these words mean that certain procedures are sacrosanct under the law, and that certain others are forbidden. Free elections are one means of disposing of an unwanted executive, assassinations are another—but liberty is implicit in the first procedure, servitude in the other. And character assassination by smear is as dangerous to liberty as physical assassination by bullet.

Name-calling is the simplest form of smear. It appeals to a stock response from the unthinking and prejudiced minds. In the old South, for example, "nigger-lover" and "black Republican" were such names. In Nazi Germany, "Jew" and "Bolshevik" were such names—catch-alls for everything evil and obscene. In these examples, we can see readily that the name is intended to arouse violent hatred and contempt, and that it may or may not describe the individual truly.

However, it is not so easy to make such a distinction in the current furor over Communism. Professional Communists and professional Anti-Communists use certain terms for smear purposes, while responsible critics of politics and economics use the same terms in a definite descriptive sense, for factual reference.

For example, when the Communist calls someone a "fascist," we can be reasonably confident of only two things: either that the Communist regards this person as an enemy and is eager to ruin him, or that for his own ends he is trying to addle the public mind—or indeed that he is trying to do both at once. But only independent factual evidence will enable us to decide whether this "fascist" is or is not a follower of Mussolini's sottish teachings.

Similarly, if one of our professional Anti-Communists calls someone a "red," we can be reasonably confident of only two things: either that the Anti-Communist regards this person as an enemy and is eager to ruin him, or that for his own ends he is trying to addle the public mind—or indeed that he is trying to do both at once. But only independent factual evidence will enable us to decide whether this "red" is or is not a servant of the Kremlin.

In both of these cases, the words tend to lose all factual meaning. They only hide the true issues. We would be wise to consider a comment of Huey Long's on this problem. Long has been aptly described as America's first home-grown dictator. He knew the weaknesses of democracy very well indeed, and played on them cleverly. Someone asked him once if the United States would ever adopt fascism. "Surely, son," replied the Kingfish, "but we'll call it 'anti-fascism.'"

Smear also uses a technique of false logic which runs about like this: "Communists say they favor peace and social justice; Protestant ministers say they favor peace and social justice: therefore Protestant ministers are Communists." Popular suspicion of such clergymen as Bishop Oxnham would probably state its case in a form much like this. This formula ignores the fact that peace and social justice mean very different things to very different persons, especially to persons as different as Communists and clergymen. It also ignores the issue of means: Communists prefer to liquidate, or kill off, those who do not agree with them about peace and justice; Protestant ministers prefer to change the minds and save the souls of those who do not agree with them—and it does seem to me that there is an important difference here. It also ignores the fact that if you define "peace and social justice" according to the Gospels, the Communists might as well be lying, because they use the words so differently. Finally, this fallacy also "proves"—if anything—that "therefore Communists are Protestant ministers." But as far as I know this last absurdity has not been suggested yet. Perhaps I should not even have mentioned it.

Probably the favorite smear technique is based on the concept of guilt-by-association. This was definitely the technique followed in the case of Bishop Oxnham, and it calls for careful evaluation.

"Guilt-by-association" means just what it says: that under certain conditions the close associates of a guilty person are assumed to share his guilt; or that if a group or some of its members are held guilty, all of its members are assumed to share that guilt. Common sense makes it clear that this concept has some basis in fact and may serve useful and legitimate purposes. Common sense also makes it clear that to avoid injustice, this concept should be interpreted and applied with all discretion.

When this concept is used as the basis of a smear technique, it is used without any semblance of discretion and serves highly questionable purposes. It contains just enough fact and truth to make its lies go down smoothly. The assumption underlying these smears is that guilt is automatically and inevitably transmitted by any association at all. If this were true, of course, the Communists would have converted the whole country long ago simply by associating with everyone, and our present problem would not exist at all. Another underlying assumption is that associations are infinitely inter-locking, and therefore everyone is more or less guilty, actually or potentially so (which, by the way, is the assumption on which totalitarian governments use their secret police). Yet another assumption underlying these smears would seem to be that Communism is overpoweringly attractive, especially to "intellectuals." This is a colossal over-simplification: a justification in practice for suspecting those who think. And also we should not forget that some of the most intelligent and effective criticisms of Communism have come from those who have had enough "association" with it to have first-hand knowledge; and that we can forestall its recruiting officers only by understanding why some persons have found it attractive.

Guilt-by-association as a smear technique ignores the nature and degree of association, the time and the circumstances. These are the factors of overwhelming importance if we are to understand the nature of Communism with any discrimination and clarity. It may help us if we consider what their associates meant to the Communists themselves: namely, protective coloration. In their own right, they won amazingly little popularity, especially while they were under orders to bespatter liberals with such meaningless epithets as "social fascists." They were somewhat more successful when they were ordered to persuade people that Communists are liberals only much more so: which has always been untrue, of course. They had two important resources in this process of persuasion. The first was the undeniable fact that some conservatives and many reactionaries had been saying for years that liberals and Communists are really identical. The second was the use of the front organization, on the concept of "innocence-by-association," which was as misleading as its contemporary counterpart.

The front organization was just what its name implies. In The Origins of Totalitarianism (New York, Harcourt, Brace, 1951), Hannah Arendt has analyzed its importance very clearly. These organizations delude the Party members about the nature of the world, and the world about the nature of the Party. They surround criminal conspiracy with an appearance of respectability and

(Continued on page 7.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The Last Minute

There are many things that we wish did not end and certainly not abruptly. They bring joy and satisfaction, and in our hearts we would like for them to continue. There are other things that we wish would end quickly and abruptly, if possible. They do not mean joy of satisfaction to anyone. We are glad when the last minute is gone.

It has been the custom of Elon College to open the first Tuesday in September unless Labor Day comes later. This year is one of those years. It has seemed a long summer. It has been a long, hot, dry spell. Many are hoping and praying earnestly that this drought that has wrought havoc with the crops in this section of North Carolina will come to an end and abruptly, but at present there is no end in sight. To our dismay the weather man promises no relief. He indicates that there shall be a scarcity of rain for this section for ninety more days. If his prognostications are true, no mortal can begin to estimate the damage that will be done. Already, the towns of Burlington, Graham, Mebane, Elon College and Raleigh are experiencing a serious shortage of water. Unless relief does come, ninety more days will bring disaster and suffering to our citizens. May the Good Lord open the heavens and send the rain.

At Elon College we have seen the end of summer school and now we are at the end of vacation. The last minute touches are being put on the campus, buildings, and equipment to make sure that the physical accommodations at our college are in the best possible condition for occupancy and that a cordial and hearty welcome may be extended to every student who selects Elon College as his college. The faculty meets Saturday morning September 5, for a period of examination of the curriculum, a period of study and orientation, that the faculty itself may be in readiness and prepared for the best year's work in the history of the college. The faculty is complete and we are anticipating a good year's work.

These last minute preparations have been strenuous, yet thorough. We are grateful to pastors, Sunday school officials, alumni, and friends who have spoken a good word to prospective students and otherwise used their influence to increase our student body and make the year's work at Elon a success and a joy.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

It is interesting how contributions from the Sunday schools and churches on conference apportionment for the college run rather consistently from year to year. Of course, each church has its own apportionment. It knows exactly what it is expected to give. There is no required time in which to give the amount apportioned other than within the given conference year. Each church is advised that it would be helpful to the college if it would make its contributions in four equal quarterly installments. This, however, is not always convenient but every church is expected to raise the total amount apportioned prior to the meeting of the conference in annual session.

A check comparing the contributions on apportionment for 1952-53 with 1951-52 shows that there is only $112 difference. The advantage is with 1951-52. I am confident, however, that the total amount apportioned, or nearly so, will be received before or by the time 1952-53 is an item of history.

The loyalty of the church means the life of the college.

Previously Reported	$ 6,557.72
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Elk Spur	$ 8.50
Western N. C. Conference:
Bennett	$ 4.00
Bailey's Grove	4.00
Pleasant Grove	10.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Mt. Olivet (R) S. S.	$ 24.00
	51.50
Total to date	$ 6,609.22

"A LETTER TO THE EDITOR"

(Continued from page 6.)

social prestige. They tried to choose, for their apparent purposes, programs with which few liberals could quarrel. Their usual method of organization was to place Party members or trusted fellow-travelers as executive secretaries and treasurers, and to place liberals as presidents, vice-presidents, sponsors and the like—where they would have a maximum of prestige and a minimum of power. Therefore the fact that a person was listed, say, as a sponsor of such a group, does not necessarily prove that he was a Communist: in the absence of other evidence, it might well tend to prove that he was not. It hardly proves that he was overcautious; but in the absence of other evidence, it does not prove that he was disloyal, subversive, or a potential traitor.

Moreover, not every organization which is now on the patriotic blacklists was a front organization. Some organizations were not founded as such, but later came under Communist control. Some organizations realized that Communists were attempting to get control of them, and managed to throw them out. And so on, through innumerable variations.

Therefore, it is risky procedure to assume that anyone who was connected with an organization now regarded as subversive, was really a Communist or fellow-traveler. This is what smear will try to prove, and what the suspicious will assume. This is not what the critical mind can accept. The critical citizen will consider the history of the organization and the nature of the individual's participation. I understand that in some cases, the super-patriots have taken the mailing lists of such organizations as solid evidence of a mass of sympathizers: which is absurd. If getting literature unasked for and unwanted would make sympathizers, The Daily Worker would have long ago created sympathizers by the millions, simply by sending them free copies. As a final caution, Party groups are reported to have appropriated the use of some well-known names without the consent of their owners.

Time and circumstances are more important in these cases than the simple-minded will acknowledge. It was no proof of Communism to criticize capitalism, or even to curse the Republican party, when our economy slumped into collapse after 1929. It was no proof of Communism to praise the Russians when they were holding the Nazis outside of Stalingrad. At times, however, the House Committee and some of its witnesses seem to ignore these facts.

(A remarkably objective and useful study of this group, The House Committee on Un-American Activities, 1945-1950, has been published by

(Continued on page 11.)

Missions at Home and Abroad

Students from Other Countries to Study in American Theological Schools and Seminaries

Forty young Christians from fourteen different countries arrived in the United States this fall, under the auspices of the Ecumenical Scholarship program of the National Council of Churches, for a year's study in twenty-nine theological seminaries and graduate schools of religion across the country.

The group includes a young woman from Burma, two young men from Ceylon, two from India, others from the Philippines, Egypt, Greece, Holland, France and other countries of Europe. The largest single national group is nineteen, including two young women, from Germany.

This group brings to 322 the total number aided by the project since it was begun eight years ago.

"This is one of the most valuable projects in inter-church aid," one denominational executive has said. "Without exception, the students are of high calibre, and the seminaries are enthusiastic over their being in residence."

Dr. Robbins W. Barstow, National Council executive in charge of the scholarship exchange, calls it a program which benefits everyone concerned.

On the one hand, Dr. Barstow pointed out, the year of study and experience in the United States broadens the horizons and contacts of students who return to become the leaders in the Christian churches of their own countries. And the students from abroad, in their turn, contribute to the life and thought of the schools and communities that welcome them. They are in demand as speakers, interpreting the achievements and problems of their home churches, and helping to develop a sense of world-wide community in Christian life and thought. During the summer, before they return to their own countries, they usually attend youth conference or share in some form of American church work.

Typical of how the schools receive them is a quotation from a seminary president's letter: "We feel that our student body has benefitted greatly by the visits of these foreign students. They are very fine young men, and we are pleased with the work they have done as well as their influence here."

Comments from students themselves cover a wide range of impressions of American churches, American life, their own studies and friendships, and their feelings about the world Church.

An Australian theological student called his year of advanced study "a big experience." It was, he wrote, "a help for me to understand your country better now than by means of press and propaganda and radio, and I hope I could lead the American fellows also to some understanding of our problems."

A young woman from Ceylon, studying religious education, commented on American friendliness and sense of humor and the greater independence of American girls, all of which she liked.

A divinity student from Holland found that "the reality of Christian fellowship and ecumenical spirit became most real" to him in his friendship with American, German and Japanese fellowstudents.

A German seminary student wrote that his year at a seminary with other students of a half-dozen denominations brought home to him "the unity of the one Church of the one Lord . . . which is true across all the differences and divisions."

Scholarship grants are awarded by the seminaries and schools the students attend, and their round-trip travel costs are paid by the Ecumenical Scholarship Exchange program. European scholarship students are nominated by their own church bodies and selected by the Scholarship Committee of the World Council of Churches. From other areas, they are chosen by the national Christian councils of their own countries.

* * * * *

An Associate Secretary of Missions Council Elected

The election of Miss Jennie M. Doidge as associate executive secretary of the Missions Council of Congregational Christian Churches has recently been announced by Dr. Henry Smith Leiper, executive secretary and minister of the Missions Council.

Miss Doidge, who has been the executive director of the Council of Interchurch Cooperation in Bridgeport, Connecticut, for the past seven years, returned only last month to the United States from an extensive world tour during which she visited churches and missionary work in all the major accessible countries of Africa, Asia, the Near East, Europe, Australia and New Zealand. In June she attended the International Congregational Council Meeting in St. Andrews, Scotland.

Beginning this month, until January, Miss Doidge will be visiting Congregational Christian Home Mission work in the United States, in preparation for taking over her new administrative duties on January 1, 1954, with headquarters in Boston, Massachusetts.

* * * * *

Prominent Japanese Leaders Visit in the United States

Three prominent Japanese leaders in the fields of education and government are now in the United States on behalf of the International Christian University. They are: Dr. Misoji Nishimoto, Professor of Audio-Visual Education; Dr. Yoshito Sinoto, Professor of Biology and Genetics; and Dr. Junzo Sasamori, a member of the Japanese Diet, and of the Executive Committee of the I. C. U. Board of Trustees.

Dr. Nishimoto is president of the Japanese Council of Corresponding Education and is a well-known expert in the line of audio-visual education in Japan. He is in the United States as an official delegate to the Fourth International Conference on Correspondent Education at Pennsylvania State College, and to study programs which are relative to his field of work at I. C. U.

Dr. Sinoto is in the United States upon the request of several universities to observe and survey the latest developments in the teaching of biology in general education.

Dr. Sasamori, former president of Aoyama Gakuin University, will be in Colorado for a great part of his time while in America. He received his doctorate in political science from Denver University. He will make a nation wide tour of speaking engagements for International Christian University while in the United States.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Graham Wisseman Turns Poet

Each year, in August, the circles of the Women's Auxiliary of the First Church, Greensboro, have their annual meeting—a big affair.

At the meeting this year, Mrs. H. G. Ballinger, the retiring president, was surprised with the gift of a silver tray, appropriately inscribed, which was presented on behalf of the auxiliary by the pastor's wife, Mrs. W. E. Wisseman. She used the following poem in presenting the gift, and was properly "insulted" when some of the women wondered who wrote it. Some thought surely it came from the pen of Mrs. O. H. Paris; but Graham Wisseman, herself in person, was the one who wrote this tribute in verse:

In our church, so says our pastor,
We have women tried and true.
Some can teach, and some can visit—
Each has found a job to do.

We could list them, sing their praises,
Shout the good things which they share.
But tonight we hail our prexy—
She is one beyond compare.

She has won our admiration
By the fine work she has done.
She's worked at being president
As if she thinks it's fun.

We've marvelled at her patience;
Her wit we cherish too.
How can she be so cheerful after
All that she's been through?

The thing I like about her
Is her wisdom—and her tact—
I've never seen her lose her head,
Nor heard her answer back.

When she appoints committees
She has a certain skill.
She seems to pick the right one
For each job she has to fill.

At conference and convention,
And at School of Missions, too,
She's been our representative—
And a mighty fine one, too.

And there's not a single task
Too small for her to spurn—
She even keeps the nursery
When we forget our turn.

Oh! the trials and troubles—
We know she's had her share,
But we need not worry overmuch—
She's a woman, too, of prayer.

When things have got too difficult
She couldn't see her way,
She left what she was doing
And took the time to pray.

So tonight we sing her praises
And a gift we give her, too.
But we cannot tell our love for her—
Our words are just too few.

This is simply a reminder
Of your presidential days.
It brings our love and gratitude,
Our sincere thanks and praise.

This year four members who attended the School of Missions, reported on that meeting—Mrs. W. M. Paris, Mrs. H. G. Ballinger, Mrs. Russell Powell and Mrs. Carl Monroe.

It was reported that nine Life Memberships were given and three Memorials for the late Rev. Robert House.

The film, "The Hidden Heart," was shown, with the devotional given by Mrs. Martin Garren.

* * * * *

Special Projects with Juniors and Young People

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Henderson Congregational Christian Church has completed another year of our work under the able leadership of our president, Mrs. T. A. Park.

In cooperation with the other city churches of all denominations, we have observed the World Day of Prayer, World Community Day, and May Fellowship Day. There is a fine spirit among these groups, and our programs have been outstanding and inspirational.

This year, in our special projects, we have worked with and through the young people in an effort to keep them more interested in the work of the church and to enlist them in more missionary activities. Our gifts to Ellis Island were sent through the junior group. Instead of exchanging gifts at their annual Christmas party, each child brought a gift to be sent to Ellis Island. As a special project, this group also has sent $3.00 monthly to keep one girl in Rachan-yapuram School in India.

Once a month our young people invite the Christian Youth Fellowship from Liberty Vance to meet with them in their regular Sunday night meeting. On this night one of our circles prepares supper at the church for the entire group. The young people are interested in missionary work and make a yearly contribution to the educational fund for Jose Dabuet.

We look forward to another year's work in the service of the Master, and pray for inspiration and guidance as we go forward.

MRS. VICTOR LANGSTON,
Sec'y-Treas.

* * * * *

A President Shows Appreciation

As the year draws to a close, and my term of office expires, I wish to express my admiration and love for the women of the Congregational Christian Temple. Serving them for the past three years as their president has been a delightful and happy experience. They have been most cooperative in any undertaking, following through any suggestion to the point of the second and third mile.

Six active circles comprise the Woman's Council. The youngest, and one of which we are very proud, is the Pilgrim Guild. This circle is made up of business women and young mothers of our congregation. It is the most enthusiastic group, sponsoring the Sunday Morning Nursery, Girl Scout work, teacher and staff work in the Sunday school, serving wherever and whenever needed.

Making dresses for the Cancer Clinic has been a very happy and successful project this past year. This work will go on.

It was our joyous privilege to send fifty dollars to Mr. Bhonsle in India at Christmas time to help relieve the suffering in his area. We also took care of three underprivileged children, and the Pilgrim Guild provided for three.

We anticipate a happy and interesting year under the guidance of Mrs. Frank W. Wilson, who comes into office in October. I could wish her no happier fortune than to be the president of the Woman's Council of the Congregational Christian Temple.

MRS. L. W. VAUGHAN,
President.

Eight news dealers in Walden, New York, decided that kids were getting too much "blood and thunder." They voluntarily pledged not to sell or display any more crime comics. Civic leaders and churchmen commended them publicly for the action they had taken.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. JUNE JOY HOUSE, Editor, Elon College, N. C.

"Levi Gives a Party"

By BESSIE P. SLOAN.

It was a great day in the house of Levi. There was to be a great feast in honor of the teacher, Jesus. The host stood in the doorway ready to receive the first guests. As he stood there waiting, his mind raced back over the happenings of that eventful week.

First was his climb up the hill from the seashore to hear for himself, at first hand, this Jesus, about whom he had for some time been hearing. He had been too late that time; but the next day, sitting at his place of business, he had heard a voice speak his name, and glancing up from his papers and money boxes, he had looked straight into the dark, luminous eyes of Jesus.

In that moment he knew that he had never wanted anything as much as he wanted to follow this man, to be with him, to talk with him, to learn to be like him. But the wonderful thing was that Jesus, understanding the deepest wish of his heart, had asked him to become one of his band of followers. Since that moment Levi had been planning about his business and all the other details that needed to be considered before he began his new life. Really though, his new life had already begun. His heart was singing and he felt like laughing for very joy.

Just then the sound of children's voices immediately in front of the house attracted his attention. From the doorway he could see a crowd of tiny boys and girls dancing and singing together in a mock wedding procession. There was the little bride in her long veil; there was the small boy marching sturdily along with the dignified and possessive air of a bridegroom.

The man laughed happily. It was so good to be alive! Levi had planned his feast somewhat as a farewell to his friends, most of whom were in the same business as he, and none of whom were interested in religious things. He had invited Jesus at the same time so that they might have a chance to know him too. Rich foods and special delicacies had been prepared in his honor. It was time the guests were arriving.

Just then there was the sound of many footsteps. Looking down the street, Levi saw Jesus and his disciples coming from the direction in which the children had gone. With the elaborate courtesy of his race, Levi welcomed his guests. But while a servant was bringing water to bathe their feet, harsh voices were heard in the street. Peering out, Levi saw that two Pharisees had accosted one of the disciples who had not yet come inside. Seeing that Jesus had gone into Levi's house, they demanded: "Why does your Master eat with tax collectors and sinners?"

Levi looked as if someone had struck him. But Jesus, who had turned around in time to catch the question, answered it himself.

"It is not well people, but the sick, who have to have the doctor! Your question answers itself. You who are already so religious don't need anyone to persuade you to be. But I must eat with tax collectors and irreligious people because they are tax collectors and irreligious."

Sometime later as they were eating, Andrew turned to ask Jesus a question: "Master," he began thoughtfully, "when we were following John the Baptizer, we kept all the fasts. The Pharisees, too are always fasting, it seems; but we don't fast?"

"Do a bridegroom's friends fast at the wedding?" asked Jesus.

Levi smiled to himself, remembering the gay little procession that had passed down the street.

"The Kingdom of God is full of joy," continued their leader. "Why should we fast?"

"John's disciples are not happy," continued Andrew, "they're afraid."

"I don't think the Pharisees are happy either," said Peter.

The others laughed, remembering the argument at the door. But Jesus did not laugh. A shadow seemed to have fallen across his face.

Just at that moment they heard voices at the street door, and a servant entered to inform the host that Jesus was wanted. A man at the door said his little girl had just died, and wouldn't Jesus please come? Immediately Jesus got up from his place and apologetically to Levi for having to leave. Some of his disciples went with him. Levi's friends were astonished. To think of his leaving before the dinner was over! Why, it had been prepared in his honor!

Then Levi stood up before his guests, and their conversation suddenly ceased. "Fellows," he began, "I've been trying to tell you what Jesus is like. Now you see for yourselves. It was not rude of him to leave, since he knew I wouldn't be offended. And he would much rather help that unhappy father than to stay here feasting. That's what I call a real friend, and I'm for him."

* * * * *

"They Are Off to School"

By ANNIE L. GAETZ.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

The hectic vacation days have ended, and children are going joyously back to school. How pleased they were when those vacation days arrived! And for two whole months they have wandered at will, exploring the bluffs, keeping tally on the birds' nests, gathering wild flowers and berries, and except when hunger has interfered, have totally disregarded the hands of the clock.

But now, they are glad that the vacation days are over, and they can once more be a part of the school upon the hill and of their own special club. When Bill feels like boasting about the bear he almost saw, or the time when he swam further out in the lake than any of the other boys, in fact, when he wants to talk of any of his summer triumphs, he can be sure of an appreciative audience.

This morning, it is early September, there seems an unusual chattering of birds on my front lawn, and I go to see what it is all about. I find my little feathered friends are making preparations for a journey to the South and they have gathered to talk over their plans.

I watch them and, at the same time, I watch my neighbor, perhaps a bit enviously, as she walks to the gate to start her little brood off to school. It seems such a few short years since I, too, walked to a gate starting off my little ones.

Now, there is an extra flurry among the children. Bill has forgotten his scribbler and must run back; Mary drops her pencil box and there is a mad scramble to gather up the contents. Then, the mother asks the usual question, "Are you sure you all have handkerchiefs?" And she admonishes, "Do take good care

(Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Relax With Max

A New York youngster, who was more accustomed to manmade wonders than the marvels of nature, was treated to a vacation in the country. There he saw his first rainbow. The attitude of the child, as he gazed upon the gorgeous phenomenon, was one of wonder and perplexity.

"Mother," he finally exclaimed, "it's very beautiful, but what does it advertize?"

* * *

After attending the weekly church service, a woman with a reputation for being critical, was talking to her neighbor. She said the seats in her pew were hard, the hymn singing was not very good and the preaching was poor.

At that point, her little girl, who had gone to church with her spoke up, "But, Mama," she said, "what can you expect for a nickel?"

* * *

I know that last week-end there was a rally in the Western North Carolina Conference and an Officers' Retreat in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. As yet, I have been sent exactly nothing about both of these meetings. First of all, it's bad publicity not to print stories of these meetings, and secondly, it is bad religiously. One of the main features of religion is that of sharing. Don't you think you should share your experiences with others?

FOR THE CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

of Amy, and don't let her get run over." Amy is starting to school for the first time.

The mother walks with them to the gate, holding Amy by the hand, very tightly, as if loath to part with her; then, after a bit of urging, she walks to the maple tree. She kisses each one, giving Amy an extra hug, and in spite of the many household tasks awaiting her, she retraces her steps slowly, with many a backward glance. At the gate she watches until the last bright frock has disappeared around the bend. As she dashes away the unbidden tears, I, with millions of other mothers, know just how she feels. It matters not whether it is the first child to start out on the big adventure or whether it is the tenth child to go to school for the first time, it calls for real courage on the part of the mother, for she knows she will never again feel her little one clinging so close.

If you watch the robin when her fledglings are old enough to leave the nest, you will find that she almost pushes them out. She gives them every encouragement to learn to use their wings and fly independently. Some of us, as mothers, find it difficult to display the wisdom of the robin.

Watch the child just home from kindergarten. His urgent desire is to show Mother, to tell Mother—and oh, he has so much to tell her! "Mother" means more to him now than she did before teacher and the class talked together about "home."

When we send our children off to school for the first time, it should be to a kindergarten, but if there are not enough young children in the community to form a class, we still have no cause to feel any misgivings, for education today, when the grades are not overcrowded, is made interesting as well as practical. By the means of music and beautiful pictures, children are taught to find a joy in life; through nature study, they are taught to observe and appreciate the wonders around them; by lessons of respect for law, they are taught to be good citizens. In fact, the education system of today tends to make children feel that they are partners with those in authority. And, too, they are taught friendliness, so they are being prepared to mingle freely and usefully with others in social and business undertakings.

Yes, the children are off to school. They have left behind the world of makebelieve and have entered the larger realm of reality. Day by day, we shall see their sense of values change. Let us not forget that we, quite as much as the school, will be responsible for how they change. These children are still our boys and girls. We should encourage them in every desirable thought and effort and constantly inspire them with faith, patience, and perseverance.

"A LETTER TO THE EDITOR"

(Continued from page 7.)

the Cornell University Press, Ithica, New York. I recommend it highly to anyone interested in the background of the Oxnam case: it is criticism as we have defined it. By Robert K. Carr, professor of law and political science at Dartmouth College, it is one of a series of studies in civil liberties, made possible by a grant from the Rockefeller Foundation. It seems that to some members of Congress, such a grant is now a sign of subversive activity.)

On the other hand, in some cases a documented pattern of association and activities leaves us with the only sensible conclusion: this person must have been a Communist, or, to quote Whittaker Chambers, "a fellow-traveler so far within the fold that his not being a Communist would be a mistake on both sides." In these cases, the associations were many and various, over a long period of time and usually lasting after the Hitler-Stalin pact; and the activities were the same. A man who joins many of these organizations and holds key positions in them, who writes articles and makes speeches defending the Soviet Union through thick and thin, is apt to be quite a different character from the man whose name appears on a few letterheads now and then. It is primarily by actions, not merely by associations, that we can be guided.

The suspicious mind can never understand this. It does not ask "did this clergyman preach sermons defending Communism? Did his congregation become Communist, or did it complain that he was neglecting the Gospel and the cure of souls?" It asks "did he join one of these organizations? Did he read Karl Marx?" It ignores pertinent facts to concentrate on its morbid imaginings. For example, there seem to be about a half a dozen clergymen who were noisy fellow-travelers or possibly members of the Party, and their influence became negligible years ago. There are many, many more who have criticized capitalism on occasion, and who have criticized the professional Anti-Communists. But on these facts, and on most inconclusive additional "evidence," J. B. Matthews has tried to prove that Protestant clergymen as a group are pawns of Moscow. In the early thirties, we remember, he tried to prove them pawns of Wall Street.)

(Editorial Note.—We do not feel (Continued on page 13.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Counsel for Christians"

LESSON XII—SEPTEMBER 20, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Let our people learn to apply themselves to good deeds; so as to help causes of urgent need, and not to be unfruitful." -Titus 3:14. (R.S.V.)

LESSON: Titus 2:7-8; 3:1-11.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 24:1-6.

Titus was pastor of a church on the Island of Crete. It was not a very desirable parish. The Cretans were ignorant, perverse, contentious, untruthful, even brutal and gluttonous. But Paul writes to Titus, a young minister, that it was for this very cause that he left him in Crete. Those people needed the gospel of Christ and the grace of Christ. And in his letter to this young minister, Paul gives him some suggestions as to how he can help the Cretans, and as to what he should say to them.

The Power of a Good Example.

It was important that Titus preach sound doctrine, that his words should be serious, that his attitude should be reverent. But there was something even more important than all this. He was to give a good example. "In all things showing thyself an example of good works." There is no substitute for that in the life of a minister or a Sunday school teacher. No amount of learning or skill or ability is a substitute for Christian character. The preacher's life, and the teacher's life, is the life of his preaching and his teaching. Let us be frank about the matter. The world does make heavy, it sometimes seems like unfair, demands on the preacher and the teacher. And it is a fact that preachers and Sunday school teachers just cannot do some things that other folks do. That is, if they want their lives to count for the most, and if they want their preaching to count for the most. We teach not simply, or so much, by what we say, as by what we do and what we are. As Emerson once put it, "What you are makes so much noise that I cannot hear what you say."

But lest it seem that Paul's words apply only to ministers and teachers, it should be added that they apply to Christians in general. Like ministers and Sunday school teachers, Christians are "in all things to show themselves examples of good works." It is no valid excuse, but it is a quite general excuse that many folks give as a reason why they are not members of the church—the way in which so many church members live. Indeed, there are many folks not in the church who are as good as some folks in the church. One of the most effective pieces of "church work" that any man or woman can do, is to live a simple, sincere, serene Christian life.

There is no argument against that. "He that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of us." Those Cretans might not like what Titus said. They might disagree with him on theology. They might differ with him on some church matters. But there was nothing that they could say against a good life. There just isn't any argument against a good life, against one who has the spirit of Christ in his heart, and who shows the spirit of Christ in his daily life.

Obedience to Government.

Paul never advised men to obey authority when that authority was wrong; in that case men were to obey God rather than men. But Paul knew that obedience and respect for good government lies at the basis of the hope for peace and the good life of any community or state. Hence, he advises these Cretans—or he tells Titus to advise them—to obey the authorities, and "to be ready for every good work." All too many people think they are good citizens if they criticize the City Council, or the leaders of government. And all too many good men and women refuse to run for office, and allow communities and states and the nation to be run by selfish, unscrupulous men and women. Sometimes it is the duty of Christians to run for office. Politics need more people of character. Positions of leadership in government call for the nation's best people.

God's Gentlemen.

"Not to be contentious, to be gentle, showing all meekness toward all men." There are a lot of people who are just mean and cantankerous and contentious, downright "onery." They are a pain in the neck. One finds them in the home, in school, in the shop, in the church. They make great demands on the patience and friendliness of those who come in contact with them. They constitute a challenge to our Christian character. We are to be gentle and meek toward them. To be sure these words of Paul also apply to them. They are to give up their meanness and their spirit of contention and to be gentle and meek themselves. The spirit of Christ would make them gentle and kind and considerate, if they would but let him have his way with them.

Looking at Ourselves.

Paul gives Titus a simple, but quite startling reason for treating other men with consideration and concern. He reminds the young man that except for the grace of God, he would be like those fellows. Indeed, "we were once also foolish, disobedient, deceived, serving divers lusts and pleasures, living in malice and envy, hateful, hating one another," says he. But when the kindness of God our Saviour, and his love toward man appeared, things became different. Here is evidence from that far off day that Christ did make a difference in men's lives. By his mercy, he saved them, "through the washing of regeneration and the renewing of the Holy Spirit, which he poured out upon them richly, through Jesus Christ." Christ created new hearts within them, and renewed a right spirit within them. He did it then, and he can do it now.

And all this is the work of grace. A man cannot get salvation by works done in righteousness. It is the free gift of God, an act of grace. Men are saved by grace, being justified by faith in Jesus Christ. And through him they are made heirs according to the hope of eternal life.

It helps to remember this when we deal with others. If we have any superiority of goodness or character, it is no cause for boasting. It is a grounds for gratitude and humility. It finds expression in the classic remark of the man who said, "There, but for the grace of God, goes John Newton."

Maintaining Good Works.

"That they who have believed God may be careful to maintain good works." We are not saved by good that we can print the above paragraph without observing that it not only seems, but has been conclusively proven that the Communists have in instances infiltrated the ranks of the clergy, and that, though we think Mr. Matthews greatly overestimated the number of Protestant clergymen that he claimed sympathetic to Communism, even that large number would by no means make Protestant clergymen "as a group" the pawns of Moscow. This must be said in defense of the Protestant minister.)
(Continued on page 15.)

"A LETTER TO THE EDITOR"

(Continued from page 11.)

There is a definite area in which legal measures can be applied to this problem of association. Although the common law and our whole system of government stress the principle of individual responsibility, they also make due allowance for the concept of collective responsibility which underlies the vague doctrine of "guilt-by-association. The conspiracy laws are the clearest example of this, and for our purposes the most relevant.

A conspiracy is legally defined as an agreement by two or more persons to commit an act against civil or criminal law. If the existence of a conspiracy be established in court, the conspirators may be punished even if the act have not been carried out; and if the act be carried out, all the conspirators are considered equally guilty of it. Because conspiracies are generally as secret as possible, and evidence therefore very difficult to obtain, laws defining them are much more flexible than usual and provide the court more leeway. Therefore these laws are capable of abuse and must be used with great care. It is extremely dangerous to apply them to groups seeking social changes by legitimate means on behalf of citizens who freely and openly support these changes—to such groups as corporations and labor unions.

But in these laws the government has a safe weapon against Communism, which as a Party is in fact a world-wide conspiracy. Lenin's own writings state that absolute agreement and discipline must prevail in the Party, and that any and all means, including revolutionary violence, are necessary and justified. Under the tzardom, the Party was a criminal conspiracy because it could hardly be anything else, and it did not change when it came to power, with one exception: it ceased to be secret. It announced its true nature, because no one would believe that people who intended to use criminal means would advertise the fact. (This was Hitler's technique also.) Even now, some people refuse to accept this; but I think it may be acknowledged as fact. Moreover, the Party seeks not merely social changes, but the abolition of democracy as we know it, and it is not primarily concerned with winning free and open support. It acts in the interests of Moscow, not of the working class anywhere. It says these interests are identical, which is not so.

Therefore under the conspiracy laws, the courts may convict Communists without waiting for them to commit espionage or treason, without infringing the right of freedom of speech (the illegality being not what they saw but what they are agreed to do), and without raising the problem of ultimate ends—complicated and debatable questions of sociology, political science, and economics. This leaves every one the right to criticize society and the government as much as he pleases. It leaves those who wish to alter things by legal means perfectly free to do so if they can. It does not resort to laws against sedition and subversion, which by construction may become real threats to criticism and to legitimate change. It rests upon the distinction clear in the title of Sydney Hook's recent book, Heresy Yes, Conspiracy No.

And this distinction is all-important. Without it, freedom of thought (and therefore of religion) may be lost. There is a legal tradition: "The thought of man is not triable, for the devil himself knoweth not the mind of man." Ideas are not for courts to settle. They are not for Congressional committees to settle. In fact, I doubt if they can be settled until they are quite dead. But they can be confused out of all recognition; and if they are, their consequences may be extremely unfortunate. This is especially true of such ideas as loyalty, freedom, democracy. And the surest way to make confusion universal is by irresponsible smear and suspicion.

When such confusion prevails, suspicion has come into its own. No one can trust any one else. Society breaks down; and the individual, alone, without free associations, is helpless before the state. The state as an entity is suspicious of all its citizens, and the powerful men of the state are all suspicious of each other. Loyalty is impossible in this atmosphere. The result is chaos, channeled by force into widening devastation: it is the end of civilization as we know it. It is precisely the condition prevailing in the Soviet Union. I do not think our domestic Soviet sympathizers can bring this condition upon us; but I am afraid that there is an outside chance that we may bring it upon ourselves.

To preserve ourselves, and our most cherished freedoms, we must understand that criticism sustains the health of our society, and that smear destroys it. Criticism reveals the truth; smear ignores it. It is a basic principle of the free society that no one is above criticism. No one—least of all such responsible persons as clergymen and congressmen! It is the solemn duty of the citizen to study and to offer such criticism. It is the special duty of the Christian to do so in the light of the stringent standards of the Bible. If he shirk this duty in the face of smear attacks upon the clergy and the press, he should not be surprised if his country is defeated when it tries to fight fanaticism with ignorance. And if he assume this duty, he should not be surprised if the smearmongers find him an object of suspicion—for, like the Communists, they fear and hate what they cannot control. "To be above suspicion" in public life today is almost to be beneath attention.

In our church, we do not need to resort to so empty a slogan. We already have two principles which have served us through the years—better, perhaps, than we have served them. They can serve us now—as guides for our clergymen and our laymen. The first is this: "The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church." This means that the clergyman who serves any other cause above that of Christ has forfeited his standing. It means that if he waver in serving the cause of Christ, for fear of becoming suspect or for any other reason, he is unworthy of the name of Christian. The second is this: "The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and privilege that should be accorded to, and exercised by all." This means that smear must have no place among us. It means that the narrow and dangerous "orthodoxies" of the smear-mongers must be repudiated with all the vigor we command. I firmly believe that only by these principles can we maintain our freedom.

MARY ANN HARRELL.

Durham, N. C.

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Thanks to many friends and fifteen churches for the funds sent in this week, amounting to $541.74. That is just about half what our expenses for the week are Now with school opening this week, we are being pressed for new shoes, new clothes. The work of caring for little homeless children is a real joy; but I do not know how long I can stand having bills pile up here away beyond our income. We are having to buy booster feed for our dairy and try to hold it together on an economical basis. We are also having to buy food that we would ordinarily have raised here on the farm and in the gardens. We are feeling the results of the drought amongst our friends, Sunday schools and churches. I know you will realize these things and govern yourselves accordingly. It is that faith that keeps me going, that and the faces of these fine boys and girls.

Since my last letter, I have received nine new children: Kay Rich and her brothers and sisters—Johnnie, Ann, Velma, Floyd and Jerry; and three Coggins girls—Frances, Joyce and Peggy. Two sets of children were turned down during the past week, and one set of four is being considered. These four are from a family of seven children—the mother died recently of heart failure, and the children need more help than the father can give them. Our Board of Trustees feels that since we have to pay the overhead expenses, we should take every needy child we can, up to our limited capacity. Deciding which are the most needy is a real problem for the committee, especially when we have so many applications. This takes time on the part of the superintendent, making investigations, seeing the children wherever they are, and coming up with the facts.

While I write these lines (September 3), we are looking forward to one of the biggest "Home Coming" Sundays we have ever had. To date, we have 156 reservations, and we will have more. Some will come, we hope, who have not sent in reservations. All will be welcomed. It is fun to have them back here, and they all seem to enjoy it so much.

When I was in college I used to tell about two girls who were being reared at the orphanage, who had the same father and the same mother, yet were "Knott" sisters. Yesterday I visited in the home of one of those sisters. She has five married daughters and eleven grandchildren. She has two sons—one of whom is in the service of his country, stationed in England. The other son is a high school boy and lives at home.

As I write these lines, I am praying that God may give us funds with which to meet our increasing expenses. I am praying that we may have friends who can spare something extra now when the orphanage is sort of up against it.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER 3, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

Woman's Miss. Society, Auburn Christian Church, Clothing.
Mrs. Burton Daniels, Beaufort, N. C., Clothing.
Mrs. E. W. Vickers, Elon College, N. C., Clothing.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $ 9,811.65
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Mt. Auburn S. S. $ 9.75
Pleasant Hill 9.67
Wake Chapel 42.21
61.63
Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Spring, Special . $ 50.00
Rosemont, Special 25.00
Portsmouth, First S. S. . 13.33
88.33
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Elk Spur $ 4.38
Greensboro, First 36.82
Mebane 6.00
Reidsville S. S. 71.00
Union (Va.) S. S. 5.00
123.20
Western N. C. Conference:

Flint Hill (M) $ 10.40
Pleasant Cross S. S. 8.87
Pleasant Grove 10.00
29.27
Virginia Valley Conference:
Mt. Olivet (R) S. S. $ 24.00
24.00
Total $ 326.43
Grand total $10,138.08

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $12,667.74
Mr. & Mrs. Wm. F. Lawrence, Portsmouth, Va., in memory of Mrs. Mary E. Knoyles $ 3.00
Mr. & Mrs. E. Willard Duke, Walters, Va., in memory of Richard Joyner 2.00
H. V. Harman, High View, W. Va. 1.00
Young People's Class, First Christian Church, Reidsville, N. C. 15.00
Miss I. West, Smithfield, Va. 3.00
Collection from Southern Convention Women ... 12.00
Chester H. Roth, Inc. (interest) 30.00
Mrs. J. L. Foster and Family, Elon College, N. C., in memory of Rev. James L. Foster 10.00
New Hope Christian S. S., Roanoke, Alabama ... 4.15
Mrs. Margaret Morey, Fredericktown, Pa. ... 2.00
H. O. Byrd, Suffolk, Va. . 10.00
Woman's Miss. Society, Auburn Christian Ch. . 5.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. D. Freeze, Greensboro, N. C., in memory of Mrs. J. M. Darden 10.00
Special Gifts 108.16
215.31
Grand total $12,883.05
Total for the week $ 541.74
Total for the year $23,021.13

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

.....
(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

.....
(Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through Sept. 3, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Bethel—Vacant	377.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt ..	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardcastle ..	$ 372.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo ..	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell ..	1,321.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr. ..	1,913.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar ..	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith ..	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein ..	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register ..	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ...	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder ..	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr. ..	82.50

Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisseman	3,292.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman ..	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ...	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student) ..	75.00

†Paid.
What church will be next to send in its Declaration?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

works; but we are saved for good works. Herein is our Father glorified that we bear much fruit. Would you be like the Master? Here is a simple way to be like him—maintaining good works. For he went about doing good!

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

Dr. and Mrs. Millard Stevens spent their vacation at lake Winnisquam, in New Hampshire. During his vacation he supplied three pulpits: Salem and Newburyport, Massachusetts, and Manchester, Connecticut.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

- It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)
- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
 - [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
 - [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
 - [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

The Sweet Savor of Goodness

By RICHARD K. MORTON

Our Hebrew-Christian tradition produces many blessings properly shared by Jew and Gentile alike. I am always pleased when it is possible to work out, with the local Jewish community, some fitting interfaith community program at Easter when the Jews mark the Passover, and at Christmas when the Jews observe Hanukkah.

At this particular season, the Jewish world is observing its High Holy Days, along with the beginning of a New Year.

One part of the celebration of these days involves the eating of something sweet. One of the most popular delicacies for this season is the dromedary date. This fruit is usually a delight to most of us.

I like this sort of an observance. It can be made to suggest much, for us as well as for the Jewish world.

We of the Congregational Christian tradition and heritage should remember that we find readily at hand much that is sweet to the taste. "O taste and see that the Lord is good." The things of God are of a sweet savor. How much we lose by spending so much time with that which is sour and unpleasant, bitter and critical. Sometimes I think that one of the very greatest dangers in our free churches is that of the easy, irresponsible, unnecessary criticism. Many fine people I know have at times become disgusted with church work because of the constant criticism they have encountered and the seeming inability to please some people.

Some religious groups, large or small, seem at times to be little more than constantly stirred centers of criticism and disagreement.

Let's start out again now, this fall, by tasting and offering to others something that is sweet. Of course, there are times for criticism, but we do not need to overstress them.

Our physicians, psychiatrists, social workers, and others, are showing us, more clearly than ever, what can be done by cheerful, loving, positive thinking. If we think the pure and the good, and cleanse the mind and spirit of the bitter, unloving, prejudiced and evil, we work a therapy which is vital and miracle-filled. It is nothing new that physical illness and many other distresses come from the fact that we so much fill our lives with the unworthy, selfish and hateful. We cannot be physically or spiritually healthy if we do this.

Goodness is wisdom. Goodness is power and happiness. But goodness is also health. It is, that is, a necessity for that health which preserves both body and mind.

In these days we have become too much a selfish, material generation. Our surveys show that we are subordinating love and responsibility and ethical values, and seeking our happiness and power through money and pleasure and power and the things of earth. We are steeped in things sensuous and self-indulgent, and we labor day by day to get relaxed and amused—and we still do not find a satisfactory adjustment. And this because we have not exalted goodness. We are developing our bodies and increasing the life-span. We have more money and more possessions. We have enlarged our world, but we have not purified our hearts and raised the moral level of our lives.

We talk of lifting projectiles to distant planets, but cannot lift our hearts above the earth. We grasp more and more of the abundance, the power, the richness of the earth; yet lose more and more of the moral goodness which alone can give all this meaning to us and guarantee their preservation from disaster.

It will be a tragic turn in the evolution of man, if he can soon live to be 100 and have nothing worth living for; if he can master the physical forces of nature, but corrupts his own heart; if he can investigate the deep secrets of knowledge, but cannot find a meaning that comforts his soul; if he can find a force that works in the atom, but cannot find a Person who created the atom.

What a satanic triumph it would be if man should master the physical world and at the same time be a slave in the spiritual world!

Let's learn, let's be free, let's work, let's adventure, let's branch out to live in a bigger world. But the core of all this lies in moral goodness and spiritual awareness and depth.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, SEPTEMBER 17, 1953

NUMBER 37

"Why I Believe in the Church"

By HARRY EMERSON FOSDICK

FOR ONE find my faith in the Church of Christ gaining new dimensions. For one thing, in these evil times, it becomes apparent that a merely individualistic religion is not enough.

"Lord Jesus, I love thee, I know thou art mine." That is basic for a Christian, but it is not enough. Personal religion thrives best in a fellowship; it needs a community to kindle, sustain and express it. So the apostle Paul, the great exponent of inner spiritual life, was also the great builder of the church.

Consider, in the second place, that it takes the church to do some practical things that need to be done, for some things are done in the fellowship of a church that it takes a church to do. When I think of the families rescued in times of need; of the children introduced to the heritage of Christianity in the only way a child can really be introduced to it—in a group; when I think of the practical day-by-day service that can run out from an organized Christian fellowship into the community, and the support of good causes that reach the ends of the earth, I see that a man's influence, when it is invested in a church, is endlessly multiplied. It takes a fellowship to do the job.

Come further, in the third place, to see that in these evil times we need every international agency there is to help hold the world together, and the church is one of them.

Sometimes on the Maine coast the stormy wind blows in from the open sea at the same time that the tide flows out from the great tidal rivers that indent the shore. Then let the boatmen look to themselves. There is tumult in the waters when those contending forces meet.

So, today, from one side comes the countless agencies that produce proximity in our world. However, while countless forces crowd us together, many tear us apart: economic forces, breaking us up into angry and competing groups; racial antipathies, making us hate one another; national hostilities, making us fight one another; and, through all these, the moral factors—envy, covetousness, prejudice, and all uncharitableness—that prevent community. So I repeat, that in these evil times we need every international agency there is to help hold the world together, and the church is one of them.

Imperfect, yes, but the church, an international fellowship, is one of the few we have to believe in when it comes to an interracial and international community. And we critically need it now.

There is something eternal for which the church stands, against which, "the gates of hell shall not prevail." And I, for one, want to be a living part of that historic Christian community—the church universal—not merely a parasite living on its benefits. I want to be a helper in its continuance, and the place to take hold is the church to which each of us belongs.—Advance.

News Flashes

During the month of August, Rev. and Mrs. Melvin Dollar took their vacation by touring the West. While they were away, the Kenneth Registers occupied the pulpit and parsonage. The Rosemont people were very much impressed with this fine couple.

There is on this page, this week, a news item of the Revival Services held at Liberty, Vance, in July of this year. It was only received in Richmond this week. Material of this kind should be address to THE CHRISTIAN SUN, 1536 E. Broad St., Richmond 19, Virginia.

We have received the announcement of the arrival in the home of Rev. James W. Madren of Wakefield, Virginia, on August 26, 1953, of Silas Arthur Madren. He weighed 8 lbs., 7½ ounces, when he came, and is gaining weight rapidly. His name honors his grandfather, Rev. Silas E. Madren of Albemarle, N. C., and Mr. Arthur C. Moore of Suffolk, Va. We predict that he will be called "Sam."

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill writes, "The theme for Christian Education Week, September 27-October 4, is 'For All Children Faith in God.' A new film, For Every Child, will be on radio and television during that week in many different places. The film will be in our Southern Convention Office for distribution after that week. Rally Day programs and materials have been sent to all ministers from Pilgrim Press.

A new book by American Board Missionary, Alice Margaret Huggins, who has already written two books on China, will be off the press October 19. The title is Day of the False Dragon. It was written among the Communists about the sort of things young people out there have been up against. Miss Huggins was one of three American Board Missionaries held by the Communists for over a year and a half after she desired to leave. Her other books are The Red Chair Waits and Fragrant Jade. The publisher of Day of the False Dragon is the Westminster Press, and the price is $2.50. Miss Huggins says that any bookseller assured of a sale will order one for you to be delivered on October 19.

Liberty, Vance Holds Successful Revival Services

On Sunday evening, July 5, the annual revival services began at Liberty, Vance, Congregational Christian Church, with Rev. Kenneth Register doing the preaching.

Mr. Register based his entire week's thoughts on topics based on faith, his subject on Sunday night being "Tap Root for Faith. Other subjects included, "Committed, But to What," "Faith, a Quality of Christian Living," and "Needed, a Christian Experience."

Every service was most inspiring, and the thoughts were of the type so much needed today.

Mr. Register gave some causes he thought responsible for losing faith, but he said: "Keep on holding the beacon light which guides others in the right. Take your opportunities and make good of them. There are many in despair. If Christians can not help them, or if the church cannot, what kind of faith have we?"

He said that a man's life will be committed to something. Will it be moral evils or a faithfulness to a commitment where men pledge themselves to the truth, so that others rely upon their word as their bond.

He called upon his hearers to specialize in Christian faith, to recognize the necessity of committing their lives to something worth while. He said that unless the people of today wake up, they will probably be blown up. The secret of strength lies in giving our lives to God and submitting to his ways. If man does not keep moral pace with this atomic age, he is in a dangerous position. Unless we give our lives to Christ, we are of little value in life. The supreme need of today is faith in God.

Mr. Register's messages were of the highest type, and were enjoyed by all. It was a week of Christian fellowship, and his visit to Liberty, Vance, will long be remembered.

MRS. FLETCHER FULLER,
Reporter.

A Correction

In the pamphlet that was distributed among the churches just a few months ago regarding the Building Loan Society, there was an incorrect advertisement, a picture of the Rosemont Church, along with a statement saying that we had received help from the society. It must have been placed there by mistake, as Rosemont has never received any help from the Building Loan Society, nor has it ever asked for any help. We would not want other churches to think that Rosemont had received help when other churches need it more.

We feel that the Building Loan Society is a wonderful opportunity for our churches, and we hope that the Southern Convention will support it, as there are so many churches who are deserving and can only exist or expand with this aid.

MELVIN DOLLAR,
Pastor.

Southern Convention Dates to Remember

- | | |
|----------|---|
| October | 1—Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference
Congregational Christian Church, Franklin, Virginia

6—North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference
First Church, Greensboro, N. C.

8—Virginia Valley Woman's Missionary Conference
Place to be announced

14-15—Virginia Valley Annual Conference Session
Bethlehem Church

20-21—Eastern North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Shallow Well Church

28-29—Eastern Virginia Annual Conference Session
Rosemont Church, South Norfolk, Va. |
| November | 3-4—Western North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Pleasant Hill Church

10-11—North Carolina & Virginia Annual Conference Session
Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, N. C. |
| December | 8—Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association
Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va. |

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

“Churchman’s Week”

This year, prior to the observance of Laymen’s Day, the men of our churches will be observing “Churchman’s Week.” Beginning on Sunday, October 11, with “Men and Missions Day,” the entire week will emphasize the theme, “Christ Calls Men.” Sunday, October 11 has been set aside as a day for alerting men for world missions, with the hope that men may be made to recognize the vital relationship of the world mission of the church to the vital needs of today. It is also hoped that it will be possible to enlist more in support of the missionary program of our churches and to guarantee new resources and new vitality so that the ambassadors of the church at home and abroad may seize upon great opportunities for Christian advance. It would be fine if our men can hear a missionary speaker on this occasion. Where this is not possible, a short statement during the morning worship service by a layman in the church or a special vesper service at which a missionary film may be shown would be especially helpful.

One feature of the week which should be especially helpful is the mid-week observance which should dramatize churchman’s unity of action in the community. For this occasion, it is to be hoped that the men of our denomination will plan union programs with the men of other denominations represented in the community. There are many fine ideas for this type of program. One which would be particularly helpful is the suggestion of a community-wide church supper. People could be invited to come, bringing baskets of food and then serve it in traditional “pot luck” fashion. These programs will emphasize again the fact that we are all united in a common task. It will help to relate our work in the various denominations and be valuable because of the fellowship which will be shared. The week’s program will be concluded with Laymen’s Sunday, October 18. We expect to give ideas and suggestions in this column concerning Laymen’s Day in the next issue.

Men at Bethlehem Consider Organization

Last Sunday evening, your column editor had the privilege of meeting with the men of Bethlehem Church at Altamahaw, North Carolina, for a dinner and then discussion concerning the possibility of the organizing of a local Men’s Fellowship. The men who were present expressed an interest in the organization and asked questions about its purposes and the work which we are attempting to do. They agreed at that time to attempt a Father and Son banquet in early October, at which time further progress will be made toward organizing a fellowship.

It is indeed encouraging to talk with a group of men who plan such programs, and it is only to be hoped that more churches will recognize the need and follow in the footsteps of the men at Bethlehem.

We never seem to know what anything means until we have lost it. The full significance of these words, property, ease, health—the wealth of meaning that lies in epithets, parent, child, friend, we never know until they are taken away; till in place of the bright, visible being, comes the awful and desolate shadow where nothing is—where we stretch out our hands in vain, and strain our eyes upon dark and dismal vacuity.

—O. Dewey.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

- 1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- 2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- 3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- 4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
- 5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women’s Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People’s Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardestal.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year	$3.00
Two Years	5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195...

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Salvage Work for Our Churches

By RICHARD K. MORTON

Salvage enterprises form an important phase of marine affairs. Much has been written about the regulations, written and unwritten, governing the rights and obligations of salvage vessels and operations. If a vessel is wrecked, who may claim recovered cargo? What compensation is due a vessel rescuing another from shipwreck? These are samples of the issues involved.

Receipt recently of a pamphlet from an insurance organization, set me to thinking about what salvage operations our churches may engage in. Sometimes we must salvage entire church buildings or fellowships. For the most part, however, it is a question of whether or not to salvage some individual.

When I was growing up in New England, it was more or less accepted as policy that those who found themselves in the gutter would be rescued, if at all, by the Salvation Army. There were certain patterns of Sunday worship and church conduct which did not include dealing with criminals, and the impoverished, and the tramp. It just was not done. Even the working man—if he could not conform to certain policies and behavior, and if he could not dress in a suitably formal style—was not very welcome. The church I was familiar with, in my youth, did not engage in salvage work.

Our thoughts and procedures are changing, however. Perhaps that is partly due to the fact that quite a wide assortment of people is getting wrecked these days, and is in need of salvage. And it may likewise be due to the probability that we understand better today the gospel of Jesus Christ and the mission of the church. If we cannot salvage and save, we cannot really minister, and we do not understand the function of faith today.

The world pounds harshly upon many a life, and there are many shipwrecks along the way. So there is something insolent and impious about church fellowships continuing serenely on their way; singing, working, following their own programs, yet ignoring situations like this.

There are many reasons for human shipwrecks. When one of these is sighted, who should respond? Should it be simply a matter for the Salvation Army? Would we ourselves approach a task of salvage with distaste, unwilling to soil ourselves with such unpleasant work? Then again, if we persuaded ourselves that Christian action called for salvage work at times, have we taken any trouble to perfect ourselves in the art of salvage? We would need to be reminded that salvage is a far broader proposition than trying to help some poor sinner who has no money or standing or reputation, who lacks a job, and who perhaps has become entangled with the law, or who does not live by a very high standard.

Salvage, indeed, may enter in when people have wrecked their lives by their very success and the very richness of their personal endowment. It may enter in when otherwise competent people find their marriage wrecked, or their business, or their health. It may enter in when life has had too much suffering or sorrow, or when there has been great fear or disappointment. It may enter in when some temptation or habit has had its way.

Salvaging is a profitable business in maritime commerce. It is now regulated by many codes and laws. A vessel is towed in, or raised from the bottom. If cargo is recovered, then so much less must be paid by the insurance company involved.

According to the pamphlet sent me, the contract form in use today says: "No cure—no pay." In other words, salvagers get no pay unless they save something. Nowadays, too, salvaging companies have all sorts of equipment, and very highly trained personnel. They have all this deployed in places where it may most likely be needed and may be called upon. They learn how to recognize distress signs, how to deal with water depths and with very large vessels and those found in difficult situations. They learn what cargoes are most worthy of salvage.

Can the church, and the churchman, in a difficult and different field, do less?

Let us claim no reward for Christian service until and unless we can save someone or something. Let us learn how to salvage the life that is so easily broken today. Let us develop the equipment and the personnel to do real salvage work. Let us make this available, and keep it working.

We are not thinking of trying to save simply the tramps and the gutter dwellers of the world. We are thinking of all those types of lives that will be in weakness, evil and despair, unless church people do salvage work. There will be people wrecked by their nerves, their relationships, their habits, their work, their weaknesses, unless we do the required salvage work. And in doing this, we may find that we have produced some of the very finest treasures and sources of strength for the Christian Church of our day!

A Recipe for . . .

*"Making Life Whole"*By MRS. W. W. SLOAN, Elon College, N. C.

Is your religion an "ought to" religion? Some friends were taunting a young woman evangelist with being tied down by her religion: "Who wants to follow a Master who won't let you have any fun, but makes you go to church all the time?" they asked.

"Jesus doesn't make me do anything," was her answer. "I like to go to church; he doesn't make me go. Jesus lets me run loose, and I run to church three times a day." Hers was a "want to" religion.

The religion of Jesus was not an "ought to" but a "want to" religion. When he said, "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind," and "your neighbor as yourself," he was not issuing a decree to be obeyed. He was advertizing a recipe for happiness, one which he had found to be successful in his own life.

The cry of man's soul for happiness, fulfillment, is nothing new. It is expressed in two very ancient poems found in our Bible. In the eighty-fourth Psalm we find these words: "My heart and my flesh cry out for the living God.

In the forty-second Psalm we read: "As a hart longs for flowing streams, so longs my soul for thee, O God. "My soul thirsts for God, for the living God."

The same deep hunger and thirst for God is expressed by Augustine, one of the early saints of the church, in a familiar prayer which probably grew out of his youthful years of not too saintly living: "O Lord, thou hast made us for thyself, and our hearts are restless till they find rest in thee."

This universal yearning of man for something to satisfy his deepest need has not changed with the centuries. A disillusioned poet of our own time exclaims at last, after listing the joys he has "tasted" in vain: "I shall lie down lean with my thirst and my hunger!"

Yes, God has made us for himself, and our hearts are restless till they find rest in him. But, also, he has made us for each other, and we never shall find complete fulfillment until we find it in one another. The "abundant life" Jesus talked about is not for us as long as we hold God at arm's length. Neither can wholeness or "salvation" be ours while we keep our brother at arm's length.

Yes, Jesus was more successful than anyone else ever has been in the search for happiness, and his Sermon on the Mount gives us detailed directions of the recipe he followed. The Beatitudes are simply a statement that happy is the man who does this and this and this. It is as easy as that, and as dependable. It is as scientific as making bombs, or bread. It is like a Betty Crocker recipe; anyone can make it by following the directions.

Also, as in some recipes, too close and too frequent inspection is undesirable, like taking off the cover to see if the dumplings are done. In raising a cake, or a crop, for example, opening the oven door to see if the cake is rising, or digging up the beans to see if they have sprouted. Probably that is what Jesus meant when he advised his followers in their giving not to let their left hand know what their right hand was doing. Certainly he meant that when he said, "Whosoever would save his life will lose it." Happiness cannot be had by seeking it or saving it for ourselves.

But, "whoever loses his life for my sake and the gospel's sake will save it." The "gospel"? Jesus defined it as: good news for the poor, release to the captives, recovering of sight to the blind, liberty for those who are oppressed. Naturally, anyone who loses himself in such efforts as these is going to find life, abundant, brimful, overflowing.

Because they could see that Jesus had found happiness, lonely people came seeking him. Jesus also sought out lonely people, people who were dissatisfied with life. Take the woman of Samaria, with whom Jesus talked at Jacob's Well. Evidently she had followed the second part of the recipe; she was very much interested in people, especially men. Still she was lonely. Why? Her heart was unsatisfied because she hadn't found God. Jesus answered her questions and told her where and how to find God.

On the other hand, the rich young ruler had worshipped and served God from his youth up. Yet he was unsatisfied—because he was not interested in people; he was interested in things—money, possessions.

Jesus made out an individual prescription to fit each case. The woman followed hers, and, as far as we can tell from the story, she found wholeness of life, salvation. But the young ruler went away, sorrowful. He did not trust the prescription, would not try the recipe. And yet Jesus was giving him the only advice that could possibly bring him happiness.

Probably Henry Ford knew more about Ford cars than anyone else did, and naturally Edison knew more about the electric light, because the man who invents a machine knows what makes it tick. He knows how it runs. If in our ignorance, we try to make it run our way, we are going to be badly disappointed or injured. God, who invented this mechanism we call life, knows how it runs. He who created man a living soul surely knows our thirst and our hunger.

Patiently, in our groping after life, full, complete, running over; in our reaching out for happiness; God has guided our search until at last in Jesus we find the fool-proof recipe: "You shall love the Lord your God with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind"; and "your neighbor as yourself."

Yes, God has made us for himself, and our souls are restless till they find rest in him. And just as truly, he has made us for each other, and we can find complete fulfillment, complete satisfaction, only as we find it in all our neighbors, in all our fellowmen. We are lonely until we find each other. As Paul wrote in the twelfth chapter of his letter to the Romans: "We, though many, are one body . . . and individually members one of another . . . having gifts that differ according to the grace given to us."

Every single person we know makes our life more meaningful; enriches it, rounds it out. If we know only one kind of people: only the good or the bad, only the poor or the rich, only farmers or city-dwellers, only college people or eighth graders; only Americans, only white, only English-speaking, only Christian, then our life is one-sided, and we are as far off in our idea of the truth as were the proverbial blind men about the elephant. One, you will recall, felt of the animal's tail and straightway proclaimed that the elephant was like a rope. One felt of his leg, and declared the elephant to be like a tree. Another, leaning against the animal's broad side, thought it was very much like a wall, while yet another reached up to its flopping ears and forever afterward insisted that an elephant is like a leaf. Which one was telling the truth?

Did God make a mistake when he created people, and as a result we all turned out to be different? Or did God plan for people to be different from each other in order that no one of us could boast, "I have the truth," but rather that by putting our differences together, we might find the truth? God gave man the ability to invent the airplane and other space saving devices, in order to bring us all together into one world. Then he prescribed love so that our one world might be a good world.

But we have not yet reached that stage. We are like people living in an apartment house in a city—neighbors, yes, but only "due to circumstances beyond our control," and not yet knowing each other, neighbors who are not acquainted with one another, who go to work in the morning and come home in the evening without speaking to the man down the hall. Shall we begin getting acquainted? Here are some neighbors you would enjoy knowing.

In a small town in France is a comfortable old house with a rose garden. This is home to a family of three: a physician, his wife, their teen-age daughter. Last summer a girl friend from England spent a month in Jacqueline's home. Now it is Jacqueline's turn to spend a month with her friend in England. That is closer than America, where she would very much like to exchange visits.

Four years ago Jacqueline's mother made herself my friend for life by helping me out of a tight place. I was having difficulty in getting some money changed in a Paris railway station; to me, an utter stranger, this woman graciously lent enough francs to meet the emergency. She was a real friend.

In a big old house in Frenndenstadt, Germany, there is a screened in balcony, bright with potted geraniums, where my husband and I had supper with the first woman to be elected to the council of that city. Church bells chimed; daylight softened into darkness, while we talked of the problems a Christian must meet in America or in Germany.

Our hostess of that evening wrote us not long ago that she had lost her seat in the council, but two other women had been voted in. Her only comment was:

I leave this chapter of my life to God. He knows if it is better for me to be more free for some other work. I had a very hard time working with the men, who never before knew about working with women. It was a strange feeling being awakened that morning and looking into the morning newspaper and seeing myself on the outside of things, after being so busy before.

Regarding the world situation, this German woman added:

Here everybody speaks about America where people are expecting a new war. The wife of our burgermeister flew to Rio to see her parents who live in Brazil, because the father wished her to come before the war. I cannot believe that. I pray to get strength not to think negatively, not to have fears. If women of the whole world would resist those fears the would not become reality.

The Burlington, North Carolina, Times News for August 6, tells of two teenagers, a girl from Denmark and a boy from Italy, who are returning home after spending a year studying in the United States. When asked their impressions of America, gay, pretty Annette Boegelund, of Charlottenlund, Denmark, answered in dead seriousness: "People here bring their religion into their everyday life. That puts all doubt out of my mind over America's sincerity in her belief in peace."

Paola Berteli of Bologna, Italy, explained: "In Europe, they think sometimes America only gives help to get something in return. . . . I was most impressed by America's sense of community living, how hard they work and how everyone has a good chance to make a living and get what he wants."

A short time ago, when we attended the pageant, "Unto These Hills," at Cherokee, North Carolina, it was our good fortune to sit next to an attractive woman of my own age, who works in New York as an office secretary to a national religious organization. She was a native of Virginia, but had left that state at the age of nineteen. She was deeply impressed, as were we, by the high ideals expressed throughout the pageant. Over against the continued injustices suffered by the Indians in their efforts to live at peace with the white man, was the repeated assertion in the words of the chief characters: "The thing that matters most is not the color of a man's skin, but whether he be good or evil."

The woman beside me was unprepared, by her experiences in the South of thirty years ago, to hear such sentiments expressed in public before a mixed audience. During the intermission, she turned to me, thrilled, and said, "I never expected to listen to such words spoken here." At the close of the pageant, she exclaimed, "I still cannot believe it, to sit here in North Carolina, listening to a plea for racial justice! I shall certainly have something to tell my friends in New York."

We should have liked to spend more time getting acquainted with our new friend over a cup of coffee, somewhere. But where? We did do what we could however. We took her to the bus station, then carried her bag around to the back and set it inside a door marked "Colored."

In a little Christian village in Portuguese West Africa lives Pastor Gonga, whose life bridges the distance from an illiterate childhood in a pagan village to his present responsibility as shepherd of a Christian Church. When we asked him what difference Christianity had made in the tribal ideals of loyalty, generosity and courage which he had learned as a boy, he answered, "But all those qualities of character applied only within our tribal group, our village. When I became a Christian it enlarged my circle."

How large is our circle? We, ourselves, are the losers if it is small. Jesus was happier than anyone else who ever lived, and his life richer, fuller. Why? Because he knew God better; because he knew all kinds of people. How many kinds of people do you know?

Christianity is a "want to," not an "ought to" religion.

*Out of his greatness and power
God built the universe,
Breathing his loneliness of heart into man's living soul.
From dust and star-dust he made us all,
And gave us to each other to make life whole!*

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Address to Freshman During Orientation Period

For the ambitious young men and women today, education seems to have become a must. There are things, of course, that you can do without an education, but many of these things that you can do without an education, you could do better with an education. The regrettable fact is that many young people today who have the opportunity of an education refuse to take advantage of it. Too many enter college and drop out before completing the requirements for graduation. As a rule, they live to regret their failures.

Elon College is prepared to give you the best advantages in the field of higher education. It has an excellent faculty, prepared by training and experience to assist you in your pursuits of an education. It has an unusually good library for a college the size of Elon. Stacks and stacks of books, forty to fifty thousand, the products of the best minds, of the best people of all ages of the world's history. These are not dead books; they are live books. Open any volume and the author is there staring you in the face. He speaks to you from every page and paragraph. His information and counsel will instruct, inspire and guide you as onward through life you go.

By matriculating in Elon College, you become a part of a great student body; not only the ones who are here now but the hundreds and thousands who have come and gone. Those who have gone found an inspiration here. They are certain that you will be benefitted and blessed as they were. The student body is not so large but that you may know everyone and yet it is large enough to provide association, fellowship and inspiration that will mean much to you through the years.

As a student in Elon College, you stand at the fringe of a wonderful career. You stand in the limelight of marvelous opportunities, on the sands of time, looking out over the broad expanse of the uncharted ocean of truth.

Have you ever had a thought? Have you ever had an idea? Have you ever had a dream? Thoughts are creative, ideas are dynamite, dreams are wealth, riches untold.

Morse had a thought, an idea, He dreamed of telegraphic communications. We have telegraph stations everywhere. Hundreds and hundreds of thousands of dollars are invested in this type of equipment.

Fulton had a thought, an idea, a dream. He saw the day when the powers of steam would drive vessels up and down rivers, across lakes, and out into the wide seas. As a result, boats sail the seas, trains cross the earth, steam power has helped to make civilization. We have hundreds of millions of dollars invested in this kind of equipment.

Bell had a thought, an idea, a dream. He dreamed of talking over a wire from room to room, house to house, town to town, nation to nation, until today you pick up the telephone in your home or office and talk to the ends of the earth. Millions and millions of dollars are invested for the convenience of mankind.

Edison had a thought, an idea, a dream. He dreamed of the time when you could touch a button, light up a room, light up a home, light up an apartment house, light up a city, light up the world. Millions and hundreds of millions of dollars are invested in this particular industry.

Thoughts are creative, ideas are dynamite, dreams are wealth, riches untold. The inventive genius of man has not been exhausted, neither is it dead. Marvelous things are yet to be wrought by the mind of man. The wealth of the world lies beneath the mountains, buried in the heart of the earth. In the State of Louisiana, they drill for oil. An oil company is now in the process of drilling. This particular well is already 17,000 feet deep, three and one-half miles. No oil; but the company continues to drill.

You are here to survey the limits of truth. Truth is wider than the world's horizons and deeper than the earth could ever be. You shall not reach the limits of truth or discover its depths, but now is the time to begin. Do not waste your time. You may redeem a dollar, but when a minute is lost, it is lost forever. Today offers you an opportunity, do not neglect it.

Apportionment Giving

Did you ever have the experience of having a person indebted to you for a sum of money with a definite period during which that debt was to be settled in full? You had your obligations created depending on the settlement of the indebtedness to you, that you might pay your obligations; then to have your debtor for some reason unknown to you delay his payments which, of necessity, compelled you to delay your payments. Your creditor in turn was puzzled if not displeased, for you had always been prompt in taking care of your obligations. Of course, you knew that your debtor would eventually pay; you were not worried about that, but the delay was what worried you. If you have had this experience, you can easily put yourself in the place of Elon College and experience the watchful waiting for contributions with which to meet obligations.

This kind and benevolent church of ours has obligated itself for a definite amount for our college. Our college has assumed its obligations and is dependent upon the church for funds through conference apportionments with which to meet these obligations. The administration of the college knows that these obligations will be met, and the college's creditors know that the college will meet its obligations, but delay in the first place causes delay in the second place, and questions arise as to when the college will meet its obligations.

The Conference Year is fast drawing to a close. We are still far short of the half-way mark of the amount apportioned to the college. In view of the excessive demands upon our college and evident dwindling of income from investments, I am sure that our churches and Sunday schools will put forth extra efforts to meet their obligations, that our college may be enabled to meet its obligations.

Previously Reported $ 6,609.22

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Morrisville$ 7.79
Mt. Auburn S. S. 6.50
Pope's Chapel 5.00

Eastern Va. Conference:

Bethlehem (Nans.) S. S. . $ 33.13
Newport News S. S. 23.20
Windsor S. S. 20.94

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Burlington S. S.$ 70.84
Ingram S. S. 20.86

Virginia Valley Conference:

Joppa$ 9.00
Bethel S. S. 17.68
Mt. Olivet (G) S. S. 10.00
Winchester S. S. 8.34

233.38

Total to date $ 6,842.60

Missions at Home and Abroad

Dr. and Mrs. David McKeith, Jr., Sail for the Foreign Field

Dr. David McKeith, Jr., executive vice-president of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, sailed this week on the Queen Elizabeth from New York in route to Ceylon, India and Turkey. Dr. McKeith is making an administrative tour of the work of the American Board in these areas. He is being accompanied by his wife, Mrs. Miriam Scheibe McKeith.

During his visit, Dr. McKeith will confer with Indian and Ceylonese Christian leaders as well as with American and other missionaries, especially those in the Bombay area. He will do considerable speaking in the churches of Ceylon and South India and will attend an important meeting, November 5 to 10, of the National Christian Council of India, which will be held in Gunter.

This will be the third intensive administrative visit made by Dr. McKeith to his world parish. In 1949, he visited Africa, Turkey, Syria, Lebanon and Greece; in 1951, the Philippine Islands and Japan; and in the summer of 1952, he attended the International Missionary Council meeting in Germany.

"There are great areas of spiritual vacuum in the world at the present moment," says Dr. McKeith, "and into those areas many conflicting forces are rushing. It is the duty of the religious forces of the world to meet the challenge of the powerful adversaries facing them. The task is not to extend western culture or propagate any particular organization, but to spread the Gospel of Christ and to penetrate all areas of life with his spirit. Our missionaries are working side by side with the national leaders of other lands helping to shape the new pattern of life which is emerging. We need more missionaries and many, many more Christian national leaders."

Dr. and Mrs. McKeith will fly from Paris to Colombo, Ceylon, and will continue on to India by plane, after a ten day visit. They will also fly from New Delhi to Istanbul, Turkey.

Dr. McKeith will leave for America around December 4, by plane by way of Lisbon. Mrs. McKeith will remain in the Near East until around December 14, coming home by boat from London.

* * * * *

Associate Minister of the Missions Council Flies to Europe

On Tuesday of this week, Rev. R. Norris Wilson, associate minister of the Missions Council of Congregational Christian Churches, flew from New York to Paris, en route to Athens, Greece, where he will begin a visit to the relief projects and refugee schools of the Congregational Christian Service Committee in Greece, Syria and Italy.

A major objective of Mr. Wilson's European visit is attendance at the Annual Consultation of the World Council Department of Inter-Church Aid and Service to Refugees, in Geneva, Switzerland, October 6-8.

One of the younger of our national church leaders, Mr. Wilson has been chiefly responsible for the relief and reconstruction fund of our fellowship. He has been the chairman of the Administrative Committee of One Great Hour of Sharing in which more than thirty denominations cooperate.

From Athens, Mr. Wilson will go to Beirut, Syria, to visit the refugee schools and other relief projects in that area conducted by the Congregational Christian Service Committee, and then go on to Istanbul, Turkey. From Turkey he will go to Naples, Italy to see the amazing work being done by Dr. Teofilo Santi under the Service Committee, and then will tour key refugee centers in Europe under the direction of Church World Service, acquiring first-hand information on some of the problems that are involved on the European side in the new Refugee Immigration program authorized by the 83rd Congress.

* * * * *

Rev. David H. Sandstrom Elected a Missions Council Secretary

Rev. David H. Sandstrom, since 1952 the minister of Stewardship of the New York Congregational Christian Conference, has recently been elected to the position of associate secretary of the Missions Council.

He will start immediately on his new national duties, with his office at 19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Ill.

Mr. Sandstrom was born in Seattle, Washington, the son of a minister in the Swedish Mission Covenant Churches. He was educated at the University of California, Harvard University and Union Seminary.

During his student days he served Swedish Mission Covenant Churches in which he was ordained, but later transferred his ministerial standing to the Congregational Churches.

In 1950 he was called to the position of minister of Stewardship for the New York Conference, due to his exceptional ability along the lines of stewardship and Christian promotion in which he has been singularly successful.

Among Mr. Sandstrom's major responsibilities in his new field, will be the promotion of the Christian World Mission of the Congregational Christian Churches through increased emphasis on Christian stewardship. He will also have the direction of the Midwest Regional offices of the Missions Council.

Mr. Sandstrom is married to the former Evangeline Marie Burkland, of Minnesota, and they have two daughters, Carolyn, a graduate of Oberlin College, now doing graduate work at the University of Connecticut, and Paula, a high school freshman.

Facing the New Church Year

Every pastor sincerely prays that every member of his church will resolutely and prayerfully seek to do what one person can do in helping to make this new Church Year the best year in the history of his church. God wills that it shall be, and every member is responsible for helping make it to be. "Forward, march," is God's call to every church.

What blessings and what joy will be theirs if with enthusiasm everyone will respond to God's call.

Some churches have three kinds of members—"those who are willing to let others do what ought to be done," "those who are willing to have nothing at all done," and "those who are anxious to do their full share." Which kind of church member are you? The old jingle has a very persistent question which every member of every church should put to himself or herself—"If every member of my church was just like me, what kind of a church would my church be?"—Roy C. Helfenstein.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

North Carolina Women's Board Meets at Moonelon

Mrs. Wm. T. Scott, president of the North Carolina Women's Conference, writes enthusiastically concerning the recent meeting of the North Carolina Woman's Board held at Moonelon.

Mrs. Howard Gerringer, at present the official hostess at Moonelon, had everything in readiness for the meeting. Lovely flower arrangements added much to the setting. And ice cold orange juice and ice water, which she served to the group both morning and afternoon, helped out tremendously.

The Gibsonville society, under the direction of Mrs. G. A. Daniele, Jr., president, served a most bountiful picnic lunch to the group. Mrs. Scott indicates that the chicken, ham, pies and cakes amounted to a "real feast." Rev. and Mrs. J. Lester Stanley of our Gibsonville church were present to participate in the fellowship.

One indication of the success of the meeting is this: seventeen of the twenty-one who were supposed to be present were there! That is fine! And how much the four who were absent missed. We hope that no sickness kept them away from the meeting—but, on the other hand, we hope they had good excuses!

Dr. Scott was on hand as an important "observer" at his wife's meeting, and Mrs. Essie Truitt Simpson (sister of Dr. John G.) was present as a guest.

The main business in hand, of course, was planning the fall conference. All signs point to First Church, Greensboro, for the meeting on October 6. Local society presidents may be on the lookout for a letter from Mrs. Scott concerning complete plans for the conference.

* * * * *

Eastern Virginia Changes Place of Meeting

Mrs. Garland Spratley, president of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference, has asked us to call attention to the change of the place of meeting of the fall conference. She says: "Mr. McCauley notified me last Saturday that due to their church undergoing repairs, it would not be in readiness by October 1, for our meeting. The women of Franklin Congregational Christian Church have kindly consented to entertain us, so the meeting will be held there." Do not forget the time and place, October 1 at Franklin.

WOMEN'S CONFERENCES

The three Conferences for our women's groups will be held as follows:

Eastern Virginia—Thursday, October 1—Franklin.

North Carolina—Tuesday, October 6—First, Greensboro.

Valley of Virginia—Thursday, October 8—Bethlehem.

Rev. Quentin Leisher, whom many of our women met at the School of Missions this year, is to be the featured speaker at each of these meetings.

Plan now for a carload (or two or three cars full) of women to attend from your society. That is the way to get the year off to a good start!

Suggestions for Use with "The Hidden Heart"

Mrs. Ralph Galt, minister's wife in our Valley of Virginia Conference, sends the following valuable suggestions to keep in mind when using the film, "The Hidden Heart," which Congregational Christian Churches are expected to use this year. Often it will be the women's group which sponsors the showing, and so this article is found on the women's page. However, if some other group is sponsoring it in your church, please remind them of these suggestions.

1. There is a reference early in the film to the boy who is in a work camp. I believe that the whole point of the discussion is lost unless people understand what a work camp is. The second chapter of the study book, "Where'er the Sun," describes an international work camp in Siam. Part of this chapter or some other description of work camps would help where the congregation is not familiar with the work camp idea.

2. Young people who have taken part in a work camp might give a description of a camp program.
3. A local work camp might be set up if there is time for discussion after the film. This might be just a one-day project to improve some specific condition about the church or in the community.

* * * * *

A Reminder

The World Community Day services are scheduled for Friday, November 6, 1953. The theme is for the day is "Building Lasting Peace," and the program materials must be ordered before October 3, at a cost of 35c, from the Department of Publication, National Council, 120 E. 23rd Street, New York 10, N. Y.

It takes time to plan a good program and as most of the women from other denominations are urged to participate in these programs, why not get together?

Besides our prayers for peace, we are asked to give materially, and this request is two-fold. The collection of money will be used to help make more comfortable the refugees sheltered in camps and recreation centers, youth hostels, orphanages and children's homes, hospitals, sanatoria and invalid homes, rehabilitation centers, and homes for the aged. Goodness, it will take a lot of money to do this in a substantial way!

The second request is for bright and gay wash cloths and towels, double or single or crib-size sheets, pillow cases, warm but light-weight quilts and blankets, curtains, drapes and table cloths, that are not fancy or elaborate. Send these to the Church World Service Center, New Windsor, Maryland.

MRS. H. E. ROBINSON.

* * * * *

Berea, Great Bridge, Virginia, Reports

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Berea Christian Church (Great Bridge) is now closing another year of work and good fellowship together. We have enjoyed a very successful year. We had a very conscientious president, Mrs. D. W. McClain. She has led us in an inspiring way toward true fellowship and cooperation to advance the work of our church and our Master. May we ever remember the special efforts and thoughts she has given to our auxiliary.

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

"They Are All Looking for You"

PART I.

As Peter climbed the steep hill back of his home town of Capernaum, the morning sun blazed down indifferently on his tired back. Peter was too much in a hurry to stop and rest in the shade of any chance trees along the way. It was still early, but the sun was so hot that Peter swore under his breath. He couldn't understand why Jesus had risen at such an unearthly hour, or why he had gone off by himself, nobody knew where.

Now the whole town was wondering where he was. The many friends he had made the evening before through his sympathy and kindness, his healing touch with the sick who had been brought to his door—they had told others about this friendly Jesus; and as a result dozens of men and women were crowding around the house at this early hour. Not only beggars and people suffering from disease, but some of the rich of the community, the leaders of the synagogue, and Pharisees. Some were curious and rude, some very eager, some of the more dignified pretended nonchalance. But all had come to see Jesus. They had been told he was staying there for the night.

"Yes—why yes, of course. He is within. I will call him," the servant had stammered out, noting the large number of people before the house. But Jesus was not within, he discovered to his surprise; and it was with considerable embarrassment that he had disclosed the fact to James and John and Peter, who also had been housed there for the night. Peter had been quite upset over the disappearance, and had started a searching party immediately, while James and his brother, feeling a responsibility for their leader's reputation, had broken the news to the crowd as tactfully as possible, even attempting to engage some of the more distinguished in conversation, until Jesus could be found.

Meanwhile Peter, with Andrew and Levi, had scoured the town, finding only one clue as to his whereabouts. The night watchman, just leaving his post, said he had seen the teacher before daybreak, making his way toward the path that leads up from the plains toward the hills to the west. He hadn't seemed to be in a hurry, and was deep in thought.

Peter was very much in a hurry, so much in fact that he had soon out-distanced the other two disciples, and was now plodding up the pathway alone. "Yes, the Master must have gone this way," he thought to himself, wondering what might be the reason for this early morning walk. John had surmised that Jesus had gone away alone to pray. Peter pondered the thought.

(To be concluded.)

* * * * *

"Preparing A Welcome"

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Baby sleep!" Three-year-old Larry Cameron smiled at his tiny brother and repeated his solemn pronouncement, "Baby sleep!"

"Yes, Larry," his mother answered gently, "little Marvin needs to sleep now, because that makes him grow. Before long he'll be a big boy like you. Then he can play with the toys you've been saving for him. Would you like to show Marvin's toys to Miss Mallory?"

I was calling at the home of a friend where a new baby had recently joined the family. Until that visit I had been somewhat apprehensive about Larry's reception of his new brother. In all of Larry's three years his mother had given him so much devoted companionship that one could not help wondering if the little fellow might not feel defrauded when her attention must be divided. It was gratifying to see that my small friend had no such feeling.

At his mother's suggestion he promptly brought to us a light wicker basket of toys. There was a soft rubber ball, a rattle just the right size for a tiny hand, a yellow duck for a baby's bath tub, and a white woolly lamb. Larry's eyes shone as he showed me each of his brother's toys.

"I think Miss Mallory might like to see the little truck you are saving for Marvin to see when he is old enough to play with you," his mother continued. "Then you can take your own trucks out to the sand pile. It's nice and warm in the yard today."

From a miniature garage made of cardboard Larry brought some small metal trucks painted in bright colors. "This one for Baby," he said, pointing to a red one.

"I'm sure Marvin will like his playthings," I commented, as the little fellow carefully put the red truck into the garage and then went out into the yard with his own toys. Turning to his mother I expressed my appreciation of the scene I had just witnessed. "You have handled a difficult situation with wisdom," I told her. "Often an older child greets a young one with resentment instead of pleasure."

"My husband and I have tried to make the baby's arrival a happy time for both children," my friend replied. "We began by telling Larry that he was going to have a little sister or brother who would be a playmate for him.

"Just by chance we discovered that our son was expecting somebody of his own age," she continued. "When my brother visited us last winter he brought Larry a fleet of toy trucks, and the child put away the red one to save for his new playmate.

"We realized that Larry would be disappointed when the playmate proved to be a tiny baby that could do nothing but eat and sleep. It happened that a baby boy had just come into the home of a friend who lives near us. When that baby was old enough to have visitors I asked the mother if I might bring Larry to see him. My neighbor was glad to cooperate, so Larry was given an opportunity to learn what the expected member of his own family would be like. The mother showed Larry the light, soft toys provided for her baby and told him it really wouldn't be long before his little new neighbor would be old enough to enjoy the kind of toys Larry likes for himself.

"After that visit Larry shared happily in all of our preparations for the baby's coming. He helped me put away the shirts and booties, and the soft, warm blankets which we would wrap around the baby. The little red truck is being saved as a sort of symbol that the new brother will actually become the playmate we had promised."

"I'm sure the strain of adjustment that so often comes into the home with the advent of a new baby would be eased if all children shared in preparing a welcome as Larry has done," I commented, as my friend

(Continued on page 15.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Holland Pilgrim Fellowship Reports

The Pilgrim Fellowship of the Holland, Virginia, Christian Church held its final meeting of the year on a lake near Holland, on Sunday, August 30. Each member had the privilege of inviting a guest.

Just as the sun was setting, a very thought-provoking and inspirational vesper service was conducted by Ed Felton. Following the service we transacted business. We voted to send $10 to the earthquake victims of Greece, read a letter from Miss Angie Crew, which acknowledged the receipt of a box of woolen sweaters which was sent to be for distribution. We then had the election of officers for the ensuing year.

The officers are as follows: Betty Jean Underwood, president; Billy Bittle, vice-president; Nadine Pulley, secretary; Mary Virginia Bittle, treasurer; Jo Lynn Holland, program chairman; Ed Felton, co-chairman. Chosen as reporters were Ann Campbell, Leon Duke and Hamnah Hannah. Mrs. J. D. Rawles and our minister, Rev. J. H. Lightbourne, Jr., will be our counsellors again this year.

After saying goodbye to six of our members who are leaving this year, we had a covered dish supper in the clubhouse near the lake.

Afterwards the recreation period was led by Hamnah Hannah. We then formed a friendship circle; the outgoing president, Lois Jean Grizzard, made a few remarks; and we sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds."

HAMNAH HANNAH,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Apportionments for the Moonelon Project

Perhaps some of you in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference have forgotten what is your share for the Moonelon Project. If you have, this is a reminder.

Let's get this money in and see if we can urge the advancement of some building begun on the Moonelon Conference site.

The apportionments are:

Apple's Chapel	$ 35.00
Asheville	25.00
Belew Creek	15.00
Berea	30.00
Bethel	20.00
Bethlehem	25.00
Beverly Hills	15.00
Burlington, First	75.00
Carolina	25.00
Danville	35.00
Durham	55.00
Elk Spur	15.00
Elon College	50.00
Gibsonville	10.00
Garham	25.00
Greensboro, First	100.00
Greensboro, Palm St.	35.00
Greensboro, Calvary	20.00
Happy Home	40.00
Haw River	20.00
Hebron	10.00
Hines Chapel	60.00
Hopedale	15.00
Ingram	15.00
Kallam's Grove	15.00
Lakeview	10.00
Lebanon	20.00
Liberty	35.00
Long's Chapel	20.00
Mebane	15.00
Monticello	40.00
Mt. Bethel	25.00
Mt. Zion	25.00
New Lebanon	40.00
Pfafftown	10.00
Pleasant Grove	20.00
Pleasant Ridge	20.00
Reidsville	55.00
Rocky Ford	10.00
Salem Chapel	10.00
Shallow Ford	10.00
Tryon	30.00
Union (N. C.)	25.00
Union (Va.)	40.00
Winston Salem	50.00
Zion, Burlington	10.00

Total $ 1,305.00

In fellowship,
CURTIS YOUNG,
President,
N. C. & Va. Fellowship.

* * * * *

Youth Fellowship Meetings

October 4—Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship, Fall Missionary Rally, Windsor Church, Windsor, Va.

October 11—The Valley of Virginia Youth Fellowship Fall Rally. The place to be announced.

October 18—North Carolina and Virginia Youth Fellowship Rally, Bethlehem Church, Altamahaw, N. C.

October 24—Work Day for Christ.

October 25—Eastern North Carolina Youth Fellowship Meeting. Place to be announced.

PATTIE LEE COGHILL,
Educational Secretary.

* * * * *

Young People's Retreat at Sylvan Beach

Miss Ruth Dunn sent us a program of the Young People's Retreat, to be held at Sylvan Beach on September 12 and 13, but it was received too late for publication. We hope that the retreat was a great success and that a full report will be sent in for later publication.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

It is more important to know where we are going than to get there quickly. Do not mistake activity for achievement.—Mabel Newcomber.

* * *

Have you ever noticed that it often takes a couple of efforts on the part of the minister in a good many of our churches to get the congregation to stand for a hymn? Wonder if it wouldn't help if we all remembered that a hymn is a prayer?

* * *

Die when I may, I want it said of me by those who know me best that I always plucked a thistle and planted a flower wherever I thought a flower would grow.

* * *

LET US PRAY:

For a faith strong enough to move mountains,
And for wisdom enough to know where to move them.

The bad physiological effects of alcohol are largely due to the fact that it supplies calories to the body, but does not supply vitamins or minerals. The calory-vitamin ratio in a balanced diet should approximate 2.7. The man who consumes an average 2500-calory food diet daily will bring his calory total to 4100 if he drinks a pint of whiskey, but will not increase his intake of vitamins and minerals at all, so that the ratio will fall to 1.66. He will inevitably suffer from nutritional troubles, some of which may be very serious indeed. Calories derived from alcohol cannot be stored in the body or used for tissue repair. The food calories for which they substitute may, however, accumulate and cause fat.—M. C. S.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"A Slave Becomes a Brother"

LESSON XIII—SEPTEMBER 27, 1953

MEMORY SELECTION: "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither slave nor free, there is neither male nor female; for you are all one in Christ Jesus." — Galatians 3:28. (R.S.V.)

LESSON: Philemon, verses 8-21.

DEVOTIONAL READINGS Isaiah 61:1-3, 10-11.

The Master.

Philemon, the owner of Onesimus the runaway slave, lived in Colossae. He was a wealthy householder who had been brought to Christ by Paul. He began at once to use his wealth and his influence for Christ and the Christian cause. He opened his fine home to the Christians in the community to be used as a church. He helped the members of the church with his gifts. He was a fine layman, a man of large heart and great faith. It was no reflection on him that he owned slaves—that was the accepted custom of the day. He and Paul had a warm friendship for each other. And Paul's letter to Philemon is one of the finest examples of Christian courtesy and Christian love to be found anywhere in all literature, perhaps the finest of all such letters. Incidentally, the letter is unique in that it is the only letter in the New Testament which is concerned with a purely private affair.

The Slave.

Philemon had a slave named Onesimus. He was a Phrygian slave, a sorry, vagabond, undependable kind of fellow. Furthermore, he was dishonest, and stole from his master. Then he ran away. He went to Rome, where he thought he would escape arrest and return to his master, and where he could live by his wits. By some coincidence, and certainly by the providence of God, he came in contact with Paul who was a prisoner in Rome. He was soundly converted and became a completely changed man. Furthermore, he became a valuable helper to Paul. And he became very much beloved by Paul. The fact is that Paul wanted to keep him at Rome and to have him as his assistant and helper. But with the courtesy and the consideration that was characteristic of Paul, he felt that it would not be right to keep Onesimus without Philemon's consent. Accordingly, inasmuch as he was sending a letter to the Colossian Church by Tychicus, he also wrote a letter to Philemon, and sent it, along with Onesimus himself, to the slave's owner, and to his dear friend. It took tact and grace to write that letter, and it took grace to return the slave. It also showed that Onesimus had been soundly converted—he was willing to go back to his master with the risk of incurring the heavy penalty that often fell to the lot of runaway slaves.

The Mediator.

Paul acted as the mediator between the two men, the master and the manservant. He was the common bond between them. He used his good offices in an effort to effect reconciliation and restoration. And restoration on a new basis or new level. As will be seen, he urges Philemon to receive Onesimus, not only as his slave, but as his fellow-brother in Christ! With tact, with charity, with love, he pleads the cause of the redeemed slave.

The Message.

The letter is a model of its kind. Paul begins with a heart-warming and complimentary, but genuinely sincere appreciation of the faith and works of Philemon, and an expression of the great joy, and the consolation in love, which he has because of the Christian life and works of his dear friend. He intimates that he really has a right to ask Philemon to do what he is asking him by virtue of his office as an apostle, and also because Philemon is indebted to him for the new life which he found through the preaching and the personal work of Paul. But he makes his appeal on a higher basis and to worthier motives.

"Yet for love's sake I rather beseech thee, being such a one as Paul the aged, and now also a prisoner of Jesus Christ"—that was a powerful appeal. In other words, Paul says that it is a matter, not of compulsion, but of the constraint of love. "I beseech thee for my son—my son Onesimus, whom I have begotten in my bonds." Here was the great apostle, a man of culture and character, calling this converted slave his "son" and his "brother beloved" and as his "very heart." That is brotherhood in action.

He then makes a plea in behalf of Onesimus. He admits frankly that he had done wrong, that he had been unprofitable, that he had been a thief, that he had run away. But he states clearly that this runaway slave had been soundly converted. He says frankly that he would like to have him as his helper. But without Philemon's mind he would do nothing—whatever benefit Onesimus was to be to him was not to be "as it were of necessity, but willingly." So he is sending the man back to his master.

He asks him to receive him, "not as a servant, but above a servant, a brother beloved, especially to me, but how much more unto thee, both in the flesh and in the Lord." It took grit and grace to write that. And it took a lot of grace on Philemon's part to act accordingly. Paul adds the striking statement, "If thou count me therefore a partner, receive him as myself." Ah, the spirit which this man had! And the spirit which he demanded of another in regard to life's broken relationships!

Then the old prisoner adds another powerful appeal. He tells Philemon that if Onesimus cannot or does not pay Philemon what he owes him, if he does not make good on his defalcation, that he himself will pay it. "If he hath wronged thee or oweth thee ought, put that on mine account. I Paul have written it with my own hand, I will repay it." He adds that Philemon will hardly do this in view of the fact of how much he owes Paul.

And what does Paul expect? He says, "Having confidence in thine obedience, I wrote unto thee, knowing that thou wilt do more than I say." That really did put Philemon on the spot. With the request that Philemon get a room ready for him—he hopes to be coming his way before too long, he sends greetings from some of his companions at Rome. And then farewell.

What was the result? We do not know. It is not hard to guess, however; and we cannot regard lightly the tradition that Philemon received the converted slave, forgave him, and sent him back to Rome to serve Paul as a servant and a helper.

And what are the lessons from this letter? Well, here is evidence of Christ's power to convert and to transform men, all men. Here is evidence of the fact that in the Early Church, there was no bond or free in Christ, but all were one in him. Here is an expression to Christian forgiveness at its best. Here is an example of how a good Christian man can become an agent of reconciliation between estranged people. Here is an example of the spirit of courtesy and consideration finding expression in the art of letter writing.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 9.)

The attendance has been good at our meetings each month. We enjoy the good fellowship of a covered dish luncheon at each meeting. We have also had good attendance of our ladies at all of the rallies and the conference.

Our members have enjoyed serving our Youth Fellowship after each of their meetings during the year.

Christmas bags were sent to Ellis Island for the children, and Christmas-cheer baskets were sent to the sick, aged and shut-ins of the church and community.

Mrs. J. F. Morgan reviewed our mission book for us this year. We always enjoy hearing her and having her visit us, as she enjoys the work of her Master, bringing a wonderful message whenever she is called upon.

Our pastor, Rev. H. E. Crutchfield, brought us our Bible study this year, as he has before. These messages have been truly great and we have appreciated them very much.

Our auxiliary sponsored a very successful and gratifying experience by having a Family Fellowship Supper during Family Week.

We made a contribution to the muscular dystrophy fund this year. The auxiliary also worked with the Sunday school in collecting clothes to send overseas. We have contributed to the care of a child in India for the year, which gives us an opportunity to share in spreading the light of Christ in a dark country.

Mrs. T. S. Sory,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Second Church, Norfolk, Reports on Year's Work

The Woman's Fellowship of Second Church, Norfolk, has held its regular monthly meetings with a planned worship service and program. In a series of six special meetings, our Bible study was presented by our minister, Rev. J. Everette Neese. Both Mission study books have been studied and a review given. Rev. C. C. Thomas of First Church, Berkley, reviewed the Home Mission study book at a Sunday evening worship service, thus reaching more of the women of the parish.

We presented our minister with a Life Membership certificate, and we have recently shown in our church the film, "The Hidden Heart."

In community work we have provided Christmas toys and clothes for three children in foster homes. We have been responsible for the contribution of $20 to the Norfolk Cancer Clinic for equipping a new room.

A box of clothing has been sent to the Near East Relief and we have sent Glory Bags to Miss Corinne M. Nordquest at our Mission station in South Africa.

During Family Week we sponsored a Family Night Dinner with music, games and movies. We have observed World Community Day, World Day of Prayer and May Fellowship Day. On Inauguration Day we sponsored a prayer service for the nation which was held in our church in cooperation with other denominations in our area.

Mrs. J. E. Neese, our minister's wife, has been of invaluable help to us in our year's work. Not only have her labors been in our society, but she has worked in other areas of our church program. Also, she has served as superintendent of the Norfolk District for the past two years, and has served during the past year as president of the Norfolk Council of Church Women.

Plans are being made for the organization of another circle for daytime meetings.

Mrs. M. D. JOHNSON,
Secretary.

* * * * *

Portsmouth First Reporting

The Women's Fellowship of First Congregational Christian Church of Portsmouth, Virginia, has had varied activities throughout the year.

Last fall we had eight members and our pastor to attend the Woman's Missionary Conference at the Christian Temple.

We have studied the book of Colossians in our circles and received spiritual inspiration. Our fourth circle is composed of the younger women of the church. This group has been busy and is doing a wonderful work for the church.

We had the pleasure of uniting with the Shelton Memorial Church for a review of our home mission study book, "These Rights We Hold," given by Rev. Thomas H. Britton.

In November, Mrs. Spong, president of our local school board, gave a most interesting talk on her trip to the Holy Land.

We have observed World Community Day, World Day of Prayer, and May Fellowship Day, working with our United Council of Church Women.

At Christmas a very interesting program was given around a Christmas tree decorated with United Nations flags. Gifts were put under the tree for the immigrants at Ellis Island.

Miss Marjorie Lou Cross gave a review of our foreign mission study book, Africans on Safari, which was enjoyed very much, and a nice box of clothing was sent to Africa as one of our frinedly service projects.

Our pastor, Rev. W. P. Smith, presented a program on the meaning of church symbols which was very impressive.

We had eight members to attend the Missionary Rally at South Norfolk, and three members to attend the Woman's Convention at Burlington, N. C.

The picture, "More for Peace," was used at the July meeting, and for our August meeting we enjoyed a family picnic and program at the city park.

We are planning and hoping to do an even greater year of service in His name next year.

Mrs. H. W. LEE,
Secretary.

Dr. Wayland Zwyer, associate director of Church World Service, says: "Winter clothing contributions should be forwarded promptly to the Church World Service Center, New Windsor, Maryland, if they are to reach the refugees overseas in time to protect them against the cold days ahead. . . . To be fully effective in the winter months ahead clothing should be shipped during September and October. The refugees in the Near East and Korea are unable to earn enough to purchase clothing, . . . and voluntary agencies are practically the only source of clothing for refugees from Germany and the East."

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

I know the people will respond to the appeal of the orphanage this fall in a generous way. Our needs are emphasized by the severe summer. And I know God can and will move on our hearts to support the homeless and orphaned children who have been entrusted to us.

An orphanage is not the best place in the world for a child, but I do not know how the homeless child is going to do any better. There are many folks who have found great joy in sharing liberally what God in his goodness and they in their work have had. They will do it again this autumn. If I did not have faith in God, faith in the work done here, faith in these boys and girls, and faith in folks, I would now be of all men most miserable. But as it is, I am glad and happy to be doing my best, with faith that God will bless the efforts of all of us to give these little folks "home."

It was such a joy to feel the thrill in the air about this campus the past Sunday, when alumni returned from many places in several states. They greeted one another as "Boots," and "Shine," and "Hello! there Skinny." "Skinny" was a lady with a little extra, but she responded in like manner. They seemed to overrun each other in their inquiries and exclamations. Their joy at being back and seeing one another was obvious.

Young returnees watched the older ones in openeyed amazement. There were seventeen of the alumni here who had gone out since I came to the orphanage. I was pretty proud of that. I knew them so well, and was glad to check up on "How are you doing, David."

Mrs. Foster and Mary Lee were here. Mrs. Foster, the first orphanage mother, and a long-time teacher in the Elon public school, saw many of her friends, and they were glad to see her. Several members of the J. J. Ingle family came, along with Mr. Ingle, and were folks glad to see them! They were neighbors to the orphanage when neighborliness was in flower! Miss Hattie Brakefield was back to the delight of everyone. And many others helped by their presence to make the day a big success.

During a business meeting, presided over by Clyde W. Rudd, Mr. V. R. Holt, president of the board of trustees, talked to the alumni about what they meant and could mean to the institution, and praised them for their devotion to the institution that had served them so well. The meeting voted appropriate resolutions the death of Mrs. V. R. Holt, and several alumni expressed the fact that Mrs. Holt had been one of the best friends the orphanage had ever had.

Those present were delighted with the newly painted buildings, the well mown lawns, the signs of progress, and especially were they appreciative of the Holt Memorial Chapel now in the process of erection. They voted thanks to the Kirk Holt family for the so valuable gift.

Our little town has renewed its life with the opening of school. Our children are returning to their grades and seem right glad to see their school mates again. The opening of Elon College brings life to our town. It looks good to see so many fine young men and young women here. We wish for the college one of its very best years. I am reminded of the years I spent on its campus and am proud of them and the college that made them possible.

Thanks for the good report this week.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER 10, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

W. K. Holt, Jr., Dothan, Alabama, Clothing.
Ronnie Black, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.

Bamby Bakers, Burlington, N. C., Pies.
Woman's Auxiliary, Bay View Church, 2 quilts.
Rev. & Mrs. Richard Jackson, Chapel Hill, N. C., Clothing.
Mrs. T. H. Kenimer, Landrum, S. C., Clothing.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$10,138.08
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Morrisville	$ 5.10
	5.10
Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Nans) S. S. .	$ 38.40
Mt. Carmel S. S.	18.49
Windsor S. S.	10.00
	66.89
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Greensboro, Calvary ...	$ 18.00
	18.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Bethel S. S.	$ 2.00
Joppa	9.00
Newport S. S.	21.15
Winchester S. S.	8.34
	40.49
Total	$ 130.48
Grand Total	$10,268.56

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$12,883.05
Mary Sue Brittle S. S. Class	$ 5.00
Reliable Bible Class, Portsmouth, First Church ...	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. Wm. F. Lawrence, Portsmouth, Va., in memory of Mrs. Wm. J. Chenoweth	3.00
C. S. Clayton, Charlotte, N. C.	400.00
Eugene Neu, Charlotte, N. C.	5.00
O'Kelley Bible Class, First Church, Greensboro ...	50.00
Special Gifts	357.10
	830.10
Grand total	$13,713.15
Total for the week	$ 960.58
Total for the year	$23,981.71

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....
Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through Sept. 3, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Bethel—Vacant	377.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt ..	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardcastle ..	$ 872.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo ..	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell ..	1,321.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr. ...	1,913.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar ..	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Gran- ger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith ..	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial— Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eu- gene Tally	704.00
Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein ..	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littikin	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register ..	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ...	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowder- milk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder ..	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr. ...	82.50
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisse- man	3,292.00

Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman	814.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

†Paid.

FOR THE CHILDREN.
(Continued from page 10.)

concluded her story. "It helps immeasurably for the older children to understand in advance that time must elapse before the newcomer can take part in their interests."

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING
LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195.,, voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195.,, in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

In Memoriam

RAWLES.

We, the Board of Deacons of Liberty Spring Christian Church, take cognizance of the passing of one of our members. Brother Rawles had served as a member of the Board of Deacons for more than thirty years. He loved his church, and stood firmly for what he thought was right.

Therefore, be it resolved: that we record his passing (June 18, 1953) with regret and extend to the family our heartfelt sympathy; commending them to the Heavenly Father for His care and comfort.

Also, be it resolved: that we, through the Secretary of the Board of Deacons, express our sympathy to the family through a copy of these resolutions, and that a copy be filed with the Secretary of the church for permanent record.

LUTHER W. WILKINS,
Secretary.

"God and the Dinner Table"

By CARL R. KEY

In the Bible is an "account of Moses, Aaron, Nadab and Abihu and their seventy companions who saw a vision of God upon the mountain, 'and they saw God, and did eat and drink' (Ex. 24:11). Their dinner table on the mount was spread with a ritual meal, and as God made a covenant with them, they ate and drank in his presence—for the signing of a covenant was always followed by a meal through which the signers showed their kinship with each other in the act of eating.

"Abraham's servant in the house of Bethuel, where he sought a wife for Isaac, refused to eat when meat was first set before him, saying, 'I will not eat until I have told mine errand.' Afterward, when the covenant was made and Rebekah was given to return with the servant as a bride for Isaac, he ate and drank with them (Gen. 24: 33, 54), this ratifying the covenant.

"The Passover was another ritual meal, which the Hebrews first ate in Egypt, and kept up as a memorial of God's covenant with them in delivering them from their captivity in Egypt. At the last Passover which Jesus ate with his disciples, he instituted another ceremonial meal which we call the Lord's Supper. He called it 'a new covenant.' . . . Thus we can see how 'God and the Dinner Table' featured in these special ritual feasts. But the idea goes further and deeper than ceremonial dinners; there is a close link between God and the dinner table in every-day living."

So spoke the Rev. W. L. Lynch, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Siler City, N. C., in a recent broadcast over a local radio station.

Unknowingly, Mr. Lynch was speaking to all American citizens who live today in this land of plenty. If we would live up to our Christian confession and be Good Neighbors to the refugees, flood, famine and war victims of the world today, we must invite the unfortunate peoples to our dinner table over which God is watching. God is saying to us that "we must share out of our abundance."

By giving through the channels of the Christian Rural Overseas Program, we put many, many extra "leaves" in "God's Dinner Table," extending it the length and breadth of the world, so that his needy children may eat a fellowship meal with us. How many guests will you invite to "God's Dinner Table" in the next few months? How much cash will the people of our area give to purchase needed processed commodities—dried milk, cheese, cotton seed oil, oleomargarine or canned meats? How many carloads of life-giving foods will Christian people help load from now until Thanksgiving for shipment to the needy in Korea, in Pakistan, in India, in Palestine, in Austria and Germany, in the flood stricken islands of Japan and the earthquake stricken islands of Greece?

Resolve now to give time, money and food to extend "God's Dinner Table" the world around. Remember it makes a man far happier to give than to receive.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, SEPTEMBER 24, 1953

NUMBER 38

New Recreational Center of Richmond Church

Shown above is the new Social and Recreation Room of the First Congregational Christian Church of Richmond, which was made possible by wisely using the large waste space under the Sanctuary. A group of youth and adults are enjoying a social hour. The story will be found on page 6.

News Flashes

Mr. Luther W. Wilkins has asked us to state that the "In Memoriam" in the September 17 issue was "for Edward B. Rawles of Liberty Spring Church." The item failed to so state.

We learn with regret through his sister, Mrs. L. W. Staggs of Norfolk, that Dr. N. G. Newman is a patient in Duke Hospital at Durham, N. C. It comes as a surprise, as up to this time Dr. Newman has been in such very good health. We hope that he will soon be restored, and we know that this wish will be echoed by all of our readers.

From Rev. E. T. Cotten, minister of Pilgrim Congregational Church of Cincinnati, Ohio, we received the following: "Dr. Harry K. Eversull died Sunday from a coronary ailment. I am mailing you two clippings from The Cincinnati Times Star concerning him. He was very active until this attack a week ago. Dr. Eversull gave the main address in the service when I became the minister of this church more than seventeen years ago, he was a friend, and I shall miss him very much."

Rev. Mr. Devapragasam, whose letter appears on page 8 of this issue, adds the following interesting postscript: "On the back page I found my name split into two, as 'Deva Pragasam.' Of course it is alright so far as the meaning is concerned, Deva meaning God, and Pragasam is the word for Light. My parents wanted me to be a minister (light) for Christ and his people from my birth, and brought me up, and I am glad that they will be happy in Heaven to see me fulfilling their wish, with all my limitations."

Dr. H. S. Hardeastle, pastor of the Oakland Church at Chuckatuck, Virginia, and writer of our "Sunday School Lesson Notes," in a personal note, says: "Mary and I are grandmother and grandfather again. Hardy and Mary Ann have a fine baby boy, born on Monday morning (two weeks ago now). He has been named Howard Scott Hardeastle, III, but will be called 'Scott.' Too many Hardys might complicate matters." Congratulations to all of the Hardeastles.

Revival Services Concluded at Waverly, Virginia

On Sunday morning, September 13, Dr. John G. Truitt, superintendent of the Christian Orphanage at Elon College, came to the Waverly Church to conduct a series of evangelistic meetings. He continued throughout the week, preaching each evening and visiting throughout the day.

His messages were well prepared in thought, in spirit, in challenge and in simplicity. From the beginning to the end, there was a spiritual atmosphere that made those who attended feel that they were in the presence of the Divine.

The church and the community feel that we have really had a wonderful meeting. The church membership had been preparing for the meeting for some time. There were five adults and two children added to the church as a result of the week's work. There were other professions made which will likely lead to membership in other churches.

J. E. McCauley,
Pastor.

Wm. Kincaid Newman says "The first million is the hardest—in business, yes—in a campaign, no. The real challenge is the last million. The Church Building Loan Fund Campaign now stands at about three and one half millions. To reach our national goal, each conference and association must reach its goal in full." The chance to participate in the campaign is a privilege to each church as well as a duty.

Dr. H. K. Eversull Dies of Heart Failure

Dr. Harry K. Eversull of Cincinnati, Ohio, died in Bethesda Hospital, Sunday night, September 13, from a coronary ailment, after an illness of one week.

Dr. Eversull received his bachelor of arts degree from Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Ind., his bachelor of divinity degree from Yale University, his doctor of divinity degree from Elon College, and his doctor of law degree from Washash. He was ordained in the Congregational Church at East Haven, Conn., on April 7, 1924, becoming minister of Walnut Hills Congregational Church in December, 1924. He remained there until 1937, when he became the president of Marietta College, Marietta, Ohio. He returned to Cincinnati in 1942 to become secretary of the Cincinnati Council of Churches. He accepted the pastorate of the First Presbyterian Church in 1946, which pastorate he held until his death.

Dr. Eversull was a thirty-third degree Scottish Rite Mason, Worshipful Master of his Hyde Park Lodge, Commander of Cincinnati Commandery Knights Templar, and a member of the Eastern Star, the Grotto, and the Shrine, in which he was a chaplain.

Dr. Eversull had been for many years a member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, and had made many friends in the South.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN extends its deepest sympathy to his widow and two sons.

Southern Convention Dates to Remember

- | | |
|----------|---|
| October | 1—Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference
Congregational Christian Church, Franklin, Virginia
6—North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference
First Church, Greensboro, N. C.
8—Virginia Valley Woman's Missionary Conference
Place to be announced
14-15—Virginia Valley Annual Conference Session
Bethlehem Church
20-21—Eastern North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Shallow Well Church
28-29—Eastern Virginia Annual Conference Session
Rosemont Church, South Norfolk, Va. |
| November | 3-4—Western North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Pleasant Hill Church
10-11—North Carolina & Virginia Annual Conference Session
Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, N. C. |
| December | 8—Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association
Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va. |

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Real Encouragement

From time to time, for the last several weeks, we have been writing in this column about our desire to complete a survey of the laymen's work in the Southern Convention and have at times expressed the fact that the results have been very slow coming in. You will recall that recently we announced that questionnaires would be sent out again, but this time to the ministers instead of to the laymen. That action was taken this week. This morning when I came to the postoffice, I found reports from seven churches. I am deeply appreciative for this response and highly encouraged.

"Hats off" to the ministers for this immediate reaction to the request for this information. Your assistance is a real source of encouragement. We hope that the next mail will bring more of the same, and that within the next few days, we may be able to complete the survey.

* * * * *

Beverly Hills Meeting

The Laymen's Fellowship of the Beverly Hills Church of Burlington is meeting on Saturday, September 19 for a hamburger feed. This organization should be an inspiration for all of us. Although the church is young and the men's group was organized only recently, there are 22 men who are regular members and who participate in the monthly meetings. These men sponsor a boy scout troop and have made a very sizeable pledge to the building program of our denomination. It is a real pleasure for the editor of your column to join with them in this program on Saturday night.

* * * * *

Winston-Salem Reports

The Men's Fellowship at our Winston-Salem church is only two years old, but we are happy to report that these men are at work. John T. Johnson is the president of the group, and Irvin Kelly is the secretary and treasurer. This group sponsored a family night for the church, has redecorated the interior of the church, and has underway other projects for church improvement. They also have given support to the Moonelon project.

* * * * *

Laymen's Day Observance

October 18 has been set aside as Laymen's Day throughout the nation. As soon as you have made plans for your laymen's observance, please send them to us so that we may, in turn, pass them along for the use of other churches.

* * * * *

A secretary's definition of a secretary (as opposed to a stenographer): "A female who spends all her time and best abilities aiding her boss, so that his boss won't find out how little he knows." Can any of you men improve on this definition?

Notice of Meeting

The Committee on Education and Standing of the Ministry of the Eastern North Carolina Conference will meet in the Piedmont Room of the S. & W. Cafeteria, Raleigh, on Monday evening, October 5, at 7:30 o'clock. It is requested that all candidates for the ministry, licentiates, and others who seek ministerial standing in this Conference please meet with this committee at the above stated place and time.

WILL B. O'NEILL,
Chairman.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195...

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

The Status of the Licentiate

By JAMES H. LIGHTBOURNE, JR.

The Department of the Ministry of the Congregational Christian Churches recently prepared a booklet on "The Congregational Christian Ministry—A Handbook of Standards, Procedures and Services." It is an interesting and helpful discussion of the ministry and sets forth excellent and suggestive outlines of procedures and services in regard to this particular Christian office. While there are differences between traditional and accepted Congregational practices and the ways we have followed in the Christian churches, in the main there is fundamental agreement and intent.

There is one aspect of the functions of the ministry as related to a particular classification that is a matter of concern to many, including the writer. It pertains to the status of "Licentiate." According to the booklet, "Licensure is the status through which a candidate in training for ordination in our churches is recognized and certified by the association or conference as qualified to preach the Gospel, and, as a licentiate, to serve a church." The significance of the phrase "as a licentiate" in reference to serving a church becomes apparent in a paragraph that follows.

"Licensure in itself cannot 'confer' the right to administer the ordinances of Baptism and the Lord's Supper. According to historic Congregational practice, however, a licentiate may be requested by vote of the local church in and for itself alone, to conduct these services. This is to be commended only where there is no practicable way of securing the services of an ordained minister. The right to unite persons in marriage is governed by state laws."

The status as a licentiate should not, as a rule, be a permanent one for the individual. The licentiate should be engaged in securing the qualifications to meet the full standards of the ministry, and, unless there are convincing reasons otherwise in a particular case, this should mean successful completion of college and seminary work, and examination by a designated committee or council.

All of this being true, it is difficult for many to see why the licentiate, serving as the pastor of a local church, should not be permitted the right to administer the Lord's Supper and Baptism and to unite persons in marriage, in and for the church or churches he serves alone.

Experience in the past makes it painfully obvious that when difficulties arise between a licentiate and the church he serves it is through the spoken word and in the administration of the affairs of the church. On a practical basis there is far more reason for withholding the right to preach, teach and counsel than for withholding the right to administer the services of Communion, Baptism and Marriage. The last can be safely guarded by the traditional practices of the local church and the larger fellowship of churches.

The practice in our Convention has been in keeping with that suggested by the booklet. Now is as good a time as any to raise question concerning the practice. If the principle of "the priesthood of all believers" is taken seriously, it is difficult to see how the principle of an ordained ministry can be justified other than on the basis of good order and specialized training for a particular vocation. To appropriate certain services of the churches for one class alone, the ordained ministers, either must be done for the sake of good order or certainly it seems to constitute a denial of the principle of "the priesthood of all believers." If for good order, then when good order can be achieved with other participants, there is no reason to deny them the right and privilege. Of course, the writer would argue that any practicing Christian has as much right to conduct the services of the Lord's Supper and Baptism as any other practicing Christian, whether ordained or not. Marriage is in a different category because it also is governed by civil law.

When the licentiate serves as the pastor of a church; when it is he who preaches and teaches the Word; when it is he who visits the people and who shares with them the joys and sorrows of life, it seems a breaking of the fellowship to deny him the right to conduct the service of the fellowship of the Lord's Supper, to baptize those whom he has extended the right hand of fellowship, to baptize the babies he has helped to welcome into the world, to marry the young couples to whom he has given guidance.

Frequently the denial of these rights to licentiates has been on the ground that they serve as an incentive to continue to train for ordination. But another factor has been operative. Candidates serving as pastors have been ordained without meeting the prescribed standards precisely because they are serving as pastors.

The ideal situation would be that in which there is no need for a licentiate to serve as pastor of a church. The time of the realization of that ideal certainly appears remote. Therefore, since there is the need for such service, it appears to us far better to permit the licentiate to serve fully as pastor of the church rather than to a certain degree.

In All Essential Matters . . .

"We Are One"

By W. W. SLOAN

Professor of Bible at Elon College

"How can you live with an American? Your language is different, your food is different, your customs are different. How can you do it?" This question was put to a young French acquaintance of ours by her friends who learned that she was teaching in a school sponsored by American Presbyterians and French Protestants in the Cameroun in West Africa. As we ate together in her home, she told us how she answered: "These little things are so unimportant. In the big things we are alike. We all want to help people understand God and discover the abundant life that is Christianity."

As Mrs. Sloan and I visited seventeen countries of Africa during the summer of 1952, and as we have visited many other groups from time to time in Asia and Latin America, we have discovered how Christianity "breaks down the dividing wall of hostility." Nationality and language and denomination are forgotten. In the northern part of Angola (West Africa) we found Canadians, Swiss, English, Germans, and Americans, living together and sharing the Christian gospel. In Central Africa, we found Portuguese, Canadians, and Americans, making a home together which carries the message far and wide that Christianity is bigger than nationalism.

As we ate and visited and worshipped with Dr. Albert Schweitzer in his Lambarene hospital near the equator, we forgot that we in the room were from many parts of the world; and in our common interests, we scarcely realized we were using French, German and English. Nothing else is as big; nothing else can be as unifying as Christianity.

Perhaps it was in Angola that we discovered the secret of all men becoming one in Christ. We asked Pastor Paulina Gongo to tell us about the pagan village from which he came, and what the ideals of his tribe were. He said his people considered the ideal of man one who put others before himself, gave himself to help other people. "But how is that different from Christianity?" we asked. "Oh, that's easy," he answered, "We were interested only in our own village, our own tribe. Christianity enlarged our circle. Now we are interested in helping everyone. We are all God's children."

Christianity was born in Asia among a people who had once lived in Africa for 400 years. It came on to us because foreign missionaries went to Europe. The true Christian cannot help but be interested in all people of the world. In the jungle of northern Siam, we ate together and visited well into the night with a group of Christian young people, talking about the problems Christianity faces. We discovered the problems in Siam are similar to those at home. As we came out of the building into the moonlight, one young woman took Mrs. Sloan by the arm and urged, "When you get home and see the moon or the sun remember we have just seen the same moon, the same sun. Remember there is only one moon, only one sun, only one God."

Some years ago in Chicago I took part in a convention of seminary students. At the close of a day of fellowship and study we met in the church sanctuary. The only light in the room shone upon the Communion table. As the organ drew our thoughts to God, 300 of us, young men about to go out to minister to people of eighteen or twenty different denominations in all parts of the world, partook together of the bread and wine in memory of Him whom we serve. As members of that group today administer these elements in their churches of all types, we are brought to remember that at the Lord's table we can commune together regardless of denomination or creed.

At a Methodist seminary I knelt at the Communion rail beside a Russian who was about to return to his native land where, to proclaim that he was a Christian, was fraught with danger. At the same rail knelt Negroes. I realized that Christian fellowship overcomes barriers of land and race. As we took part in a Communion service in a Lutheran cathedral in Denmark and again in a Baptist church in Mexico we felt that in Christ "the whole structure is joined together."

Many times we have been in a service where the words were strange to our ears but the hymn tunes familiar. We sang in English, the same tune, the same thought. One evening hymn, a century old, always brings tears to my eyes. We have joined with Christian groups of all denominations in singing it in Bangkok, Siam; Buenos Aires, Argentina; Elisabethville, Belgian Congo; Alexandria, Egypt—"The Day Thou Gavest, Lord, is Ended":

As o'er each continent and island
The dawn leads on another day,
The voice of prayer is never silent,
Nor dies the strain of praise away.

Christianity eliminates distance. Here are extracts from three letters received from friends all within a few days. From Paris a young mother wrote us: "Your visit in France is now only a memory, but across the thousands of kilometers friendship is possible and God is everywhere. Is it not good to know this?" From Germany a professional woman wrote: "Do you feel how I send my best thoughts to you both every morning when I read in the Bible my daily words?" From a Japanese teacher to whom we had sent a CARE package, we had a letter saying: "I will let my students know your warm friendly attitude toward the nation once your enemy."

Not only in Christianity do we forget differences and distances, but Christianity brings us together in common interests. A Moslem girl of the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, who is a student in a Christian school there, was selected along with a Greek girl to represent the Sudan at a Conference of Girl Guides in England. The Moslem young woman was heard to say, "I am glad the girl going with is a Christian, for we can study the Bible and have devotion together."

I have lectured in many countries. If I used illustrations from history or literature or industry, many did not understand me, but when I used illustrations from the Bible, faces lit up, for we all have the same Book, try to follow the same Christ.

The influence of that Christ is reaching far beyond the membership of Christian churches. We made a twenty-four-hour trip to Madras after having had a visit with Mahatma Gandhi. One of Dr. Gandhi's students, a Hindu youth, was on the train with us. We visited and ate
(Continued on page 11.)

Our Churches Report . . .

Our Richmond, Virginia, Church Moves Forward in New Year

The past year has been a good year for the Richmond Church, which began the new church year on the first Sunday in September. Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein is pastor of the church, and some of the choice spirits of Richmond constitute the membership. "Forward Together" is the church motto for the year.

Twenty-two new members were received into the fellowship of the ble, skittle board, box ball, etc., piano, Victrola, artistic folding tables and folding chairs.

Mr. C. E. Jacobson, director of Physical Education at the City Y. M. C. A., a member who, with his wife and son, was received into the fellowship of the church last year, is the chairman of the new Recreation Committee. With his wide experience in Young People's work and in recreational activities, this new asset in the church program offers very great promise. The Pilgrim Fellowship church the past year, ten of whom united with the church on confession of faith.

The Waste Space as it was—a Group of Youth cleaning away disintegrated floor and debris, as their contribution to the project.

Our Richmond church has just been notified that it has been selected as one of eleven churches of the metropolis to be presented room in a special Inter-Church television program.

Just before the vacation period, this church had the high privilege of consecrating its new Social and Recreation room which promises to be of incalculable value to the church in its program of service and to the "community round-about." This new asset to the church program of activities was made possible by wisely using the large waste space under the sanctuary. The room was beautifully decorated under the direction of a graduate in interior decoration, and is equipped with various games, such as shuffle-board, ping pong ta-group and the new Young Adults Club in process of formation, as well as all other groups in the church will be greatly benefitted by this new provision for social and recreational activities.

On the program leaflet for the Consecration Service of this large, new and modern recreation room, the following significant item was printed:

A DREAM COME TRUE.

The long cherished dream of First Church, having an appropriate and attractive Social and Recreation Center, properly equipped with games and other paraphernalia for the pleasure and entertainment of all ages represented in our Church Family, is today realized. For this fact, we devoutly thank God and all who have helped to make this realization possible!

Not until the books of the Judgment unfold will we know how much to how many this new asset in our church program will mean. As numerous visitors have declared, we now have one of the best Recreation Centers in our city.

The Consecration Program was as follows:

Greetings by the Pastor.

"Why We are Here"—Denis Cofer, Chairman, Work Project.

Music by Sunday School Orchestra.

Invocation—Jas. A. Rawls, Chairman, Board of Deacons.

Song by Junior Choir.

Scripture Lesson—W. J. Stephenson, Chairman Emeritus, Deacons.

Prayer—Miss Peggy Proctor, President, Pilgrim Fellowship.

Group Singing, led by Mrs. Rhoda Bond.

"Presentation"—A. A. Dofflemeyer, Chairman, Official Board.

"Acceptance"—John T. Kernodle, Chairman, Board of Trustees.

"In Tribute"—Roy C. Helfenstein, Pastor.

"Our New Asset"—C. E. Jacobson, Chairman Recreation Committee.

Singing of The Doxology.

Consecration Prayer—L. L. Bond, Chairman, Planning Committee.

Following is the "Prayer of Consecration" offered by Mr. Bond, who is also general superintendent of the church school.

PRAYER OF CONSECRATION.

Our Heavenly Father, we come before thee this afternoon to express our grateful appreciation for thy guidance and inspiration to those instrumental in the financing and building of this attractive Recreation Room.

Help us, we beseech thee, fully to realize its value to the church, not only as a Recreation Room for our young people, but as a meeting and recreation room for all our church groups, both young and old.

We pray that these facilities may inspire in us a re-creation of interest in our church—that it will serve to further our efforts in thy service—that it will be one of the means that will enable our church to render a larger service for thy Kingdom in thy Name.

Towards this end, O God, in the name of our Lord Christ, we do, this day, consecrate this New Recreation Room to thee and to thy Kingdom. Amen.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

A New Beginning

Elon College is getting off to a good start for the new college year. A number of students registered for the fall at the close of the last summer session. All through the summer they were applying for admission. The Admissions Office was busy securing records, examining high school transcripts and character references in an effort to determine the ability and the character of Elon College Student Body for 1953-54.

School opened September 8. Freshmen began arriving, took placement tests on Wednesday and registered. Thursday upperclassmen enrolled. All were assigned classes and work began in earnest on Friday. Students are still arriving. To our amazement and very pleasant surprise, to date 649 college students have been registered. They will be permitted to register through the week of the 20th. It is anticipated that there will be at least 655 college students. This does not include specials. We usually have between 15 and 25 specials. This will give Elon College a very good student body; a larger number than we had anticipated.

New members of the faculty have adjusted themselves to the campus and are entering into their work in earnest and with enthusiasm. The whole program of the college is moving very smoothly and efficiently.

As we enter the 1953-54 session, we begin planning for the new year. I would like to express appreciation to all of our pastors, Sunday school superintendents and teachers, interested members of our churches, alumni and friends for their interest and cooperation which has contributed largely to the good beginning for Elon's new college year. We shall need your help in planning for and launching the program for the ensuing year.

* * * * *

Night School

Elon College began last year to depart from our usual custom of instructing regular college students during the day sessions only. There was a demand on the part of a group of veterans living in Burlington for night classes. The majority of them had families. They could hold their jobs during the day and could attend school at night. We granted the request and started a night school. Dr. William Moseley Brown, a very efficient and enthusiastic instructor, agreed to teach at night instead of during the day. We had about 30 veterans to enroll. It was necessary for some other members of the faculty to take one night class each. The experiment last year proved successful and not too difficult to carry on. The demand for a night school for this year was made, more so than last. To date we have registered 72 veterans in night school, 71 of whom are men. These are mature individuals. They realize the need of an education and are anxious for the opportunity to apply themselves. The night school means a break from the precedent set by Elon College but it also means an unusual opportunity for these veterans whose education was either delayed or interrupted by being drafted by our government for military service.

Elon College feels very happy about this new adventure. It is not only a service rendered the students enrolled in college but it is very definitely a community service. It emphasizes anew the importance and opportunities of a college located in a growing industrial community. In many ways, Elon college is not only serving the church and the church's constituency, but it is serving its local community in a very definite and helpful way. I feel that all who are interested in Elon College will hail this effort on the part of their institution with acclaim and satisfaction. The administration will greatly appreciate any reactions that you may have to this new beginning.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

The days, weeks, and months are passing rapidly. Only a few more weeks before the annual Conferences of the Convention will be in session. All churches, I am sure, are planning to see that their entire apportionments are secured and forwarded to the proper authorities. Elon College finds itself facing some obligations carried over from the summer and excessive demands for the new year. The college shall certainly need every penny of its apportionment. I am sure that our Sunday schools and churches are aware of this fact and that they shall put forth every effort to see that their apportionments are paid in full. It is useless to express appreciation for your cooperation. We are indeed grateful for any and all assistance given.

Previously reported $ 6,842.60

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Martha's Chapel$ 4.00

Wake Chapel 30.29

Fayetteville 7.00

Eastern Va. Conference:

Liberty Spring S. S.$ 24.00

Little Creek 5.00

Shelton Memorial 14.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Long's Chapel$ 9.95

Union (Va.) S. S. 16.00

Western N. C. Conference:

Big Oak$ 20.00

Pleasant Union 10.00

Virginia Valley Conference:

Bethlehem S. S.$ 23.00

Linville S. S. 37.50

200.74

Total to date $ 7,043.34

Three New Faculty Members Join Elon Staff

Three new faculty members joined the instructional staff as Elon opened its sixty-fourth annual session.

The new faculty members include Prof. Charles W. Cox, who will direct the Elon dramatics program as a member of the English Department; Miss Elizabeth Nelms, who joined the staff of the Music Department; and Prof. William T. Reece, who is in the Business Administration Department.

Prof. Cox, who is a native of Wilmington, N. C., took his undergraduate training at Roanoke College, Salem, Va., and received his Master's degree from Cornell University. He has completed course requirements for the Ph. D. degree in the field of theatre at Northwestern University.

Miss Nelms, is an instructor in voice, is a native of Jacksonville, Ill. She received the Bachelor of Music degree from MacMurray College, of Jacksonville, Ill., and then pursued graduate study at Julliard School of Music. She later received the Master of Music degree from Indiana University, where she has had additional graduate work toward the doctorate in music.

Prof. Reece, who will teach accounting, tax procedure, and other courses in the Department of Business Administration.

(Continued on page 15.)

Missions at Home and Abroad

"The Gospel Band" at Work

The Editor,
THE CHRISTIAN SUN,
Richmond, Va.

Dear Sir:

After a "wonderful busy day with full happy jobs to do," as Mr. Paul C. Sherbert, American Consul, Madras, South India, would put it, we all retired to our respective places.

This morning, Mr. Sherbert opened an orphanage at Kallimandayam, with 27 pupils, whose parents are either dead or migrated to far-off places and not yet returned. These 27 were selected from a host of destitute children, since this is the most badly affected area by drought and famine. Many villages are deserted, and the migrants, if they were to return, would not find any trace of the huts they left some three or four years ago. The children whom they have left have been sheltering under the roof of some relatives who stayed behind, with less than one square meal a day. We have taken 27 of them, and we had a very fine opening function this day.

Kallimandayam, a village in the center of the famine area, an obscure village, has been selected by the Gospel Band, of which I am the director, five years ago, and as many as one thousand and three hundred were converted from Hinduism since February 12, 1947. This is an area where literacy is less than 2 per cent, one Higher Ely School for a radius of twenty miles, one dispensary with a man trained in native medicine for a radius of twenty-five miles, one midwife for nearly one hundred and fifty thousand women. We selected this most backward area deliberately, since the people have not been cared for for centuries, and if we do not, who else will? The four evangelists of the Gospel Band and I are given the daily strength by our Lord to carry on the work left by him.

Since I was weary, I could not sleep. By chance my eyes fell on a magazine, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, dated March 19, 1953, given by a missionary friend of ours this noon (Rev. R. R. Keithan). I was interested to go through the accounts of Mrs. McKeith and other articles, and was much excited to find on the back page my name connected with the Gibsonville and Shallow Ford churches. Then I thought that the good job that we were able to do, and the joy that came along with it this day should be yours and not ours, since you are the people who have done so much work in this part of the world through your prayers and support for the Gospel Band.

The Gospel Band has been responsible for the fine piece of work done in this area, and all the congratulations I received the whole of today for building a beautiful church at a cost of Rs 12800/ at Kallimanthayam, and another at Mandavadi for Rs 3200/, and another at Amblicai for Rs 1800/, last April, and opening of the orphanage today, and opening of a Higher Ely School in another place in the same area, from the State Governor, District Collector, who are Hindus, and hosts of Christians and non-Christians, should go to you and not to me. So on behalf of all those fine persons, I congratulate Gibsonville and Shallow Ford churches. . . .

You will be happy to hear that during the last six months, baptism has taken place in two places where forty-six and ninety-four joined the church from Hinduism. One hundred and sixty persons are being prepared in two places for a baptismal service on September 21. Please remember all of us on that day that we may be strengthened in our Lord and still endeavor more to take the Saving Word of the Gospel. We need your prayers and so please pray for us.

For more than two years, my wife, and I have been much distressed at the sight of these helpless children, who were baked and starved. We admitted some of them and gave them food at noon time. That was not enough. Then we finally decided to start a Boarding Home for the destitute children in this area. When we were praying about it, all of a sudden we had the first fruits from one of our friends at Harvard, Brookline, Mass., who inspired us with her gift to give this bold adventure a start.

The executive committee of the Council hesitated to give us permission to start this, since it could not support the scheme, how lofty it may be. After five months of persuasion and prayer the executive committee, at its meeting on August 6, gave me permission to start. . . .

With the courage and faith the Master had given and taught us, we launched into the deep; for as someone at the meeting said, "that is one of the constructive pieces of work done in this area."

We know that it is a small beginning, and we have started it with the firm belief that we are doing this to our Lord. Not for a single moment, we have so far worried about tomorrow, in respect to this orphanage. You will be glad to hear that on the opening day, orphans of another Boarding Home under our charge sent these orphans gifts of vessels, and the two cooks of that other orphanage whose salaries are Rs 16/ a month ($3.38), sent small vessels costing nearly $.75 each. God carries us in a mysterious manner.

We are making plans to hold a sale in aid of the orphanage on November 6, when Dr. Thomas, of the Mission Hospital, Madura, will open.

Once again I thank you for making it possible for the Gospel Band to bring many souls to Christ and to rehabilitate the people of this area. The task is so big that we feel unworthy to meet it, but we wait upon Him for our daily strength.

So far, we have started one orphanage, three schools, raised an elementary school to a higher elementary school, built three churches, a training center in leather work for young men of the shoe maker community, a rural medical center to be opened September 15, mutual aid societies to help the people economically, etc. I have nearly seventy children from the Kollimanthayam area in the Dindigul Boarding School this year.

The Women's Association kindly sent a parcel quite recently through Mrs. Asa Danieleley of Burlington, N. C., which is of much use to all. We thank all the good friends for this parcel.

Will you kindly communicate this to our good friends in Gibsonville and Shallow Ford, who not only help us by their gifts but by their prayers as well. But for the prayers, I do not think that we would meet with so much success in our work.

Once again I thank you. May God bless you all to be a blessing to all.

With our affectionate greetings,

Yours in the service of our dear Master,

SAM DEVAPRAGASAM.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Just A Reminder

The most important meetings for our women for the entire year are the Fall Conferences. If your society is represented there, you will be well informed for the new year's work.

Several articles have appeared on this page in regard to the North Carolina meeting. No information has come to me concerning the conferences in either Eastern Virginia or the Valley of Virginia, except the dates which I found in the agenda for the recent Southern Convention executive board meeting (and a postal changing the place of one of them). I am sorry not to be able to give our readers specific information about these conferences—but I am sure they will be worthwhile and you will not want to miss them.

Eastern Virginia — October 1 — Franklin.

North Carolina — October 6 — Greensboro, First.

Valley of Virginia — October 8 — Bethlehem.

* * * * *

Speaker At Conferences

The Rev. Quentin Leisher of our Boston office will be guest speaker at the three women's conferences this fall, according to the agenda for the recent women's executive board meeting.

Mr. Leisher is no stranger to the women of the Southern Convention, for he was one of the guest leaders at the School of Missions last summer, speaking on our foreign mission subject for this year, "The Life and Task of the Church Around the World." As the women who were at that meeting remember, one of his special interests is the Philippine Islands. And that interest he will seek to develop in us at our fall conferences—for our Thank Offering is to be used for special work in that mission field.

In the spring of 1951 Mr. Leisher made a two and one-half months tour of the fields of the American Board in the Philippine Islands and Japan, traveling mostly by air. In both 1950 and 1951 he made an extensive tour of the American churches with Dr. Frank C. Laubach, our famous apostle of world literacy. And all of this fits in with our thank offering which will help with literacy work in an area in which Dr. Laubach began his missionary work.

Mr. Leisher has varied background. He was born in Iowa. Both his father and his mother are ordained ministers. He has lived on the Pacific Coast and New England, as well as in the middle west. He has served churches with the Methodists in Hawaii, California and Washington, and with the Baptists in California. His undergraduate work was done at Whitworth College, Spokane, Washington, and his seminary work at Boston University School of Theology—two widely separated geographical points. He was ordained in the Congregational ministry in 1948.

REV. QUENTIN LEISHER

His world contacts began during a hitch in the U. S. Navy, before World War II and before he went to theological school. He visited Australia, New Zealand, Tasmania, Panama, Haiti, and the Dutch West Indies in the line of duty, and wherever he went he took a keen interest in the local churches. It was while he was stationed at Pearl Harbor that he served the first Methodist Church of Honolulu for a year.

Mr. Leisher is a frequent contributor to Advance and also to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. He is a fluent speaker, who will make our women's conferences of especial interest this year. Be sure that you are present at your conference to hear him and the others on the program.

* * * * *

North Carolina Plans Fine Meeting

As a result of careful planning and an enthusiastic meeting of the North Carolina Women's Board, a fine Conference is "in the making." All it requires to make it a great success is your presence—and that means representatives from every local society.

It will meet in our new First Church in Greensboro, which is itself a special attraction. It will give our church women in North Carolina an opportunity to visit our most modern plant. The church is on Radiance Drive which is north of West Market Street (Route No. 70) near the High Point road intersection, Sunset Hills area, according to instructions from Mrs. W. T. Scott, state president.

The date is Tuesday, October 6. Registrations will begin promptly at ten o'clock—or even sooner for those who are smart enough to arrive early, says Mrs. Scott. There will be two new features that will strike delegates at the very beginning: Each district will wear an identification badge and people there from that district will sit together. Before the "regular" program begins there will be a "Hymn Time," led by Mrs. Vance Pegram of Pleasant Ridge (G) Church. This will begin at 10:15. What a fine introduction to the day's worship and work this will be!

And, as you will see from another article on this page which was furnished to me by Mrs. Scott, the featured speaker will be the Rev. Quentin Leisher. Many others will participate in the program—come and see and hear them all!

And, of course, we will all be waiting to know whether or not we reached the $10,000 mark for our giving.

* * * * *

An Interested "Oldster"

With the report from Waverly Missionary Society comes this note, which I am taking the liberty of printing:

"I am sending in this report feeling that it is a great privilege to be able to do it, as I will be 79 years old (or young) in November. I am glad that I can help to keep up our work."

And so I know you will read with
(Continued on page 11.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

"They Are All Looking for You."

PART II.

By BESSIE P. SLOAN.

Peter paused for just a moment to catch his breath, leaning heavily against a high rock where the path turned sharply. He drew a deep, full breath, and shading his eyes looked out over the valley and the blue Lake Galilee. Far below he could see his brother and Levi climbing laboriously up the winding path. How still it was up here, above the busy streets, away from the noises of men and children, of merchants calling their wares, beggars whining reproachfully. He allowed his gaze to rest for an instant on the snow-streaked Mt. Hermon, far away to the north. A tiny breeze seemed to have sprung up from nowhere.

Refreshed by the moment's pause, Peter hastened on and up. He wondered how far Jesus had gone. Now, again, the sun was unbearably hot on his back. Perhaps the Master had taken some other trail after all. Not far above him was a clump of scraggly trees which looked cool and restful. The nearer Peter came, the more inviting they appeared, dark and refreshing. With lagging steps he turned aside into the shade of the trees. Then—"Oh," he cried, almost stumbling over someone who was sitting under the shade of the first tree. "Master!" he grasped.

"Peter—" the voice of Jesus was quiet and reassuring. Peter sank down on a rock beside him.

"Master, they are all looking for you!" He looked at Jesus hopefully. "Hadh't we better hurry back down before they tire of waiting?" Jesus sat silently gazing down into the valley.

"Why are they all looking for me?" he asked presently.

"Because—" Peter stopped. Why, indeed? "Master, they are all amazed at the things you do. No one else does the wonders that you do."

Jesus' voice was very low as he answered: "Perhaps—no one wants to." Then, with a buoyant smile, he continued: "Let us go somewhere else." He arose, and, stepping around the tree to where he could see as far south as Magdala, and even Tiberius, Herod's beautiful city on the shore of the lake, he beckoned to Peter. And Peter, following his gaze, was surprised at the number of towns he could see, not only to the south, but also the north of Capernaum, and even across on the farther shore of the lake.

Again Jesus was speaking. "I didn't come just to help people who are ill. Those who are unhappy and in sin need a doctor, too. I must take the good news to all these towns and villages as far as you can see—and farther. That is why I came out here. I wanted to talk it over with my Father." He turned to Peter.

"But Master," Peter began falteringly, "they need to be cured, people like those last night, who came for help."

"Yes Peter, they do. There are many people down there who need to be made well and happy; who need to discover God. It is like looking on a mighty harvest of people, a harvest that is ripe and ready to be gathered into God's Kingdom, but there are no reapers to gather it." He ceased abruptly. For a moment there was no sound, only the call of a bird in the branches overhead. Then, looking Peter straight in the eye, the Master said, "Pray that the owner of the harvest will send reapers to gather it."

* * * * *

"A Merry Heart"

By MABEL-RUTH JACKSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Mommy! Mommy!"

Mrs. Chauncey, trying to lift the vacuum cleaner out of the crowded kitchen closet paid no attention.

"Mommy!" the voice came again and something in the tone, gentle though it seemed to command her attention, halting all senses of hurry. She stopped and turned to look down at the little pleading face.

"What do you want, Craig?"

"Please, Mommy, smile at me."

Her four-year old's words came to her with a little shock, and her mind visualized a mirror reflecting a set, unsmiling, busy-Saturday-morning face. It must have looked rather grim to her small sensitive son. No wonder he wanted a change. He had felt shut away from her. He did not understand that his mother, in what seemed to her to be too short a time, was concentrating on getting all the necessary week-end tasks done. There were sweeping and dusting to do, a cake to be baked, dishes to be washed, beds to be made, and myriads of small things awaiting her attention. What did he know of this?

She sat down and lifted Craig to her lap, giving him a tender kiss and a warm, loving smile.

"I always love you darling," she said, "even if I'm not smiling."

"But I want you to look that way, too," he insisted.

Well, she thought, why not? He means, really, that he wants happiness, and since he is so young and small, he must gain some of it, at least, through us grownups. What a little thing he asked for, and yet how far-reaching it is in its influence!

She smiled down at the curly head against her breast. "Look," she said, "Look at that yellow flower peeking through the window. Do you think it's wondering what's going on in here?"

"Wond'rin what's going on," Craig echoed with a peal of childish laughter.

Suddenly, as she laughed with him, she felt worries and tension slip from her. The tasks before her lost their heavy significance and urgency. She would do them, of course, but what about doing them with joy? Joy should be a part of childhood and would be naturally if it were allowed to be. But the spontaneity would be crushed if the home atmosphere became solemn and unsmiling.

Here she was, wanting the best in life for her boy, wanting him to grow up into a well-adjusted, contented being, and yet she was not doing her part to bring this about. It had not occurred to her how much her unsmiling, harried face might depress the child. From now on, she was going to try never to be too busy nor too engrossed to remember how vital is the joy of living.

The Bible, she recollected, speaks often of joy—love and joy. Strange how the human race too often has overlooked this. Even the phrase in our Declaration of Independence, "pursuit of happiness," she considered, has become merely that—just a phrase. Our Founding Fathers must have recognized the importance

(Continued on page 15.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Valley Leaders Hold Planning Retreat

A planning retreat was held for the leaders of the Congregational Christian young people of the Valley recently. The first part of the retreat was held on Saturday afternoon, August 22, at the Merek Rod and Gun Club cabin, near Elkton, Virginia. Several activities and problems of different youth groups were discussed.

The remainder of the retreat was held on Sunday afternoon, August 23, at Massanetta Springs. Several financial problems were discussed, and the meeting was concluded with a picnic. The meetings were led by Donnie Litten of Quicksburg, Va., with the assistance of Rev. Hank Harman of High View, West Va.

ROBERT GREEN,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Jose Dabuet Gets Hymnals

Many of our young people and also some of our groups contributed some money some time ago to buy hymnals to be sent to Jose Dabuet to help in his work in the Philippines. You will be pleased to know that these hymnals have been purchased and are on the way—$119.25 worth.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Bishop Sheen is reported to have given up reading his sermons from manuscript when he heard of a Bishop who read his sermon. After the sermon, one of the members asked this question: "If he can't remember what he has to say, then how does he expect us to remember it?"

* * *

We preachers, and you young persons, too, have to be careful of our use of scripture. If we pick out only isolated passages, we may come up with something like this: Cain killed Abel. Go thou and do likewise.

* * *

Miss Dora Etta Luck, one of our fine young persons from Spoon's Chapel, has begun classes at Presbyterian Junior College. She is continuing her career as a nurse at Larinburg Hospital. Our best wishes go with Dora Etta as she begins her new studies.

"WE ARE ONE"

(Continued from page 5.)

together and as we neared Madras he asked where we planned to stay in the city. When we told him our plans were not quite sure, he invited us to his parents' home—"but of course you couldn't eat there." His high caste Hindu parents would not eat with such as we, but Gandhi, getting his inspiration from the "Sermon on the Mount," had enabled the youth to break down the wall of separation as far as he was concerned. The next day we ate curry with the teachers and students of a Christian school, young people of all castes. The experience of sitting together in the classroom, competing for honors, playing on the same teams in Christian schools is destroying caste in India.

Christianity knows no nationality, no language. It also knows no race. As I write this I am almost the only paleface among a splendid group of Negro Christians at Franklinton Center in North Carolina. I am here to lead a group of church workers in thinking through our relations to Africa. We are living here together in a great fellowship—eating, worshipping, playing together.

The most responsive high-school graduating class I ever addressed was that of an American Indian school. We forgot they were the real Americans and I the foreigner, for we were trying to think through together our aims as Christians. As Christianity is destroying caste in India, so will it in America.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 9.)

special interest the report which follows.

Waverly Reporting

Once more our Waverly women's society sends in a report of our work for the year. We have sent in our full Conference report for women's society, young people, junior and cradle roll societies.

We observed the World Day of Prayer with the churches of the town attending with us. The World Community Day was held at the Baptist Church and we received a fine offering in cash and a large box of clothing that was sent to Church World Service center in Maryland.

Our Thank Offering service was held in the home of one of our members. It was a fine service and we all fully enjoyed it, as our society has always been interested in the Carroll County work. A free-will offering was taken at the close of the service and was sent in with our conference report.

We are hoping to do more in the coming year, as we all find so much joy in the service of our King.

MRS. O. C. OSBORNE,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Flint Hill (R) Women At Work

The Woman's Missionary Society of Flint Hill (R) Congregational Christian Church has had a very successful year under the leadership of our efficient president, Miss Lola Farlow.

We have had regular monthly meetings, with well planned programs, using the packet materials and suggested Bible and mission studies.

We reached all but four of the achievement goals. We sent clothes to the Elon Orphanage, also visited and sent cards, flowers and food to the sick in our community.

We were saddened to lose two of our members by death, Mrs. Mamie Jones and Mrs. Irene Briles. We held a memorial service for Mrs. Jones in May.

We are grateful for the privilege of serving God in this good work and pray His blessings on our society.

MRS. MARY B. FARLOW,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Pleasant Hill Missionary Society Reports Successful Year

The Lord has richly blessed the Missionary Society at Pleasant Hill, Alamance County, N. C., and we have had a most successful year under the leadership of Mrs. C. E. York, Jr.

Our attendance has been very good throughout the year, and we have had our program each month, with a different leader each time.

In November, we had a Thanksgiving program and gave a Thankoffering to the Carroll County mission work.

(Continued on page 15.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"God's Design For A Better World"

LESSON I—OCTOBER 4, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Behold the dwelling of God is with men. He will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself will be their God." Revelations 21: 3. (R S V)

LESSON: Isaiah 42: 5-9; Mark 1: 14-15; John 3: 16-17; Revelation 21: 1-5.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Hebrews 2: 1-9.

We begin today a new series of lessons grouped under the general theme, Bible Teachings For A Better World. God knows we need a better world. The lessons for the Quarter will show us God's blueprints or plans for a new world.

A Good World.

Get this straight—this is a good world. When God created it and looked at it, he said it was "good," "very good." It is an orderly, well-planned, well-functioning, well-established, well-stocked world. It has everything in it necessary for man's well-being, and for his progress. It is the best possible world for the purposes for which God created it.

A Good World Gone Wrong.

Good originally, and good basically, the world has become, in some senses, a bad world. It is at least a sick world. Because it was created with freedom of will for man in it, it has many things in it that are wrong, and many things that are not according to the will of God in it. Exploitation, oppression, war, racial prejudice, greed, injustice, bitterness, intemperance, godlessness, impurity, disease, suffering, and many other similar and sinister things are rampant in our world because of the sins of man. It is not fair to blame God for these things. If men had obeyed God, this would still be a good world, or to put it in another way, there would not be so much bad in what is essentially a good world.

A New World in the Making.

In the passage taken from Isaiah's prophecy which comprises a part of today's lesson, God makes clear that He has chosen the Jewish people to help in the making of a new world. "I Jehovah have called thee in righteousness." Who is this Jehovah who speaks thus? It is the God Jehovah, who "created the heavens, and stretched them forth, he that spread abroad the earth and that which cometh out of it, he that giveth the people that are upon it, and spirit to them that walk upon it. . . . I am Jehovah, that is my name, and my glory will I not give unto another." Here is the pattern for a new world. God chose this people, for a light unto the Gentiles, to open the blind eyes, to bring out the prisoners from the dungeons, and them that sit in darkness out of the prisonhouses—it is symbolic language for the redeeming work which God committed unto His people. If ever there is to be a new world it is to come through new people. God is going to work through righteous people. There can be no new world without new men.

The New Man and the New Message.

Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of God, and saying, "The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand, repent ye, and believe in the gospel." Jesus was the new man, the pledge of a new humanity. And he came asserting that the New Order was at hand. He used the term "the Kingdom of God or the Kingdom of Heaven." It embodied the basic ideas of the Jewish faith—the rule of God in human life, and the social aspects of righteousness. He frankly told the people that they had to do an "about face." They had to repent, which means literally, "change your mind." The kingdom would never come, as they thought it would come by force, by God sending some other-worldly being who would blast Rome off the face of the earth, and establish the Jewish kingdom on earth, with Jerusalem as the capital. The Kingdom of God was not to be meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy on the Holy Spirit. The Kingdom of God was present in the Person of Jesus, the King. Obedience to Him, and service in His name and in His spirit, was the way in which the Kingdom was to come.

The New Motive.

"For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish, but have eternal life. For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world, but that the world should be saved through Him." It would have been so easy, and so much quicker, if God had simply decided to use force and material power to change the world. Was He not the Sovereign, the Lord of heaven and earth? But that would have defeated God's purpose, and been an abuse of God's power. He chose instead the slow, long method of love. The world was to be changed, and men were to be saved by love.

It should be noted that God loved the world, still loves the world, even if it has become in so many respects a bad world. He loves it and everybody in it. And He sent His Son in an effort to save men. It is not the Father's will that man should perish. Men may be lost, but not by an arbitrary decree of God. To say that God's foreknows it, is not to say that God decrees it. Love, and love alone can bring in the new order, the brave new world about which we sing and for which we pray and work.

Blueprint of the New World.

The passage from Revelation presents in glowing and symbolic language the new heaven and the new earth that is to come. The old heaven and the old earth are passed away, and the sea is no more. The new Jerusalem comes down from heaven, a holy city, dressed as a bride for her husband. God is in the midst of His people, He dwells with them—He does that now for that matter—and He is their God. All the things that darken the earth now—tears, death, pain, mourning, crying, have passed away. All things are made new. It is the consummation of the new order, the realization of the new world, the crowning climax of that great event to which the whole creation moves, the time when the kingdoms of this world have become the Kingdom of our Lord and His Christ, and He shall rule forever and forever, Amen.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

A retail store is one of the best places on earth in which to practice religion. It is better than a church, because after all a church is not so much a place in which to practice religion as it is a place in which to acquire religion, and to obtain fresh stocks of it from time to time.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 11.)

In February we observed the World Day of Prayer service, joining with a neighbor church and holding the service at their church.

We gave $221.55 during the year towards the Building Fund on a new church; and sent $46.00 to the Christian Orphanage at Elon College, to assist in the installation of "showers" there for the children. At Thanksgiving time we assisted in sending 100 bags of cookies to the orphanage, and we have donated towels, wash cloths, used clothing and other items to assist in the work there.

Our society had nine members to attend the Missionary Rally.

We gave two Memorials: for Mrs. Julia Hornaday and Mrs. Rodema Thompson, who passed away during the year. Our dues have been paid in full.

At our August meeting, the following officers were elected to serve for 1953-54: Mrs. Clifford Carter, president; Mrs. R. L. Clark, vice-president; Mrs. Harold Hornaday, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. M. L. Fogleman, assistant secretary.

We are looking forward to the beginning of the new year, and we trust that we can do more for the upbuilding of Christ's Kingdom, and especially for those in need during this year.

MRS. B. D. HARGIS,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Financial Report for Fourth Quarter—1952-53

WOMAN'S MISSION BOARD OF THE
NORTH CAROLINA CONFERENCE

Quarter Ending September 15, 1953.

RECEIPTS.

Women's Societies.

Albermarle	$ 18.75
Amelia	5.00
Apple's Chapel	27.25
Asheboro	59.20
Auburn	3.25
Berea	20.00
Bethel	8.00
Beulah	6.00
Beverly Hills	13.00
Burlington	397.50
Carolina	2.00
Chapel Hill	18.60
Church of Wide Fellowship	30.00
Concord	6.25
Damascus	2.50
Durham	83.15
Elon College	46.18
Eutaw Community	10.00
Flint Hill (R)	3.75
Fuller's Chapel	20.00
Gibsonville	35.00
Greensboro, First	121.50
Greensboro, Palm Street	40.00

Hank's Chapel	9.00
Happy Home	75.00
Haw River	8.75
Henderson	40.00
High Point	16.25
Hine's Chapel	50.00
Hopedale	39.00
Ingram, Virginia	25.15
Lakeview	10.00
Liberty, N. C.	20.00
Liberty, Vance	60.00
Monticello	10.00
Morrisville	5.00
Mount Auburn	24.15
Mount Pleasant	10.00
Mount Zion	10.00
New Lebanon	10.00
Oak Level	3.00
Pfafftown	6.00
Pleasant Grove, N. C. ...	5.00
Pleasant Grove, Virginia ..	20.47
Pleasant Hill	35.00
Pleasant Ridge (G)	25.00
Pleasant Ridge (R)	30.00
Plymouth	5.00
Raleigh	10.00
Ramseur	10.00
Reidsville	20.00
Sanford	64.00
Shallow Ford	30.00
Shallow Well	25.00
Spoon's Chapel	6.25
Turner's Chapel	25.00
Union Grove	7.50
Union, N. C.	35.00
Union, Virginia	10.00
Wake Chapel	100.00
Winston-Salem	13.00
Youngsville	12.50

$1,896.90

Young People.

Greensboro, Palm Street ..$	7.50
Reidsville	30.00
Turner's Chapel	9.00

46.50

Junior Societies.

Apple's Chapel	$ 3.61
Burlington	15.00
Durham	16.90
Elon College	1.05
Greensboro, First	13.47
Greensboro, Palm Street ..	10.00
Henderson	9.00
Reidsville	10.00
Union, N. C.	2.10

81.13

Cradle Roll.

Apple's Chapel	$ 23.81
Asheboro	19.03
Burlington	32.33
Durham	10.00
Elon College	100.00
Greensboro, First	27.23
Greensboro, Palm Street ..	13.00
Henderson	5.00
Hines' Chapel	32.00
Ingram, Va.	5.00
Monticello	4.50
Pleasant Ridge (R)	5.00
Raleigh	10.00
Ramseur	5.00
Reidsville	20.00
Sanford	5.00
Union, N. C.	7.69
Wake Chapel	2.00

326.59

Miscellaneous.

Sanford Sunday School and Vacation School, for Porto Rican Goat Fund.....	30.00
Total Receipts	$2,381.12

In Memoriam

WILLIAMSON.

Mr. H. Wesley Williamson, Buffalo Junction, Virginia, passed away August 15, 1953, at the age of 66. He was a native of Mecklenburg County, Virginia, and a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Williamson. At the time of his death, he lived just a short distance from his birthplace.

Mr. Williamson married Etta Forlines in 1911. Besides his wife, he is survived by one son, J. Alden, of Raleigh, North Carolina, three daughters, Mrs. Annie Laurie Cole, of Leaksville, North Carolina, Mrs. Christine Marlow, Oklahoma, Mrs. Doris Jones, Raleigh, North Carolina, four grandchildren, and three brothers, Presley, Chesley, and Hesley, all of the Hebron community.

Mr. Williamson joined Hebron Congregational Christian Church, Nelson, Virginia, when a boy and maintained his membership there throughout his life. He served as treasurer of the church for more than 27 years, was ordained a deacon and actively served in that capacity. He faithfully served his church in many other ways. Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. Mark W. Andies, at Hebron, assisted by Rev. Allen Hurdle. Burial followed in the church cemetery.

May the family and the many others who felt the sorrow of the hour find sufficient grace and strength to return to the daily scenes of life.

M. W. ANDES.

DISBURSEMENTS.

Southern Convention Office, Supplies	$ 4.90
Expense of the president	13.07
Expense of the treasurer ..	23.17
Payment on Sound Scriber ..	100.00
Susie D. Allen, Transportation to Board Meeting ..	7.60
Mrs. R. L. Jackson, Transportation to Committee Meeting	3.50
Mrs. W. L. Parker, Literature and Postage	4.80
Treasurer, Youth Fellowship	46.50
United Church Women—May Fellowship	4.00
	$ 207.54
Mrs. W. V. Leathers, Treasurer, For: Life Memberships	$ 260.00
Memorials	60.00
Thank Offering	10.00
Missions in Africa	32.00
Mrs. Victor Masters	8.60
Porto Rican Goat Fund ..	30.00
Rachanyapuram School ..	9.00
Miss Corrine Nordquest ..	64.20
Miss Margaret Hammaker ..	25.00
Korean Orphan	100.00
Home Missions, Special Fund	19.86
Missions, General Fund ..	1,554.92
	2,173.58

Total Disbursements $2,381.12

Respectfully submitted,
SUSIE D. ALLEN,
Treasurer.

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Thanks for all your help, your interest and your prayers. Many of you are of sincere humility and faith in your prayers—more of you than anyone of us realizes. I wish you to remember the Orphanage in your prayers. We are in special need of God’s blessings and bounty, and I believe God has sufficient for us. There are too many good Christian people to allow us to suffer under the burden of need following the dry summer.

This week I am in Eastern Virginia and am seeing many good friends of our orphanage. I am preaching each evening in our Waverly Church. The McCauleys are carrying on here in a fine way. They are greatly beloved by their parishoners, and properly so. Their church is being repaired, redecorated and revived. The summer has been exceedingly hard and it is good to get away a little while, especially since I can get some much needed rest in the lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hartz.

Since my last week’s letter, we have received four little boys into the orphanage. Their mother died recently and left them and three others under four years of age. Church, neighbors and friends appealed to us to take the four who are in our age limits. Provision is being made for the others. With your help we shall do our part by the four who have come to us. This brings us to eighty-five.

Last week we planted 2,500 cabbage plants and 1,500 collard plants. Already we have hauled water and watered them twice. We are trying to keep them alive till fall rains come. Our turnip seed have been sown, but they have not come up yet. These three vegetables could mean so much to our big family of growing children. We know we cannot reap unless we plant and sow. And we know too if we do our best all will come out right.

Again thanks to you for your generous help.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER 17, 1953.
Commodities for the week.
Miss Bessie Thomas, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
The Christian Temple, Norfolk, Coupons.

Burlington Junior Chamber of Commerce, Pies.
Liberty Spring Christian Church, Coupons.
Mrs. J. H. Turner, Windsor, Va., Coupons.
Mrs. Byrd Shepherd, Burlington, N. C., Coupons.
Mrs. J. P. Bennett, Harrisonburg, Va., Coupons.
Greensboro, First Woman’s Auxiliary, Coupons.
Mrs. Andrew Smith, South Narfolk, Va., Coupons.
Mrs. J. H. Booth, Elon College, N. C., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Amount brought forward	$10,268.56
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Catawba Springs	$ 50.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Spring S. S.	$ 20.00
Newport News S. S.	12.50
Norfolk, First	22.42
Rosemont	60.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial	24.00
	138.92
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Bethel S. S.	$ 17.87
Burlington S. S.	120.40
Pleasant Ridge, Special ..	17.00
Union (Va.) S. S.	5.00
	160.27
Western N. C. Conference:
Big Oak	$ 13.00
Pleasant Cross	8.27
Pleasant Union	13.01
	34.28
Virginia Valley Conference:
Bethlehem S. S.	$ 8.13
Linville S. S.	9.35
	17.48
Total	$ 400.95
Grand Total	$10,669.51

Special Offerings.
Amount brought forward	$13,731.15
Pisgah Sunday school, Pisgah, Alabama	$ 10.00
High Point, Friend	90.00
Maude Hedly Bible Class ..	10.00

Wake Chapel Christian Missionary Society ...	20.00
Woman’s Fellowship Bay View Church	5.00
Mrs. W. A. Newman, Henderson, N. C.	50.00
D. C. McLennan, Greensboro, N. C.	50.00
W. B. Truitt, Greensboro, N. C.	100.00
Holt Trust Fund	150.00
Dr. Mary Frances Thelen, Lynchburg, Va.	20.00
E. F. Craven, Greensboro, N. C.	8.00
Memorials for C. R. Faucette:
Mr. & Mrs. John M. Holt, Burlington, N. C.	25.00
Mr. & Mrs. M. C. Faucette, Brown Summit, N. C.	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington, N. C. ...	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. Kent Pate, Burlington, N. C. ...	5.00
Mrs. V. E. Swaim, Burlington, N. C.	1.00
Mr. & Mrs. A. D. Pate, Burlington, N. C. ...	5.00
Dr. & Mrs. J. B. Newman, Burlington, N. C.	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Robert E. Harden, Burlington, N. C.	5.00
Memorials for H. G. McBane:
Dr. & Mrs. J. B. Newman, Burlington, N. C.	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. R. Sellars, Burlington, N. C.	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. Jule Terrell, Burlington, N. C. ...	5.00
Special Gifts	223.80
	822.80

Grand total	$14,535.95
Total for the week	$ 1,223.75
Total for the year	$25,205.46

MEMORIAL GIFTS
“Instead of Flowers”

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:
Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

.....
(Name of Deceased)

.....
(City)

.....
(Date of Death)

.....
(Survivor to be Written)

.....
(Address)

Name.....
Address.....

Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

All churches in the Southern Convention have been asked to file Declarations of Purpose in connection with the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign with the Convention Office as soon as they can do so. Those that have not done so are urged to do so as soon as possible.

Through Sept. 3, 1953, Southern Convention Declarations of Purpose received at the office were as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Bethel—Vacant	377.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Harcastle	$ 372.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo .	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Gran-
ger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette
Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Harcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eu-
gene Tally	704.00
Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein .	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde
Fields	928.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ...	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowder-
milk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr.	82.50
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisse-
man	3,292.00

Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Maek V.
Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren .	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wiseman	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

†Paid.

NEWS OF ELON COLLEGE.

(Continued from page 7.)

ness Administration, is a native of Elkin, N. C. He was educated at Mars Hill College, the University of Alabama and the University of North Carolina, having received his degree from the latter institution. Prior to joining the Elon faculty, he was connected with the United States Bureau of Internal Revenue.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

of happiness when they included it. Happiness must be pursued, and captured. It must be held. Children having memories of lightheartedness at home in their growing-up years have an invaluable possession. She must be on guard, she realized, taking time off frequently—if only a minute or two—to find a laugh or a smile. What was that quotation from Shakespeare that she had had to memorize in high school? Oh, yes: "A merry heart goes all the day, your sad heart tires in a mile-a."

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:

(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church

By Secretary or Clerk

Address

..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

Our Most Beautiful Words

By RICHARD K. MORTON

What would your selection be if asked to choose the ten most beautiful words in our language, in current use?

According to a recent International News Service dispatch widely published, Dr. Wilfred Funk, famous lexicographer and scholar, reiterated ten he chose some years ago, and added 21 others. The ten original choices were: tranquil, murmuring, dawn, hush, lullaby, mist, chimes, luminous, golden and melody.

Obviously, Dr. Funk was using as criteria phonetic values rather than meanings. He meant those that to him had the smoothest and most pleasing sounds. Such a selection, while having some merit, of course, could result in endless debate, for there could be chosen hundreds of others of similarly pleasing sounds. Other languages would also add their share.

While there may be some interest in such a choice as this, most of us, I think, would be more concerned with the words that might mean the most or be most important in our lives. Here, again, we would encounter differences of opinion. But how would these do for ten great words—words of greatest meaning and associated with concerns of greatest import to human life? My selection, at the moment, would be: love, God, faith, integrity, hope, brotherhood, industry, joy, character, humbleness.

Here are ten great words (maybe on another day I would change some of them). They have almost as beautiful sounds as those Dr. Funk chose, and some of them have a great deal more meaning and importance to human life. One weakness in my selection, so far as their being important words is concerned, lies in the fact that they are all nouns. We need also some verbs, some action words. Ten of these I suggest, as follows: love, pray, seek, forgive, work, hope, thank, rejoice, endure, praise.

The only value, perhaps, in a suggestion like this is in prodding you to make your own selection and to have good reasons for it. We often do not realize how we have emptied some great words of their profound meaning, and how much other words have gained in their significance. At best, these are symbols or signs, and they mean only what we invest them with.

Have you ever made even a tentative selection of the ten greatest words in the Christian faith, leaving out the proper names, such as God and Jesus? Would you include such words as love, eternity, redemption, peace, grace forgiveness, atonement, joy, spirit, cross? Perhaps in thinking over some of these words, we can come to attach to them even richer meanings and find our hearts stirred to possess some of the things they suggest.

God's revelation itself was a Word, but a Word that became flesh and life and that dwelt among us.

Words are servants or vessels—and we can do with them as we will. The ten most beautiful or most important words in our tongue will depend, so far as we are concerned, on what our ears have been trained to hear and the extent of our inner culture. We are all known to a goodly extent by the words we know and use, and by the meanings we attach to those words.

It is ours to use well what we are given, for in the beginning every word that proceeded out of the mouth of God was good, and none returned unto him void. "Let the words of our mouth and the meditations of our heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord our strength and our Redeemer."

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, OCTOBER 1, 1953

NUMBER 39

A New Parsonage for Albemarle

On Sunday, September 13, 1953, the First Congregational Christian Church of Albemarle, North Carolina, the Rev. Silas E. Madren, pastor, officially opened their new parsonage. This parsonage is one of the most lovely homes we have for ministers in the Southern Convention. It is constructed of brick veneer, and consists of nine rooms, two baths, and a full basement. The basement is equipped with a baseboard hot-water heating system. The church has furnished an electric stove for the kitchen, and different organizations of the church have furnished something in the parsonage. The living room and dining room are completely furnished. The study has a built-in bookcase, and a large desk, the chair, mat and lamps are furnished. A guest bedroom has been completely furnished by the Ladies' Aid Societies. The parsonage is valued at approximately $20,000.00. Congratulations to the Albemarle Church and its pastor.

News Flashes

THE SUN need three new subscriptions from your church now! Is that too big a task for the smallest church?

Superintendent Scott was among those participating in the program at the formal opening of the parsonage at our Albemarle Church.

The first of a series of sermonettes, under the general title, "How Can I . . ." by Dr. Henry E. Robinson of our Burlington Church appears on the back page of this issue. We are delighted to offer these contributions to our readers.

We learn with regret that the home Prof. A. L. Hook, Elon College, was destroyed by fire Friday night. Loss was almost total as the fire occurred at around 2 o'clock. We hope that the house and contents were fully covered by insurance, but even so, there will be many things of sentimental value which can never be replaced. Our deepest sympathy goes to them.

Dr. Warren H. Denison is leading the Christian Stewardship Week at Wake Chapel, near Varina, North Carolina, the week of October 5 to 11. Dr. Denison is probably our foremost authority on Christian stewardship, having had a rich experience of more than thirty years. Rev. F. P. Register, and his church are to be congratulated on having him with them.

"The Hidden Heart," moving picture of the year for our Congregational Christian Churches, was shown at 8 o'clock of the evening of Friday, September 25, at Concord Church of the Valley Conference, near Timberville, of which Rev. Ralph M. Galt is pastor. The picture was shown following the Sunday school picnic held earlier in the evening in the Concord churchyard.

Our Smithwood Church, Rev. John Bowers, pastor, reports a record attendance at the Sunday school on the last Sunday in August. The Sunday school had 214 present, and it is thought that this was an all-time high for attendance at Smithwood Sunday School. Congratulations to Rev. Mr. Bowers and the Smithwood Church. At the present time, plans are under way to build a parsonage.

The Christian Sun Congratulates Rev. and Mrs. John R. Lackey

In the Southern Convention we are particularly happy to see so many fine young men and women preparing themselves for full time Christian service. We especially want to congratulate Rev. and Mrs. John R. Lackey, a pastor and wife of the REV. AND MRS. LACKEY.

Apple's Chapel Church. Mr. Lackey graduated from Elon College and then went to Duke Divinity School to complete his education. When he entered Duke for his Ministerial training, his wife entered Elon College to complete her work for the B. A. degree. Mr. Lackey graduated at Duke with the B. D. degree in June and Mrs. Lackey received her diploma from Elon College in August. These young people had to work hard and to be very economical with their finances in order to achieve this goal. We are happy that the Ministerial Scholarship Fund of the Southern Convention was able to assist them in their venture. Both of them are well prepared young people now to serve our churches, and we are proud of their achievements. Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Lackey.

Richmond Will Hold Rally Day Services

Sunday, October 4, is Rally Day for all departments in the Richmond, Virginia, Church. It is a time of especial importance to the younger people. Special services are held, merit awards are given and promises made to higher classes.

World Wide Communion will be observed at the eleven o'clock service, when our church will join with all other churches of every race and tongue in this world-wide service.

In the afternoon, the church expects to send a representative group of young people to participate in the Young People's Fall Rally, to be held at the Windsor Church.

Special Notice

Special Harvest Festival programs are available from the Town and Country Department of the Board of Home Missions, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y., at 75c per 100. Send your orders to Dr. Thomas Alfred Tripp at the above address.

Southern Convention Dates to Remember

- | | |
|----------|--|
| October | 6—North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference
First Church, Greensboro, N. C. |
| | 8—Virginia Valley Woman's Missionary Conference
Place to be announced |
| | 14-15—Virginia Valley Annual Conference Session
Bethlehem Church |
| | 20-21—Eastern North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Shallow Well Church |
| | 28-29—Eastern Virginia Annual Conference Session
Rosemont Church, South Norfolk, Va. |
| November | 3-4—Western North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Pleasant Hill Church |
| | 10-11—North Carolina & Virginia Annual Conference Session
Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, N. C. |
| December | 8—Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association
Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va. |

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

The Congregational Christian Layman and His Bible

SUGGESTED HYMNS: "Break Thou the Bread of Life," Wonderful Words of Life."

SUGGESTED SCRIPTURE: Psalms 119, 105-112.

PRAYER: Eternal Father, open our minds to the great truths of eternity. Let us read with understanding hearts and live accordingly. Amen.

MEDITATION:

The Bible is a library, a compilation of 66 different books.

The old Testament is not a record of any one perfect nation but rather a presentation of the histories of many nations and especially of their interpretation of God. The New Testament is a record of the people who knew or saw Jesus and of the actions of His followers.

The Bible should be read with the same respect as any other book. Many people just take it up, let it fall open at any place and begin to read. Ever hear of anyone doing a novel or biography that way! Did you have the thrill of reading the Bible completely through? Every person ought to have that pleasure at least once.

The new interpretation of the Bible has caused much comment. If anyone is surprised or disappointed, they should go back into history just a bit and read the current reports when other translations or interpretations were first introduced. Truly the comment now is mild in comparison to that of other years.

Arguments as to the truth of every statement in the Bible are most interesting, especially to people who do not participate in them but are satisfied to listen in. Ever hear two or more people tell of the movie, accident, radio program or any other event they saw or heard and notice how greatly they differ about the details which just happened? Did Jonah swallow the whale or was it the other way around?

The Bible is a good guide to Christian living today. Most men will admit that they do not comprehend all of its teachings but also confess that it is difficult to live up to all that they do understand. By becoming more familiar with it, they are also challenged to live better lives. It is the Word of Life.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION:

1. Why do not more people read and study the Bible?
2. How can the Bible be made more applicable to modern day living?
3. Why is the Bible important to churchmen?
4. What is the best or correct interpretation of the Bible?
5. Where do Bible preaching and daily living conflict? Why?

* * * * *

Beverly Hills Laymen's Fellowship Begins Second Year

The Layman's Fellowship of the Beverly Hills Christian Church will begin its second year of activity in October. During the first year of activity this group has given tremendous support to the work of the church. They have taken part in both of our lay-visitation programs this year. They have taken also the responsibility of keeping the playground in good condition as well as developing a parking area for our church. The Boy Scout Troop that is in our church is sponsored by this group. During this past year they undertook to raise $300.00 for the Building Fund of our church. This pledge has been paid in full.

(Continued on page 13.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195....

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years—() New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Improving Our Church Reports

By RICHARD K. MORTON

Church reports, all too often, are incomplete, dull, poorly prepared—even downright inaccurate.

Many of our members flee from a business meeting, trustees' gathering, or congregational business session because they fear they will be subjected to some more long, dull, pointless reports.

Why should this situation be—and continue?

Isn't it true that most of us, for years, have presented and expected reports of about the same type—from church officers, societies and individuals. While progress has been marked in church edifices, education and music programs, and almost everywhere else, reports presented to groups in the church and to the church itself run pretty much true to an uninspiring and unimportant form.

There are, we all know, many exceptions to this alleged state of affairs.

A few suggestions might be of help.

Reports, in the first place, should cover a definite project and field. They should be presented for a definite purpose. They should be written or typed with care. They should contain accurate and important information. There is much detail that can mercifully be omitted. It is the highlights, the significant ideas and actions that the church wants.

These reports should be presented at times when they have a chance to get a proper hearing, and they should contain only what is worth preserving. They should be in such a form that data of continuing information can remain accessible to the congregation. Even good written reports are usually swallowed up by the clerk's or secretary's records—and never heard from again. Many of our churches never go over their papers and records from year to year.

It is time, also, to put a little freshness, modernness, imagination and color into these reports.

Who says they have to be a painful, written record of a lot of dull routine?

A large church of my acquaintance had the real meat of several reports from committees put on the stage in dramatic or panel form. The pastor and his wife sat on the stage and primed the various chairmen and members to bring out the significant ideas and acts of their group—and the most salient features were then written on a blackboard, and some were later mimeographed in brief form.

Still another church put the gist of its important committee reports on slides and had a projec-tor party—with the most important reports of church life presented in this type of visual or pictorial form.

We also are familiar with the United Fund flip-over charts which have been so widely used in recent years. It is easy for a group of young people to take the main ideas from committee and officers' reports and put them on pages of a chart, to be flipped over at will by the one presenting them.

There is no law—ecclesiastical or statutory—saying that church reports must be dull, statistical, and plodding. They can—and should—contain humor and personal sidelights that increase interest and the will to remember what is being reported. I advise a good deal of color and the introduction of some new twist—e. g., the introduction of some member or exhibit of the work being done, the telling of a story, and so on.

I sometimes wonder what good it is for parliamentary practice to call for the acceptance of verbal reports. What good would it do to reject them—and if accepted, what becomes of them?

We lose a great deal by having so often uninspired, long-winded, and utterly uninteresting business meetings, and presenting unimportant and uninteresting reports. Most of these are too long or they omit the most valuable information. They hold to the ancient notion of detailed written reports, when now-a-days we ought to use other means. Many churches, of course, omit verbally presented reports, in the interest of time and sanity, making certain data available in printed or mimeographed form. But why can't we start using films and charts and drama and panels and much more, as means of getting our reports across? Who wants to listen to a droning of routine matters?

How often, also, have we had verbal reports presented too rapidly or prolifically or in situations where the speakers simply cannot be heard! If we are going to have reports, let's set the stage properly—and not present them when it is late and everybody is anxious to get home!

I make a motion for some lively, timely, vital church reports—and I am sure such can be the regular order if we give this matter a little more thought. It would be rewarding to do so!

* * * * *

In the coming conference sessions, a large part of what Dr. Morton has said in regard to church reports might well be applied to those to conference. There is more verbiage than thought in many of these reports.

Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein Tells Us

The Ideal Church Member

Is Not Necessarily a Perfect Man

To be an active member of a church of the living, loving God, is the highest privilege which any person has of choosing for oneself. No thinking person claims or thinks that the church is perfect or without its shortcomings. But nevertheless, in spite of its weaknesses which may be many, it is the greatest and most important institution in the world, because it has the greatest commission from the highest authority—"Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel."

It is true that some churches are little more than mutual admiration societies. But every church which is dedicated to the service of God for every age group and for all conditions of life, is a commissioned representative of Jesus Christ, the world's Saviour and Lord.

The terms "ideal" and "perfect" are not synonymous. There are many ideal citizens, ideal husbands, ideal wives, ideal sons, ideal daughters, but none qualify as being perfect. Likewise there are many ideal church members, and each church has its quota of such or it would soon cease to be a church—but no church has any perfect members. However, every person who is truly interested in and sincerely devoted to his church, and is honestly seeking to do his part in its life and service is an "ideal" member.

There are many kinds of churches, and many kinds of church members. Some churches lay their main emphasis on creeds—others lay their major emphasis on deeds. Some churches deal mainly with the past. Their message deals with what God did in Bible days and in past generations, instead of with what God wishes to do for our day and our generation. To them the Golden Age lies in the past. But the test of faith is not what a person believes God did 2,000 years ago, but what one believes God can do for individuals, homes, and nations in our day and our generations—what He can do and wish to do today. God expects that churches of today shall do more than reverence the past. He expects that every church shall believe in the possibilities of the present and believe in the future. He wants every church to cherish enthusiastic hope for the future. The ideal church member is the person who appreciates the contribution the past has made to the present, and dedicates himself to helping the present make a still larger contribution to the future.

The ideal church member expresses his faith in deeds rather than in words. He cherishes a warm interest in the church and in its program and its progress. A person dismembers himself from the church by want of interest and by indifference to its needs and its claims upon his time and support. To be a member of the church, one has to do more than unite with it, he has to be concerned about its welfare. He has to be a vital part of its life.

The ideal church member loves his church. He is not content just to sing praises to God—he wants to do something definite for God and his church. He wants to keep the fires of religion burning brightly upon the altar of his own heart and upon the altar of his church. Some people want to play around the fire of religion, but would rather let the fire go out than to add the fuel of their own consecration and cooperation to keep the fire burning.

Jesus proved his Son-ship by "going about doing good." Likewise church members can prove their discipleship only by "going about doing good." Ideal church members are not content to say nice things about God. They are committed to the doing of worthy things for God and for his church and for his world. The Ideal Church Member seeks to live his religion instead of merely talking about it. And he absolutely refuses to argue about it. He doesn't like argument. He may not agree with the minister's ideas and programs. In fact he may not agree with anybody in some things, but he acts like a Christian in his disagreements and in all his relationships of life. He agrees to disagree in a friendly way.

I never saw the man, but I know what kind of a man he must have been, for his partner during eighteen long years told me this concerning the man,—“I was with him in business for 18 years. I never saw him lose his temper—never saw him take advantage of anyone—never saw him pessimistic—never knew him to misrepresent anything he sold—never knew him to speak evil of anyone—never knew him to do a mean act of any kind.” And said he, “His wife was just as good a woman as he was a man. They never missed a service at their church if physically able to attend.” Anyone would have to concede that such people qualified as ideal church members, even their most ardent friends would not contend that they were perfect.

The ideal church member lays no claim to being perfect. Beware of anyone who does make such claim. And beware of anyone who advertises his own superior honesty and goodness. The ideal church member deplores his own shortcomings and seeks each day to live a better life. He believes in and practices the prayer life. He includes others in his prayers. He practices forgiveness toward others. He refuses to retaliate. He is charitable in all things, always giving others the benefit of the doubt. He is candid and fair, always treating people the same to their back as to their faces. He is always dependable; and never vacillating. He is always hopeful for the future—always courageous in promoting the right.

People who sincerely seek to serve God to the best of their ability qualify as ideal church members. Jesus said, “I come not to do mine own will but the will of him that sent me.” Ideal church members are not concerned about having “their way,” but they are passionately concerned about God's way.

The greatset heresay of all time is the heresay of professing to love God, and being content to do nothing for God or his church. The greatest tragedy of life is for a person not to take religion seriously until a tornado or hurricane or some other calamity comes his way,—or when the sands of life are almost run out to then begin to realize that the church of the living, loving God should be his major concern.

Jesus made very plain the divine requirements that qualify a person as “an ideal church member,”—“Not everyone that saith unto me, ‘Lord, Lord,’ shall inherit the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.”

Our Churches Report . . .

Reporting on Our Four Newest Churches

Reports have recently been published in THE CHRISTIAN SUN regarding our newest church—First Congregational Church, Hendersonville, North Carolina. However, it should be reported now that the church has received five (5) new members during the last week, and Dr. C. M. Heymann, minister, reports very favorably reaction to the affiliation of the church with the North Carolina-Virginia Conference of Congregational Christian Churches. The church is purchasing new Pilgrim Hymnals.

The Lake View Community Church, near Burlington, North Carolina, is our next youngest church. It was organized just over a year ago, with Rev. John G. Truitt, Jr., the pastor. The church completed its new building back in April, 1953, and the attendance has been excellent since that time. They have approximately one hundred at Sunday school and several new members have been added. The church is paying off its building obligations more rapidly than they first thought they could do. Mr. Truitt finished his work there on the last Sunday of August and it was our pleasure to be there for the service and to participate in the Baptismal Services and the Communion Service. Nine new members have recently been received into the church. Commendation should be given to John G. Truitt, Jr. for the splendid job he did at Lake View. We feel that this church will be one of our strong churches around Burlington. They have a loyal membership, and they love their church.

Burlington, "Beverly Hills," continues to make splendid progress under the leadership of Rev. Walstein W. Snyder. Organized in 1952 this church got off to a slow start but they now have approximately one hundred (100) members and one hundred forty-four (144) in the Sunday school. They have an average attendance at the morning worship and also at the Sunday school of over a hundred. The small building is being taxed to capacity, and is hoped that the building program may be undertaken during the latter part of 1953 or the early part of 1954. The church is now in a church building fund raising campaign and they are hoping that a building loan and grant will come from our church building society of the Board of Home Missions. This church is going to be one of our fine churches in the North Carolina-Virginia Conference.

Zion Congregational Christian Church, near Burlington, was organized in 1948, but it got off to a slow start and did not grow very rapidly. However, during the past six months the church membership has increased by nearly twenty-five (25), the Sunday school enrollment is now well over one hundred (100). Fred H. Wrenn, a student at Elon College, is the pastor, and we are much encouraged over this rapidly growing area, and are pleased with the progress of our church there. At a recent revival meeting, seventeen new members were added to the church.

These are days when we of the Southern Convention ought to be interested in starting new churches, and the support of our Church Building Loan Fund Campaign will add substantially to the possibility of helping to provide proper church buildings for these growing and new churches.

WM. T. SCOTT.

* * * * *

Second Church, Norfolk

The growth and development of a new church or a relocated congregation is a challenge that should delight the heart of any minister. Generally speaking, this growth is not of mushroom proportions. It is slow, gradual—"line upon line, precept upon precept"—growth. In my judgment this is best, because it gives opportunity for the assimilation of the new members and the discovery of any latent talent.

On the other side of the ledger is recorded the material growth of the church. This, too, has been gradual and encouraging at Second Church, Norfolk. A new organ was installed at the time of the relocation and reconstruction. Early this year a Spinnet piano was added to the musical instruments of the sanctuary.

Now a public address system has been installed so that the morning worship service can be heard by those in charge of the nursery at the eleven o'clock hour. This installation is a gift by Major and Mrs. A. P. Trapnell, who are not members of the church but attend our worship services regularly. The public address system was used for the first time on Sunday, September 13.

We are fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. R. L. Bailey, a trained nurse, as superintendent of the nursery.

Commendation should be given many of the members at the Second Church for their generous contribution of time, talents and treasure, which has resulted in its growth and the effectiveness of its services.

J. EVERETTE NEESE,
Pastor.

* * * * *

News from Amelia

The Amelia Christian Church, near Clayton, North Carolina, held its annual Rally Day on Sunday, September 13. We contacted all members who are unable to attend regularly as well as those that might be termed "inactive," and urged them to fellowship with us on that day.

We had Sunday school, followed by church services at the usual time, our worship service being conducted by our minister, Rev. John Littiken.

At noon, everyone was invited to enjoy the luncheon which was spread on the grounds following the church service.

In the afternoon, a very inspirational play, "The Friendly Church," was presented by a group of our church members. Musical numbers were given by some of our special guests and some of our own members, which were enjoyed very much.

Christians have a wonderful time when they get together, for we have found that we can have fun and be reverent and maintain a Christlike ideal at the same time. So Amelia has declared Rally Day as a day of Christian fellowship.

MARY JOHNSON,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Homecoming at Mt. Olivet (G.)

Sunday, September 20, was Homecoming at Mt. Olivet (Green County) of the Valley of Virginia Conference. Superintendent Wm. T. Scott was the speaker for the morning service.
(Continued on page 11.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Family Foundations

More and more our church people are becoming interested in Elon College. They are proud of its past, they have faith in its present, and high hopes for its future. There are two ways in which our people express their interest and confidence in their College:

First, to entrust their children to its campus and faculty for training and guidance. There is no surer way to convince the general public of one's interest in his college than to enroll his children as students in that college. A few months ago one of our ministers said to me, "I was greatly disappointed last week when one of my members said to me, 'I had thought of sending my children to Elon College, but — did not send his children there; it is his college and I thought that if it had been all right, he would have sent his children to Elon, so I sent mine elsewhere.' " It has been true since the beginning of time that actions speak louder than words.

The other way in which the members of our church express their interest in our College is to give their money for its support; not only for current expenses and capital improvements but for foundations, making their contributions a part of the endowment funds of the College with specific instructions that the principal never be spent or endangered, but that the College would have free and unrestricted use of the income from such investments. This is a sure way of establishing a permanent memorial to a family or to a specific loved one or loved ones who have passed from labor to reward. There are four families in the church who have chosen to memorialize their loved ones by this method.

Sue Boddie Macon Memorial—Several years ago, Miss Margaret Alston, of our Liberty Church, Vance County, North Carolina, made a pledge of $500 to the College with the instruction that this was to constitute a memorial to her niece, Miss Sue Boddie Macon, who had recently lost her life in an accident on a boat running from Washington, D. C., to Norfolk, Virginia. Mrs. Macon, Sue Boddie Macon's mother, has joined with her sister in pledging a like amount for this memorial. Other members of the family and friends of the family will add their contributions to this fund.

Gertrude Gibson Bondurant Memorial—On September 18, 1952, Founders' Day at Elon College, Mr. H. L. Bondurant, a member of our Rosemont Church, came into my office and in an affectionate way gave me $100 in memory of his good wife who had recently passed away. Mr. Bondurant did not make this initial gift as a contribution to a foundation to be established as a foundation memorializing Mrs. Bondurant, but I assured him that the gift was too sacred to put in the current funds and spent along with other monies, but that I would invest it and twice annually he would have the satisfaction and joy of knowing that his wife was really making a contribution to his College. The idea was not only acceptable to Mr. Bondurant but very pleasing to him. He and his family have since added $300 to the initial gift and expect to continue to add to it until the foundation has reached an amount worthy of the name and the memory of so good a person who gave her life to the Lord and to his church.

Reverend T. B. Dawson Memorial Bible Fund—Years before Mr. Dawson's death, he came to my office one morning, expressed his interest in the College and his desire to do something worthwhile, but assured me that he was not able financially to do what he wanted to do. Then he took from his pocket a $10 gold piece, explaining that he had kept this for years and years and it was all that he had to give. He said that he would give it with the hope that it would be invested and the income added to the principal until it reached a sizable sum. The members of his family, knowing of this gift and desire, expressed an interest and a desire to add to the $10 and to build this fund as a Bible Fund in memory of their father. The principal is to be invested and not to be spent, the income from this particular investment is to be used to reimburse the College for Bibles presented to the graduating class on Commencement occasions. To date, $200 has been added to this fund. The children of the late Reverend Mr. Dawson expect to add considerable amounts to this fund annually with the purpose of building it to an amount worthy of their father and of his children.

Elizabeth Moring Boone Memorial—Dr. W. H. Boone, an alumnus of the College and Chairman of the Board of Trustees for a number of years and a generous supporter of the College, recently expressed his increased interest in the institution in a very definite way. He very generously set up a $25,000 memorial fund for Elon College through the Durham Bank and Trust Company, Durham, North Carolina. The principal is to be a part of the permanent funds of the College, the income therefrom is to be paid to the College by the Trust Company annually and preferably to be used for the advancement of the Fine Arts Program at the College. This is a very thoughtful and generous act on the part of Dr. Boone; one that will bear dividends for the College as a memorial to his beloved wife who gave her life to her Lord and to the Church. She did not need a material memorial to be remembered. She had built her life into the life of her church that will be an everlasting memorial to her so long as those who knew her live. The foundation established at Elon College will live on and on from generation to generation because of the affection and the generosity of her beloved husband, Dr. W. H. Boone.

Lewis L. Moore Music Fund—Mr. Lewis L. Moore of Moore Music Company, Greensboro, North Carolina, is not a member of the Congregational Christian Church nor an alumnus of the College. He has a great appreciation of Elon College's musical program and its faculty. Having received assistance himself, he is anxious to give assistance to other needy college students. He has established the Lewis L. Moore Music Fund at Elon College. The principal is not to be spent but to be lent to worthy students with proper endorsement to make sure that the fund will not be dissipated. It is Mr. Moore's hope and purpose to establish a revolving loan fund for worthy students. Beginning last year, he has made five different contributions to the fund totalling $450. This is a noble expression of interest in the College on the part of Mr. Moore and his generosity is greatly appreciated.

These memorial funds being established have comparatively small be-

(Continued on page 9.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

World Community Day Reminder

I wish to remind all Woman's Missionary Societies in the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference that World Community Day is drawing near.

Order program material at once. Organize committees and make a thorough study of subject matter. Enter into it wholeheartedly, that the service may be a real worship, which will bring lasting blessings.

A program hurriedly gotten up and gone through formally cannot bring with it the blessings we will receive if we "study to show ourselves approved unto God, workmen that needeth not to be ashamed."

MRS. W. H. JOHNSON.

* * * * *

Report of Liberty (Vance) Women's Work

The past year has been one of activity and enthusiasm for the women of the Liberty (Vance) Church. In many respects it might be called a year of beginnings. Following is a running report of our activities:

We have held all our regular meetings. Our programs have been interesting and well prepared, most of them coming from the material in the packet. We have had all our mission study courses, presented by the following members of our own group: Mrs. S. F. Journigan reviewing the Home Mission book, These Rights We Hold; Mrs. B. O. Eaves presenting our Foreign Mission study on Africa; Mrs. Calvin Aysene conducting our Bible study. We have used the film strip on Africa. Also, the film "More for Peace," was presented in a public service. Our Thank Offering project was presented in a public service in November, at which time an offering was taken for our Carroll County Mission.

Interdenominational Observances.

The three special days of our women's work were observed with well-planned programs presented in public interdenominational services. Each of these was a source of inspiration.

1. World Community Day. This observance consisted of a well-planned worship service built around the theme, "Christian Foundations for Lasting Peace." This was followed by the religious film, "More for Peace." Also, at this service our women brought layettes as their gifts.

2. World Day of Prayer. This was a most inspirational service conducted jointly by the women of our church and the local Baptist Church.

3. May Fellowship Day. At this service Mrs. Carl Wallace was our speaker and did a magnificent job of

Directions for Reaching North Carolina Conference

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Mrs. W. E. Wiseman got their heads together and drew up this suggested plan for reaching the First Congregational Christian Church in Greensboro on Tuesday, October 6:

Go west on West Market Street (Highways 29 and 70). Where these highways turn left, you turn right on Aycock Street. Go one block and turn left (west) on Friendly Road. Follow this to the fork where Radiance Drive veers right. If you cannot see the street sign, you can see the church on Radiance Drive.

And this is a last reminder that we want to see cars from every church in North Carolina, whether you have a woman's society or not, headed toward Greensboro on next Tuesday.

presenting our theme: "Citizenship—Our Christian Concern."

Special Activities.

In December we had our big Christmas program, and for our friendly service project gifts for Ellis Island were brought. Also, our Cradle Roll Department shared in this project with gifts of toys.

In May we observed and promoted Family Week. The first Sunday was Family Sunday and our morning worship service was in keeping with the day, our people sitting in family groups for the service. Friday night was observed as Family Night. This was an evening of variety, with worship, music and fellowship for the entire family.

Our women were well represented at Fall Conference at Apple's Chapel, the Spring District Rally at Chapel Hill, and the Woman's Convention at Burlington. These meetings each gave us a sense of belonging to the greater Fellowship of our Congregational Christian Women.

We have met all our apportionments for the year and gave a life memorial for the late Dr. C. E. Newman. Our women have been very active in friendly service in the community, doing many kindnesses for the sick, bereaved, and needy. A group of the older women made five comforters for the Orphanage.

Several local projects have been undertaken with much success. We purchased two gas heaters for the annex. We also furnished and arranged flowers for the church each Sunday. We have furnished and served suppers to the Senior Young People of our church at regular intervals.

Local Society Reorganizes.

The highlight of the year came when we reorganized our women's work. We formerly had a Missionary Society which was made up of comparatively small number of active members. This was reorganized into our Women's Fellowship, having as its goal the active enlistment of every woman in the church. The Fellowship is made up of four Circles, each one meeting monthly. The entire Fellowship meets once each quarter. We feel that we have come to a new day in our women's work. Much enthusiasm has been shown and we are working to reach our goal. Our membership has grown and the attendance has more than tripled.

Our greater Women's Fellowship was launched with the observance of Women's Sunday in our church. This was a big day. A special effort was made to have every woman of the church present for the morning worship service. The women had charge of the entire service, using as their theme "We Dedicate Ourselves." The program consisted of a worship service, a statement of purpose, aims, and goals. The guest speaker was Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, who brought a most fitting message and the needed inspiration. At the close of the service our women dedicated themselves individually and collectively to a greater work in our church and in the Kingdom.

We are indeed proud of the progress that has been made in our women's work. Mrs. B. B. Beckham, our retiring president, is to be commended for her untiring efforts and faithfulness in leading our work during the past year. New officers have been elected and installed in a very impressive candlelighting service. Mrs.

B. M. Newman is our new president. The Program Committee has prepared an attractive year book laying out programs and plans for our work during the coming year.

We are ready now to go forward into our new year with a keen feeling of enthusiasm manifested throughout our Fellowship. If we can maintain this spirit of eagerness and loyalty, we shall not fail. And to what greater task could we dedicate ourselves?

MRS. W. A. GRISSOM.

* * * * *

Mt. Carmel

We feel that the Woman's Missionary Society of Mt. Carmel Church, Walters, Va., has had a real good year, and has accomplished much in the work of the Master.

Each monthly meeting has been well attended, having had interesting programs taken from the packet prepared for us by the Convention Office.

All of our study books have been reviewed in joint session with other churches. We have been fortunate in having Mrs. J. F. Morgan review our Bible study.

The World Day of Prayer, May Fellowship Day and World Community Day have been observed. We have also presented a public program and celebrated Family Life with a dinner meeting and entertainment afterwards.

In appreciation for our treasurer, Mrs. Julian Carr, who has served our Society over a long period of years, we have given a Life Membership.

Our Society has had a Thank Offering program, having sent the offering to the suggested project, and, too, our Friendly Service gifts were sent to Ellis Island.

We have had good representation at the Fall Conference and Spring Rally—have met our apportionment for the year and made our reports quarterly to the Woman's Missionary Conference Treasurer.

As we go forward into a new year with our membership increasing, we hope to accomplish bigger and better things for Christ's Kingdom.

MRS. BONNIE CARR.

NEWS OF ELON COLLEGE.

(Continued from page 7.)

ginnings, with the exception of one, but they have great possibilities. As the ones establishing these funds increase in wealth, their interest and affection will likewise increase and by and by they will reach such proportions as to be of significance to the College, the institution that is near to their hearts. This one thing should be of encouragement to these and all others that this is one way by which names of individuals and families will be made to live in the minds and hearts of the constituents of Elon College for all time to come and at the same time they will be making telling contributions to the College, to our Church, and to our hearts. There are scores and hundreds of other families who could and should establish worthwhile foundations in memory of their loved ones and families.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

In checking the apportionment fund of 1952-53 with 1951-52, it is revealed that total contributions by our Sunday schools and churches to the Elon College apportionment is a little more than $1,000 less than a year ago. The total, including this weeks report, is $7,271.91.

We are within a short while of the beginning of our annual conferences at which time it is hoped that all conference apportionment for the College will be paid in full. When you consider the amount apportioned, $15,000, the amount received, $7,271.91, and the amount to be paid, $7,728.09, it is evident that we have a good ways to go, but I am sure that we will reach the goal. Certainly we shall in light of the present financial condition of the College and its evident needs. Surely no Sunday school or church would pass its college up in a day like this. More and more it is evident that Christian education is particularly needed if we are to have a Christian civilization. It is also evident that if our Christian institutions are to continue, that our churches must provide the funds necessary for their continuance. I know of no place you can put your money where it will constitute a more profitable investment than in our Christian College. Certainly we shall not fail in this hour of need.

Previously Reported	$7,043.34
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Beulah	$ 18.00
Liberty (Vance)	50.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Antioch	$ 20.00
Oakland S. S.	31.20
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Durham S. S.	$ 30.96
Liberty S. S.	28.41
Virginia Valley Conference:
Leaksville	$ 50.00
	288.57
Total to date	$ 7,271.91

A Tribute

The First Church of Burlington, North Carolina has suffered two irreparable losses during the past month. C. R. Faucette passed away on Saturday, September 12 and H. G. McBane sustained a tragic and fatal accident by rifle shot on Monday, September 14.

Cliff Faucette joined our church on May 31, 1925. During these twenty-eight years he served on numerous boards and committees, was a generous supporter, attended regularly the sessions of the Loyal Men's Bible Class and the services of morning worship. His community interests were many and his leadership was valued in many quarters. His gift of land in the Lakeview Community was the initial inspiration for the Lakeview Community Church established there by the Mission Board. His lodges, church, business, and community will miss his presence and his loyalty. To his family this church and church school extend their deepest sympathy and pledge their thoughts and prayers in the days to come.

Grady McBane has touched more lives than any other Burlington citizen in this generation. He was principal of Hillcrest School for twenty-three years and in the public school system of this city for twenty-five years. He served without thought of self. He loved his "children" and his school. He was a member of the Spring Friends Meeting and his Quaker conscience demanded honesty, industry, and harmony. He loved nature and took great interest in birds, flowers, and trees. He was for a number of years a most efficient and effective teacher of the Loyal Men's Bible SClass. He prepared his lessons carefully and they were always helpful and stimulating. To Mrs. McBane and Patsy this congregation extends its deepest love and loyalty in the spirit of gratitude for this gracious and unselfish friend who lived and labored among us.

HENRY E. ROBINSON.

Moody once told the story of a man who, in a dream, went to heaven and became acquainted with a glorious saint. After a while they began to speak of their earthly lives. "I came from America," said one of them. "So did I," said the other. "I was brought up in the city of H." "So was I." "I was a member of Dr. Huss' church." "So was I." Yet they had to go to heaven to get acquainted.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

"They Are All Looking for You."

PART III.—TEACH US HOW TO PRAY.

By BESSIE P. SLOAN.

Peter stood close beside Jesus, looking down on the Sea of Galilee and all the little towns clustered around it. He was thinking of the harvest of people of which Jesus had spoken and of his strange request, "Pray that the owner of the harvest will send reapers to gather it." Suddenly he heard voices, and there, still a good way down the trail, were Andrew and Levi. They had become uneasy because they had entirely lost sight of Peter. They hallooed loudly, then waited for a response. Peter shouted an answer, and dashed down the steep path to break the news to them, leaving Jesus to follow alone.

"The Master is not going back to Capernaum," he asserted breathlessly. "We have to go to all these other towns. Look! as far as you can see—so that he can teach in every one of them."

"But what of all those people who are waiting for him to come back, just to catch a glimpse of him," Andrew began. But Peter interrupted.

"Of course the Master would like to help them, but there are so many others who are sick and unhappy and in sin, who need someone to cure them, too. That's what he said."

"Do you know," said Levi, "that's what I admire so tremendously about Jesus. He doesn't hesitate to turn down the highest honors to help someone who needs him. That's why he left my house that time, you remember, before the feast was nearly over. There he comes; I must speak to him." The others saw Jesus striding down the hill toward them, his voice raised in song—a familiar song of their nation:

The Lord doth build up Jerusalem:
He gathereth the outcasts of Israel.
He healeth the broken in heart,
And bindeth up their wounds!

In silence Peter and Andrew went on down the path, Levi and Jesus following. At the foot of the hill they met John and James who looked rather disappointed and cross. The crowd had grown tired of waiting to see the Master, and had slipped away, a few at a time, until no one was left. Peter explained the present plan of action, and while they waited for Jesus and Levi to overtake them, John asked eagerly, "Was he praying when you found him?"

"Well, no, not exactly. But he did say that the reason he came out here was to talk things over with his Father, you know, as he always speaks of God."

"How can he know what God wants him to do? How does God tell him?" James sounded rather doubtful.

"I don't know as he ever really spoke to me," Peter said thoughtfully, "but once I did feel as if he were near. That was down by the sea shore when I first looked into the eyes of Jesus. And then today up

CHURCH BUILDING FUND

ESSAY CONTEST

WINNERS

Elizabeth Lester

and

Judy Bason

there, away off from everybody, where everything was so—so kind of still; I almost believe that God could speak there."

As Jesus came up they decided to ask him about it. So, after they had turned off on the road that leads to Chorazin, Andrew blurted it out. "Master, we want to learn to pray as you do." "Yes, we all wish you would teach us to pray." It must be a very long prayer, Master, to take all morning as you do," Levi said earnestly. James snickered while his brother said under his breath, "That's what he learns from associating with those heathen!"

Jesus did not laugh, but said gravely. "The heathen think it is for the amount they say that God hears them. You must know that it is how much you mean it rather than how much you say. What is there that you want so deeply that you would really mean it in a prayer?" They looked surprised, but Peter was noticing the fields of wheat along the road, and the men who were beginning to reap. A great wave of desire arose in his heart. He turned to Jesus.

"I want most of all that Jesovah would send reapers to gather the people into his kingdom," he said earnestly. Jesus looked at him questioningly. "It would not take long to pray to our Father, 'Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth.' But we might have to wait quite a while for the answer." "How long?" asked Levi. "I don't know."

James was the next one to speak. "Sometimes we worry for fear we may not have enough bread to eat every day." Jesus smiled. "It wouldn't take many words to ask God to give us the bread for each day, would it?" He surely knows we need it, and usually He gives it before we ask,—and clothing and shelter, too. But you are more likely to have all these things if you want His kingdom most of all."

Levi had been striding along a little apart from the rest, not taking part in their discussion, but thinking of his previous work which he now felt to have been wrong. "Master," he began in a very low voice, "some of us want more than anything else to be forgiven for the wrong we have done all our life. I want to start life new." Jesus looked at him quickly. "God has forgiven you already," he said. "But have you forgiven everyone who wrongs you?" glancing in the direction of John and James, who looked very much ashamed. "For unless you can forgive others you aren't likely to believe that God can forgive you."

For a moment no one spoke, then John voiced the feelings of all when he said, "I feel like two cents! You know that old, old prayer, 'Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me.' I could pray that right now, and mean it more than I ever meant any prayer before!"

"When we can pray that and mean it, we give God a chance to deliver us. That person is saved from great evil and from the temptations that come to all of us," Jesus said. Again there was silence.

Suddenly Peter spoke. "Master, can God send reapers if no one will go?" "What do you think, Peter?" asked Jesus.

There was great gladness in Peter's voice as he answered, "I can go myself. I will help with the reaping!"

Then—"We will help, too." "Master, let us too!"

(Continued on page 13.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Reidsville Reports

The Pilgrim Fellowship of the Reidsville Congregational Christian Church has participated in and enjoyed a very active year of work under the leadership of Angas Barber, president; Shelby Dill, vice-president; Wilma Saunders, secretary-treasurer; and Mrs. Ed Chilton, our advisor.

We began our year of work in October 1952 with a Weiner Roast at Bill Green's cabin at Brown Summit. Hostesses for this event included: Billie Stanley, Mildred Clapp, Angas Barber, and Marian Frost. A large group attended. Immediate business was attended to, and future plans for the year were made.

During December the Fellowship visited a convalescent home entertained its members with an inspirational devotional and distributed gifts among the elderly residents of the home. On Christmas Eve our group enjoyed an evening of caroling followed by an hour of fellowship and refreshment at the home of our pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Tucker G. Humphries.

During January, plans were made for Youth Week and our attention was called to the forthcoming Spring Rally; we also planned for our annual barbecue supper, proceeds from which furnish our hospital tray, a weekly project which this group has carried on for the past several years. We served this supper on February 20, and realized a profit of $150.

At Easter the group sponsored a breakfast at the Sanitary Cafe. A good number attended this breakfast which took place after the Community Sunrise Service in our church.

During the summer we had a weiner roast, as well as other outings at homes of various members. Ann Black and Gloria Woodall represented our group at the Y. P. Summer Conference at Elon. Shelby Dill and Ann Black were delegates to the August weekend retreat at Camp Crabtree.

At our August meeting new officers were elected for the coming year. These officers, who began their duties in September, include: Shelby

Dill, president; Dorothy Hall, vice-president; Patsy Chrismon, secretary-treasurer, and Ann Marie Somers, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Other projects in which we have participated during the year are: The Work Day of Christ, which netted us $50 for the Carroll County Project—and a dedication service as a climax to the Work Day; we also wrote letters and sent a Christmas box to John Warner, a service boy and former member of our group; we aided a needy family at Thanksgiving. During the winter our group made monthly Sunday evening visits to shutins.

We have long felt the need for a recording machine for our church, so we sold vanilla flavoring this year and were given a recorder.

A resume of the year's activities would be incomplete without a word of thanks to the hostesses who so graciously entertained us at our monthly meetings. These include: Patsy Chrismon, Peggy McClintock, Wilma Saunders, Barbara Brown, Shelby and Dorothy Dill, Gloria Woodall, Ann Black, Jo Anne Lasley, and Ann Marie Somers. The programs at our meetings have been interesting and varied. We have used the programs from the packet, supplemented by other worthwhile and interesting materials.

We are looking forward to another year of active Christian discipleship, worship, and fun together. Already, we are planning for attendance at and participation in the Fall Rally at Bethlehem Church. During this year we are hoping also to construct a cabin at Moonelon.

MARIAN FOUST,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Please read the fine report from the Reidsville Youth Fellowship before you read any farther in this. It is much more important. Many thanks to Marian Foust for sending in a nice, typed report of their year's activities.

* * *

Seems to me that one of the things that is the matter with the world today is the idea that it is easier to run down hill than it is to run up hill. It ain't so. Try it. Pertty soon you'll get to going so fast you'll fall flat on your face. Don't get up. Just lie there and see if you don't think it's really easier to run up hill.

* * *

English Lesson.

The most bitter word is "alone."
The most revered word is "mother."
The most tragic is "death."
The saddest is "forgotten."
The most beautiful, "love."
The most cruel, "revenge."
The warmest word is "friendship."
The coldest is "no."
The most peaceful is "tranquility."

I think this is a pretty good list. Maybe you have a better one of your own. If so, send it in.

* * *

Have ye read that article about Reidsville yet? You boys, pardon me, young men, in the Reidsville section might be interested in the fact that there are a good many more girls in their group than there are boys.

* * *

Could you say that an animal doctor (I can't spell that other word) who doctors a duck is a quack doctor? I just got ashamed of myself and looked the word up. It is spelled veterinarian.

* * *

Let Us Pray

Not so much for an easier task,
But for strength to do the one we have.

OUR CHURCHES REPORT.

(Continued from page 6.)

ice. The church has just completed a renovation program, in which they have added two new Sunday school rooms and beautified the sanctuary, including a new chancel and altar. This is a great improvement over the old church, and this congregation is to be congratulated on the splendid job they have done. It was under the leadership of former pastors, particularly Rev. S. E. Madren, that these improvements have been made. It was the privilege of Superintendent Scott to assist the church in raising funds for this important work.

A goodly number was present for the service on September 20, and it is expected that this church will continue to make fine progress. The new pastor, Rev. Henry V. Harmon, will begin his work there this week, serving also Bethel and Mt. Olivet (R.) churches.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

God's Design for New Men

LESSON II—OCTOBER 11, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my ordinances and do them.—Ezekiel 36:27.

LESSON: Jeremiah 31:31-34; I Peter 1:13-16, 22-23.

DEVOTIONAL READING: John 3:1-11.

Jeremiah and Peter lived centuries apart. But they had much in common. The world of both men was "in a mess." The times were out of joint. The nation of Jeremiah had failed in its high purpose, and had been untrue to its high calling. Jeremiah likens the situation in which a woman proves unfaithful to her husband. It had broken its covenant with Jehovah, who had "taken them by the hand and led them out of Egypt." In spite of this fact, God loved the nation, and was seeking to save it. Here as always, God took the initiative.

As was the situation in Jeremiah's time, so was it in Peter's time. The Roman empire was corrupt, degenerate, and doomed. The old religions had decayed and were dead or dying. There was no hope for the world in its own wisdom and strength. And even as Jeremiah looked forward to the coming of the One Who was the of the world, so Peter looked back to the Coming of the One Who was the Saviour of the world. As Jeremiah looked forward to the One Who could make men new, Peter wrote about the One Who had already done just that thing. In both worlds there was a common need—new, clean, strong, godly men.

And of course, that is the need of the world today. There is nothing basically wrong in the life of the world today, that good men could not cure. Government does not need a change, so much as it needs changed men. Industry does not need to be changed; it needs changed men to run it. As was stated in last week's Notes, there can be no new world without new men. The only way to change the world is to change men. It is all summed up in the story of the man who bought a large, jig-saw puzzle map of the world, and gave it to his son to put together. He promised him a reward if he accomplished the task in one day, and only half as much reward if it took two days. In a surprisingly short time the lad showed his father the map of the world with every piece in its proper place. When asked how he had done the thing so quickly, the son replied, "Before you mixed up the pieces, I noticed that there was a picture of a man on the back of the puzzle, and when I got the man right, I had the world right." There it is as simple as that—get men right and you get the world right.

But of course, even though it is simple as that, it is not easy. It is blasphemy to say that human nature cannot be changed. But it is unrealistic to say that it can be changed easily. Man can, to some extent reform himself, and perhaps to some extent, reform others—although that is somewhat dangerous and difficult business, as many a woman who married a man to reform him has discovered. But only God can transform a man. There is a place for men and women who are reformers; there is an urgent need for men and women who have been transformed.

The New Covenant.

Jeremiah writes about the "new covenant." It stands in contrast to the "old covenant." The latter was given to the nation at Sinai, and was a matter of law, and was external. It was written on tablets of stone. It—the Ten Commandments—is still the basic law of life. It has never been repealed. It had its place and its value. Paul says that it was our "schoolmaster to bring us to Christ." Adapted to the childhood of the race, it served its purpose admirably. But while it told men what they should do, and should not do—the fact is that the Ten Commandments are chiefly negative—it did not give men the power to do what it told them to do, or to refrain from doing what it told them not to do. The spirit might have been willing, but the flesh was weak.

In opposition to this "old covenant," Jeremiah tells about a "new covenant." This "new covenant" will be written, not on tablets of stone, but within the hearts of men. "I will put my law in their inward parts, and in their hearts will I write it," says God. It will not be a covenant or a law forced on man by God. It will be a personal covenant the distinguishing mark of which will be its inwardness. A simple illustration will make clear what all this means. You cannot make an American love his country by forcing him to salute the flag. But if a man loves America, if he appreciates the great principles for which the flag stands, he will salute it unconsciously, and gladly.

We come here, of course, to the crux of the problem of being a Christian. Thousands of Christians are striving earnestly and desperately to be good by obeying laws and rules. To be sure there are standards of Christian conduct to be observed. But the secret of true Christian living is simply to have in one's heart the spirit of Christ, to allow Him to order our lives from within, to surrender our lives to Him. This is not easy, but it is easier than to be good in our own strength.

The New Man.

Passing from Jeremiah's words about the "new covenant" we turn to Peter's words about the "new man." Having been begotten again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, through the word of God, which liveth and abideth, "we are to" behave like Christians, in every relationship of life—in politics, in race relations, in international crises, in our treatment of others, in our personal habits. We are not "to fashion ourselves according to our former lusts in the time of our ignorance." But "like as him who called us is holy, we are ourselves also to be holy in all manner of living."

It should go without saying that this is a matter of grace and of growth. It is high, we cannot attain unto it, in our own strength. But we can go from strength to strength, and we can press toward the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus.

Would you like to see a new world? Would you like to help to make a new world? Would you like to change the world? We can have a new world only as we have new men. We can have a changed world only as we are changed.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

In Memoriam

POWELL.

The members of the Mt. Carmel Congregational Christian Church wish to pay loving tribute to the memory of our beloved member, Mr. James M. Powell.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of God, knowing that it was His divine will that he was taken from us.
2. To his loved ones we extend our love and sympathy, and commend them to the God of love and mercy.
3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one to "The Christian Sun" for publication, and a copy placed on our church record.

Mrs. JULIAN CARR,
Mrs. OTIS V. JOYNER,
Committee.

CARR.

Whereas, it has pleased our heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom, to remove from our fellowship, our beloved brother Claude C. Carr, from this life to that life beyond.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we submit to God's will and way for He knows what is best.
2. That the Mt. Carmel Congregational Christian Church has lost one for whom they mourn.
3. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and earnest prayer that God's blessing may fall upon their sad hearts and give them comfort.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy spread upon the church records and a copy sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. JULIAN CARR,
Mrs. OTIS V. JOYNER,
Committee.

CARR.

On July 11, 1953, Walters Community was saddened by the loss of our friend and brother, Charlie W. Carr.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we realize God doeth all things well. While we mourn the loss of one who has meant much to us, and others as well, we bow in humble submission to his divine will.
2. That the Mt. Carmel Congregational Christian Church, of which he was a member, has lost one for whom they mourn.
3. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and earnest prayer that God's blessing may fall upon their sad hearts and give them comfort.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

Mrs. JULIAN CARR,
Mrs. OTIS V. JOYNER,
Committee.

JOYNER.

We, the members of Mt. Carmel Congregational Christian Church were saddened August 25, 1953 by the passing of one of our beloved members, Richard H. Joyner.

We are grateful for his Christian character and cherish the memory of his unflinching cheerfulness which has left its influence upon us.

Be it resolved:

1. That we realize God doeth all things well and that our loss is his eternal gain.
2. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to his devoted family who ministered to him so faithfully during his last years, and commend them to our Heavenly Father for comfort and peace, realizing that His grace is sufficient for our needs.

Nothing more to doubt or to dare,
Nothing more to give or keep:
All is over, all is well. . .
He has sown and now must reap.

Mrs. JULIAN CARR,
Mrs. OTIS V. JOYNER,
Committee.

LAYMEN'S FELLOWSHIP.

(Continued from page 3.)

They now have a total of 24 members in their organization. Their regular monthly meeting date is the third Saturday. At their meetings they have a devotional period, a business session and a program. Some member of the group is responsible for the program each month. We feel sure that this group is going to continue to grow and give even more support to our church in the coming year.

The officers for the coming year are as follows: W. C. Perry, president; J. L. Faulkner, Jr., vice-president; J. O. Gregory, secretary; H. J. Hefke, assistant secretary; Norman Burke, treasurer; Robert Lynch, assistant treasurer. Program committee, J. L. Faulkner, Jr., Henry Oakley and William Black. Projects committee, C. R. Buckner, Holland Phillips and Malvin Smith.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

"Keep Her Unspoiled"

By JANICE A. McDONALD.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

When Miriam saw Betty's little girl, Susan, she gasped with delight. "What a wonderful child!" she exclaimed. Then, to Susan, "Oh, you darling. You adorable child. You're beautiful! I'd like to take you home with me." Susan smiled wordlessly.

Susan is a beautiful child, and she has a lot of personal charm. But Betty knows that besides being a pleasing and pretty child Susan is quite a real little person, who will grow up into a woman, and that too much flattery while she is so young will rob her of her charms now and later. Betty knows, too, that to keep Susan sweet she must restrain herself and others from gushing over the child.

Susan has many bright sayings. Indeed, both her father and her mother often find it hard not to laugh when Susan makes a remark, but they realize that, to the child, what she says is a serious observation. Laughing at it would puzzle her and might hurt her. Children enjoy fun and laughter; however, they do not like to be the butt of an adult's joke. Sometimes their remarks are unwittingly wise; but a bright saying from a child is not a reaction in the sense that the adult's witticism is. When Susan said something that sounded amusing, it was merely that she felt she had something to say, and she said it in the best way that she could.

It is unfortunate when parents or their friends laugh immoderately at the sayings of a child, or when they repeat these sayings over and over within the child's hearing. Later, that child is likely to insist on their giving attention to her latest childish observation when they want to have serious conversation. To the child's dismay, the time comes when she sees that no one admires her any more. No one tells her she is smart, wonderful, or cute. Instead, they say she is very ill-mannered. But who is to blame? When adults fuss over children in excess, merely for the reason that they are small, bright, and unsophisticated, the children are sure to suffer when they are older because of this overattention.

Boys and girls should be taught at an early age to recognize both momentary and longer occasions on which, no matter with whom they are, they must be quiet as well as courteous. However, when a child can "have the floor," the adults should be amused, or serious, or sympathetic—according to the child's remarks. When children know that grown people can be friends, listening interestedly to what they have to say, they will not play-act and be silly in order to get attention at the wrong time.

Susan is fortunate to have parents who protect her as much as possible from excessive petting and praise. Both of them, realizing the danger, requested the cooperation of their close friends. These people were asked not to praise Susan's appearance and not to talk about her in her presence, and, also, to treat her with the same consideration that they give to her father and mother. Susan's parents want to keep Susan unspoiled and lovable.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

There are 31 boys in Johnston Hall. That is a group of boys from 10 to 16 years of age. At present there are no boys here older than 16. Thirty-one boys are really a house full. What a chance the church has in those 31 boys! What a fine thing if those 31 boys could be reared into manhood with the highest of Christian ideals! To have them taught to work, study, play, be polite, humble, sincere; and to love only honesty and right. I like those 31 boys. They need counselling, friendship, guidance and care. To the best of the matron's ability, and with the help of the others of us they are being given a good chance. How they can eat! How they can wear out shoes, clothes and patience! But they are all in all good boys and ready to rise to really fine conduct. It is a pleasure to know them intimately, to laugh and play with them and to work with them.

But they are not all. There are 31 little folks in the Baby Home, little boys and girls, below the age of 10. Now there is a house full. Have you ever seen them together? Well if you have not you have missed a pretty sight, whether they are out on the swings, or on their way to dinner, or dressed up all pretty and sweet for Sunday school. Whoever dresses 31 little boys and girls, ages three and a half to nine and a half, has a sizeable job. The matron and two big girls get it done on time, and they look pretty, too. They can all call out to me at one time, and even the matrons are not jealous of the speed with which they run into my arms. These 31 little folks have enough love for everybody! And can they wear out shoes? And little dresses, and suits, and coats and sweaters! Yes and they can eat, and sometimes be filled with "colds" and run a fever, and fill you with fear. But they are sweet. And they need a home and bless you they have it.

And yet there are more. In the Main Building there are 22 girls from 10 to 16 years of age. Do you know and love and understand teen-age girls? What fine talk they do, what fine dreams they express, what care-free wisdom they show, and how smart workers they are! There are 22 real friends. Some of them full of life and chatter, some of them gentle and quiet, some of them so ready to help you, some of them so ready to help themselves. All of them appreciative of friendship and understanding. Some of them making high grades in school and all of them making good grades in our hearts. They make a pretty sight when they are dressed for school or Sunday school and church. They are a real challenge to the church. I look on them as the church's girls. I covet for them good careers, good homes and great usefulness and happiness. They are infinitely worth working with and their cooperation as members of the orphanage family is good. They, too, wear out shoes! And clothes and more clothes, yes, and shoes again too.

Add them up: 31 bigger boys (10 to 16); 31 little folks (below 10); and 22 girls, most of them in their teens. It adds up to 84! That's a day's work in anybody's language. There counsellors and helpers are Mrs. Maude Bennett, Mrs. Ruby Rash, Mrs. Nell Smith, Mrs. Hettie Glover, and Mrs. Bessie Stadler, as Matrons; and Mr. L. W. Wagoner, Miss Melva Foster and I are their other helpers. Yes and you!

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER 24, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

Mrs. Bertha Thompson, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Bobby Tomlinson, Waverly, Va., Clothing.
Rev. & Mrs. J. E. McCauley, Waverly, Va., Clothing and Shoes.
Mr. & Mrs. Mann Livesay, Waverly, Va., Clothing.
Mr. & Mrs. Ben Clary, Waverly, Va., Clothing.
Long's Chapel Home Demonstration Club, two quilts.
Mrs. Emma Chamberlin, Windsor, Conn., Sweaters and Caps.

J. P. Barbour, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
I. H. Vickery, Henderson, N. C., China and Silver.

Coupons for the week.

Waverly Christian Church, Waverly, Va.
Mrs. Carl Wallace, Louisburg, N. C.
Ladies' Aid Society, Albemarle Church.
Mrs. Johnson Turner, Suffolk, Va.
Mt. Lebanon Miss. Soc., Shenandoah, Va.
Mrs. Howard T. Hensley, Elkton, Va.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$10,669.51
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Liberty (Vance)	50.35
Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Spring S. S.	20.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Hebron S. S.	10.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Zion	30.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Leaksville	50.00
Total	$ 160.35
Grand Total	$10,829.86

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$14,535.95
Mrs. George B. Vick, Courtland, Va.	$ 10.00
The Jr. Fellowship, Union Christian Church, Hunt- erdale	3.00
Mrs J. P. Bennett, Harris- sonburg, Va.	5.00
Circle No. 3, Woman's Fel- lowship, Suffolk Church	25.00
Miss Lura Kennedy, Worth- ville, N. C.	10.00
Norfolk friend	5.00
Philathea Class, Suffolk Christian Church	10.00
Senior High Class, Pleas- ant Ridge, Ramseur ...	4.15
Ladies' Bible Class, Hol- land Christian Church .	10.00
Holland friends	15.00
Vanceville Sunday School, Tifton, Ga.	3.00
I. H. Vickery, Henderson, N. C.	100.00
The Carrie Beale S. S. Class, Franklin Church	10.00

(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Pledges to Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

Through September 30, 1953, there had been received at the Southern Convention Officer Declarations of Purpose for the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign, as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Bethel—Vacant	377.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton ...	211.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Harcastle	$ 872.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo .	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Gran-
ger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette
Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Harcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—
Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein .	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vore	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grissom ...	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowder-
milk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	$ 400.00
Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr.	82.50
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisse-
man	3,292.00
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V.
Welch	1,243.00

Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren .	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

†Paid.

THE ORPHANAGE.
(Continued from page 14.)

Antioch Christian S. S., Windsor, Va., in memory of Charles Monroe Clements, Jr.	10.00
V. R. Holt, Burlington, N. C., in memory of Dr. Dace McPherson	7.50
Memorials for H. G. McBane: Celanese Corp. of America, Burlington, N. C.	10.00

Mrs. J. H. McEwen, Burlington, N. C. ...	7.50
Mrs. Margaret B. Joerg, Burlington, N. C. ...	5.00
Roger Gant, Jr., Burlington, N. C.	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. E. T. Sanders, Burlington, N. C.	10.00
Burlington Rotary Club	10.00
Mr. & Mrs. Harvey Newlin, Carolyn & Jim ..	5.00
V. R. Holt, Burlington, N. C.	7.50
Memorials for C. R. Faucette: Mrs. J. H. McEwen, Burlington, N. C. ...	7.50
Violet, Wilmer & P. K. Holt, Burlington, N. C.	10.00
Alamance Wholesale oil Asso., Burlington, N. C.	5.00
Special Gifts	8.50
	323.65
Grand Total	$14,859.60
Total for the week	$ 484.00
Total for the year	$25,689.46

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
BySecretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

How Can I . . . Be What I Ought To Be?

By REV. HENRY E. ROBINSON

A young man and woman, after a short acquaintance were married just before he was to go overseas. During his two years absence many letters passed back and forth, many words of affection and adoration were written. The long anticipated day of union drew near with hopes and pulses running high. When that day came it was one of disappointment for both. The months had brought their changes. The actual persons had little resemblance to the dreams of many nights and the imaginations of many days. In thinking about this incident which has been re-enacted too many times, I could not help but wonder how many times God has visited us with high expectation, only to find us far less than we ought to be. If we are disappointing to God, it is a far more serious matter than being disappointing to one another. How can we be what we ought to be in the eyes of God?

A few years ago a book was published entitled: "You Are What You Eat." Of course this referred to the purely physical being of man. The argument as outlined in the title was pretty convincing. In the basic elemental aspect of the case, physical make-up depends upon the elements provided for its make-up. It's the same with spirit and personality. They can be no better than the food we provide them. God is disappointed in us, as are others, when we starve our minds and cut off from our hearts the Bread of Life.

A man had trouble getting his boxwood to live. He replaced it three times. Each time, he followed directions for the care of boxwoods right down to the letter. Finally he sent away a sample of the soil and got back a report that the soil had been poisoned. In building his house the painters had poured out some chemicals on the spot. The boxwood never had a chance. This world is full of things that poison life, and people are foolish enough to think they can play with poison and still be what they ought to be.

Life has been likened to many things. In seeking for an analogy at this moment, I am attracted to the desert caravan. If man and beast hope to survive, every foreseeable precaution and preparation must be made. There must not only be supplies of food and water, protective clothing, and weapons to ward off marauding tribes, but there must be resolution, determination, and strong will to face the heat and the storm. Above all there must be a chart and compass, and a destination. The leader of a caravan has small chance of survival unless he can stay on the course and know when he has arrived.

How can I be what I ought to be? How can I match the expectations of those who love me? How can I be a good disciple and a credit to the Christian faith. I must pour into my soul the food and drink of Christian fellowship. I must draw upon the power that is released by service to others. I must study God's word. I must pray daily. I must reckon with the storms and conflicts which beset me. I must know where I am going. I must have faith that the Author of my journey will see me across every mile of the way and hail me home as a traveler that has won his rest.

The subject is too big to be handled in a few short paragraphs. At best I can only drop a word of suggestion. But that word is that God has great expectations of us. To be what we ought to be, we must stop handling poisons, fill our lives with good, know where we are going, and trust our Maker in simple and sincere faith.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, OCTOBER 8, 1953

NUMBER 40

The Church Is Doing Something About It!

Used clothing from America, distributed in Germany, helps thousands of refugees. The above is a daily scene in West Berlin, where over one thousand new refugees register at church relief headquarters every day to ask for food, clothing and accommodation. The refugees are fed, clothed and then flown to West Germany, where further efforts for their rehabilitation are made.

News Flashes

Born to Rev. and Mrs. William A. Rich, Norlina, N. C., a daughter on September 30. We offer our congratulations.

The Rev. Julius Rice, the pastor of our Hines Chapel and Monticello churches, has announced his resignation to accept a call to the Shallow Well and Turner's Chapel churches near Sanford, North Carolina. The Rices plan to take up their new work the latter part of November.

Dr. and Mrs. Roy C. Helfenstein were called to Florida this week on business. While there they will visit Dr. Helfenstein's sister who lives at Orman Beach, Florida, and who has been ill for the past several weeks. The Rev. Thomas Apperson will supply the Richmond Church pulpit on Sunday in the pastor's absence.

In keeping with other material presented in this issue, we are giving our readers an article showing what the Lutherans of America have been doing to assist their fellow-Lutherans in Finland. Though the article, which is by Dr. Henry F. Schuh, president of the American Lutheran Church, was written primarily for the constituents of that church, we believe it will prove of much interest to others as well.

Miss Alice Huggins to Visit in Southern Convention

Miss Alice Huggins, one of our last missionaries to leave China, will be in the Southern Convention area from October 28, through November 11. She is the author of the popular novel, "The Red Chair Waits," much of which was written while Miss Huggins was in concentration camp. Her conference schedule is as follows: October 28-29, Eastern Virginia at Rosemont; November 3-4, Western North Carolina at Pleasant Hill; November 10-11, North Carolina and Virginia at Tryon, N. C. She will be available for local churches between these sessions. If you would like to have Miss Huggins visit your church, will you please write immediately to Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Convention Office, Elon College, N. C., so that her schedule may be arranged to the best advantage.

Dr. D. J. Bowden Assumes New Duties

From the Bloomington, Ill., Herald-Telephone, we take the following excerpts:

"Dr. D. J. Bowden, former dean of Elon College (North Carolina) has recently assumed his duties as director of the Indiana School of Religion. Born in Norfolk, Virginia, Dr. Bowden was educated at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, where he received a B. S. degree in mechanical engineering. His further education was at Yale University, where he received the B. D. degree in 1933 and the Ph. D. in 1937.

DR. D. J. BOWDEN

"Dr. Bowden became a member of the faculty of Elon College in 1935, and has served as chairman of the department of philosophy and religion, dean of the college and dean of men. He was ordained to the ministry of the Congregational Christian Church in 1936.

"Dr. Bowden is married and has three sons.

The Rural Church in America Reversing Downward Trends

Amid strong signs that the rural church in America is showing new strength, reversing downward trends of the past several decades, nearly one thousand religious and agricultural leaders will meet for the tenth annual National Convention on the Church in Town and Country in Saint Paul, Minnesota, October 27-29.

"Today more than ever before, denominational and other leaders and workers are applying themselves to the task of revitalizing the country churches," declared Don F. Pielstick, executive director of the National Council of Churches' department of Town and Country Church, announcing the convention.

"With intensive new programs, new and broader approaches to how the churches can best serve rural families, the country churches themselves are making a definite comeback," Dr. Pielstick said. "Another factor is a new kind of rural pastor—vigorous young men fully aware of today's farm life problems and dedicated to easing and solving them on an individual and community-wide basis."

The Convention, sponsored by the National Council's Division of Home Missions through its department of Town and Country Church, will take (Continued on page 11.)

"Established in 1910 for the purpose of offering courses in religion to students in Indiana University, the Indiana School of Religion begins its 44th year with the opening of registration. Although the school is not affiliated with Indiana University, it is located adjacent to the University campus. . . . The school is non-sectarian in outlook and practice. . . ."

Southern Convention Dates to Remember

- | | |
|-----------------|--|
| October | 14-15—Virginia Valley Annual Conference Session
Bethlehem Church |
| | 20-21—Eastern North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Shallow Well Church |
| | 28-29—Eastern Virginia Annual Conference Session
Rosemont Church, South Norfolk, Va. |
| November | 3-4—Western North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Pleasant Hill Church |
| | 10-11—North Carolina & Virginia Annual Conference Session
Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, N. C. |
| December | 8—Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association
Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va. |

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Leaders Urge the Observation of Laymen's Sunday, October 18

Laymen's Sunday is October 18. In its eleventh year, Laymen's Sunday is your opportunity to tell what Christ and religion mean in your life. It is your chance to relate how you are applying religion in your daily living and, thus, contribute to the long-delayed religious revival in America. Laymen's Sunday is your day to speak up and speak out for God! This you can do because God will guide you if you rely upon him."

It is hoped that all of our churches will observe Laymen's Sunday on October 18. If not possible on that date, please do so at your earliest opportunity.

Please let us know if there is any way in which our Laymen's Fellowship can serve you.

W. B. WILLIAMS,
Chairman.

* * *

The month of October is here. Let the Laymen of the Western North Carolina Conference take a little time out and polish up that Laymen's Sunday program. We are hoping that this year will be our greatest yet for our laymen.

I call your attention to the packet that was sent out to each church by Mr. W. B. Williams, our Convention chairman. He suggests that we use as our theme "Christ Calls Men." I do not believe that we could have a better subject to use on Laymen's Sunday. So come on, men, let's see what response we get in the form of spiritual blessings.

I would like very much to have you report to Mr. Earl Danieley what you did, how you did it, and the joy you received by having a part in this Laymen's Sunday, October, 1953.

S. H. PELL, Chairman,
W. N. C. Fellowship.

* * * * *

For Moonelon

Having in mind the erection of a central building for the purpose of developing the site as a summer camp for the Congregational Christian churches of the Southern Convention, at Moonelon, the laymen of the Western North Carolina Conference have made pledges in the amount of $928.00.

The amounts, by churches, are as follows: Albemarle, $200; Asheboro, $300; Liberty, $100; Pleasant Grove, $100; Pleasant Ridge, $100; Sophia, $28; Spoon's Chapel, $25; and Union Grove, $75.

S. H. PELL,
Chairman.

Picture of the Month—"Little Boy Lost"

An American war correspondent, who has learned that his French wife was executed by the occupying forces while working for the French resistance, returns to France after World War II to seek the son he has not seen since infancy. With the help of friends and the assistance of the International Tracing Agency, he finds a boy in an orphanage near Paris, but has difficulty in believing he may be his son. A chance remark brings him the proof he needs.

Filmed in France in black and white this touching story has the advantage of being set in authentic backgrounds of the streets of Paris, a familiar railroad station, the zoological garden, the northern suburbs. Its cast includes, along with Bing Crosby as the grieving husband and father, several excellent French character actors, a group of winsome French boys and young Christian Fourcade as the "little boy lost," who has never had

(Continued on page 14.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardestel.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Coleclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195...

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Hunger Never Takes a Vacation

By REV. CARL R. KEY

Director of the North Carolina Christian Rural Overseas Program

Each year in September vacations, for the most part, come to an end. People everywhere return to school and to their regular work schedule. Vacations and work and the changing seasons are all a part of the rhythm of life that keeps it varied and interesting. Every man and woman, boy and girl looks forward, in the course of the year, to a vacation. But one thing is certain, hunger, wherever found, never takes a vacation. Nor does the need for food in many lands today. That is just what old man hunger has done throughout the centuries. During recent years recurrent wars and increasing populations have brought hunger into sharp focus as the world's number one problem.

Earthquake, famine, flood, drought, war and pestilence have accentuated the problem of hunger the world over in the last six years. As a backwash from recent wars, the world numbers a solid body of refugees at 38,000,000. They command our pity, our compassion, our concern. To this serious and ever growing problem, the denominations and relief agencies, church and secular, have addressed themselves like the Good Samaritan with active good-will. As all know, we have only just begun to fight relentless hunger and its causes.

The Christian Rural Overseas Program has distributed food and self help in bulk overseas to refugees, old people, orphans, and flood, famine and drought victims valued at more than $15,000,000 during the last six years. Church World Service has sent millions of pounds of supplies—food, clothing, medicine, building materials—during the same period. CARE reports recently that they have sent food and other packages to the needy worth not less than $150,000,000. The Heifer Project has a matchless record of self-help, having shipped thousands of heifers, horses, goats, pigs, chicks and hatching eggs to 29 different countries in South America, Europe, the Near East and Asia.

UNESCO, FAO, Point IV (T. C. A.) and the Columbo Plan (a British program similar to our Point IV), all are fighting unceasing hunger by teaching peoples by technical assistance programs to help themselves. All this and more is needed.

The foregoing is pin-pointed by Mr. Gove Hambidge, the North American Regional Representative of the Food and Agriculture Organization of U. N., when he raises the question, "Can the World Feed Itself?" He gives this equivocal answer, "Some people say 'Yes' and some say 'No.' By way of summary Dr. Hambidge observes that "We are two worlds. What we can be sure of is this: the world has long been divided into two parts. We have a half-world of plenty, inhabited by the people of countries like the United States, Canada, Australia, New Zealand, and most of Western Europe. We have a half-world of hunger and want, inhabited by the people of most of Asia and the Middle East, most of Africa and parts of Latin America.

"We know too that, since the war," he goes on to say, "World production has increased by nine per cent, while the number of people has grown by thirteen per cent. So there is less food for each person than there was before the war, and there was not enough then by quite a long way. The lag since the war has been in the half-world of want, which makes a bad situation worse. The tide of hunger has been creeping up on tens of millions of human beings.

"In the half-world of plenty, where you and I live, production has continued to keep ahead of population growth, so that on the average we are now even better off than we were before."

FAO and Point IV entered this battle quite late. Relief agencies came into the picture after World War II. But this fight against hunger should have been begun centuries ago. A recent, reliable study by a leading American churchman reveals that one out of twelve missionaries in the past was an agricultural expert; all others were teachers, doctors, nurses, evangelists and preachers. It is about time for us to realize that we cannot save the souls of men, women, boys and girls unless we first find a way to save their lives, to reclaim their bodies from the death grip of hunger. Every Christian ought to become a part of the answer to this serious problem, and not a part of the problem itself. Our Christian concern for our brother man demands it of us.

This is the task of us all—the scientist, the doctor, the agriculturalist, the architect, the contractor, the preacher, the evangelist, the missionary. All of us must engage the enemy, hunger, now and fight to the finish. The goal is "the more abundant life" for all. Our material gifts for emergency relief, our aid on self-help programs and technical assistance projects of all kinds, through the church agencies, United Nations and Point IV are steps in the right direction. We cannot grow weary in well-doing now.

War's Cruel Toll: 15,000,000 Refugees

By DR. CECIL W. ROBBINS, Editor
The North Carolina Christian Advocate

Go anywhere you will in Europe and you will find no casualties of World War II so pathetic and so tragic as the refugees. While time and circumstances are healing the wounds of other war victims, the wounds of these homeless people still lie open, raw, bleeding. Their wounds are in the heart.

Numbering more than 15,000,000, they are found in almost every city, town and rural community in Germany and Austria. Thousands have been assimilated and are beginning to feel at home in their new environment. Indeed, Germany has granted to all Volksdeutsche and Reichsdeutsche refugees full citizenship, including voting privileges, the right to work, public welfare assistance and protection afforded by law. But the problem is far from solved. As the thousands are settled, other thousands pour in to take their places. They live in cold, cheerless barracks, in damp one-room hovels, in dark air-raid bunkers, in ghosely bomb-riddled buildings, in stench-filled barns, in dilapidated outbuildings, in weather-beaten tents, in abandoned rail cars, and any other place they can find haven.

Two Kinds of Refugees.

In the main, there are two kinds of refugees—those created by the Potsdam Agreement and those fleeing the East Zone of Germany.

Under the terms of the Potsdam Agreement signed by the United Kingdom, the United States and Soviet Russia soon after the surrender of Germany in 1945, all Volksdeutsche people—those of German origin in Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, as well as Reichsdeutsche people—all German citizens in the provinces east of the Oder-Neisse line and within the political boundaries of World War II Germany—were forced overnight to leave their homes and seek refuge in that part of Germany not under Russian control. Bulgaria and Yugoslavia, without authority of the Potsdam Agreement, also began a mass expulsion of their citizens of German ethnic origin.

Millions were forced to leave with only the possessions they could carry in their hands or on their backs. Their farms and businesses and other material possessions were confiscated by ruthless governments or greedy neighbors. In the majority of cases, the families of the expelled had resided in these countries longer than most of our families have been in the United States. Their only sin was that their ancestral roots stemmed from Germany and that they spoke the German language. They had no more to do with starting the war than did the average American. From all reports, they were loyal citizens. They wanted only to be left alone and to live in peace with other people.

But they were not left alone. During the war, they were treated as enemy aliens. Many were jailed and were left in prison without trial. One person with whom we talked—a reputable professional man—languished in a cold prison for two years before he could even get a hearing from the authorities. Millions suffered in one way or another. Following the cessation of hostilities, they were told to get out, to seek haven in beaten, prostrate Germany. We cannot believe that our country has ever signed an agreement more unjust, more cruel and more inhuman.

Potsdam Victims Everywhere.

We found thousands of the Potsdam Agreement victims at Linz and Salzburg. In fact, both Pastor Nausner and Pastor Glaser, who serve the two Methodist churches in Linz, are Polish and Czech refugees, respectively. The congregations they serve are composed largely of refugees. Our congregations at Salzburg, Konstanz and Bregenz—where we worked during the summer—are made up mainly of refugees. They came from all countries of eastern Europe. We visited their bleak, unpainted barracks. We found families of five and six occupying one 12 by 14 foot room. Inside that one room, which had often been ceiled by newspapers or cheap wall-paper or second-hand boards, you could plainly see at one glance practically all of their worldly possessions—a tiny combination heater and cook stove, a small table where the family ate and where the children studied their lessons, a plain but tiny bed where part of the family slept, an unpainted chest of draws over which was hung a small mirror, a wire stretching across one corner on which the few well worn clothes of the family were hung. It was obvious that some members of the family slept on the floor. Yet in the twelve or fifteen rooms we visited we found no suggestion of uncleanness or untidiness or unpleasant odor. Communal toilets are provided for every 25 or 50 families.

More than one family pulled back a curtain on the wall to show their meager pantries which contained mainly tins of coffee and milk and packages of flour and meal and small containers of fats—all gifts from America.

The churches of America have won tremendous goodwill by their food and clothing gifts to Europe's needy and hungry. Everywhere we went in Germany and in Austria, a grateful people reminded us time and time again to thank Christians of America for their great generosity. We suspect that among the common people of the war-ravaged countries of Europe, the Christian people of America, in giving without strings attached to their gifts, have done more to win friends for our nation than has our government with its millions, spent sometimes on those who needed it least and sometimes, from the viewpoint of the European, with an ulterior motive. The altruistic heart of Christian America is doing something secular governments cannot do. It is winning the Christian heart of Europe and is laying a solid foundation for enduring peace.

A Sturdy, Dependable People.

We detected at once that the refugees, as a whole, are a sturdy, dependable, honest people. They have stood the tragedy of suffering and persecution remarkably well. Many of them, hounded and haunted and driven away from all they hold dear, have borne their fate with amazing heroism. There is a sad story behind virtually every refugee's life. Families have been separated; husbands and fathers have been shot; women have been ravished. Thousands have died in the mass exodus. One old man, a native of Yugoslavia, told us that he was one of the survivors of Titos hunger camp, where 19,000 out of 27,000 died of starvation during a period of seven months, including his own son and daughter and her five children; one is still in Yugoslavia; another is in East Germany; two are living in barracks as refugees. Yet the old man, ending his days in a tiny room with his aging wife, did not complain about his fate. "I've

(Continued on page 8.)

Churches Rebuilt with LWA Aid

By DR. HENRY F. SCHUH
President, American Lutheran Church

During the last war, Finnish soldiers, with Germany as an ally, fought against the Russians along the Karelian border. But the then-friendly relations between the two countries were severed when other nations, friendly to Finland, declared war on Germany.

This change in relationships caused the withdrawal of the German armies. Moving homeward across Lapland, Finland and Finnmark, the German forces employed the "scorched earth" policy, destroying every church, parsonage and parish house in their line of retreat. Destruction was so thorough that even telephone lines were cut and removed, resulting in utter desolation.

The populace often had as little as four hours' notice to gather together their most prized and necessary possessions.

People from northern Norway were taken south of Oslo, and the privations suffered by them demonstrated their heroism. The family with whom I stayed in Loppa, Norway, spent three weeks in an open row boat before reaching safety.

The horrors of the German retreat, the fleeing of the people as they left their ancestral homes and all that was near and dear to them defy description. Destruction was to the intent that if the Russian armies attempted to follow, they would find no housing or means of support.

The Finns also thought of their churches, taking with them church bells, altar equipment and altar books as part of their most prized possessions. Their hope was strong that some day they would return them to the beloved churches which had been destroyed.

In northern Norway's Finnmark province, out of 47 churches, 26 were completely burned. In northern Finland, 16 churches, 30 parsonages and 4 deaconess homes were burned to the ground. Destruction of the churches was an added crushing blow to the morale of a people who had already lost homes and lifetime possessions.

At that time, U. S. Lutheran leaders learned of the terrible state of fellow Lutherans around the world, and had begun to raise money for relief purposes through Lutheran World Action. Though as yet they lacked full knowledge of the damage which had been done, U. S. Lutherans sent identical gifts of about $1,000,000 each to Norway and Finland, for physical relief and the reconstruction of Lutheran churches.

In the case of Norway, some of these funds purchased boats through which pastors served parishioners living on the mainland and nearby islands. According to Bishop Wiig of Tromsø, Norway, the LWA gift proved to be a tremendous incentive to the people, who soon came back to rehabilitate their homes.

However, the poverty-stricken Norwegians were in no position to rebuild their churches, and the thoughtfulness and willingness of U. S. Lutherans to aid their brethren in reconstructing houses of worship was taken as evidence of Christian love and solidarity, deeply appreciated.

Of some 26 churches and parsonages destroyed in Finnmark province, 8 have been rebuilt to date, leaving 16 more still to be replaced. The Norwegians hope to complete this task within the next two years. Gifts already sent by LWA will be sufficient to complete this job.

It was my pleasure and privilege to represent the Lutherans of America at dedications of several of these rebuilt churches in Norway and Finland this past August.

The first dedication was on the island of Loppa in northern Norway. I wish you could have seen the joy and happiness on the faces of the people as they returned to their new house of worship. The worshippers truly felt that once more they had a place where they could come into closer contact with the true, living God.

These hard-pressed Norwegian Lutherans had carried on their rugged day-to-day work of being fishermen, far up above the Arctic Circle, in order to meet tremendous personal debts acquired to rebuild their homes.

It was somewhat strenuous to get to the dedication, as the big boat only went as far as Oksfjord. We spent four hours on a 35-foot boat on the open sea. Anyone having this experience can really appreciate the fortitude of the fishermen.

The shores of Loppa are rocky, and it is impossible for any boat except a rowboat to land. When we anchored off shore, we all descended a small rope ladder into the row boat to be brought ashore. The whole village was out to meet the bishop and the party who would participate in the dedication of the church on the following day.

Next morning, small boats began to arrive—21 of them—bringing the people from the mainland and the islands to the dedication. The church was filled, and many stood outside. A youth service was followed by a communion service that afternoon. Later, a dinner with the church council, when the governor of the community transferred the church which had been built under his supervision to the care of the congregation.

There was much joy at Loppa that day. The dedication would have gladdened the heart of every American Lutheran who could have participated. The bishop asked us to greet the U. S. Lutherans, and to thank them for the generous gift which encouraged his people to give an expression of their faith in the Triune God by returning to their homes and rebuilding God's house of worship.

The following Sunday, we were in Pello, Finland, to dedicate another church. Unlike Norway, in Finland the completion of the church brought the reconstruction program to an end.

Finland had an abundance of lumber available for building. Nineteen churches have already been built or rebuilt to replace an original 16. The influx of some 430,000 Karelian refugees necessitated dividing several parishes. In addition to the 19 churches, the building program included 30 parsonages and 5 deaconess homes.

Again great joy was evident as the bishop and his pastor arrived for the dedication in the presence of about 2,000 people. It was inspiring to see them come—walking, by bicycle, a few by auto—to the church.

The governor attended the service to express deep interest in the American representation, and the gift which had been made by U. S. Lutherans for the encouragement of his people.

Again, thanks were expressed for the gift, not alone for the money, but for the inspiration it provided at a time when the people's morale was lowest.

They had to face great personal debt to rebuild their homes. They
(Continued on page 7.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Family Foundations (Continued)

There are memorials that endure, that last for all time. There are others that are swept away by the storms and the devastating influences of nature.

On one occasion I, together with others, was being shown through the new and elaborate buildings of a great university. Tucked away in a corner in a basement room were the oil paintings of the founders of that university. At one time they hung on the walls, I presume, in a conspicuous place, but now relegated to oblivion. On another occasion, I stumbled on what was at one time a monument to a hero in a national conflict. This monument was tumbled down and instead of being an honor to the one whose name was chiseled on it, it was a disgrace to the service that he had rendered his community and, in the final analysis, a disgrace to his day and generation. Monuments in oil paints and even in stone eventually perish or become meaningless to anyone.

Memorials that are imbedded in human interest and established for human betterment and the advancement of a Christian civilization are enduring. They are not affected by the ebb and flow of time or the winds that sweep the earth. The greater the services that they render, the more brilliantly shines the memorial. When the memorial is established out of the affection for a loved one, for the training and development of youth through all the passing years, such a memorial becomes more meaningful and endearing as time passes on.

In last week's communication, a number of family foundations memorializing dear ones were reported. The article grew too long, and not all of the memorials established at Elon College by families of our church were listed:

The Ella V. Gray Memorial Fund. This foundation was established by her son, Garland Gray, years ago with the hope that this fund would eventually reach $50,000.00. The fund was started by a bequest of Mrs. Gray to Elon College without designation or restriction. Feeling that this money was too sacred to put in the general fund to satisfy the recurring claims of the college, it was suggested to Garland, her son, that it be made a part of the endowment funds, to which he, out of his own personal funds, could add from year to year. This was agreeable to him. The fund now stands at $15,000.00 plus. The income from the fund is used to purchase books for the library, all such books being labeled "The Ella V. Gray Memorial Fund." It is desirable that these books so purchased have to do with the history of the South and the development of the southern section of our country. This is most desirable at this particular time in the history of our people. The South is moving forward at a creditable rate. This foundation is rendering a significant service not only for Elon College but for the South as well.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

There is a personal satisfaction in a job well done. When we have a task to do, the more promptly we can accomplish it, the greater the satisfaction it is to us and to those or the interest for which the task is being done. Our churches and Sunday schools have done very well in paying their apportionment for the college, but not as well as they did a year ago. A year ago, as of this date, the college had received $9,497.91 on apportionment. To date, including this week's report, a total of only $7,461.69 has been received through the Convention Office. This is $2,036.22 less than last year as of this date.

When you think of the money in hand, it is disappointing, but when you think of the amount to be received, it is encouraging. It is not necessary to say that funds for the College are behind all along the line this year to what they were a year and two years ago. In view of this fact, I am sure that every Sunday school and church will want to raise its apportionment in full and more, if at all possible. The college is dependent upon the church and is most appreciative of every ounce of assistance.

Previously Reported	$ 7,271.91
Eastern Va. Conference:
Oakland	$ 83.23
Richmond, First	100.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Mt. Zion S. S.	$ 6.55

189.78

Total to date	$ 7,461.69
---------------------	-------------

CHURCHES REBUILT BY LWA.

(Continued from page 6.)

had to resettle 430,000 Finns from Karelia in their own Finland. How much further could they go? Could they rebuilt their churches, parsonages and other property? The gift from American Lutherans came at the right time, as an answer to their prayers.

The following day, the church at Turtola was dedicated. This church is about 10 miles from Pello, at the other end of the parish. Some 1,500 turned out for the dedication. Many stood outside, entering into the service through loud-speakers.

I think the words of Bishop Malmivaara are especially worth reporting. He began by expressing appreciation for the unity of faith between the Lutherans of America and their brothers in Finland.

"We in Finland," he said, "are certain that in all our hardships, God did not forget us. Many Lutherans are living in need. The church built on the hill of Jesus Christ will never forget. The Lutheran Church will never be destroyed. We know from experience that behind the dark clouds, the light of Jesus Christ is shining. In this conviction, we send greetings to the Lutherans of America."

We U. S. Lutherans should fervently thank God that he blessed our sharing of the faith in such a way that suffering fellow-Lutherans, aided by our gifts, came to the conviction that even in the darkest hour, God maintains his people. This conviction caused the Lutherans in Norway and Finland to demonstrate their faith by rebuilding their churches, and in this way, extend the kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ. Were our gifts necessary?

Will any American Lutheran ask that question?

Asked if she had any particular qualifications or unusual talents, the applicant for the job said she had won several prizes in crossword puzzle and slogan writing contests.

"Sounds good," said the manager, "but we want someone who'll be smart during office hours."

"Oh," assured the girl, "I did that during office hours."

Missions at Home and Abroad

The Board of Home Missions Meets in Montclair, N. J.

Nationally and internationally known figures in the fields of education, church and state will address the Eastern Regional Meeting of Congregational Christian Churches and the 17th Annual Meeting of The Board of Home Missions when they convene October 27, 28, 29 in Montclair, N. J. in the First Congregational Church, Dr. Allan I. Lorimer, minister.

This will be the first time the Eastern Regional meeting has been held in New Jersey and will bring together over 600 key lay and clerical representatives from some 2200 Congregational Christian churches of the Eastern Regional section, which includes the six New England states, New York, Pennsylvania and the Middle Atlantic area.

Headliners among the speakers will include: Dr. Charles H. Malik, Ambassador from Lebanon to the U. S. A. and outstanding figure in the United Nations; Hon. Walter H. Judd, U. S. Congressman from Minnesota; Dr. Alford Carleton, president of Aleppo College, Aleppo, Syria, and for the past year consultant to the Ford Foundation on their Near East Program; Dr. Richard B. Kennan of Washington, D. C. of the National Education Association, and Dr. Buell G. Gallagher, president of City College, New York City.

Other key speakers will be Dr. Arthur D. Gray, president of Talladega College, Talladega, Alabama; Dr. Henry Smith Leiper of New York City, minister of Missions Council of Congregational Christian Churches and pioneer builder of the World Council of Churches; Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer of New York, associate minister of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches and Dr. Douglas Horton, minister of the General Council; Dr. Truman B. Douglass of New York, president of The Board of Home Missions and leader in the movement for church unity; Miss Margaret Hargrove, national secretary of Woman's Work of the Congregational Christian churches, and many others.

The general chairman of the Eastern Regional Executive Committee in charge of the local setup is Mrs. Fred S. Buschmeyer of Montclair, N. J.

The chaplain for the entire series will be Dr. Boynton Merrill of Columbus, Ohio.

Among the special items on the program will be the premiere showing of the films, A People Without Fear and For Every Child, as well as the concert appearance of the Talladega College Choir from Alabama.

Five parallel luncheons with speakers fresh from their fields or recent visits abroad, will come on Wednesday noon, October 28, and will present the work of the American Missionary Association, a division of The Board of Home Missions which deals primarily with race relations and Negro education; the American Board of Foreign Missions; the Christian Educational Division; the Council for Social Action and the Congregational Christian Service Committee.

"Listening Post," a session under the Women's Fellowship, will present the life and task of the church in the homeland with such highly human stories told as those of Ellis Island, by Mrs. Jannie Pratt; the East Harlem Protestant Parish, recently written up in a national weekly, and told by Rev. Donald Benedict, and a new venture in churchmanship called The Pilgrim Circuit Rider, a station wagon project which makes Rev. Leila Anderson a "lady circuit rider on wheels" and a peripatetic pastor from coast to coast.

The main theme of the meeting will be "Fulfilling Our Christian Heritage" and the opening session will be at 2:00 on Tuesday, October 27, closing at noon on Thursday, October 29.

WAR'S CRUEL TOLL.

(Continued from page 5.)

still got the Lord," he told us, "and that's all I need."

The tiny rooms are well kept. The people, including the children, are clean and well-behaved. Rows of attractive flowers and neat vegetable gardens are found wherever there is an available spot of earth.

The men secure work when they can find it. But work is scarce in Austria, a relatively poor country.

The per capita annual income is only $216. There isn't enough work for the 7,000,000 Austrians. The refugees take only the jobs that are left over, most of which are for the unskilled. It would perhaps be unfair to say that in Austria the refugees are not wanted. It is more accurate to say they are not wanted, but are tolerated. They are second class citizens, even when they are granted full citizenship. The government, hard-pressed to recover from the war, belatedly provides around $7 per month for each refugee. Germany, with about 43 per cent of its federal income going for public welfare, provides about $12 monthly for its homeless people.

The Children Suffer Most.

The children are unquestionably the worst sufferers in this pitiful situation. Their personalities are naturally affected by the terrible abnormal conditions. Education is neglected. They have no playgrounds. They face depressing boredom, bleak poverty. We saw them—hundreds of them—pathetic, forlorn, yet wistful—as we visited a settlement where around 3,000 refugees live. The narrow street between the two long rows of buildings used to house workers in war industries at Linz, was filled with children of all ages. They had been told that friends from America were coming. So they were dressed in their best—the boys in faded patched trousers and plain shirts; the girls in calico and gingham dresses, clean but showing signs of wear. They followed us, half afraid, down the muddy street. They waited silently outside as we visited a Methodist family. Soon they were friendlier, more at ease and clung to us tenaciously, hopeful, wishfully. They seemed to be seeking something which they could not quite find in their drab, uninspiring surroundings. Our hearts went out to them sympathetically. We felt so helpless in the face of such vast, pressing need.

Yet nowhere did we get the impression that people were beggars. They seemed only to want an opportunity to work, to rebuild their lives and their fortunes. They made it clear that they want homes for their families. Even the children have their pride. For example, one afternoon we came upon a boy in a refugee settlement playing his accordian. We were struck by his talent and lingered several minutes to listen. As we turned to go, I tried to give the lad

(Continued on page 13.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Sorry!

I regret that the announcement concerning the Valley Women's Conference came to me too late to be included in last week's issue of THE SUN. That conference is meeting today in the lovely new brick Bethlehem Church, Tenth Legion, according to the announcement by Mrs. Cecil Whitlock, Valley Women's president.

Mrs. Ralph Galt, the wife of the pastor of the host church, with the assistance of young people from the Woods Chapel Church, is presenting a colorful morning devotional service, using costumes representing various countries in which we carry on missionary work, and which will be studied this year.

"Our Task on Mindinao" will be presented by the Rev. Quentin Leisher of our Boston office. A solo, "My Task," will be rendered by Miss Jane Short of Luray.

At the afternoon session, Mrs. Wm. T. Scott will tell of the International Council meeting which she attended last summer, and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill will present the literature for the new year and will also conduct the installation service for the new officers.

The president, Mrs. Cecil Whitlock, will preside at the sessions for the day.

* * * * *

Society Doubles Membership During First Year

A letter from Mrs. P. D. Lett, secretary-treasurer of the Moore's Union Women's Society, one of our new societies last year, to Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, contains some interesting information about their work.

"We still have a lot to do in our society, but the Lord has blessed us. We have more than doubled in members in our first year. We thank you for all your help."

How fine it would be if some of our older societies, as well as our newer ones, could say the same thing about membership! Sometimes it requires a survey to see just how many women in our churches are not members of our women's societies, and then invite them to share in the work. Sometimes it may mean dividing from one group into several circles, or adding other circles to the number we have. It may mean a new emphasis on programs which will interest your women. It may mean a friendlier spirit, rather than the idea that your society is a "closed corporation." It may mean that you do some very worthwhile things in which others will want to share.

Let's make this one of our major emphases in the new year: Every woman in our church group (and this includes Sunday school, choir, etc., as well as church members), having an opportunity to join our women's group, with the result that some of our older societies can have a fine report of membership, like the new Moore's Union one.

* * * * *

Mt. Carmel Cradle Roll Party

On July 8, we had our annual Cradle Roll Party at the Mt. Carmel Congregational Christian Church, near Windsor, Virginia.

The mothers were invited to bring their children and enjoy the party with them. Several came and enjoyed the ice cream and cookies with the children.

We have twenty members in our Cradle Roll Department, and the offering from the mite boxes amounted to $54.41. This was sent to our conference treasurer.

On each second Sunday we have a mission study period in our class after the offering for missions is taken. This is also sent to the conference treasurer, making a total sent this year of $60.41.

We shared our gifts of toys with the Ellis Island project; also sent a box of clothing to the Christian orphanage.

We are hoping that their missionary vision will continue to grow all through the years.

MRS. E. W. BEALE,
C. R. Superintendent.

* * * * *

Some Musings of the Woman's Convention President

Nowadays it is not considered "just the thing" to be sentimental about things—we're supposed to be "practical" and "down to earth." But somehow this morning, while I am standing here at my ironing board trying to complete my week's ironing, my mind is just wandering. Outside our kitchen window I can see my mother in her garden, trying to salvage the last of the vegetables before the frost arrives. Around her the leaves are falling, already beginning to turn the beautiful colors of autumn. There is just a hint of early fall weather in the air this morning.

As I begin thinking of the fall of the year, uppermost in my mind are the Women's Conferences. (I can always think best when I am ironing, so now I must turn back the thermostat of the iron and jot down the most important things that have come to my mind.)

I am sorry that I cannot be in all the conferences, for the annual meetings this year, but in order to serve you best I must keep myself informed on all phases of the Women's Work. So I am planning to attend the Sixth National Assembly of United Church Women in Atlantic City, October 5-8. I will be in attendance as a denominational delegate of our National Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women. Mrs. Garland Spratley of Dendron, Mrs. Ray Gordon of Suffolk, and Mrs. J. D. Deal, president of the Virginia Council of Church Women, will accompany me on the trip. This is such an important meeting that the President of the United States has consented to be present and to speak at one session! So I know you will forgive me for slipping off to this meeting.

As your steps turn homeward from your Fall Conference—when every report has been made for the preceding year and inspiration and information received for the coming year—then you will begin thinking seriously of the first item on the program for the new year's work of the women.

One of the first projects on our program now is the Thank Offering service, when we bring our "second mile" gifts as a love offering for some worthy cause. The project that was chosen by the women themselves, at the session of the Woman's Convention in Burlington this past May, is "Our Mission on Mindonao." Before me, as I still stand here at my ironing board writing on a brown paper bag that is handy, I am looking at the stack of Thank Offering programs that were packed last night.

(Continued on page 11.)

A Page for Our Children

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Our contest winners were announced last week, and soon you will be reading their prize essays.

The stories by Mrs. Sloan have been wonderful and we are grateful to her for sharing in such a fine way. We wish that others of you who have written and do write would let us hear from you. Save the Sloan stories for your Sunday school collection.

Greensboro Church (First) has shared some news with us. On Sunday, September 20, they had a family breakfast at church. It started at 8:30 in the morning and cost all of a quarter! The boys and girls of the church school had a part in the planning and doing. The Kindergarten children sang songs and said verses informally. A puppet show was given by the Primaries—they didn't say what it was, but just think how exciting it must have been! The Juniors wrote a litany for the day and the older Juniors exhibited pictures they had done. It was church family sharing instead of family sharing. Last month's issue of Children's Religion carried an article (hope you have read it) by Mrs. Wisseman, and there was a picture of her husband, and minister, Dr. W. E. Wisseman, greeting the youngsters as they came to church. If we didn't belong to one of the most wonderful churches in the convention; we would like to belong to Greensboro Church.

The Newport News Church is making plans for its fall and winter program. Only a few Sundays ago they met at Jamestown for a retreat to plan for the work. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill was present to help and offer suggestions.

When Dr. House was pastor at Richmond he began to dream about a recreation program for the church. There was a lot of waste space in the basement and he thought it would make a fine spot for youngsters to work and play. He asked people to save old newspapers to help in the project and he and Jonathan often carried a carload of paper to the paper mill. The war was on and materials were scarce, then we left Richmond, and he has gone, but the dream came true! Did you see the fine pictures of the project in this paper last week? It makes such a nice spot and will bring happy hours. Dr. Helfenstein and his people deserve a big "Well Done!" It also proves that we may want to do things and even though we can't see it through or help as we would like, that seeds in fertile soil do live and grow. It looked good to see some of our former Sunday school pupils playing and we hope before long to pay them a visit and enjoy the Recreation Room too.

* * * * *

"Worthless Criticism"

EDITH GABRIEL.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"O Larry, come up a minute, will you?" called Ralph at the head of the basement stairs. Then he returned to his mother in the living room, and in a moment or two Larry was there, also. "Here I am," said Larry. "What do you want? I've almost finished one birdhouse."

"Mrs. Benton called Mother, on the phone, about us, so we're in for something," was the answer.

"It seems that you two boys annoy Edwin Benton going to and coming from school. Is that right?" asked Mrs. Allen.

"Oh, we just have fun, Mother. We don't mean any harm," answered Ralph, belittling their actions as if they were too small to mention.

"It must be more fun for you than for Edwin, or Mrs. Benton wouldn't have taken the trouble to phone; I know her very well. She was nice when telling me of the way you had treated Edwin, and from what I know of him, he is a nice boy. Isn't the fun one-sided?"

"Maybe you're right, Mrs. Allen, but we really don't mean to harm Edwin. We just call him 'Little Pee-wee' and tease him because he's so small."

"That doesn't seem fair to me. What do you expect him to do about it? There isn't anything he can do to change his size, is there?"

"Well, no, I guess not," answered Larry, and the boys smiled.

"And you block the walk and don't let him pass," continued Mrs. Allen. "Now that isn't fun. At any rate, it is annoying to Edwin, and Mrs. Benton says it distresses him so that he dislikes going to school."

"He really should like to go, Mrs. Allen. He gets all A's in everything. Wish I did."

"That sounds as if you boys should want him for a companion instead of troubling him. Let us look at it this way, boys. If anyone does an unkind thing purposely, he deserves criticism; don't you think so?"

"Yes," chorused the two boys.

"But when anything is beyond one's control, to criticize it is useless, even stupid. When we criticize at all, it should be in a spirit of helpfulness, or it is worthless and useless. Would you make fun of a canary because it is smaller than a robin?"

"Of course not, Mother; you can think of the funniest illustrations."

"I want you to see what I mean. The girls who went into Mrs. Taylor's garden and picked her roses, without permission, needed criticism. And the boy who helped himself to Mr. White's apples, without asking for them should be criticized. These were faults that could be corrected. On the other hand, would you blame Blind Charlie who runs the peanut-stand because he is blind?"

"I see what you mean, Mother; I think we've been foolish to act as we have."

"No doubt you have lost a good friend."

"You're not going to tell my mother about it, are you, Mrs. Benton? I hope you won't," said Larry.

"I don't think I should have to do that, Larry. I think you should tell her yourself. Don't you? Then your mother will know she can trust you. Ralph tells me everything."

"Oh, you don't know my mother. I wish she'd be as easy as you are."

"Perhaps it would be easier for both of you if she knew she could depend on you to bring your troubles to her."

"You win, Mrs. Benton. I'll take the chance. I expect she'd be as nice as you are, about things like this, if I'd be fair," acknowledged Larry. Then to Ralph, he said, "Wouldn't it be a good idea to make friends with Edwin? I think your mother is right. He'd make a nice pal."

"Yes." And Ralph went to the phone. "Edwin," he said, when his young neighbor answered him, "this is Ralph Allen. Do you think you could forget the stupid things Larry and I've done to you? If so, we'd like to be friends and walk with you to and from school. Honest, Edwin,

(Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Cotton Picking Time for Liberty Vance Young People

The Senior Youth Group at Liberty, Vance, Congregational Christian Church undertook this year a cotton-patch for the Lord's Acre project. After preparing the land and planting, came the task of chopping, and cotton chopping is a serious business. There was a group of about thirty of these young people who saw that the necessary work was done, and a good crop rewarded their energy. Only a few days ago this same group met and picked about half of the cotton. They came forth with tired backs but glad hearts that their task was nearly completed. They are planning to use the money from the sale of the cotton to purchase a movie projector for their church.

* * * * *

Thinks Curtis Young Did Excellent work

Dear Editor:

I think that it would be nice if you could publish a note of concern in regards to Curtis Young, a student at Elon, for the excellent work he did in our church, Happy Home, this summer. He was with us as supply pastor while Rev. Thurmon Bowers was on three months leave. Curtis did a grand job during our Bible school and revival as well as an excellent pastor. He was an inspiration to our youth. Our best wishes for many years of success goes to Curtis.

Sincerely,
LOUISE SPARKS.

* * * * *

Virginia Valley Youth Fellowship Will Meet

The Virginia Valley young people are meeting in their 1953 conference at Mayland Christian Church, Sunday afternoon, October 11, from 2:45 to 7:45. All attending are asked to bring their lunch.

Anyone, between the ages of 1 and 99, will be eligible to attend, provided they have an interest in young people.

The program will include many items of interest. Some of them are:

Film Strip, "A Job for Jimmy Cooper." This film will be shown promptly at 3 o'clock. It will be followed by a "Bible Bee." And this, in turn, will be followed by the Worship Service, led by the Concord group.

A play about the Building Fund Drive, "The Parable of Moab Hartlie," will be presented by the group from Wissler's Chapel, followed by presentation of gifts to the Building Society.

Pilgrim Fellowship plans for 1953-54 will be discussed, including the Work Day for Christ; and an offering for the work of Dr. and Mrs. Childs in Africa will be made.

A song fest will include the singing of "Songs of Many Nations"—some old favorites and some new.

Officers for the coming year will be nominated and elected.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

I hope that your church had the opportunity to observe World Wide Communion Sunday on October 4. Communion is always a very sacred service, but it seems that when we realize that we are sharing on one day with all the Christians across the world, that it gives us a feeling of deeper reverence. When we think of the influence of Christ and his followers across the world, truly there is the realization of the "Power of the Blood."

* * *

Maybe, now that the World Series is over, we'll be able to get back to work. I'm having trouble writing this while watching the fourth game.

* * * * *

Let Us Pray—

For the strength of youth,
The wisdom of age,
And the spirit of Christ.

THE RURAL CHURCH IN AMERICA.

(Continued from page 2.)

up such problems as rural youth, country-city relations, migrant labor and other low-income farm families, and enriching rural community life.

Principal speakers to be heard during the general sessions of the meeting include Rainer Schiekele of the North Dakota Agricultural College, who will discuss ethical issues in farm policy; Baker Brownell, of Northwestern University, speaking on factors of vitality in rural life; A. D. Mattson of Augustana Theological Seminary, on rural aspects of the Christian mission.

William W. Biddle, director of community dynamics at Earlham College will address the gathering on redemptive leadership in small communities; and Rockwell C. Smith of Garrett Biblical Institute will speak on the rural church and the changing scene.

Addressing the closing general session, Ira W. Moomaw, educational secretary of Agricultural Missions, Inc. and an agricultural missionary in India for eighteen years, will discuss rural trends of the future.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 9.)

They are now ready to be carried to the post office to soon be in the hands of all the Woman's Society presidents.

The Thank Offering Program Committee, Miss Virginia Brinkley of Suffolk, who served as chairman, and Mrs. Roy Brinkley of Cypress Chapel, have written a beautiful program on the theme, "The Voice of God is Calling Us." Our mission on Mindanao is a worthy project, and I know that as each of you make your sacrificial thank offering this year on November 1, or as soon thereafter as possible, it will be with a prayer of thanksgiving that God has so richly blessed you, and has also given you an understanding of the needs of your fellowman.

May God continue to bless each of you as you seek the living way of life, striving to carry on the work he would like to have you do.

MRS. W. B. WILLIAMS,
President.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

we didn't realize how mean we had acted until Mother made us see it."

There was some conversation between Edwin and his mother. After that the listeners knew that Edwin had accepted the apology and had agreed that they should all be friends, for they heard Ralph answer, "I'm glad you will." Turning from the telephone to his mother, Ralph said, "Thank you, Mother, for helping us see it." And smiling at Larry, he murmured, "What a relief." And, away the boys went to work on the birdhouses.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"New Men and a New World"

LESSON III—OCTOBER 18, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and give glory to your Father who is in heaven."
—Matthew 5:16. (R.S.V.)

LESSON TEXT: Matthew 5:13-16, II Corinthians 5:17-19; James 2:14-18.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 61:4-9.

Formula for a New World.

There has been a central theme, or a recurring emphasis, in the lessons for the three weeks ending with today's lesson. We have been considering "A New World," "The New Man," and now, "New Men and a New World." That theme needs emphasis. As the prophet said, "Line upon line, and precept upon precept." There is only one way to get a New World, and that is through New Men. And there is only one way to get New Men, and that is through The New Birth. Only changed men can make a changed world. Only newborn men can make possible a new world. This is not to minimize organizations such as The United Nations, the World Council of Churches, the National Council of Churches or similar associations, nor is it to minimize fraternal and social groups, and certainly it does not minimize education. It simply puts them in their proper place and gives them their proper proportion. The central idea in Jesus' conception of the Kingdom of God was a new society made up of new men. "Repent, for the Kingdom of God is at hand," was the clarion call as he began his public ministry. And this theme ran through all his teachings. By the Spirit of the Living God, men were to be born again, and to become new creatures in Christ Jesus. And those new men were the nucleus, and the assurance, of the new world.

The Seasoning, Saving Influence of New Men

Jesus put the mission of his followers in simple language. He simply said, "Ye are the salt of the earth." Salt is used for seasoning food, for preserving things. It gives tang to food, and it saves meat from decay. That is the nature and the function of salt. That is the nature and function of a Christian, of a new man in Christ. He is to season life, to give it a new and better flavor, to add tang to life. But more, he is to save the world and life. Fact is, there is a lot of rottenness in the world today. It is men and women and young people who are Christians, who not only season, but who save the life of the world. This world would have spoiled, become rotten, and been ruined and doomed long ago, if it were not for the new men in it, who have been its salt and savor and saviours.

It does not take much salt to season things. And only a few good folks, indeed sometimes even one good man or woman, can transform not only a home and family, but a whole community. But salt seasons and saves by giving itself. It saves by losing itself. We can have a brave, new world only as we give ourselves in sacrifice for it.

The Illuminating, Healing Influence of New Men.

Putting it another way, Jesus said, "Ye are the light of the world." In these seven words of one syllable, the Master again compressed the function and mission of his followers. Light cheers, guides, illumines, cleanses, reveals, warms, heals, gives life. That is the function of a Christian, of the new man in Christ. Men and women, young folks, boys and girls, ought to be cheerier and brighter because we live in their midst. They ought to be able to find the way along life's journey because we walk "in the way of righteousness." They ought to see the finer possibilities of life as well as the defects of their own lives, in the light of our character. They ought to find healing, and the more abundant life because we let our lights shine in the world in which there is so much darkness.

But here again, light can give light and life only as it gives itself. Whenever you see light, there is some expenditure of energy, some giving up by something of itself. Furthermore, there is no light apart from contact with the source of light. An electric light will not give any light unless it is connected with electric or electronic power. If we are to shine as lights, our lives must constantly be renewed by contact with him who is the Light of the world. Thank God for the thousands of humble, but sincere, good men and women, who by their example have guided us into the way of life that is life indeed. God needs more shining lights in this present hour.

Becoming Reconciled, We Become Reconciliators.

"But all things are of God, who reconciled us to himself through Christ, and gave unto us the ministry of reconciliation: to wit, God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself, not reckoning unto them their trespasses, having committed unto us the word of reconciliation." Here is a simple formula which sums up a great Christian doctrine. In Christ, God took the initiative to reconcile the world unto himself. Notice that he did not need to be reconciled to the world—he loved the world. It was the world which needed to be reconciled to him, and in Christ, he offered and effected reconciliation. In that reconciliation, men became new creations or creatures in Christ Jesus. "The old things are passed away; behold, they are become new." What a transforming experience it can be when a man becomes reconciled to God, when the broken relationship is restored again, when the barrier between men and God has been removed, when sin has been forgiven and the burden of guilt has been removed, when men are "at one with God again." That is the "good news" indeed.

But having been reconciled, we become ambassadors for Christ—that is the phrase which Paul uses. God has committed unto us "the word" or "ministry" of reconciliation. We are to be a divinely appointed "arbitration board" of one man commissioned to reconcile men to each other, bringing about reconciliation between estranged individuals, between classes and groups antagonistic to each other, between capital and labor, between races and religions, between men and nations. What a different world this would be if Christians would try to be a solution to the problem, instead of being a part of the problem, and would seriously accept, and earnestly undertake, their high commission as reconcilers for God between men and men, and for that matter, between men and God.

(Continued on page 15.)

In Memoriam

NELSON.

On August 2, 1953, our dear Heavenly Father, in his great love and wisdom, saw fit to take Brother Ben H. Nelson, deacon of the Congregational Christian Church of Henderson from his loved ones, friends, and church: therefore, be it resolved,

1. That God's way is always best.
2. That we bow in humble submission to our Father's will.
3. That we extend to his family our deepest sympathy and earnest prayers that God's Holy Spirit may give them comfort and consolation in their sorrow.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to be recorded in the minutes of the church, and a copy to "The Christian Sun" for publication.

R. P. W. SEAMAN,

JOHN A. HALL,

V. E. RAWLES Jr.,

For Deacons' Board.

LONG.

Miss Nannie B. Long, daughter of the late Sidney Fremont and Ella Poythress Long, died at her home 300 McCauley Street, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, Wednesday, September 16 at 11:10 p. m., after an illness of three days caused by cerebral hemorrhage. Funeral services were conducted from the home Friday at 4:00 by Rev. Richard Jackson pastor of the Chapel Hill Christian Church and assisted by Rev. J. T. Hayter pastor of Grove Presbyterian Church, Kenansville. Interment followed in the family plot in the Chapel Hill Cemetery.

Miss Long joined Damascus Christian Church when a child and served as organist during her girlhood. She moved her membership to the local church when the family moved to Chapel Hill.

Surviving are four sisters: Mrs. Stella Fuquay of Chapel Hill; Mrs. Gilbert Honeycutt, Fayetteville; Mrs. Marvin Miller, Fayetteville, Arkansas and Mrs. Guy Gooding, Kenansville.

Mrs. GILBERT HONEYCUTT.

HORNADAY.

On May 28, 1953 the Death Angel came quietly into our midst and called home our loving friend and sister, Mrs. Julia Hinshaw Hornaday.

Therefore we, the members of the Pleasant Hill Missionary Society wish to express our deep gratitude for her quiet Christian life which she lived in her home, her church, and community, and as a member of our missionary society. She went about her life work in a quiet Christlike way, and was a loving mother to her children, a good neighbor and a faithful member of Pleasant Hill Christian Church.

Whereas we, bow in humble submission to the Heavenly Father's will, knowing that he doeth all things well. And may we emulate her beautiful Christian character as a memorial to her life, and may darker pathes be lighted because of the torch she carried lovingly on her pilgrimage here on earth.

She is not dead that spirit strong and sweet, but gone home her master and Lord to greet. And may we meet her in that land above where reigns eternal happiness, peace and love. And last may we extend to her bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy in their great loss. Also that a copy of these resolutions be kept on record of the society and one sent to the family, and to the papers for publication.

Mrs. B. D. HARGIS.

WAR'S CRUEL TOLL.

(Continued from page 8.)

a two-shilling piece (8 cents). He shook his head. I offered it again. Still he refused. It was only when I turned to his parents and got their permission that he consented to take the coin.

During our stay in Salzburg we lived in the homes of refugees who have been successful in purchasing new two-story stucco houses. Each dwelling is occupied usually by four families. The owners, who are making small monthly payments, take great pride in their homes, surrounding the houses are beautiful flowers and vegetable gardens. What a few have been able to secure, thousands of others need and long for. Austria has 350,000 refugees, most of whom yearn for satisfying employment and a little place where the family can dwell in peace and privacy.

The Situation in Germany.

The situation in West Germany, if anything, is more critical than it is in Austria. Of the 48,000,000 people in the Western Zone nearly one fourth are refugees. With their major cities in ruins, the German people have gone about rebuilding with a fortitude that would impress even their enemies. From the beginning, the West German Government has tried to absorb and to give every consideration to its 12,000,000 refugees. Multitudes have found employment and have established homes for their families. But West Germany today is facing a problem that it cannot meet alone. It is the problem of taking care of the vast throngs of Germans in the East Zone who are fleeing the Communist tyranny. They are coming for many reasons: fear of life and limb; a desire to escape the slavery imposed by the Communist state; in search of food and clothing. Many young men, seeking to escape service in the East Zone German police force, an organization of heartless trigger-happy brigands, are seeking refuge in the West. Of the 17,000,000 in the East Zone, 2,000,000 had fled up until the border was closed by Russia last year. They are coming at the rate of around 400,000 a year. During the first seven months of this year more than 200,000 entered West Berlin. Today in West Berlin there are 100,000 refugees who are not recognized. They are permitted to have food and a place to stay, but are not allowed to work. West Berlin's problem is made more difficult by the fact that many industries have moved farther west. There are now 250,000 unemployed, involving at least 500,000 of West Berlin's 2,200,000. Moreover, there are 175,000 old people who are unable to work. We were told that every second person in West Berlin depends on public welfare. Relief work has already cost the city $250,000,000. And still the burden increases. Since June 17 a constant stream of refugees from the East Zone has poured into the city. The government is strained almost to the breaking point. Church relief agencies are doing all they can. Private citizens are helping. But still the burden increases. With unrest spreading everywhere behind the iron curtain; it is apparent that multiplied thousands from as far away as the Ukraine will seek refuge on this island of freedom in a vast sea where man is a slave.

What Can We Do?

What can be done for these millions of people cast adrift by cruel fate? What can be done for these homeless, helpless wanderers who are the innocent pawns in the cold war, who are the real victims, in the gigantic game of power politics? We do not pretend to know the answer; but we do feel constrained to lay their case before the Christian conscience of the world. Germany and Austria have responsibilities; the United Nations should help; but the churches need to do more through CROP (the Christian Rural Overseas Program), through Church World Service and through denominational relief organizations.

But food and clothing are not enough. These poor, dejected, despised people with whom we worked last summer need the spiritual ministry of the church. In Austria, Germany and over the world, we can save thousands of them for Christ if only we had the workers. In most areas of the world the churches lack the leaders and the material resources. What shall we do for the bruised and bleeding homeless multitudes who cry out for an opportunity to rebuild their lives in a strange land?

September 24, 1953.

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Thank you for the gifts of money, clothing and coupons this week. They are much appreciated. We have been in extra need this summer and fall, as living expenses are highest in history and gardens, crops and dairy have been very, very short. So we are anxious as we go to the post office for our mail to hear from many friends. When we hear from you we are encouraged and greatly helped.

I have been looking over the current issue of The Orange Presbyterian which comes to one of our matrons. It shows in this issue the benevolent askings of each of the churches in the Orange Presbytery, which is the local presbytery. The churches in this neighborhood show some interesting figures. Here are some of the apportionments for benevolences during the current year: First Burlington, $15,000.00; First Greensboro, $85,000.00; Covenant Greensboro, $20,000.00; Graham, $15,000.00; Asheville, $5,600.00; High Point, $25,000.00; Hillsboro, $2,100.00; Sanford, $16,000.00; Reidsville $10,000.00 and Buffalo (in Guilford county) $7,500.00. That is a total annual asking of $203,700.00 from these ten churches. Yes, to be sure, they are big churches, but in reading further I found that their people are taught to give a tithe to the Lord.

There are a goodly number of people in our Congregational Christian Churches who give a tithe, or tenth, to the Lord. Some give more. There is a joy in it, and there is also great blessings in it. It is easy in these days to overlook the Lord's portion what with taxes and high cost of living. But to the faithful there is a spiritual blessing in it. In the Bible we read: "Return unto me and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of host. But you said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me, But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, If I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall the vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed; for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of hosts." Sure it is the Old Testament. Yes, and so is sunshine and rain; and the ten commandments; and right is right in any age. To honor God and put him first is always right. Jesus assumed the tithe and thought it was good, and to him the possible tither was of even greater concern.

It is not everyone who gladly goes to the Lord with gratitude for his blessings. Out of the ten lepers who were cleansed only one returned to show appreciation. "Jesus answering said, Were there not ten cleansed? Where are the nine?" One of my friends says "I am not afraid I will give the Lord too much. The Lord loves a cheerful giver." And even in this world's goods it seems like my friend has done all right.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR SEPTEMBER 30, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

Miss. Soc., Belew Creek Christian Church, Quilt. _____

Mrs. E. B. Bailey, Wakefield, Va., Material. _____

Thomas Walton, Greensboro, N. C., Shoes. _____

Mrs. H. F. Dowd, Greensboro, N. C. Clothing. _____

Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va., Coupons. _____

Mrs. W. A. Hensley, Elkton, Va., Coupons. _____

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $10,829.86

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $14,859.60

Mrs. E. L. Ellington, Reidsville, N. C.	$ 10.00
Mrs. J. M. Riddle, Sanford, N. C.	5.00
A group of former teachers and students, Burlington, N. C., in memory of H. G. McBane .	22.00
Mrs. J. L. Foster, Sr., and Miss Mary Lee Foster, Elon College, N. C. in memory of Dr. S. Dace McPherson	5.00
Mrs. M. C. Faucette, Brown Summit, N. C. .	7.00
Wake Chapel Miss. Soc., in memory of S. S. Snead, Sr.	5.00
J. M. Whitley, Suffolk, Va. .	5.00
G. S. Huber, Spring Grove, Va.	25.00
A Friend Burlington, N. C.	25.00
Woman's Fellowship, Shallowford Church	25.00
Trust Fund, First Cong. Church, Asheville, N. C. .	50.00
A memorial gift	100.00
A member of Liberty Spring Christian Church	5.00
A Friend, Cong. Christian Temple, Norfolk, Va. .	5.00
Special Gifts	85.33
	379.33
Grand total	$15,238.93
Total for the week	$ 379.33
Total for the year	$26,068.79

"LITTLE BOY LOST."
(Continued from page 3.)

a birthday or received a gift, and who gives a remarkable performance.

The story in this Paramount picture based on the novel by Marghania Lasky, has a "message": is the life of a child worth saving for its own sake, or is the self-centered reconstruction of the past the main consideration for the adult who is trying to recapture it?

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

.....
(Name of Deceased)	(City)	(Date of Death)
.....
(Survivor to be Written)	(Address)
Name.....
Address.....

Pledges to Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

Through September 30, 1953, there had been received at the Southern Convention Officer Declarations of Purpose for the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign, as follows:

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Bethel—Vacant	377.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton ..	211.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardecastle	$ 872.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo .	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lighthourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark .	200.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dollar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardecastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein .	1,459.00
Suffolk—Duane N. Vorz	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—Carl Wallace	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—F. C. Lester	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ...	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presnell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	$ 400.00

Lakeview—John G. Truitt, Jr.	82.50
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisseman	3,292.00
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren .	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

†Paid.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

That would go a long ways toward making a new world in itself.

Faith and Works.

It is not enough to say, one must act. It is not enough to profess, one must perform. Faith without works is dead. We are saved by faith, of course, but we are saved for good works. New men are created to help to make a new world.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

Building Loan Fund Campaign

SOUTHERN CONVENTION SCORE SHEET

Conference & Chairman	Total Declarations to Oct. 1, 1953	Total Declarations to June 25, 1953
Eastern North Carolina	$ 10,022.00	$ 5,321.00
I. H. Vickery
Western North Carolina	3,410.00	2,121.00
S. H. Pell
Eastern Virginia	33,677.00	12,479.00
W. B. Williams
North Carolina & Virginia	16,004.50	7,514.50
A. H. Blalock
Virginia Valley	2,360.59	166.00
C. A. Phillips
Total	$ 65,475.09	$ 27,601.50

	Percentage of Goal Reached to Oct. 1, 1953	Percentage of Goal Reached to June 25, 1953
Eastern North Carolina	54%	30%
Western North Carolina	28%	18%
Eastern Virginia	65%	24%
North Carolina & Virginia	31%	15%
Virginia Valley	40%	3%

Percentage of Churches Which Have Signed DECLARATIONS OF PURPOSE

Eastern North Carolina	40%
Western North Carolina	21%
Eastern Virginia	51%
North Carolina & Virginia	35%
Virginia Valley	48%

CONVENTION GOAL — $135,000.00

DECLARATIONS OF PURPOSE ACCEPTED — $65,475.09

PERCENTAGE OF GOAL ACCEPTED — 48.5%

How Can I . . .

Say What I Ought To Say?

By REV. HENRY E. ROBINSON

If by some sudden catastrophe all telephones, telegraphs, radios, buses, cars and planes should be put out of commission, our national life would be paralyzed. If this seems to be a calamity, suppose that our power of speech should be lost and that men everywhere lost the power to communicate ideas. Life and civilization, as we know it, would vanish in a matter of days. This is how great a part language plays in human affairs. Did you ever stop to think that the power of speech plays so great a part in your life and mine?

This very day, by a word, you can make or break somebody's heart. By a word you can pray to God or commune with the devil. By a few carefully chosen sentences you can teach the way of life or you can destroy the hopes and plans of some young person. The greatest power you wield at this moment is the power of speech. Don't think you are unimportant or impotent. Don't be sold short. God has given each of us the power to communicate ideas by the spoken word. In his name and for his sake, use it.

But you ask: "How can I say what I ought to say?" Someone asked a minister one time when he had had time to prepare a most helpful sermon just delivered. He replied: "Madame, that sermon has been in preparation for fifty years." All his training, experience, heartache and soul-searching had gone into his words. The words of all of us should reflect the best in training—training by man and by God over a long period of time.

I saw a picture not long ago of the various processes through which the coffee bean goes before you brew it in the pot. One of those processes required a long conveyor belt flanked by nimble-fingered women who picked out the inferior beans. No machine has as yet been devised to sift out the culls. We must likewise stand guard at the door of speech and screen out the words that hurt and destroy. This takes will-power and sometimes requires a loss of pride, but it must be done.

Words are a reflection of our thoughts—the quality of our minds. Beautiful words can come only from minds that think beautiful thoughts. Such minds grow upon the treasured memories of beautiful deeds and experiences which enrich life. Other minds are mired down by the unwholesome, petty, ugly, damaging experiences which have been stored away and drain out into the world through the things we say. I once had the unhappy experience of having a bottle of ink spill in a suitcase. I censured myself for not securing the cap. "No," my mother said, "the mistake was in packing the ink in the first place." The same is true about unworthy memories and thoughts. If you don't pack them away, they will never spill over.

Timing our words is of utmost importance. The right word at the right time is what brings light into darkness. I remember a line from a Prayer Book: Forgive us Lord, for the word we left unsaid. Ofttimes we punish people with our silence, and it can be a cruel weapon. Other times we say the cruel word when and where it will cut the deepest. Words of reproof and correction should be timed carefully to be received when they will help and not hurt. That word of praise should not sound like an afterthought—tardy and belated—covering up an oversight rather than lifting and encouraging a deserving soul.

It will help us to say the right thing if we bear in mind the terrible importance of words, if we speak from the maturity of life, if we cull away the chaff and preserve only the good, and finally if we will speak at the right time and toward the end of lifting up—not tearing down.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, OCTOBER 15, 1953

NUMBER 41

How to Read the Bible

By H. S. HARDCASTLE

There is a strange inconsistency and paradox in the matter of a Christian and his Bible. Suggest to the average Christian that the Bible is not an inspired Book, not the Word of God, and you will "strike fire" at once. Or again, if you talk with the average Christian about the superlative qualities of the Bible, its incomparable style, its beautiful literary form, its idealism, its moral precepts and its spiritual principles, he will readily assent to all that you say. But if you ask this same average Christian if he reads the Bible regularly and frequently, he will, if he is honest, say "No." It is a paradox of life, but it is a fact nevertheless.

Here is a Book that supplies truth for the mind, and life for the spirit. And yet it is so often neglected, and all because other things are allowed to crowd it out of one's life. Bible reading is a duty, but it is more than a duty; it is a means to a richer, fuller life. In the light of this, these suggestions are made, which, if adopted, will bear rich fruitage in the life of the one who adopts them.

1. Form an indiscourageable resolution to read the Bible, frequently and regularly.
2. Have a definite time, if possible, for Bible reading.
3. Have a definite place, if possible a secluded place, for Bible reading.
4. Do not read under pressure; that is, do not feel that you must read so much in such-and-such a time.
5. Read the Bible by books, or by large sections. It helps from time to time to read an entire book at one sitting. This is, of course, impossible as a matter of daily reading.
6. Read the Bible itself, rather than Books about the Bible, when reading in a devotional sense.
7. Read the Bible with an open mind.
8. Read the Bible with a prayerful and obedient spirit.
9. Read a while, and then meditate a while over what you have read.
10. Read the Bible, not simply to gain a knowledge of the Bible, but to the end that you might be a better man or woman.

News Flashes

We are printing this week only a part of the annual report to the North Carolina Women, by the treasurer, Miss Susie D. Allen. The report of Thank Offerings and a list of Memorials and Life Memberships will be given next week. Lack of space precluded their inclusion this week.

The Stewardship Week program, recently held at Wake Chapel, was reported a success beyond even expectations. The venerable Stewardship expert of our church, Dr. Warren H. Denison was the leader of the week's program. The pastor, the Rev. Kenneth Register, has promised us a full report. Watch for it.

Miss Shirley Anne House, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. House of Franklinton, N. C., and niece of the late Dr. Robert Lee House, was married October 9 to Mr. Robert R. Winstead of Bunn. The little Misses Andrea Lee and Joyanna House of Newport News, Virginia were attendants for their cousin. Following the wedding, Mrs. House and children went to Southern Pines to be at the Church of Wide Fellowship, the first Sunday the new educational building was used. Dr. W. T. Scott preached at the morning service.

Christians and Intoxicants

To what extent can a Christian be temperate with an evil?

It was a shocking revelation when a very fine churchwoman told a friend that in the churchwomen's home meetings she was often confronted with the serving of intoxicating liquors? She always refused them.

Another shocking revelation came when a member of a church school class remarked that the teacher of the class had once said, "I am not telling you to abstain from intoxicating liquors, because I serve them in my home. I'm telling you to be temperate."

A theology student about to become an ordained minister had intoxicants served at his wedding! A minister holding the professorship of religion in a large eastern university boasted about the reasonable rates at

(Continued on page 11.)

Our Ministry to Migrant Workers

By REV. M. R. KURTZ, Director.

The ministry to migrant workers carried on by the North Carolina Council of Churches has now successfully marked the close of its fourth year of operation.

This Christian service had its beginning in the summer of 1950, when a preliminary survey under the joint to the church, and their behavior was often a serious concern to the communities in which they lived.

From this modest beginning, the program has grown to number an employed staff of seven trained leaders, plus hundreds of volunteer workers, ministering in 41 migrant camps in Currituck, Pasquotank, Camden, Beaufort, and Henderson Counties. This is an increase of 18 camps over the number reached last year, due to the new Aurora ministry in Beaufort County which numbered 17 camps, plus a new camp constructed this year in the Hendersonville area. The ministry includes preaching, organization of Sunday schools, counselling, distributing supplies contributed by church groups, planned recreation, and child-care centers. Local health, welfare, and police officials have been high in their praise of the work, and have cooperated in every way.

Plans for still another area to be reached are being formulated now and are expected to be put into effect in the summer of 1954. There are from 1500 to 2000 workers in Tyrrell County who will be reached next year, if plans can be made to send in a staff of workers.

The rapid growth of the migrant ministry, and the critical need for its further expansion require a considerable increase in financial support. Direct costs, even with the practice of every economy, have doubled in the last two years, and to strengthen the existing program, plus undertaking the new Tyrrell County project will require a further increase of at least 50 per cent next year. Each staff member at present, has to minister to an average of from 500 to 800 migrant workers which, of course,

(Continued on page 7.)

NOTICE of CHANGE in PLACE of MEETING

The One Hundred Thirty-Third Annual Session of the Eastern Virginia Conference of Congregational Christian Churches will be held on Wednesday and Thursday, October 28 and 29, at the Newport News Congregational Christian Church, Newport News, Virginia.

Persons desiring over-night entertainment should write immediately to Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., 2308 Roanoke Ave., Newport News, Va.

James H. Lightbourne, Jr.,
Secretary.

auspices of the Home Missions Council of North America and the North Carolina Council of Churches was made of the migrant camps here. The purpose was to see what needed to be done to reach the more than 12,000 transient farm workers and their families, who harvested potatoes, beans, corn, and other crops in North Carolina each year. Most of these people had little or no relationship

Southern Convention Dates to Remember

- | | |
|-----------------|--|
| October | 14-15—Virginia Valley Annual Conference Session
Bethlehem Church |
| | 20-21—Eastern North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Shallow Well Church |
| | 28-29—Eastern Virginia Annual Conference Session
Congregational Christian Church, Newport News, Va. |
| November | 3-4—Western North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Pleasant Hill Church |
| | 10-11—North Carolina & Virginia Annual Conference Session
Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, N. C. |
| December | 8—Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association
Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va. |

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Franklin Church Will Observe Laymen's Sunday

Again, we call your attention to the nation-wide observance of Layman's Sunday on October 18. Today we are printing the program which will be used by the Laymen of the Congregational Christian Church at Franklin, Virginia.

* * *

LAYMEN'S SUNDAY PROGRAM.

- Organ Prelude.
- Call To Worship—Choir.
- Invocation and Lord's Prayer—John Galloway.
- Hymn.
- Responsive Reading—George Dodson.
- Gloria Patri.
- Special—Dr. Darden Jones, Jimmie Nicholas, Robert Vaughn, Reverend Harvey Carnes.
- Scripture Lesson—Raymon Poter.
- Anthem—Choir.
- Prayer—Dr. E. B. Gatten.
- Offertory—R. E. Sandlin.
- Doxology and Prayer of Dedication—R. E. Sandlin.
- Hymn.
- Speaker.
- Hymn.
- Benediction—Rev. Harvey Carnes.
- Ushers: Warren Councill, Jack Beal, Hayes Holland, Walter Norfleet, Jr.
- Choir Committee: Dr. Darden Jone, Robert Vaughan, Jimmie Nicholas.

* * *

You can see we put as many men in our program as we could. We wanted all the laymen to take part. The Choir will have at least fifteen men in it.

We are having a Fellowship Committee and Transportation Committee. The committee will consist of six men. Each man will have a helper. They will take six names from the rollbook to visit which will make a total of seventy two people or laymen that will be seen and talked with. If they have no way to church the committee and helpers will be glad to go for them on Layman Sunday.

In addition we are mailing each member of the church a card to remind him of Laymen's Sunday. Also, we are putting it in our local newspaper.

JOHN GALLOWAY.

Layman's Day, Union Grove

Union Grove will observe Layman's Day Sunday, October 18, at 7:30. Reverend Winfred Bray, pastor of the church has designater the evening service for Layman's program.

Mr. Hubert Beane of our Asheboro church and Mr. Carroll King from one of the other churches in the neighborhood will be the featured speakers. The Laymen of the church are planning the entire program.

PAUL WILSON.

* * * * *

Father-Son Banquet at Bethlehem

The Laymen's group at the Bethlehem church at Altamahaw held a father-son banquet on Sunday, October 4. A large number of the men brought one or more of their sons and a fine evening of fun and fellowship were enjoyed. The meal was a sumptuous one and it was also prepared by the women of the church. It was a real pleasure for your editor to have the opportunity to enjoy the meal and the privilege of speaking to the group again on the importance of organizing a Layman's Fellowship. These men seemed to be very interested and we expect they will be organizing within the near future. Reverend G. C. Crutchfield, pastor of the church, is assisting the group during these early meetings.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

- 1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- 2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- 3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- 4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
- 5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year	$3.00
Two Years	5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195...

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Are We Building the Church of God?

By RICHARD K. MORTON

Church news often intrigues me—especially as I think of the probable philosophy of churchmanship that lies behind the desire to publish it.

For five years, there crossed my desk, as church editor of the Providence, Rhode Island, Journal, a potpourri of church activities of all kinds. I was often amazed at how many of these had no perceptible relationship to the main business of the church. They indicated activity and energy and resourcefulness, and often ability—but in themselves little grasp of the main business of the church.

One of the great denominational journals that still comes to my desk now is an excellent illustration of what is to me an unfortunate emphasis in our church life. Church news items galore deal with what the church did to increase salaries, build additions, renovate properties, and so on. Ministers are lauded largely for what was done during their pastorate to enlarge and improve the physical properties. I have often wondered why they were not more considered for their spiritual influence. This publication seems to measure men almost wholly for business or administrative ability. Now this is surely important—but we do not have churches because we need more successful corporations.

What is being built, what is being accomplished, by all this activity? Are we indeed building the house of God—or is it, in effect, something else? According to II Samuel 7:5, the word of God came to Nathan the prophet to say, "Thus saith the Lord, Shalt thou build me an house for me to dwell in?" David was given a great commission which looked to the future. It was to be, truly enough, a temple, a house of God—but surely it was not to be considered simply as an enterprising business development!

The writer of Isaiah 66:1-2 delivers from God this message: "The heaven is my throne, and the earth is my footstool: where is the house that ye build unto me? and where is the place of my rest? For all those things hath mine hand made, and all those things have been, saith the Lord: but to this man will I look, even to him that is poor and of a contrite spirit, and trembleth at my word."

Where, indeed, is this house of God which we are building? I fear that in building and piling up, in some places, so much steel and stone that we have sometimes forgotten that what God values most is a dwelling place within the human heart—a contrite, humble and teachable heart.

No one would gainsay the declaration that we must have more church edifices and other properties—but we must not lose sight of the fact that the existence of these does not, in itself, mean that we have really built anything for God. We have built often the kind of house, I fear, that God will not care to enter and will not value. Maybe we think to substitute our architectural and constructional skill for our spiritual sonship. Maybe we offer these gifts of our hands instead of our hearts.

This idea, as your concordance will tell you, is echoed in Acts 7:49.

In Ephesians 2:20, we come to the needed spiritualizing of this building of the house of God, as we are called "fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner-stone . . . in whom ye also are builded together for an habitation of God through the Spirit."

I am just wondering whether we have not been too sure, in our fevered building projects, educational units, expanded programs, larger budgets, and other business undertakings, that we were building the house of God. In all these things we may have ignored what was most important.

I have seen groups show more determination to make a church successful as a corporation than as an agent of the salvation of souls. The church cannot be greater than its Lord. The church can do nothing without its Lord. We must not equate financial success with service in the name of the Lord.

What is this house we are building for the Lord, anyway? Of what is it made? Who is invited to enjoy it? What will it be used for?

Let us above all build a temple of the Lord within life and in terms of faith and love and service. Then we will best know how to use whatever material properties we as a fellowship may be able to erect in his name!

Our Mission on Mindanao

By REV. QUENTIN LEISHER

This year marks the 50th anniversary of Congregational work in the Philippines under the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. Our work is relatively new compared to Islam, established in 1450; or Roman Catholicism, established in 1520. However, the work is progressing rapidly and is important to the cause of Christ and to the general welfare of the Philippines.

The Philippines presents an ideal example of the Congregational Christian philosophy of missions. Working through the board our denomination has seen its task as one which ministers to the mind, body, and soul of man. Today as never before we see the wisdom of this policy. It is proven in the Philippines where there is a great hunger and yearning for education. The Filipino realizes that education means liberation from enslavement of mind and body. It means freedom from the poverty that has beset his people. It means escape from the conniving and clever thieves who would steal the land through high interest rates and other devious means. Thus, in the Philippines today there is a higher percentage of high school graduates going on to college than we have here.

The eight high schools and two colleges affiliated with the American Board impart to the young Filipino a new faith, a promise of a better tomorrow, and a knowledge for facing and solving many of the practical problems of every-day life.

I.—Economic Assistance.

First, this practical education touches the economic life of the people. To those living in the rural areas this is important. To all who want the islands free of communism this economic freedom is imperative. To the tenant farmer or small land owner working in the rural areas of the island, knowledge of new ways and better means of farming often come as the good news he has waited so long to hear.

A common practice has brought about deforestation and soil erosion, and in its wake a greater strain on the economy. This practice has involved burning the timber off the steep hillsides, plowing under the ashes to enrich the soil, and planting corn—a food crop that is needed. Aided by the warm, moist year-round weather conditions, it is possible to harvest as many as three crops of corn in a year. The crops are not rotated nor the soil enriched. In a few seasons the land is worn out. Six and seven foot corn soon dwindles to knee-high corn at full growth. In the meantime the top soil that may take decades to rebuild has washed to the gullies below.

The Protestant church has developed a strategy that will help solve this problem. Under the guidance of Dean James F. McKinley of Silliman University School of Theology, the ministerial students are taught regular courses in church administration, preaching, etc. In addition, on the edge of the campus there is an agricultural project station where these ministerial students learn to rotate crops, cross breed the wild chickens of the Philippines with Rhode Island Reds, or build up the soil with chemical or organic fertilization. Upon graduation the young minister brings the new life and hope to the community. Not only does this trained leader preach on Sunday but through the week he shows his people how the land can produce more abundant crops. In turn the 220 churches of Mindano have taken on a new life that manifests itself by crowded worship centers on Sunday and for mid-week services.

REV. QUENTIN LEISHER

When we visited these churches in Mindanao two years ago we were impressed with the large numbers and with the concern which members had for their churches. The Philosophy of missions which has coupled the economic with the religious life has been a great factor in the growth of the churches of Mindanao from 500 to 20,000 members in one generation.

Recently the American Board has expanded facilities at Southern Christian College at Midsyap in the heart of the large southern island. This new program will allow for agricultural training among the 900 students. But even with the advanced program of the two colleges mentioned operating effectively and efficiently there is an urgent need for at least four agricultural stations on Mindanao. This is the kind of work that has its foundations in the New Testament and with Jesus who preached "Good News" to the poor.

II.—An Educated People.

It was in Dansalan in the heart of Mindanao where Frank Laubach, Congregational Christian missionary, received his inspiration for the "Each One Teach One" literacy program. After serving 14 years as a teacher in northern Mindanao and later in Manila, Dr. Laubach became a missionary among the hostile Moslem Moros. The real "break" came in his work when he reduced to writing the hitherto unwritten Maranaw dialect. With this accomplished Laubach devised charts and by a system of associating sounds with symbols he taught the Moslems to read and write. The next was to establish a printing press; then, to publish tracts on health, sanitation, agriculture. In addition, however, leaflets were printed on the Life of Jesus, and primers on the gospels. This latter emphasis did much to create an attitude of love where hate and discontent had reigned.

The literacy work in Lanao started in 1929. Great results were forthcoming. Then the depression hit America. Funds were restricted. There was no money to pay the teachers and it looked as though the literacy program might be scuttled. A meeting of Moros was called, and after the situation was explained the Moro chief said, "This work can't stop because we lack money. From now on each one who learns has got to teach or I'll kill him." Thus, under threat was born the "Each One Teach One System."

To date the literacy teams have worked in 85 countries under the direct supervision of Dr. Laubach. Charts have been made in 235 languages and dialects, and 60 million

(Continued on page 9.)

Constructive Fun for Halloween

In hundreds of American communities "Tricks or Treats" now means helping the U. N. Children's Fund. It bids fair to become a nation-wide process of changing Halloween gaiety from destructive to constructive effort. This new "Tricks or Treats" programme combines normal Halloween fun with collecting money for United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund, the unique international cooperative for helping the world's under-privileged children.

The idea has proved so useful it has been quickly adopted in towns and cities right across the country. Sometimes the young folks of one congregation have taken the initiative, sometimes a combination of parishes. Sometimes schools and churches have worked together, sometimes churches and synagogues. In many cases the "Tricks or Treats" project has been a community-wide operation with service clubs, schools and churches participating.

Whatever the local pattern, the results have been the same; thanks to a bit of planning, youthful energies have been turned to something constructive and needy children in far corners of the earth have directly benefitted. In Cuba, New York, for instance, a town of 18,000, children using the "Tricks or Treats" formula collected enough pennies on Halloween to provide a week's ration of a glass of milk a day for 1500 children in Thailand. Deerfield, Kansas, with less than 500 population, collected $66.38 that will immunize 1790 children against tuberculosis. However, the emphasis is not on the amount collected but the mass participation and its educational value. Scranton, Pennsylvania, wrote; "For the first time our young people gave their Halloween fun a creative twist. They were thrilled with the prospect of so many children being able to drink milk because they had collected this money."

The organization necessary is as simple as the idea itself. Any group of youngsters really appreciates the needs of other children, and is eager to do something which combines Halloween fun with direct help to their fellows in other lands. Advance publicity in local press and radio prepares the community for this new-style Halloween. The evening itself can have its parties where a round-up of the collections for UNICEF is operated. The United States Committee for UNICEF, sponsoring this enterprise, will provide a complete project kit, with arm bands for the youngsters, posters, a film strip, sample press and radio releases, and generous background material about UNICEF at work around the world.

For the average youngster the whole complexity of the United Nations is a bit difficult to comprehend, but if he takes part in a United Nations operation as simple as providing milk for hungry children abroad, he can understand that, and it arouses his interest in other phases of the U. N. program. One teacher writes, "This was one part of the United Nations that they could understand on their own terms, and to those who shared their Halloween with children around the world, it became a personal link with the United Nations." And, at the other end of the operation, on the other side of the world, the fact that American young people collected funds for the milk or medicine a child receives is weightier evidence of world solidarity through the United Nations, than the vastly larger gifts from governments.

Giving through UNICEF doubles the gift; each government receiving assistance is pledged to match dollar for dollar the amount UNICEF invests in that country. Giving through UNICEF is highly constructive; the larger part of UNICEF's services now are going toward training medical and technical personnel, the production of vaccines and antibiotics, and anti-tuberculosis or anti-malaria campaigns. Giving through UNICEF means helping many governments in economically under-developed areas to undertake child welfare programs, where those were never known before.

The effects of "Tricks or Treats" in a given community may best be stated by the participants themselves. Here are bits from typical letters about the 1952 program.

"We are placing a report in our local weekly—and the editor has promised an editorial suggesting that this be made a community activity next year instead of just one of the churches doing it. . ."

"This money was collected in just one-half hour from homes around the church. They had a big time collecting and all were glad that it was going to be used for such a good purpose."

"This is the first time that the young people of these two churches have worked together on anything, and it has stimulated an interest in other interdenominational enterprises. We feel that this is one way that we can express tangibly our interest in world brotherhood."

"I know now that I will promote it on a conference scale next year, not only for the small financial aid we may afford UNICEF, but because I see how it pushes back the horizons for many of our people here."

"Whatever value this may have to the world's children in their need . . . the value to the character and moral fiber of our own children in sharing the plentiful good times of their Halloween festival is incalculable. . . We believe that many persons in our community were made more aware of the world's need and of our own opportunities for helping. . . Our continued support and prayers will be with you in the Children's Fund and other work of the U. N. . . that all men may live together in peace and brotherhood. . ."

"This new 'twist' on Halloween begging, plus the fact that the money is given to nonsectarian sources through the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund seems to provide a winning combination for excellent press and radio relations. We are happy that we can make some small contribution and partial payment on our Christian debt."

" . . . and any parties that are held after the children have made their rounds have a real meaning. True enjoyment comes through doing a good turn for others."

That was last year; letters and requests for materials indicate that this year's effort will be greatly extended. Its values are immediately apparent; Constructive fun, instead of destructive; active participation in the work of the United Nations and the consequent value in world relationships; broadening the horizons of all concerned and helping their understanding of some of the world's problems. Information about the "Trick or Treats" programme may be had by writing the United States Committee for UNICEF, United Nations, New York, New York.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Investments Where?

When the convention authorized the Sustaining Fund as a means of financial support for Elon College, it planned more wisely than it thought. The Sustaining Fund offers to every individual member of every local church in the Southern Convention an opportunity to make an investment—an investment in human life that life might be trained and developed. No individual need be wealthy to make this investment. It is not intended that anyone should make a large investment but that everyone might make a small investment. The smallness of the investment is the challenge to the individual. Very few people would miss one dollar in twelve months; only a small fraction of a cent daily. Really no one would miss that size investment. Let us never lose sight of the fact that this is an investment.

Sixty three years ago, children in our Sunday schools were contributing pennies, nickles, and dimes to be invested in a new college for their church. Out of these small contributions Elon College was founded and through the years, it has grown to the great institution it is today. In that far away year, they were not giving their money, they were investing it in a great opportunity.

The members of our church today, when they cast in their dollars for Elon College to meet the convention's requirements, are not giving their money merely as a gift, they are investing it. The dividends of this investment will be paid to future generations. We shall not live to see it, but imagine, if you can, the results of these dollars that are invested in Elon College more than one half century to come. You may be able to judge what these investments will be then by thinking what the dividends are today of investments made more than one half century ago.

You say, "One dollar isn't much." It isn't. One dollar by itself will not bear fabulous dividends, but if you could stand up thirty five thousand people and every one cast in his dollar, together these dollars would make a marvelous investment. The dividends of this would be amazing and result in marvelous blessings to you and all who are concerned. If we could but vision the future, we would hasten to make our investments now, lest the opportunity pass, and we miss the blessing of multiplied dividends in the days to come. We can hold on to our dollars, of course, but in our pockets, they won't multiply, they won't bear dividends, they must be invested to fulfill their mission and bring blessing to human kind. Don't be afraid to invest a dollar. You won't lose it. It will gain other dollars for that high cause in which you are interested and which you are anxious to see succeed in its program, and multiply its services to the good people of our church, to the communities of our churches, and all the society of which we are a part.

Some few of our churches have already invested their Sustaining Fund money. Many others have planned to do so, and still others are considering it. Together, 200 churches, 35,000 individuals, we shall make our investment and watch our college grow to a greater institution of more usefulness to our churches and to society.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

Our Heritage.

On one occasion on a street corner in a great city, a police officer found a young child standing on the street corner alone, frightened, not knowing which way to go or what to do. The mother had left the child for a moment intending to return. She became busy with shopping, interested in talking with others. All the while the child was in distress. By and by the mother remembered that she had left the child on the street corner, but rushing into the street from the other side of the building, had become confused and forgotten on which street corner the child was left. Frantically she sought the child; and finally, by enlisting the policeman's help, the child was discovered. This story appears in the papers a year ago.

Three score and more years ago, the Southern Christian Convention founded Elon College. It was a child of the church. It was built on a plot of ground in Alamance County, North Carolina. Many of our churches have become so interested in their affairs, so engulfed in other interests, that they have partly forgotten the child of the convention. In fact, some of them have almost forgotten where it is located. During these years, it has been left largely to struggle for itself, or make its own way in the educational world. The parent church, at times, seems to have been unmindful of the tragic need of her child. Perhaps in these awakening years, months of anxiety, and days of distress, the church, the local organizations, the individual members will become aware not only of their responsibilities for the child of their church which has grown and developed through the years until it is a credit to the church and a blessing to its constituency. Now, as never before, the child needs the love, the companionship, the devotion, the support that only the church, its mother, can give. May we, as a church, be mindful not only of the college's need but of the church's opportunity on the campus, in the classrooms, and the future of the college. We make our offerings not simply to meet the needs of the college but to make investments that will bear rich dividends in the days and years to come.

Previously Reported $ 7,461.69

Eastern Va. Conference:

Dendron S. S. $ 3.10

Holland 56.00

Johnson's Grove 10.00

Wakefield 16.59

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Belew Creek S. S. $ 5.00

Western N. C. Conference:

Bailey's Grove $ 5.00

Virginia Valley Conference:

Dry Run S. S. $ 4.13

Winchester S. S. 8.34

108.16

Total to date $ 7,569.85

MINISTRY TO MIGRANTS.

(Continued from page 2.)

is very difficult. Another serious shortage is in the matter of sound equipment and transportation. At present the council does not own a station wagon or a sound film projector—both essential to the work.

The migrant ministry is costing at present about 28 cents per person reached. It would be cheap at ten times the price, for who can measure the worth of one human soul? Contributions of both money and supplies should be sent to the North Carolina council of Churches, Ministry to Migrants, Box 6637, College Station, Durham.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Eastern Virginia Women Meet

Franklin Congregational Christian Church was host on Thursday, October 1, to the forty-first annual session of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference. The church was filled to overflowing with approximately 400 attending the conference. Every available seat was taken and many people had to stand. We were given a very gracious welcome by both Mrs. Irving Beale, president of the Franklin Women's Society, and the Rev. Harvey D. Carnes, the minister of the Franklin church.

The morning session opened on time and moved along in an orderly and dignified manner, with Mrs. Garland Spratley presiding.

Miss Grace Spivey from Newport News Church conducted the morning worship, after which the members of each church stood proudly to be counted during the "Recognition Service" (you'd hear 18, 22, 32, etc.). That went on until there was "standing room only." I am still wondering what caused the Avalanche. Was it the beautiful autumn day, Rev. Quentin Leisher or Mrs. William T. Scott, each of whom spoke on their subjects so ably, or just the keen interest in our women's work? I'd like to think it was a little of each. Anyway, we had a grand time together, for it is a loyal group. When the noon hour came, I wondered how they'd handle the crowd. You just leave it to Franklin women! There was not a hitch. Everyone was served a most delicious chicken salad plate and served on time. Perhaps a few went downtown for lunch, not because of lack of food but for lack of room.

The annual reports were very informative and constructive, and fine plans were made for the coming year.

During the morning session Mr. Shepherd Johnson rendered the solo, "My Task." In the afternoon a solo by Mrs. Harvey Carne entitled, "Great Peace Have They Which Love the Lord," added much to the spirit of worship.

After the fellowship and inspiration of such a day as we had in

Franklin, I feel we can "Go on our way Rejoicing" in "The Life and Task of the Church Around the World."

The officers were installed in a very impressive manner by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill.

MRS. RAY GORDON.

* * * * *

North Carolina Woman's Conference

Some 450 women met in the First Church, Greensboro, on October 6 for the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference, with Mrs. W. T. Scott, president, presiding. Preceding the "call to order" a "hymn sing" was led by Mrs. Vance Pegram. A most effective method of registration and seating (by districts) eliminated the usual rush and flurry. Greensboro church women in costumes from other nations served as ushers and added a colorful note to the meeting.

Mrs. Mark Andes led the morning devotional. The morning program was divided into sections: "Life and Task—Beginning at Home" in which Mrs. Carl Key introduced the cradle roll and family life leaders and gave a detailed presentation of children's work; "Life and Task—Christian Outreach," led by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, was "crowded out" by lack of time but was presented effectively in the two dining halls during the lunch hour, with friendly service, interdenominational cooperation, social action, literature, and life memberships and memorials represented; "Life and Task—National Goals" included a report on the Church Building Loan Fund by Martin Garren, reference to "deepening our spiritual life" and showing "The Hidden Heart" in every church, as well as an emphasis on stewardship by Mrs. F. C. Lester.

Mrs. J. T. Stanley, wife of the superintendent of Negro work for our denomination in the Southeast, told of "Our Mission at Franklinton Center," expressing thanks for all the women had done there and telling of the future hopes in the new location at Bricks.

Rev. Quentin Leisher enthralled the group with his challenge to action now in world missions. His message is found in brief on the missions page. Following his special call for help in Mindanao, an offering amounting to $188.46 was received as the initial gift on the Thank Offering.

Biggest news in the business session was that our giving for 1952-53 amounted to $10,528.25, the largest ever.

Mrs. W. T. Scott delighted the group as she took us with her in imagination to St. Andrews, Scotland and other European points.

The installation service by Mrs. W. J. Andes was well-planned and effective.

All in all it was a good day!

* * * * *

North Carolina Women's Officers

President—Mrs. Wm. T. Scott, Elon College.

Vice-President and Friendly Service—Mrs. R. L. Jackson, Chapel Hill.

Secretary—Miss Ruth Willis, 1917 Brantley Street, Winston-Salem 7.

Treasurer—Miss Susie D. Allen, 612 W. Lane Street, Raleigh.

Superintendents:

Cradle Roll—Mrs. Mack Welch, Greensboro.

Children—Mrs. W. A. Grissom, Rt. 1, Henderson.

Young People—Mrs. Mark Andes, Virgilina, Va.

Spiritual Life—Mrs. H. E. Robinson, Burlington.

Family Life—Mrs. Edd Chilton, 1214 Barnes St., Reidsville.

Interdenominational Cooperation—Mrs. R. V. Powell, 411 Woodlawn, Greensboro.

Life Memberships and Memorials—Mrs. W. B. O'Neill, Sanford.

Visual Aids—Mrs. K. D. Register, Rt. 2, Burlington.

Literature—Mrs. J. L. Davis, 101 Hedrick Arcade, Asheboro.

Social Action—Mrs. Carl Wallace, 1011 Stamper Rd., Fayetteville.

* * * * *

Eastern Virginia Women's Officers

President—Mrs. Garland Spratley, Dendron.

Vice-President and Friendly Service—Mrs. Ray F. Gordon, 218 Grace Street, Suffolk.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. Howard S. Hardecastle, Chuckatuck.

(Continued on page 13.)

"God the Father: Men His Children"

A Vesper Sermon

By REV. JOHN F. C. GREEN, D. D.
McKeesport, Pa.

"See what love the Father has given us, that we should be called children of God; and so we are. The reason why the world does not know it is that it did not know him. Beloved, we are God's children now; it does not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he appears we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. And everyone who thus hopes in him purifies himself as he is pure."—I John 3: 1-3.

"Thou madest (man) little less than God, and dost crown him with glory and honor."—Psalms 8: 5.

GOSPEL: Luke 14: 1-11.

Life is beset with uncertainties, with illness, and finally with death. Always, therefore, man seeks to escape pain and suffering and anxiety. In the gospel for the seventeenth Sunday after Trinity, the Pharisees had set another trap for Jesus, that under their law they might find him guilty and condemn him. Here was a sick man. Would he heal him on the Sabbath? If he did, he had broken the rules of the holy day, and they would convict him of unfaithfulness to their religion, proving him a false teacher.

Jesus broke through the rules and gave health to this sufferer and faced his persecutors with a question. If an ox had fallen into a pit, would they not see to it that the animal would be pulled out, to save its life? Would they do more for a valuable animal than for a human being, a brother of theirs and a child of God? Being unable honestly to answer him, the tricky "lawyers and Pharisees" fell into silence and awaited another chance to destroy the Messiah.

Jesus came to his mission in far-away Palestine to reveal the love of God to his children. He came to reveal to man his own greatness as a child of God. And only in God is this greatness. Where God has been omitted, man is degraded into something less than "a little lower than God," and is used by those who have power, and by those who seek power, for their own ends. As the Pharisees said of those, the common people, who follow the Master, the people, "who know not the law, are accursed." To them, their power over the people through their application of the law, the rules of their religion, had become a weapon, by which they destroyed the very purpose and function of religion in their own lives and for the people. They had taken the place of God and so they and the people whom they despised had become much "lower than God"—for God had been ruled out.

Wherever man is used for himself, what he can give, or by himself, for what he may be, in power and privilege, God is ruled out, and man is degraded. And that is true, no matter how high his standing may be at the given time. Human fortune and human happiness, says an old proverb, break like glass. Human power vanishes and its glory fades.

In China, today—in the so-called "Progressive Republic," the ideal of the treasonous leftists, who would build the world of "peace and plenty" without God, two millions of wretched Chinese are slaving to build one great dam. That dam is supposed to make "the good life" for future numbers of people. But it is planned and completed in slavery, and this slavery must grow from more to more, for without God and man as his child, freedom can never be given or permitted.

Wherever the enemy forces are at work, opposing God and man, the thought of God is first being taken from the minds of man. A certain type of progressive education has been guilty at this point. The customs of man, it says, and his own expression in society, are the significant norms that make personality and form character. God is a myth, morals are that which people practice; there is no immorality, no sin: these are anachronisms!—so speak these "liberators of the mind of men." And they are traitors against the dignity and glory of man in God. For God is a jealous God; he won't permit other gods beside him. Only in him is man's freedom, man's dignity. And these he achieves by obedience to the spirit of the Christ who revealed God in himself.

"It does not yet appear what we shall be." The glory of man, the child of God, is in Christ, whom those who love him shall see, as he is.

Jesus used the Sabbath for men. He did not permit the rules concerning the Sabbath to destroy the spirit of the Holy Day given to man by God. All that the world is and offers, life itself is God's gift, to be used, for the glory of man as God's child. And the believer will become like the Christ. Here is the oldest confession of faith of the Christian Church: "I believe in the Lord Jesus Christ." Of which Saint Paul says, "Whosoever believes in the name of the Lord, shall be saved." Amen.

OUR MISSION ON MINDANAO.

(Continued from page 5.)

people have learned to read and write. The remaining 1,200,000,000 illiterate throughout the world today can become the friends of Christianity and freedom if we will only go out to them with our knowledge and "know how."

In Dansalan, the birthplace of modern literacy, the American Board operates a high school, a junior college and a Christian church. Thus, a new generation of Moros are finding the meaning of the Christian spirit of love and truth.

III.—Evangelism.

But central in all our work in the Philippines has been the church. Today, because of our concern for every segment of life, because of our interest in economics and education, and because of the Christ-like spirit characterizing the missionaries who carry on this service, the Philippines has one of the most vigorous, growing Protestant fellowships in the world. The next ten years may determine whether these islands will move in the direction of Protestant Christianity which is essential to the freedom of mind, body, and soul; or whether the islands will swing into an orbit of totalitarianism. A great deal depends upon American Christians as to the ultimate outcome of that struggle now going on, not only in the Philippines but in most of Asia. The "Thank Offering" from our women's societies this year has been designated for our work on Mindanao in the Philippine Islands. It will be of the utmost help in strengthening and supporting a work that is ushering in a new day for the aspiring people of the Philippines.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Peter Has an Adventure

By MRS. W. W. SLOAN

It was time for the noon meal in the house of Simon of Joppa. Peter, the busy teacher of the Christian Jews, had just accepted his host's invitation to come down and share with him the food that was being prepared. From his little room on the roof they could see the people going by in the street below.

"There will be many people here tonight to hear the stories you tell of Jesus," said Simon. "God is using you to do wonderful things for us, his chosen people."

"Here come three men now. Do you know them?" asked Peter.

"Certainly not! They are Gentiles. I wonder what brings them here to the house of a good Jew," said Simon, as he went down to find out their errand.

Peter could not hear what was being said, except that his name was mentioned. He wondered what these Gentiles could want with him, but he decided to go down and find out. Simon met him and explained that the strangers had come a day's journey from Caesarea to see him. So Peter asked them what they had come for?

"We are servants of Cornelius, a captain in the Roman army, who loves God and always tries to do the things that are pleasing to him. Yesterday, as our master was praying, he was told to send and ask you to come to his house. So now he and his friends are awaiting to hear whatever message you have for us."

Peter was very much surprised to think that God wanted him to share the good news about Jesus with these Gentiles. But he thought the men must be telling the truth, so he invited them in and asked his host to give them food and a place to rest from their journey. Simon wondered greatly that he should be asked to do anything for Gentiles, but he did as Peter wished.

As for Peter, all afternoon he sat in the little room on the house-top and wondered what he ought to do. Did God really want him to go to these people and tell them about Jesus? Perhaps Cornelius was mistaken. Supposing he went, he must take others with him. But who of them would be willing to go?

When at last it was evening, and the neighbors and friends began to assemble at Simon's house, Peter's mind was made up. He told the people everything that had happened.

"I have decided to go to Caesarea. Who will go with me?" he asked.

The people gathered at Simon's house were shocked at Peter's announcement. "How can you do this thing?" they cried. "It is some kind of trick to get you into their hands. What will the leaders at Jerusalem say when they hear if it?"

Then Peter told them of a vision he had had; that as he had been thinking and praying alone, he seemed to see all the wild birds and unclean beasts of the earth, which only the Gentiles eat.

"As I thought about the beasts," said Peter, it seemed to me that a voice said, 'Get up Peter! Kill something and eat it!' for I was hungry. But I said to myself, 'I can't do that. It is unlawful for a Jew to eat such things.' And again the voice spoke in my heart, saying, 'You must not call unclean anything that God has made clean.'

"I was wondering what God wanted me to learn from this vision. Then came these three men. They are Gentiles, and you know we have always called the Gentiles unclean, because we thought they were different from us. But if, as these men say, God has spoken to Cornelius, who is a Gentile, perhaps they are not so different after all. So, brothers, how can we hesitate to go with them, even as God has directed us, seeing that he has prepared their hearts for our message?"

Some of the Jews were still unconvinced, but of those who were favorable to the idea Peter chose six to go with him.

On the second day of their journey, as they drew near the place where Cornelius lived, Peter's friends began to be afraid. "What will happen to us at this man's house?" they said. "Perhaps they will not accept our message after all."

"Only this I know," said Peter, "God has sent us here to tell the good news to these Gentiles. What may come of it I do not know.

When at last they reached the home of Cornelius, he met them with great joy, bowing down before Peter, as if to worship him. He also called his servants to wash the feet of the guests after their long journey. Then Peter was ashamed of having been afraid. He thought to himself, "I am a man, and only human; and Cornelius is a man just as I am."

As soon as they were ready, Cornelius brought them in to where his family and many of his friends were gathered and waiting. Then Peter began to speak:

"You know that it is against the Jewish law for us to associate with foreigners, or to visit with them. But now God has showed me that I have no right to call any man unclean. Still, I should like to know how you had the courage to send for me."

As he listened to Cornelius' story of how God spoke to him when he was praying, Peter saw that he was really hungry to know more about God. So he told them all that Jesus had taught them about their Heavenly Father. He was so eager to tell them everything that he soon forgot they were Gentiles and remembered only the wonderful things Jesus had said, and how he had always tried to help people.

When at last the story was finished, the whole room seemed to be filled with God's presence, for everyone's heart was filled with love for God and for each other. Seeing this, Peter said to his companions:

"Surely the Spirit of God is in this place which an hour ago we entered with fear and trembling, for we knew it not. Let us have water brought that we may baptize these men immediately. Why, even the apostles at Jerusalem could not refuse baptism to them, for they have God's love in their hearts even as we have."

* * * * *

"Johnny Thinks Both are Wonderful"

By JANICE A. McDONALD.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Teacher says—" Johnny Thompson began, just as he so frequently did when speaking to his mother.

The adults stopped to listen, wondering what this paragon of wisdom had said now. Johnny is their pride (Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Relax With Max

Rhetorical questions can be a very dangerous thing for a preacher to use, especially when he gets an answer. I heard recently of a minister who was completing an especially powerful sermon, full of vigor and vim, with the question, "Need I say more?"

Just at that moment ten-year-old Johnny woke from his sleep, stood bolt upright in his seat, and said, "No."

* * *

Some of you who think this column is pretty corny should see what it would look like if our very efficient managing editor didn't cut out part of what I send in.

* * *

If I had a spot on the radio, I would have a commercial that went something like this:

This is a faith page. We would like to hear from you. Your suggestions and criticisms will be appreciated. Your material contributions will be gratefully received. Just write: Max Vestal, Asheboro, N. C.

* * *

Read this aloud and get the full benefit—if there is any:

"How are opium and Abraham alike?"

"Opium is the juice of the poppy; Abraham is the poppy of the Jews."

* * *

Let Us Pray

For the Wisdom to pray
Not for the things we would like,
But for the things God would like for us.

CHRISTIANS and INTOXICANTS.

(Continued from page 2.)

which he could buy his alcoholic liquors!

A young churchwoman remarked that the Bible does not state that drinking is a sin. What greater condemnation against drinking could be given than that which Paul gave when he said, "It is right not to eat meat or drink wine or do anything that makes your brother stumble" (Romans 14: 21, RSV)? Drinking intoxicants is a thing that is sure to trip someone. Were it known, many of today's drunkards who stumble so mightily could say, pointing a finger at someone, "I drink now because I saw him drink," or "He urged me to drink." Hence, according to Paul and life's facts, drinking is clearly seen to be a wrong.

Jesus gave a strong warning against drinking in these words, "... take heed to your selves lest your hearts be weighted down with dissipation and drunkenness..." (Luke 21: 24a, RSV). Can even a strong man be sure when his temperate drink may become a drink of intemperance or drunkenness?

No Christian can feel perfectly conscientious in handling or drinking anything causing unclean or unchristian living, for he will have his conscience and his God to reckon with when all evidence is in! There can be no temperance in the matter of intoxicants. By observing total abstinence the Christian can put on the whole armor of God and thereby gain the strength needed to grapple with all forces of evil. —The Voice.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

and joy, but sometimes his almost worshipful confidence in his teacher is irritating, for often her remark or act, as told by him, is commonplace and quite lacking in originality.

Occasionally, when Mrs. Thompson has said something contrary to what Johnny thinks is right he will declare, "But Teacher says—!"

"Johnny's wonderful teacher!" Mrs. Thompson retorts. "Teacher is, of course, always right! Why doesn't he tell this wonderful teacher, 'Mother says—'? I taught him to walk, to talk, to feed and to dress himself. I taught him to recognize his family and his relatives, to share his toys. I am the one who reads to him, sings to him, soothes him when he is upset, dries his tears, and ties up his cut fingers."

Mrs. Thompson had never before realized that she wanted any credit for bringing up a nice child. Now, however, not only every day but often several times a day, when another woman was being given the praise and admiration that the mother felt belonged to her, the "green-eyed monster" would nod and whisper to her. Yet, as is so often the case, there was no foundation for anything he told her. Johnny, like many another child when away from home, often spoke of "My mother" with pride and admiration. Teacher is told too, "My mother took me to the zoo!" or, "My mommie reads to me at night!"

Johnny knows his mother is good to him. He loves her very much. If the teacher's suggestions and advice receive more attention than hers do, could it be because there is less criticism and more praise attached to what the teacher says to her pupils? If so, it is a challenge to the mother.

Among themselves boys and girls will often repeat their mothers' injunctions, with fierce loyalty and pride for what "My mother says." The teacher also hears this and admires the valiant stand they take.

Sometimes, because she disagrees with what his mother has decreed, Johnny's "dear teacher" drops down in his estimation for the time being. Perhaps his mother has said, "I want you to keep that sweater on!" However, the room that Johnny is in may be very much overheated. His mother, not being there, does not know this. The teacher should then explain the situation to her, and if the mother is wise, she will tell Johnny always to do whatever his teacher thinks best regarding his sweater.

Teacher does receive a lot of admiration, affection and respect from young children. For the sake of her relationship with the children and the parents, she should show herself to be human. While she must say always what she thinks is true, if she uses her sense of humor, letting the children know that this time it is a joke, she will avert any possibly tense situation. What Teacher does, of course, must agree with what she says.

Johnny's faith in his idol can be kept and still peace in the family can be maintained, if home differences regarding small matters are explained and are ended with: "I know Teacher is your friend, and she is good. This time Daddy and I want you to do as I have said."

But one should be sure to have any disagreement on the part of the teacher and the parent straightened out by a frank talk between the two.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

The War Against Beverage Alcohol (TEMPERANCE)

LESSON IV—OCTOBER 25, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Do not be conformed to this world, but be transformed by the renewal of your mind, that you may prove what is the will of God, what is good and perfect and acceptable."—Romans 12: 2. (R.S.V.)

LESSON: Isaiah 5: 11-14; Matthew 18: 6; Romans 13: 11-14; James 4: 17.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Isaiah 26: 1-6.

The Sin of Shilly-Shally and Silence.

The wife of Wendell Phillips, the courageous and crusading anti-slavery leader, was an invalid. She was a great inspiration to him in his fight against the iniquitous slave system. Again and again, as he left her to go out into the rough and tumble of an abolition meeting, or as he faced the hostility and threats of his enemies, she would say, "Don't shilly-shally, Wendell. Speak out boldly."

The fact, and the disturbing and discouraging fact is, that there are all too many ministers and Sunday school teachers today who are shilly-shallying, and keeping silent about the liquor traffic. There are countless teachers who will either keep silent about the salient points of today's lesson, or who will shilly-shally about it, especially if they are teaching a group of adults. I have known teachers of adult classes who would never teach a Temperance Lesson, believe it or not! And I have heard others who would pussy-foot or shilly-shally if they did teach the lesson. These things ought not to be. Beverage alcohol and the liquor traffic constitute major problems in our American life. In fact, they rate high, if not at the top, as Public Enemies in our nation. There is not as much danger from Communism in America as there is in alcoholism.

We have been considering during the past few weeks "God's Design for a New World." How can we ever have a New World when we have the organized liquor traffic, highly organized, highly financed, highly aggressive, strongly entrenched, and cleverly camouflaged devoted wholeheartedly toward increasing, ever increasing, drinking with all its evil consequences, in our nation! ! ! And if Christian leaders are not going to speak out against this giant evil, who in the world will speak against it? It is a sin to shilly-shally and to keep silent.

This does not mean that one must be a fanatic. One can be fair and intelligent about it. There is enough truth on the side of abstinence, and even temperance, without employing the doubtful or the untruthful. If one knows anything at all about the nature, and evil effects of alcohol on the personal, social, economic, and moral and spiritual life of the nation, he can make a strong case against it. The Christian ought not to have any difficulty in presenting his case against liquor and the liquor traffic. There is nothing in common between the liquor traffic and the Kingdom of God. They are diametrically opposed in motive, methods and spirit. Let us have done with this shilly-shallying and silence. The people of America, including our young people and our boys and girls have been hearing only one side of this matter. Magazines, radio, television, billboards have been glamorizing the use of alcoholic beverages. It is time that our people should hear the other side of the matter. And who can better do this than ministers and Sunday school teachers?

To be sure this must be done in the right spirit. We must speak the truth in love. We can condemn the evils of drink, and yet have sympathy and concern for the drinker. We can hate the sin, but love the sinner. And we can offer Jesus Christ as the only help and hope for those who are slaves to the drinking habit. We can denounce the system, but seek to redeem the slave of the system.

No Shilly-Shallying Here.

Read carefully today's lesson, and you will find that Jesus, the prophets, and the apostles did not shilly-shally or keep silent about the evils of strong drink. Isaiah saw the evils of drink, both from the standpoint of its personal, social, and even its political effect. He predicted the doom that awaited the nation because the people were becoming a drinking nation, and because they "regarded not the word of Jehova, neither did they consider the operations of his hands." And strangely enough, the drinking in his day was more of wine than of hard liquors.

When we read the words of Jesus in today's lesson, we look at the matter from another angle. As usual Jesus dealt with broad principles. And he utters words that emphasize the sin of causing others to sin. He says that it is better for a man to hang a millstone around his neck and jump off into the sea than to cause others to stumble. That is a hard saying. But his regard for personality and its sacredness was so high that he was horrified at the thought that any man would put a stumbling block in the way of another, or tempt him to degrade his personality. This would apply to the man who offered another man a drink, and especially to the person who offered another person the first drink. But it applies also to the makers and distillers of alcoholic beverages. One wonders how a man in Christian conscience can have part in the production and distribution of liquor. There may be other ideas among perfectly respectable people, but this was the idea of Jesus Christ.

Then there are the words of Paul as recorded in Romans. He urges his Christian friends to walk becomingly as in the day; "not in revelling and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and jealousy." Alcoholics are not anonymous. They make themselves known on almost any and all occasions. Drinking, even apparently harmless social drinking often leads to results that are disgusting to others, and embarrassing to the drinker himself when he comes to his senses. Or when she comes to her senses. For of all things, deliver us from a drunken woman!

And finally, James the brother of our Lord has a word to say. And like his brother, he states it in general principles. "To him that knoweth to do good, and doeth it not, to him it is sin." That ought to stab us awake by its direct thrust to our Christian consciences. We folks who stand or sit idly by and do nothing about the liquor traffic are just as bad as the folks who are running it. A group of ministers had been discussing liturgy in the church for a long time. At long last the guest speaker was given an opportunity to speak. His first sentence woke up the whole crowd. He simply said "To me, brethren, the matter with you is not liturgy, but lethargy!" Christians in America are too lethargic in regard to the present day liquor traffic and the menace it presents to the moral, social, economic, personal welfare of our nation. Here is one field in which we can do battle in behalf of God's New World.

The Autobiography of Any Alcoholic.

Chapter I—"I could Stop If I Would."

Chapter II—"I Would Stop If I Could." —Jane Addams.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 9.)

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. L. W.

Stagg, 400 W. 34th St., Norfolk.

Treasurer—Mrs. G. M. Cornell Rt. 2, Suffolk.

Superintendents:

Young People—Mrs. Clyde Fields, Rt. 2, Franklin.

Children—Mrs. Shirley T. Holland, Windsor.

Cradle Roll—Mrs. W. R. Skelly, 1210 Earle Ave., South Norfolk.

Chairmen of Standing Committees:

Spiritual Life—Mrs. R. V. Knight, Chuckatuck.

Christian Family Life—Mrs. W. M. Stevens, 6049 Newport Avenue, Norfolk.

Interdenominational Cooperation—Mrs. W. H. Johnson, Waverly.

Life Memberships and Memorials—Mrs. E. G. Middleton, 2942 Amherst Street, Norfolk.

Visual Aids—Mrs. A. C. Moore, 301 Western Avenue, Suffolk.

Literature—

District Superintendents:

Norfolk—Mrs. C. V. Hargrove, So. Norfolk.

Suffolk—Mrs. L. H. Wilroy, Driver.

Waverly—Mrs. Frank Sodomka, Hopewell.

* * * * *

Annual Report of Treasurer of N. C. Woman's Conference

September 15, 1952-September 15, 1953.

RECEIPTS.

Women's Societies.

Albemarle	$117.00
Amelia	31.00
Apple's Chapel	143.75
Asheboro	226.65
Asheville	80.00
Auburn	19.80
Belews Creek	51.08
Berea	65.00
Bethel	49.00
Beulah	23.63

Beverly Hills	45.23
Burlington	1388.47
Calvary	38.00
Carolina	32.47
Chapel Hill	119.85
Church of Wide Fellowship	105.00
Concord	42.00
Damascus	35.00
Durham	339.30
Elon College	603.12
Erskine Memorial, Tryon	150.00
Eutaw Community	26.50
Flint Hill (R)	24.00
Fuller's Chapel	65.00
Gibsonville	80.70
Greensboro, First Church	667.50
Greensboro, Palm Street	159.65
Hank's Chapel	191.16
Happy Home	115.00
Haw River	65.00
Hebron, Virginia	30.00
Henderson	186.00
High Point	60.25
Hines' Chapel	200.00
Hopedale	108.77
Ingram, Virginia	148.61
Kallam's Grove	5.00
Lakeview Community	37.05
Liberty, N. C.	40.00
Liberty, Vance	252.00
Liberty, Virginia	22.00
Long's Chapel	56.30
Monticello	112.00
Moore's Union	10.00
Morrisville	5.00
Mount Auburn	124.40
Mount Bethel	45.00
Mount Pleasant	10.00
Mount Zion	43.00
New Hope	75.47
New Lebanon	86.00
Oak Level	40.00
Pfafftown	45.00
Pleasant Grove, N. C.	27.67
Pleasant Grove, Virginia	81.42
Pleasant Hill	76.55
Pleasant Ridge (G)	113.00
Pleasant Ridge (R)	102.34
Plymouth	28.50
Providence Memorial	28.00
Raleigh	238.00
Ramseur	61.60
Reidsville	550.13
Salem Chapel	67.00
Sanford	209.00
Shallow Ford	58.75
Shallow Well	172.16
Smithwood	10.00
Spoon's Chapel	40.00
Turner's Chapel	80.00
Union Grove	30.00
Union, N. C.	174.00
Union, Virginia	115.00
Wake Chapel	239.85
Winston-Salem	97.50
Youngsville	50.00

9,492.20

Young People.

Greensboro, Palm Street	$ 7.50
Mount Zion	25.00
Reidsville	30.00
Turner's Chapel	9.00

71.50

Junior Societies.

Apple's Chapel	$14.77
Burlington	15.00
Durham	51.69
Elon College	21.07
Greensboro, First	48.20
Greensboro, Palm Street	10.00
Henderson	37.90
Lakeview Community	2.00

Reidsville	10.00
Union, N. C.	13.10

223.73

Cradle Rolls.

Apple's Chapel	$ 38.06
Asheboro	19.03
Burlington	32.33
Durham	32.39
Elon College	140.00
Greensboro, First	61.96
Greensboro, Palm Street	13.00
Henderson	5.00
Hines' Chapel	32.00
Ingram, Virginia	5.00
Lakeview Community	1.00
Monticello	4.50
Pleasant Ridge (R)	5.00
Raleigh	10.00
Ramseur	5.00
Reidsville	40.00
Sanford	5.00
Turner's Chapel	5.00
Union, N. C.	7.69
Wake Chapel	2.00

463.96

Miscellaneous.

Conference Offering (at Apple's Chapel)	$ 86.10
Rally Offerings	160.76
Puerto Rican Goat Fund	30.00

276.86

Total Receipts $10,528.25

DISBURSEMENTS.

Expense of Rallies	$ 83.74
Rally Speaker	25.00
Florist	5.78
Literature Packets for new Societies	20.46
Literature, Supplies, Mimeographing	34.98
Expense of Board Meeting	17.10
Expense of the president	25.02
Expense of the treasurer	23.17
Transportation to meetings	11.10
On expense of the president to Cleveland Mid-Winter Meeting	125.00
On Sound Scriber	100.00
Youth Fellowship	71.50
N. C. Council of Church Women	35.00
General Department of United Church Women	80.21

$ 658.06

Mrs. W. V. Leathers, treasurer, Woman's Mission Board, for: Missions—

General Fund	6,251.39
Foreign—Special Fund	165.00
Home—Special Fund	39.86
Thank Offering	2,279.24
Life Memberships	510.00
Memorials	260.00
Missions in Africa	32.00
Rachanyapuram School	37.90
Miss Corrine Nordquest's work	64.20
Miss Margaret Hammaker for dried milk	25.00
Mrs. Victor Masters	8.60
Korean Orphan	100.00
Relief and Reconstruction—Children's Fund	40.00
Puerto Rican Goat Fund	30.00
Ellis Island	15.00
Christian Orphanage	12.00

Total Disbursements $10,528.25

Respectfully submitted,

SUSIE D. ALLEN,

Treasurer

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Our goal for 1953 is $65,000.00. This amount will be needed to meet all present obligations, to offset the loss suffered by the drought and to finish out the year. It will require a little more than one dollar per member from our people between now and December 31. If we could present our appeal to every member of our churches we would easily, and even quickly, reach our goal.

Often visitors will ask us why we do not make this or that obviously needed improvement. The answer is the lack of funds. There are so many people who know of our work here and do so well by us it proves to us that if we could make our appeal to all our constituency we would receive the funds. I covet the privilege of telling the people about the work they are doing and asking them to help us rally to the required needs at this time.

I wish you could see our children as they gather in the Johnston Hall for a special service. I have had the joy of talking to many groups of young people and I can safely say one of the most attentive and appreciative groups I have ever spoken to is the group which assembles occasionally in the large reception room of Johnson Hall. Tuesday night of this week at 7:30 they were there. I wish you could have heard them singing, "Saviour, like a Shepherd lead us, much we need thy tender care." It seemed to me that as Miss Foster accompanied at the piano, every child and worker present meant it when they sang, "Blessed Jesus, blessed Jesus, hear thy children when we pray." Then I talked to them of the big truths to be learned from the life of the boy, David. I shall talk to them in coming services about other children of the Bible and in each message they will hear about that one who took a little child and placed him in the midst of the people and challenged their unselfish service.

They were quiet, sweet, reverent and when the final benediction was said they expressed their appreciation. The needs of this home are many and I have faith to believe God will help us all working together to meet them everyone.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR OCTOBER 8, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

Mrs. Rex G. Powell, Fuquay Springs, N. C., Clothing.
Mrs. W. M. Chance, Hillsboro, N. C., Clothing.
Mrs. E. B. Bailey, Wakefield, Va., Material.
Mr. and Mrs. Dowd Johnson, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Roney, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Mr. and Mrs. James Small, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Mrs. C. R. Stanfield, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Miss Joy Bell Dickerson, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
E. R. Small, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
Barbara Ann Bryant, Ivor, Va., Jig saw Puzzles.
Vick Chemical Co., Greensboro, N. C., VapoRub and Cough Drops.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Eastern N. C. Conference:
Hayes Chapel$ 10.00
Mt. Auburn S. S. 7.00
New Elam 29.81
Wake Chapel 59.20
106.01
Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Nans) S. S. . $ 31.83
Dendron S. S. 26.00
57.83
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Mt. Zion S. S.$ 7.14
Reidsville S. S. 61.00
68.14
Western N. C. Conference:
Brown's Chapel S. S. ...$ 15.00
Smithwood72
15.72
Virginia Valley Conference:
Dry Run S. S.$ 2.00
Newport S. S. 36.54
Winchester S. S. 8.34
46.88
Total $ 294.58
Grand total $11,124.44

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $15,238.93
Mrs. Esther E. Jinkens,
St. Paris, Ohio 10.00
H. I. Jaffe, Suffolk, Va. . . 10.00

Mr. & Mrs. M. W. McPherson, Burlington, N. C., in memory of Dr. S. Dace McPherson$ 20.00
Mr. & Mrs. M. W. McPherson, Burlington, N. C., in memory of C. R. Faucette 5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Allen E. Gant, Burlington, N. C., in memory of Britt Armfield 5.00
Memorials for H. G. McBane:
Mr. & Mrs. Allen E. Gant, Burlington, N. C. 5.00
Elizabeth P. Robinson, Burlington, N. C. . . 10.00
R. M. Earl, Burlington, N. C. 5.00
D. E. McIntyre, Burlington, N. C. 5.00
New Hope Christian S. S., Roanoke, Alabama ... 3.65
Mr. & Mrs. J. H. Barnwell, Burlington, N. C., in memory of Dr. S. Dace McPherson 5.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. H. Barnwell, Burlington, N. C., in memory of Rev. Roy Phillips 5.00
The Ben Joe Earp S. S. Class, High Point Ch. . 26.00
Woman's Guild, Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial 10.00
R. E. Prince, Fuquay Springs, N. C. 10.00
Vasteen Wagoner 20.00
Mary and Eleanor Fix, Burlington, N. C., in memory of C. R. Faucette 5.00
Circle 11, Woman's Fellowship, Suffolk Christian Church 10.00
Mt. Zion Christian S. S., Eclipse, Va., Special . 25.00
Special Gifts 272.30
466.95
Grand total $15,705.88
Total for the week $ 761.53
Total for the year $26,830.32

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

.....
(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)
.....
(Survivor to be Written) (Address)
Name.....
Address.....

Pledges to Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	$ 106.00
Bethel—H. V. Harman	377.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton ..	211.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Harcastle ..	$ 372.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo ..	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell ..	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr. .	1,913.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark ..	200.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar ..	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk: Christian Temple—W. Millard Stevens	5,330.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dollar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Harcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith ..	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein ..	1,459.00
South Norfolk—O. D. Poythress ..	500.00
Suffolk—.....	6,290.00
Union, Southampton—Clyde Fields	928.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—.....	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—Carl Wallace	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register ..	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ...	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder ..	$ 400.00
Lakeview—Curtis Young	82.50
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00

In Memoriam

THOMPSON.

On August 3, 1953, another faithful member of our missionary society at Pleasant Hill, Mrs. Rodema Hinshaw Thompson, answered the summons to come home.

Greensboro, First—W. E. Wiseman	3,292.00
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wiseman ..	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student) ..	75.00

Therefore we, the members of the Pleasant Hill Missionary Society wish to express our great appreciation for the noble Christian life she lived while on her journey here.

She was a quiet friendly Christian woman. A good neighbor, a faithful member of Pleasant Hill Church and Missionary Society.

Living as the apostle Paul wrote, a quiet peaceful life in all Godliness and honesty.

So we humbly submit ourselves to the Master's will in her going, and strive to live stronger Christian lives because of the radiant life she lived while in our midst, and may her memory linger with us even to the end. And may we strive to attain that quiet beauty of Christ which her life so nobly exemplified.

Whereas, we wish to express our deepest sympathy to her bereaved family in her going. And may a copy of these resolutions be sent them, one kept on the records of the society, and one sent to the papers for publication.

Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord and henceforth their labors do follow them.

Mrs. B. D. HARGIS.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195.., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:

(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195.., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church

By Secretary or Clerk

Address

..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

How Can I . . .

Serve as I Ought To Serve?

By REV. HENRY E. ROBINSON

One of the great discoveries of life is the discovery of the joy and satisfaction which come from serving others. It is almost impossible to convince people of this joy until they experience it first-hand. One of the strange sayings of Jesus is that it is more blessed to give than to receive. To appreciate its truth we have to share at a sacrifice. Then we come into the realm of one of the great eternal verities which underlie the moral law of the universe: That to serve is better than to be served, to give is better than to receive.

Not long ago I was talking to a man about the church and his relationship to God. He had no arguments against religion nor any particular opposition to its institutions. He frankly stated in a very courteous manner that he just wasn't interested and that I was wasting his time and mine. He was a person of good education, and lived in a pleasant neighborhood. He told me that life had been good to him, that he had what he wanted and wasn't interested in the church. This type of individual is the most difficult person in the world to attract to the way of Jesus. It is easier to convert an opponent to Christ and the church than it is a person utterly indifferent to the issues of life which center in religious principles. To serve as we ought to serve, there must first be a willingness and a desire to try the way of selfless service exemplified by Jesus.

Desire alone is not enough. Accompanying our willingness there must be ability. There must be preparation and training. The question is not are you good, but are you good for something? You would not submit to a man who had a burning desire to perform operations, but who had never taken the necessary years of training and study to be accredited. If you would serve with effectiveness—then prepare yourself in your chosen field. God wants your hands and your heart, but he wants hearts that are disciplined and hands that are trained. Jesus called men to follow him, but he did not send them forth as apostles until they had first been disciples.

There is nothing in this life worthwhile that doesn't have some disappointment and heartache mixed with it. You rear a child. It is your greatest and proudest accomplishment. Were there not times that you were disappointed? Sometimes did you not think your heart would break? The same is true of positions of service. We must often perform the thankless task. Sometimes our hopes are dashed and our labors seemingly come to naught. I suppose Jesus on his cross must have had an overpowering emotion of futility that his efforts should end in a shameful death and that his followers should be hunted and scattered. But his suffering was a part of a greater plan by which God was achieving the greater end that not one or a few might be saved, but that a means of salvation for all men was being accomplished.

We must serve in the faith that God will account our efforts for righteousness, regardless of the score given us by our fellowmen.

To serve as we ought to serve means that we must be committed to the way of service, that we must be trained to do something uplifting in the world, that we must have faith that in the long view of affairs God will count our efforts for righteousness.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY, 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, OCTOBER 22, 1953

NUMBER 42

Hunterdale Church to Dedicate Scott Memorial

Pictured above is the Union Congregational Christian Church of Hunterdale, near Franklin, Virginia, showing the recently completed Scott Memorial Wing, which is to be dedicated Sunday afternoon, October 25, at 2:30 o'clock.

News Flashes

Please note that the date of the meeting of the Western North Carolina Conference is Wednesday and Thursday, November 4-5, 1953.

We received a program of the Virginia Valley Central Conference, but too late to publish before the conference met. A short report of the conference by Rev. Mr. Galt will be found in this issue.

We regret to learn that Rev. G. H. Veazey of High Point, N. C., is a patient in the Memorial Hospital of that city. Mr. Veazey has recently undergone an operation, but is reported doing nicely. We wish him a speedy recovery.

Temple Tidings for October 18, carries the roster of the newly elected officers of the Congregational Christian Temple of Norfolk. We do not know all of them, but if those we do know are a true sample, Dr. Stevens should have no worries about adequate lay support during the coming church year.

Approximately 2,000 delegates are expected to attend the third annual convention of the Adult Education Association at the Hotel New Yorker in New York City, October 26-29. More than 30,000,000 adults are reported as currently engaged as teachers, group leaders and students in the adult education movement.

Dr. Douglas Horton, speaking of the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign, says: "The difference between reaching a high shoulder of the Everest we are scaling and ascending to the very top, seems to lie in getting in Declarations of Purpose from all our churches, without exception, now. Success will make us more useful servants of Christ. It can be done."

Protestants of Richmond will observe Reformation Day, Sunday, October 25, with a special service at the Mosque at 4 p. m. Dr. Edward H. Pruden, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Washington, D. C., will be the speaker. A 125-voice chorus will present portions of Mendelssohn's Elijah. The program is sponsored by the Richmond Ministerial Association.

The Virginia Valley Conference Meets

The Virginia Valley Central Conference of Congregational Christian Churches had about two hundred delegates and visitors attending the two-day annual meeting at the new Bethlehem Church, Tenth Legion, Va., October 14 and 15.

New officers of the conference elected Thursday afternoon are Rev. Robert A. Whitten of Winchester as president, Mr. K. B. Dofflemyer of Elkton as vice-president, Mr. Clarence A. Phillips of Broadway as secretary, Rev. Henry V. Harman of Elkton as assistant secretary, and Mr. O. W. Andes of Harrisonburg as treasurer. Rev. R. E. Newton of Luray and Rev. Ralph M. Galt of New Market were elected delegates to the Virginia Council of Churches.

The two main addresses at the conference were given by two guest speakers from Washington, D. C. The Rev. Alfred W. Hurst, pastor of the Cleveland Park Congregational Church, spoke on "A Changeless Christ for a Changing Society," describing very vividly the need for Christ in the world today. Dr. Carl H. Kopf, using the title "The World Mission of the Church," gave an enthusiastic report of the spread and influence of Christianity throughout the world through missions.

Mr. K. B. Dofflemyer, president of the conference during the past two years, presided at all plenary sessions. Conference was divided into about fourteen committees, all of which reported back to the plenary sessions. It was decided to try to make as fast progress as possible towards establishing a church in Harrisonburg. It was voted to emphasize evangelism, tithing, and national Church Building and Loan Fund in each church during this conference year.

Three officers of the Southern Convention came from North Carolina and addressed the conference. Dr.

William T. Scott, Superintendent of the convention spoke about four needs: to recruit new ministers; to establish new churches; to raise the Church Building Loan Fund; to practice stewardship. Dr. L. E. Smith reported on Elon College which is owned by the churches and its needs. Dr. John G. Truitt gave a very touching report on the Christian Orphanage at Elon College.

RALPH M. GALT.

President Eisenhower Donates Etching

A recent issue of the New York Times carried this significant news item:

"Van Nuys, Calif.,
September 21, 1953.

"The building fund of the Congregational Church of the Chimes here is richer by $140, thanks to the help of President Eisenhower, Vice-President Richard M. Nixon and Governor Earl Warren of California. At the request of church members, the President and Vice-President both sent an item that was auctioned, sight unseen, on Saturday night at the Church's Golden West Fair.

"An etching of the White House, donated by the President, sold for $100. An etching of the Capitol from Mr. Nixon, brought $20, as did a box of stationery sent by the Governor."

Revival Services at Tenth Legion

Bethlehem Congregational Christian Church, Tenth Legion, Va., held a successful week of revival services the week of Monday, October 19, through Friday, October 23, the meetings starting at 7:30 each evening. The Rev. W. J. Andes, pastor of the Winston-Salem and Pfafftown, North Carolina, churches was the invited speaker for these services. It was really a home-coming for Mr. Andes, who is a native son of the Virginia Valley.

Southern Convention Dates to Remember

- | | |
|----------|--|
| October | 28-29—Eastern Virginia Annual Conference Session
Congregational Christian Church, Newport News, Va. |
| November | 4-5—Western North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Pleasant Hill Church |
| | 10-11—North Carolina & Virginia Annual Conference Session
Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, N. C. |
| December | 8—Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association
Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va. |

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieleley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Layman's Day at Albemarle

The Albemarle Church observed Layman's Week with services beginning Sunday morning with the consecration of children. There were two children christened at this service, Lowell Wayne Lefler and Roy Kenneth Talbert, Jr., followed by a sermon by our pastor, S. E. Madren on "What Kind of Man Will the Child Become."

The laymen took charge of the services for the rest of the week, beginning on Sunday evening, October 11, with the theme "The Witness of Christian Layman." J. A. Whitley, Chase Crump and Jack McSwain were in charge of the worship program. Short talks were made by the following: "How to Become a Christian Layman" by G. A. Russell, "The Father as a Christian Layman" by H. A. Simmons, "The Christian Layman and Missions" by Dolan Talbert, "The Christian Layman and Politics" by Martin Deese, "The Christian Layman and the Bible" by Aubrey Chandler, and "The Christian Layman and Prayer" by Wade Talbert.

Benediction by Pastor Madren.

The mid-week prayer service was conducted by Dolan Talbert and H. A. Simmons. We met at the church Thursday evening for practice of an all-male choir.

Saturday evening, the laymen with their families gathered at the church for a social hour at which time a picnic supper was enjoyed by all in the social hall of the church. After the supper we gathered in the auditorium for a short devotion by M. H. Troutman and Chase Crump, followed by the installation of the new officers for the coming year. The new officers are as follows: M. H. Troutman, president; C. W. Phifer, vice-president; Doug Harper, secretary; C. C. Mauldin, treasurer; Aubrey Chandler, assistant secretary-treasurer.

Sunday morning, October 18, services were in charge of the laymen with an all-male choir and quartet rendering several special numbers. Martin Deese was in charge of the worship program and Thomas Madren speaking on the theme "Christ Calls Men."

At the Sunday evening service we again had specials by the choir and quartet. G. A. Russell was in charge of the worship with Doug Harper speaking on the theme used Sunday morning.

All the services were enjoyed by everyone. We are looking forward to Layman's Week next year.

* * * * *

For Your Assistance

1. 1953 Emphases.
2. 1953 Suggested Programs.
3. Companion Pocket Crosses.
4. Laymen's Fellowship Booklet.
5. The "Fellowship" monthly.
6. Songs Men Like to Sing.
7. Laymen's Fellowship Bells.
8. Joe Doakes slides.

For information on these aids or any phase of work with men in your church, write the office of the Nation-

To one who receives daily reports of the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign, there are many interesting sidelights. . . . The first two contributions came before the campaign was fully launched—one from a minister, which has since been doubled, and one from a United States Senator. Many staff members responded with gifts before they asked others to do so. A woman who could not wait for her church to take action sent her gift in advance because she realized so vividly the need for better church facilities.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195....

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Church Members--Assets or Liabilities?

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

Some church members are assets to their church, while some are definite liabilities. Every pastor is deeply grateful for the faithful, loyal, cooperative, always-to-be-depend-ed-upon men and women and boys and girls.

No doubt every church has certain members on its roll who are members in name only—that is, though their names are on the church roll, their hearts are not on the Altar of the church's life. They do not really love the church. Its life and well-being, its mission and strength, its growth and its future do not rest upon their hearts; its needs are not echoed in their prayers. With an indifference that wounds the heart of their Lord and which casts sad reflection upon their own lives and their personal worth to the church and to society, they indifferently and denitely "pass on the other side." They fail somehow to realize that in ignoring the church, they thereby are ignoring the very God who permits them to live. They are not disturbed by any thoughts as to how they will square their inconsistency and their indifference with their Heavenly Father when they come to the end of the way.

The life and perpetuity of any church rests upon its loyal, faithful, consecrated, God-loving and church-loving members—those who are really anxious to be present at the Sunday service of worship if not prevented by good and sufficient reasons, and who, if physically able and in their city, make it a point to attend their church at each worship service, that by their presence in God's House they may bear witness of their love for God and his Church. They are the members who would feel—and rightly feel—greatly insulted if asked by another pastor or other church members to join any other church, for their own church is their true love and their sincere joy. Their greatest desire and their highest ambition is, by the help of God, to do their full part in helping to promote the interests of their church.

Indifferent and undependable members of a church break a pastor's heart and should be an object of prayer for the faithful, loyal members, who by their devotion to their church delight their Lord and put iron in their pastor's blood and joy in his soul.

A sense of self-respect as well as a desire to honor God should cause every member of every church to want to do his or her full part in promoting the work of one's church so long as the church carries their name upon its roll. The fact is that people who do not have the interests and welfare of their church upon their hearts, and who are not sincerely concerned about the life and well-being of their church, should politely request that their names be removed from its roll, or else forthwith seek a change of heart and "get into line."

Every pastor sincerely thanks God for the faithful, loyal, devoted members of his church. It is upon them and upon God that his church must depend. It is the faithful, forward-looking, cooperative, dependable member on whom a pastor may always count, who makes our churches possible. And churches that are blessed with their full quota of such members, press forward under God, facing their problems and meeting their responsibilities as true servants of God, with optimism and hope.

God only knows the power any church might possess if it would sincerely and actually accept this Seven-Point Challenge:

1. That every member offer a sincere prayer each morning for God's blessings upon their church.
2. That every member resolve to attend the Sunday Worship Service on time each week, if in the city and physically able.
3. That every member, in recognition of some special blessing, make a special effort to have their pledge for Current Expenses and Benevolences paid in full before the end of the church year.
4. That every member heartily cooperate with the Finance Committee in securing the subscription in full of their budget for the coming church year.
5. That every family in the church have a worthy part in liquidating any indebtedness being carried by their church.
6. That every family in the church subscribe for their church paper—and read it.
7. That if there is not already a Young Adult organization, that steps be taken immediately to organize a "Three-M Club"—Mr., Mrs. and Miss—for social and service activities.

Every church member should be an asset to their church; and every church member who accepts this Seven Point Challenge will thereby be an asset to his or her church.

The Sinful Slaughter by Motor Vehicles

A Story for Temperance Sunday

By REV. H. H. SMITH, Ashland, Virginia

During 1952, throughout the country, 38,000 people were killed in motor vehicle accidents. Think of it! Enough people killed by motor vehicle accidents in one year to populate a good-sized city! Should earthquakes take the lives of nearly 40,000 people annually, it would be looked upon as such a terrible catastrophe that many would want to leave the country. But earthquakes differ from motor vehicle accidents in this: earthquakes are unavoidable, but very nearly all motor vehicle accidents are avoidable, because they are the result of carelessness, recklessness, drunkenness, indifference, lack of skill or adverse physical condition on the part of drivers and pedestrians. Highway Safety Officials say: "There is human fault somewhere in 999 out of 1,000 so-called 'accidents.'"

To realize how careless and reckless are some drivers, note the large number of accidents at railroad crossings—the most inexcusable of all motor vehicle accidents. The following figures are furnished by Highway Safety Officials: "During 1952, there were 1,350 people killed in collisions between train and motor vehicles; there were 3,700 people who suffered non-fatal injuries in these crashes. During the day, in 80 per cent of the cases, the locomotive hit the motor vehicle, in 17 per cent, the motor vehicle hit the locomotive, and in three per cent, the motor vehicle hit some other part of the train."

"Not Accidents."

Referring to the railroad crashes, the report gives these significant facts: "For the entire nation, 32 per cent of these crashes—they aren't 'accidents' because somebody was careless—occurred at crossings protected by gates, lights, bells or watchmen. And 64 per cent of them involved trains moving at less than 30 miles per hour or standing still."

Young Lives Sacrificed.

One of the tragic things about the loss of life in traffic accidents is the large number of young lives taken. This is only one of many similar crashes reported from time to time: A few months ago the press reported a fatal automobile crash in a western state in which five young people died and another was so seriously injured that he may have died. An eyewitness estimated the speed of the automobile at 100 miles an hour, when it crashed into a tree. The ages were given and the average age of the five who died was a fraction more than 23 years.

Of eighteen people killed in a two-day holiday (4th July) in Virginia this year, the ages ranged from less than one year to 58 years, with the average less than 26 years. It is deplorable to think of the large number of small children killed by motor vehicle accidents—and they do not always lose their lives because they suddenly dart into the path of a moving vehicle. Many of these accidents are caused by careless or reckless driving. These statistics are for 1952: under five years of age, 2,050 deaths; between 5 and 14, there were 2,450 deaths; between 15 and 24, there were 7,800 deaths.

Sinning Against Our Maker.

In dealing with this subject of motor vehicle accidents, have we not been too prone to view it almost altogether from the human standpoint? We talk about the terrible loss of life, with the consequent sorrow, suffering and grief it brings to so many families—every word of which is sadly true—and statisticians take account of the economic loss in dollars and cents, all of which may be well enough, but if we go on further, have we not overlooked the most important thing of all—God's attitude toward the inexcusable slaughter of human beings made in his likeness? What does God think of it? We must ever bear in mind God's estimate of human personality, that every human being is of infinite worth, the most sacred object of all creation, and the life that he gives us here on earth is not to be wantonly sacrificed through the carelessness or recklessness of anyone. This inexcusable sacrifice of thousands of lives through traffic accidents every year is a sin that cries to high heaven, and it should bring us to our knees in heart-felt repentance.

Alcohol and Motor Vehicle Accidents.

To what extent is alcohol a contributory cause of motor vehicle accidents? The National Safety Council states that "in 28 out of every 100 fatal accidents, either a driver, pedestrian, or both, had been drinking. In fatal accidents 18 out of every 100 drivers had been drinking, with seven of these definitely influenced." Another safety official makes this pertinent comment: "We feel that a driver who has imbibed even a small amount of alcohol is influenced as far as his ability to drive an automobile is concerned and make no differentiation between 'drinking' and 'influence.'"

The Safety Council states also that drunken driving rose slightly last year.

Drinking pedestrians fare badly also. The National Safety Council reports 26 out of every 100 adult pedestrians killed were drinking. This is the equivalent of 1,700 out of 6,600 killed in this category.

It is no doubt true that the influence of alcohol in traffic accidents is even greater than the published statistics reveal. This opinion is expressed by a safety authority who reminds us that "a police officer does not bring a charge of drinking unless he feels it will hold up in court, and many drivers involved in fatal accidents are killed themselves or badly injured and thus steps are not taken to ascertain their condition as far as alcohol is concerned."

These facts and figures clearly reveal that the drinking driver is a great menace, and the worst part of it is that this evil is growing worse. What are we going to do about it?

The widespread acceptance of social drinking is one of the alarming facts of our time. The volume of beverage alcohol consumed by the American people is almost beyond the power of the imagination. It is said that if the three billion gallons consumed last year were loaded on trucks carrying 2,500 gallons each, and the trucks were properly spaced for safe driving between New York and San Francisco, there would be over 8 rows of trucks, each row more than 3,000 miles long, or if placed in one continuous procession they would extend more than around the world at the equator. Anything so widely used as a beverage must be an unquestioned blessing to all who use it and to the community at large. It would seem so. But we search in vain for any evidence that it brings good to those who make and sell it.—J. A. Davis.

Our Churches Report . . .

The Church at Hunterdale Will Dedicate Memorial Wing

The Union Congregational Christian Church at Hunterdale, near Franklin, Virginia, has announced that the dedication of the Scott Memorial Wing will be held on Sunday, October 25, at 2:30 in the afternoon.

The Scott Memorial Wing is the gift to the Hunterdale Church by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Scott as a tribute to Mr. Scott's mother and father. The father, Mr. A. J. Scott, is deceased. The mother, Mrs. A. J. Scott, is now living in the Hunterdale community.

The construction of the Scott Memorial Wing began in early January of this year and was just recently completed. There is a large fellowship hall for dining and general use which is large enough for about 250 persons to be fed comfortably. There is a large and modern kitchen, completely equipped. There are also three large classrooms and one storage room. The building is of block and brick construction. The floors are cement and asphalt tile. The lighting is of a modern, recessed type lighting. Modern fold doors, the new type vinyl-coated fabric folding doors, are installed so as to turn the fellowship hall into a number of rooms, whenever a smaller room is needed. The estimated cost of the Scott Memorial Wing is $25,000.00. The entire cost of this new project of the Hunterdale Church was borne by Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Scott.

The men of the church have conducted a campaign for funds to equip the new dining room and kitchen. The men raised over $1,200.00 for this purpose, which has enabled the church to purchase tables, kitchen ware and chairs. The women of the church, through the Ladies' Missionary Society, have also provided needed kitchen equipment for the new building. This includes a new electric stove, an electric refrigerator and numerous other things.

Among those participating in the dedication of the Scott Memorial Wing on October 25 will be Dr. Wm. T. Scott, the superintendent of the Southern Convention, who will deliver the Dedictory Sermon. Dr. W. Millard Stevens, the president of the Convention, will lead the Dedictory Response. Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, the president of the Eastern Virginia Conference, will read the Scripture Lesson. The Rev. Melvin Dollar, former pastor of the church, will pronounce the Invocation. The Rev. R. E. Brittle, also a former pastor, will pronounce the Benediction. Mr. W. H. Scott, donor of the Scott Memorial Wing, will present the keys to the new building; and the Rev. Clyde Fields, the pastor, will receive the keys on behalf of the church and present Certificates of Appreciation.

Open house will be held in the new building immediately following the dedication services. The public is cordially invited to attend this important service.

Dr. WARREN H. DENISON

Christian Stewardship Week at Wake Chapel

The week of October 4, 1953, was indeed an inspiring one and long to be remembered in the history of the Wake Chapel Congregational Christian Church.

Dr. Warren H. Denison, Grinnell, Iowa, came and led us onto a higher plane of Spiritual Stewardship. Dr. Denison is without question the foremost authority on Christian Stewardship and church finances in America today. His dynamic personality, deep consecration and beautiful Christian Witness bear testimony to a life of complete devotion to his Lord and love of the church, and appreciation for all spiritual and eternal values. No wonder that he has carried the message of Christian Stewardship into more than twenty-five hundred of our Congregational Christian Churches in forty-three different states. He was awarded a "Citation for Distinguished Service" by the Commission of Stewardship of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches at Cleveland in 1950. During the early 1900s Dr. Denison was Pastor of the Christian Temple in Norfolk, Virginia, and remembered visiting Wake Chapel during the time he was there.

The introductory meeting on Monday evening was for all officers of the various organizations of the church, and we were happy to have visitors with us from the Raleigh and Amelia churches. Dr. Denison arranges his meetings to include both laymen and laywomen. The afternoons were devoted to speaking to the ladies of the church and at night the training courses for the men. There was an enthusiastic response to all of the meetings, with guests from the Raleigh and Amelia churches at almost all sessions. A special meeting was held for the business and professional women on Saturday evening.

Dr. Denison is a living example of a completely consecrated Christian Steward, who began tithing at the age of seventeen and since that time increasing his giving to 20 per cent instead of the usual tenth for all of his eighty-three happy and useful years. Truly he has practiced his teaching of "systematic and proportionate giving of time, abilities and material possessions, based on the conviction that these are a trust from God, to be used wisely and generously in the Spirit of Christ in his service, for the benefit of mankind."

Many of his thought-provoking word and phrase combinations will stay with us. Just to share a few: "A giving Christian is a living Christian"; "Loving never empties the heart, and giving never empties the purse"; "Giving is an act of Worship"; "This business of Stewardship is a privilege"; "God so loved—he gave his only begotten Son"; "We can never pay the debt—he paid for us—but we can show how much we truly love him by serving as a good Steward"; "Let us think on these things."

Dr. Denison literally took us along with him to visit many of our missionaries in their mission stations around the world. Most of us cannot in person go to the mission fields,

(Continued on page 13.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

SPEAKERS FOR ELON COLLEGE RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS WEEK

Guest leaders for the annual Religious Emphasis Week, which was observed on the Elon College campus from Sunday, October 18, through Wednesday, October 21, are shown above. They are Rev. William Sengel (left), professor of religion at Radford State Teachers' College, Radford, Virginia, who is also pastor of Tyler Memorial Presbyterian Church in Radford; and Dr. W. Millard Stevens, pastor of the Christian Temple, Norfolk, Virginia. Both ministers have had long experience in working with young people and were heard with pleasure on the Elon campus. The two leaders conducted a series of daily services from Sunday through Wednesday evening, including morning devotionals, chapel programs, evening services and dormitory discussion groups for both young men and young women.

Trends in Student Enrollment

The thirty-sixth annual meeting of the American Council on Education was held in the Statler Hotel, Washington, D. C., on October 8 and 9. The theme for discussion was "New Dimensions for Education." This theme was applied to present and future programs in education in the various regional associations in this country and with a look at world situations and universal demands. The one topic that seemed to demand more attention than others was the inevitable and incredible increase in college enrollments through the years to 1970. At present there are approximately two and three-quarter million students enrolled in the colleges of this country. It is estimated that by 1960 there will be at least 5,000,000 students ready for and seeking admissions to American colleges, and by 1970 there will be more than double the number now in college seeking admission, or approximately 6,000,000 young people in this country seeking an education at the college level.

The leaders in this conference seem to feel that it is the responsibility of the colleges, private and public, to begin to plan to make it possible for every student in this country who desires an education to be given the opportunity; to insure that all desiring an education through the years should have the opportunity. The suggestion was made and discussed at length that the time and requirements for graduation be shortened, and that instead of requiring four years for graduation, three or two years might be required, and the required time for all professionals' education be reduced accordingly. This is amazing to anyone who believes in thoroughness in education and complete preparation before being awarded a certificate of graduation.

Another suggestion was made which could be serious, that the states authorize and inaugurate a series of junior colleges so that the senior colleges would have to admit only students at the junior level, thus relieving the university of the responsibility for freshmen and sophomore courses. It was emphasized that whatever course might be taken, there would be required enormous sums of money.

To anyone who believes in the privately endowed, liberal arts colleges and who has a conviction that religion and spiritual matters are essential to the education, training, and development of youthful minds, these trends are serious. It would seem that certain forces are getting ready to put the "squeeze play" on freedom in education. That is, that eventually the state is to take over the entire program of education and direct it through and by political influence, which would constitute a serious blow to our would-be Christian civilization. We must not lose sight of the fact that the spiritual life of man must be developed equally with the physical and intellectual; that is, if the total personality of the individual is to be developed and brought to a state of productive development.

College enrollment always has to do with college curriculums. The trends of enrollment in Elon College are interesting. In 1951, a total of 585 students were enrolled. In 1952, a total of 665 students were enrolled and in 1953, a total of 680 plus have been enrolled to date. This would seem most encouraging and it is. The facts, however, affect the financial budget adversely. In 1951, we had 330 boarding students. In 1952, we had 303 boarding students and in 1953 we have 250 boarding students. The overhead expense—heat, lights, salaries, dining room expenses, with the exception of the cost of raw foods, are the same. In other words, with 680 students, the total income from student enrollment as compared with income from smaller enrollment for the preceding year is approximately $20,000 less.

How would you account for the radical decrease in dormitory students? The only answer to this question is the dormitories themselves. Say what you will, students of this age won't subject themselves to inadequate living facilities. Our curriculum is adequate, our faculty is sufficient and efficient, our food is pronounced good by all. Our living facilities are not. What are we going to do about them? The Board of

(Continued on page 13.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Thank Offering—1953

When the committee was appointed to select the object to which our 1953 Thank Offering should go, we thought at first it might be a difficult job. It proved to be quite simple, and the committee was completely sold on our choice.

It is the year for a foreign project. Any work in China was eliminated because of conditions there. Since our 1951 Thank Offering went to the International University in Japan, we felt it unwise to choose Japan again. Africa was eliminated because funds from a recent Thank Offering, originally intended for China and withheld because of difficulty in getting money through to China, have been transferred to Miss Corrinne Nordquest's work in Africa. India was considered quite seriously but since much of our giving to the American Board from the Southern Convention goes to India we turned our thoughts to the islands of the sea—namely, the Philippines.

When we discovered that this year marks the 50th anniversary of the work of Frank Laubach in Mindanao we felt that here was a suitable Thank Offering project for 1953. Frank Laubach's name has become famous around the world. He has opened up a new world for millions of the world's population. It began in the Philippines 50 years ago when he went out as a missionary of the American Board. His heart was touched by the plight of the illiterates. There wasn't much money and few helpers so he had to think of a plan simple enough to use with little training, to teach these underprivileged people to read and write. We all know the results of his "Each One Teach One" system. In these 50 years he has more than 50 million pupils speaking 234 different languages or dialects and who live in 54 different countries.

Actually our money does not go to Dr. Laubach himself, for today he is a world missionary, going from one country to another to help the "silent billions." Our money does go to aid the work in Mindanao started by Dr. Laubach, which this year is celebrating its 50th anniversary. We feel that it is a good way for Christian women in the Southern Convention to give thanks at this Thanksgiving time.

MRS. W. E. WISEMAN.

* * * * *

A Great Meeting

According to the messages received from Mrs. W. B. Williams, president of the Southern Convention women, she has received great inspiration from the sessions of the National Assembly of the United Church Women in Atlantic City, October 5-8.

Mrs. Williams was asked by Miss Margaret Hargrove, executive secre-

A PRAYER.

Mrs. W. B. Williams has sent us a copy of the "Booklet of Prayers" published for the sixth National Assembly of the United Council of Church Women. For the next few weeks we will print one of these prayers each week.

"For the Unity of the Church."

O God of unchangeable power and eternal light, look favorably upon thy whole church, that wonderful and sacred mystery, even the body of Jesus Christ, our Lord, and by the continuous working of thy perpetual providence, so carry out the work of man's salvation that all the world may feel and see that the things that were falling are being raised up, and these that were growing old are being made new, and all things are coming to their fulfillment, through him from whom they took their rise, even Jesus Christ, Thy Son our Lord. Amen.

tary of the women of our denomination, to "carry the banner" representing our denomination in the great processional on Monday evening. The president of our Eastern Virginia women, Mrs. Garland Spratley, carried the banner for the Virginia State Council of United Church Women. A third representative from our group, was Mrs. Ray Gordon, who attended as a representative of the Suffolk Council of Church Women. We are proud of these three voting delegates at this important session, and shall hope to hear more of their experiences.

* * * * *

Please Be Patient

In hand now your editor has enough material to fill this page for the next five weeks in reports from local churches. Many of them came in late in August and early in September—and some late in September.

In the meantime plans for the women's conferences, the Thank Offering, and current items from local groups have to have their place at the proper time. And so the reports of the year's work from our societies must be delayed.

However, if our societies would remember to send in a report of a good Christmas meeting, or a fine family week program, or a good social, or an idea for money making at the time it happened, rather than a sometimes repetitious account of the entire year's activities just at the same time that other societies are doing the same thing, a better page in our paper would result.

* * * * *

Our Orchid Members

We, the Women's Auxiliary of the First Congregational Christian Church in Burlington, have established a custom in our organization which has been of great interest and inspiration, not only to all the members of the society but to all the church members for the past six years. We have been asked for an article to be sent to THE CHRISTIAN SUN about the custom of giving orchids, so we pass this idea on to other societies for inspiration and in appreciation of our members who have served their church so faithfully for so many years and continue a challenge for other members.

Our "Orchid Ladies," as we so fondly and affectionately call them, are the members who have reached their eightieth year and are honored on this memorable occasion by the presentation of an orchid.

At the Auxiliary's first meeting of the new year we were fortunate in having another orchid member added to this number. Mrs. R. E. Warren, an active member and a regular attendant at all meetings, graciously accepted this award and honor from Mrs. Will W. Horne, who has always had charge of this service.

This custom has been carried on in our Auxiliary for six years and during this time we have honored nine women. In addition to Mrs. Warren, they are: Mrs. James G. Holt (deceased), Mrs. J. A. Holt, Sr., Mrs. Minnie G. Aldridge, Mrs. J. M. Shoffner, Mrs. George James, Mrs. S. A. Horne, Mrs. J. H. Freeland, Mrs. J. M. Coble.

WILMER C. HOLT,
Publicity Chairman.

Bethel Reports

Another year is about to be closed for the Woman's Missionary Society of Bethel Christian Church, another year of work for the Master. With the leadership of our president, Mrs. Banks Garrison, we can look back and see that it has been an active and successful one. We have an enrollment of 28 and average attendance of from 22 to 24.

We observed World Day of Prayer with Union Ridge Christian Church and had quite a delegation attending. We also had representatives at the fall conference and the spring rally.

Our society sponsors a child at Elon Orphanage and she spends part of her vacation and holidays in the community.

The young people of the church have a new hut which we have helped sponsor. Besides standing behind them with their bills, we have purchased a new stove for the kitchen. We are financing this by serving hot lunches in nearby mills and chicken-pie suppers to civic clubs in nearby towns. We are also selling dish cloths, flavoring and pot cleaners.

Our programs have been very interesting and inspiring. The program committee followed the packet prepared by the Convention Office. Both study books were read and reviewed, and our pastor, Rev. Thomas Sutton, led the society in the study of the Book of Colossians.

Our Thank Offering went to Carroll County, Virginia. Gifts were sent to Ellis Island as our Friendly Service project. Cards, flowers, fruit and other gifts were given or sent to the sick, the shut-ins and the less fortunate in our community.

We are looking forward to the next year with renewed strength and humble prayers in our hearts.

REPORTER.

* * * * *

Report of Woman's Convention Treasurer

The following is the Quarterly Report of the Treasurer of the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, for the third quarter, first year, biennium 1953-1955:

RECEIPTS.

Eastern Va. Conference:
Women	$1,716.31
Young People	300.85
Juniors	231.06
Cradle Rolls	370.33
	$ 2,618.55

Virginia Valley Conference:
Women	$ 212.23
Young People	32.50
Juniors	5.00
Cradle Rolls	4.00
	253.73

N. C. Conference:
Women	$1,735.86
Juniors	111.13
Cradle Rolls	326.59
	2,173.58

Total	$ 5,045.86
-------------	-------------

DISBURSEMENTS.

Home Missions, General
Fund	$1,625.78
Young People's Home
Mission Fund	161.68
Thank Offering, Carroll
County, Va.	45.00
Friendly Service, Jennie
Pratt	5.00
Puerto Rican Goat Fund
Home Missions, General
Fund	19.86
	$ 1,887.32

Foreign Missions, General Fund		$1,625.78
Young People's Foreign
Fund	161.67
Dr. & Mrs. Riggs	20.00
Mrs. Moulton	8.00
Miss Corinne Nordequest	99.20
Korean Orphan	109.29
Rachanypuram School
Village Girls	9.00
Missions in Africa	32.00
Miss Margaret Ham-
maker	25.00
Mrs. Victor Masters ...	8.60
		$ 2,098.54

Check, Geo. D. Colclough, Treas.,
Southern Convention	$ 3,985.86
Check, Mrs. Leathers Treas. Life
Memberships and Memorials,
53 Life, 23 Memorials	760.00
		$ 4,745.86

Balance in bank	300.00
	$ 5,045.86

Respectfully submitted,

MRS. W. V. LEATHERS,
Treasurer.

* * * * *

Annual Report of Treasurer of N. C. Woman's Conference

(Concluded from last issue.)

THANK OFFERING FOR CARROLL COUNTY MISSIONS.

Women's Societies.

Albemarle	$ 22.00
Amelia	6.00
Apple's Chapel	65.00
Asheboro	42.45
Auburn	5.50
Belews Creek	11.08
Berea	25.00
Bethel	17.00
Beulah	5.63
Beverly Hills	20.25
Burlington	209.56
Carolina	12.00
Chapel Hill	56.25
Church of Wide Fellowship	15.00
Concord	17.00

Damascus	25.00
Durham	66.00
Elon College	132.85
Eutaw Community	6.50
Flint Hill (R)	5.00
Fuller's Chapel	15.00
Gibsonville	17.60
Greensboro, First	139.50
Greensboro, Palm Street	43.65
Hank's Chapel	41.16
Happy Home	40.00
Haw River	20.00
Henderson	41.00
High Point	25.25
Hine's Chapel	110.00
Ingram, Virginia	28.50
Lakeview Community ...	17.05
Liberty, Vance	32.00
Liberty, Virginia	22.00
Long's Chapel	6.30
Monticello	20.00
Mount Auburn	44.00
Mount Bethel	10.00
Mount Zion	13.00
New Hope	19.47
New Lebanon	27.50
Oak Level	15.00
Pfafftown	20.00
Pleasant Grove, N. C. ...	7.67
Pleasant Grove, Virginia .	32.87
Pleasant Hill	6.55
Pleasant Ridge (G)	35.00
Pleasant Ridge (R)	32.34
Plymouth	8.50
Raleigh	28.00
Ramseur	21.60
Reidsville	185.13
Salem Chapel	12.00
Sanford	25.00
Shallow Ford	10.00
Shallow Well	52.16
Spoon's Chapel	5.00
Turner's Chapel	10.00
Union, N. C.	59.00
Union, Virginia	40.00
Wake Chapel	54.85
Winston-Salem	32.50
Youngsville	25.00
	$ 2,216.22

Balance from Rally Offerings ..	$ 52.02
Union, N. C. Juniors	11.00

Total	$ 2,279.24
-------------	-------------

LIFE MEMBERSHIPS AND MEMORIALS.

Life Memberships.

Albemarle—Mrs. Nettie Baker, Miss Gertie Boyd.
Apple's Chapel—Mrs. Martha Ingold.
Beverly Hills—Miss Russel McKinney.
Burlington—Mrs. Graves Holt, Mrs. G. A. Kernodle, Mrs. J. L. Kernodle.
Chapel Hill—Mrs. Hubert A. Neville, Mrs. R. H. Varner.
Durham—D. M. Estes.
Elon College—Mrs. J. L. Foster, Sr., Mrs. James Hess, Mrs. Warren Jeffeys, Mrs. T. L. Smith, Mrs. J. V. Taylor, Mrs. James Watt.
Greensboro, First—Mrs. L. T. Crain, Mrs. Norman Hillard, Mrs. Austin Lane, Mrs. Robert Moffitt, Mrs. Paul Monroe, Mrs. Willard Price, Mrs. Irwin Smallwood, Miss Evelyn Stewart, Mrs. L. W. Watson.
Greensboro, Palm Street—Mrs. J. T. Hinshaw, Mrs. John Self, Mrs. J. E. Smith, Mrs. R. E. Stevens.
Happy Home—Miss Clarice Gunn.
Haw River—Mrs. E. D. Abernathy.

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Why We Should Give Money to the Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

When people first came to America, about the first thing they built was a church. Their churches were of rough logs. Many people wanted to get away from elaborate churches anyway. These churches cost almost nothing in dollars and cents because they were built by the people that worshipped there.

By 1852 people in the East went to white painted, tall spired churches. People were moving west, though. They needed churches. In 1852 at the Albany Convention, the people decided to get money to build churches "at the west." In 1853 the Church Building Society was formed for this. It gave and loaned money.

This campaign is to get money to loan only, so if you put some money in now it will help many churches instead of just one. The money is paid back in an average of eight years with three per cent interest. This helps lots of churches to be built.

Now more money is needed to be loaned. Why? Materials are higher, and we want bigger and better churches. We need more churches because since 1940, one half of our population has moved and churches are needed in new areas. New industries need workers, so that is one reason why people move. People move from cities to suburbs, and from farms to cities. More people are born every day. Our population grows larger.

Some people might say "My church never borrowed any money from the Building Society. Why give now?"

One reason is that someday your church might need some money, sometime there might be a fire or storm, or your church building might need repairs, or it might someday be too small.

Most important a good Christian should try to help new churches.

"Every time we make possible a new church, we help to build the true America."

ELIZABETH LESTER.

Asheboro, N. C.

"Respect a Child's Love"

By HELEN GREG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

It is a serious unkindness not to respect a child's attachment for a pet or for a much-loved possession.

Anne awoke in the night, sobbing as if her heart were broken. Her grandfather, who usually has a calm acceptance of everything, admitted her grief was almost more than he could bear. The five-year-old had found Pal, her tired old stocking-doll, in the wastebasket. Knowing her devotion to Pal, Mother had prepared to replace the battered doll with a new one, to be found under the Christmas tree.

Holding the tiny pigtailer in her arms, as tears splashed on her shoulder, Mother comforted her. "I'll tell you what we'll do," she said. "We'll put Pal by the chimney. Perhaps Santa will take her to his workshop, where he makes old dolls new again." Raising Pal's status to a place of honor in Santa's workshop made the world bright once more for Anne.

We should never discount a child's affection or opinion because of his immaturity. Children's reactions are much the same as our own. Who has not tried to discard "that old thing" belonging to an adult member of the family, only to discover it was one of that person's special treasures?

Ten years ago I gave the man who is now my life-partner a pair of cherry-red lounging slippers. Ross refers to them, even now, run-over and scuffed as they are, as "my new red slippers." If he finds they are not in their place he is in a jitter. "Someone might step on them!" he says. For safekeeping, they are put on the top shelf of his closet.

On our way home from a West Indies cruise we were enjoying the hospitality of New York's Waldorf Astoria Hotel when I noticed a display case full of men's handsome lounging slippers. "They're not like mine!" Ross boasted.

This is the kind of attachment that our boys and girls have for certain possessions. As to their attachments for pets, especially dogs, there is a great need for more understanding on the part of many adults.

Lance was an only child, just turned five. Grandpa had given him a Kerry blue terrier. Lance named him Mulligan. Now, Mulligan became an important part of Lance's life, sharing his active hours as no human being could.

But neighboring children began teasing the usually gentle Mulligan, and he retaliated by snapping at them. This gave the mother a seemingly good reason for planning to rid herself of the care of the dog.

So it came about that one gloomy fall day, when Lance dashed home from kindergarten eager for Mulligan's affectionate muzzling of understanding, he could not find him. The terrier was nowhere in sight! Panic-stricken, the small readhead rushed to his mother.

"Mother, Mother," he cried excitedly, "do you know where Mulligan is?"

The mother took Lance's trembling hand. "We gave Mulligan away, Sonny," she answered. "He needs to be on a farm. Your little cousins will take good care of him."

This incident happened to a friend of ours many years ago. He still tells the story with heart-touching wistfulness.

The loss of Mulligan inflicted a hurt which deeply affected the relationship between mother and son. The boy often cried himself to sleep, sometimes dreaming life again held for him its greatest delight—the companionship of a Kerry blue terrier.

There are times when it becomes absolutely necessary for some child to be parted from a much-loved animal companion, but it is indeed seldom that there is any excuse for this being done secretly or suddenly. It should be explained to the child beforehand whenever possible, always sympathetically but unwaveringly, why the step is necessary. His responses should be listened to, and they should be answered frankly and kindly, but he should be given no undue hope of a reprieve. This method may bring, at the time, a greater show of tearful objection than did the method used with Mulligan, but there will be, afterwards, no resentment and no long years of heartbreak.

Did you know that there are 162 verses in the Bible about the drink evil?

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Richmond Youth Discuss Problem of Uniting the World

The Richmond Youth Fellowship discussed the subject, "What Can Unite the World," at their meeting on October 18. Miss Jerry McClain directed the program with George Mallory and Russell Selden leading the discussion, which centered around the U. N. The consensus of opinion of the young people present was that Christianity is the answer to the world's needs and that with all of its imperfections, the United Nations still stands as the only agency offering a hope that through its program the nations of the world can be persuaded to live with each other in peace and unity.

The Youth Fellowship meets each Sunday evening at 6:30 in the recently completed recreation room. Their program for the coming Sunday will center around Temperance Day, the topic for discussion being "Choosing the Right." Mr. C. E. Jacobson, who heads the recreational activities of the church, and Mrs. Jacobson, will serve as counselors.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Halloween and Thanksgiving coming up—then it's not long till Christmas. My doesn't time fly! What are you gonna do with?

* * *

Are you—

An attender or an absentee?

A power or a problem?

A promoter or a provoker?

A giver or a getter?

A supporter or a sponge?

A soldier or a slacker?

A lifter or a leaner?

A friend or a faultfinder?

A helper or a hinderance?

—The Christian Endeavor Quarterly

* * *

"It is well that there is no one without a fault, for he would not have a friend in the world."

—William Hazlitt.

* * *

Let Us Pray

For a light to guide us,
And the wisdom to open our eyes to it.

Liquor Plays a Tremendous Roll in Our Political Life

There is hardly a phase of our national life that is not covered by lobbyists and acclaimed by the cocktail glass. Most of the time these lobbyists represent powerful interests—domestic or foreign. The cocktail plays a very important part—as a matter of fact, it is not erroneous to say that some of the important government and diplomatic decisions have been taken at a cocktail gathering.

Cabinet officer, senator, or representative, with the envoy of some foreign power, may have started what seemed to be an innocent chat over a highball, a chain of events which might have an enormous national repercussion. The cocktail has the magic power of loosening tongues.

The U. S. S. R. Embassy in Washington spends extravagantly. They try to outdo everybody else by having the most elaborate and attractive functions. Together with caviar they serve potent vodka. Do these parties bring the planned results? Well the Russians seem to have the gift of "making friends and influencing people." The Russians, more than anyone else, realize that the cocktail is a powerful ally and they use it masterfully.

We have wandered many times if the vodka and caviar served at the important conferences at Yalta and Teheran did not have a softening influence over our delegates. We wonder if the concessions made to the Russians were not due, in part at least, to the fact that vodka was too prevalent in these meetings. Because of these mistakes, we are paying a bitter price all over the world.

The cocktail party is also a fertile ground for foreign spies and demagogues. Where can these agents find more willing conversationalists and loose tongues?

The Bible says, "Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath babblings? They that tarry long at the wine."

Many men have betrayed their conscience and their convictions under the narcotizing influence of intoxicating liquor.—The Spotlight.

New Filmstrips

We Are All One, filmstrip on Spanish Speaking Congregational Christians, will be ready by the end of October or the very first of November. Our Southern Convention Office will have one copy of this, free to all except for postage. Our Church Around The World, sound filmstrip on the missionary theme, "The Life and Task of the Church Around the World," will be ready after the middle of November, and will also be available from our office. A filmstrip projector is necessary for both of these and a record machine if you use the sound recorder for Our Church Around The World. It also has a script which could be used instead. Please order these from Miss Doris Boswell, Box 336, Elon College, N. C. A notice from Rev. Alexander B. Ferguson, who heads up Visual Aids for our denomination, says four new color, sound motion pictures have just been placed in our Missions Council depositories. They are: Children of The Mountains, A Visit To Vellore, Honshu Holiday, (for primary through junior high) and Meet The Ushijimas (adults). Showing time, 13 minutes. Rental $6. Order these directly from the Visual Aids Department, Missions Council, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

If anyone would like a copy of the new Visual Aids Catalog, write to Mr. Ferguson. All ministers have received copies. Recently Congress passed a bill that film may be shipped at a special rate as are books. Call your local post office for full information before mailing films.

PATTIE LEE COGHILL.

Lost One Vote? . . . No!

Your vote is your evidence of citizenship. You are proud of your citizenship—then cherish your vote as a right and a responsibility.

There are two ways in which you declare your citizenship. One is by paying your taxes . . . for the protection of your person and your property and for the advancement of your culture. The other is your vote, your ballot, by means of which you express your opinion on matters of public policy. Your vote is never "lost." If yours is the only vote either in favor or in opposition to a proposition or a candidate, it is not "lost," because it is your democratic expression and the only means by which you can register your opinions and preferences.

—Ralph C. March.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"God's Plan for the Home"

LESSON V—NOVEMBER 1, 1953

MEMORY SELECTION: "God setteth the solitary in families."—Psalm 68: 6.

LESSON: Deuteronomy 6: 4-9 Ephesians 5: 21-6: 4.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Deuteronomy 6: 4-9.

The Strategic Place of the Home.

And now abideth three basic institutions of the human race—the home, the school and the church; and the greatest of these is the home. In any event it was the first, and for a long time it was both the school and the church. It has the child first, and it has it in the most impressionable years. It was no mere coincidence that the home had the child first; it was an expression of the divine wisdom and love. Before any other influence was brought to bear upon the new life, God wanted the home and the parents to have the first chance. This fact constitutes both a high privilege and a sacred responsibility. If home life is sound and sane, society will be all right. What our modern world needs is more homes built on God's Plan for the Home as outlined in today's lesson. As Dr. Frank S. Mead points out in his notes on this lesson, the Scripture for today emphasizes four factors or principles: Religious Faith, Self-giving Love, Mutual Respect, and Family Responsibility and Obligations.

Religious Faith.

The words of Moses, as recorded in Deuteronomy and expressed by what the devout Jew calls the Shema, Deut. 4: 6-9, are simply an appeal for religious faith in the family. Religion is to be an integral part of the family life, it is to furnish the atmosphere of the home, it is to bind the family together, it is to be an everyday affair, it is to furnish the standard of conduct. The test of the wisdom of these words is to be found in the Jewish people today. In no group of people is the family life on a higher standard, or the family life more strong and wholesome than among the Jews. And religious faith has been the secret of it all. Reverence for God, love for one another were the keystones of Jewish home life. They are the foundation stones for sound family life among all peoples. American homes need more religion in them, more religious faith undergirding them.

Self Giving Love.

Paul reemphasizes what Moses said, even if he puts it in different words. Likening the relation between husband and wife to the sweet and sacred relationship that exists between Christ and the church, he writes that self-giving love is the basis of a Christian home and a happy home. There are those who think that Paul is "off the beam" when he writes, "Wives be in subjection to your husbands." But he is not talking about a husband as a dictator. Nor is he suggesting that a wife be in subjection to her husband in anything. But as the church looks to Christ as the head of the church, so should a wife look to a husband as the head of the home, frankly recognize that fact, and give deference to it. But wives are to be subject to their husbands only as the church is subject to Christ. Furthermore husbands are to love their wives even as Christ loved the church and gave himself for it. There is no talk here about rights. The emphasis is upon self-giving love. Right home relationships are based on trust and affection and love between husband and wife.

Mutual Respect.

Mutual respect for each and every member of the family and the home is another prerequisite for a happy and harmonious home. Husband and wife are to respect each other. Even as the wife respects the husband as the head of the family, the husband should respect the wife as a sacred personality. In like manner there should be respect on the part of the parents for the personalities of the children, and respect on the part of the children for the parents. The home should be a democratic institution. It is the finest school of democracy. In homes where members of the family respect each other's personality, in which they mutually respect one another, there is peace and harmony and joy. Rights are forgotten in the spirit of cooperation.

Paul incidentally (or is it intentionally?), suggested a practical rule which will help right home relationships as concerning "in-laws." For the sake of marriage he says that a man will leave his own father and mother, and cleave unto his wife. Much trouble in many homes is caused by the fact that many mothers and fathers cannot give up their sons or their daughters—they have that possessive instinct which causes them intentionally or unintentionally, to meddle in the affairs of their children. A man should not love his mother any less because he marries another woman. But once the marriage ceremony is performed his first duty is to his wife. A woman should not love her mother or father less because she marries a man, but once she is married her first duty is to her husband. The "old folks" may not like the way the young folks do things, or the way they run their home, but they had better keep out of the situation. The fact is the marriage relationship is one of the most important, and one of the most dangerous ones in human life.

Family Responsibility and Obligations.

Last but not least Paul emphasizes the fact of family responsibility and obligations. Children are to obey their parents, in the Lord. The parent, if he is a true parent is God's divinely appointed authority in the home. He and his wife should be obeyed in things that are in accord with God's will. There are things that the child should do. There are lessons that he must learn, prohibitions that he should respect, reverence that he must give. Discipline must be administered. Order must be preserved.

But the parents should do this in wisdom and in love. "Ye fathers, provoke not your children to wrath." The father should not, and need not be an autocrat, or a tyrant, certainly not a brute. Fathers are to be sensible human beings who make an honest effort to understand their children, and to treat them as they would be treated themselves. Tasks are to be shared. Work is to be done co-operatively. Respect is to be earned and preserved. Responsibilities are to be mutually assumed. Love is to be the law of family life. Children

(Continued on page 15.)

CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP
WEEK AT WAKE CHAPEL.

(Continued from page 6.)

but all of us can give of our prayers, time and money to help others do so. When we share thus in any way we enter into a covenant with our Lord, which glorifies him and his work here and everywhere the "Good News" is heard. He pointed out that one needs to have faith developed, to reach up and out toward God, out beyond where we can see, count or figure. Surely no one knows his income to be certain, position, dividend, health may fail. One needs to build his faith by trust in God where he cannot see.

At the 11:00 o'clock worship service on Sunday morning, Dr. Denison preached on the theme "Partnership with Christ." The most moving experience for our church as a whole came at the conclusion of Dr. Denison's message, when forty-two of our laymen met at the altar for the Ambassador Commissioning service led by the pastor, the Rev. Fred P. Register.

A fellowship meal was served at 12:20 by the ladies of the church for the Ambassadors and at 1:00 o'clock they returned to the Sanctuary for a service of consecration. At 2:00 o'clock the Every Member Canvass began, and all church families were visited by the teams of Ambassadors.

The Ambassadors and their wives returned to the church at 7:30 o'clock, the ladies to hear Dr. Denison in an informal discussion of ways and means to increase the effectiveness of our church life, and the men to tabulate their reports. Never before was there such wholehearted participation and cooperation as evidenced when the total tabulation of two-hundred and nineteen calls completed out of the total of two-hundred and fifty-five made. At the close of Dr. Denison's final message to the re-assembled group a coffee hour was held. Dr. Denison just loves people, and we learned to love him in the short time he was in our midst. Our prayers go with him as he continues his wonderful teaching of "Christian Stewardship."

The Wake Chapel Church is striving to triple its Mission and Benevolence Budget and thus match its current local expense budget spending. When a final tabulation is made we feel confident this challenge will be met fully.

MRS. R. G. POWELL,
Church Secretary.

NEWS OF ELON COLLEGE.

(Continued from page 7.)

Trustees and the church hold the answer to this important and vital question.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

The annual meetings of the conferences constituting the Southern Convention are beginning this week. The Valley of Virginia Central Conference meets Wednesday and Thursday, October 14 and 15. The other conferences meet each week thereafter, closing with the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

On the eve of the meeting of these conferences, apportionments for the college, as is shown by the following figures, is only a little more than one half paid. This fact perhaps doesn't mean so much to the local church, but it is most significant to its college. This week's report is very good; thanks to a large contribution from one of our stronger churches. The college feels certain that all churches in the conference will make a determined effort to secure their apportionments in full. The college is in arrears with the convention's asking for the support of THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We expect to pay this amount but the college will find it exceedingly difficult to meet its own obligations unless the convention and the churches meet their obligations to the college. It is a case of receiving and paying back for the benefit of the whole.

The college has many obligations that must be met. The writer is sure that our local churches are anxious that the expense of operating the college be paid promptly. We shall be able to meet these obligations if others will meet their obligations to the college. The college has no money other than that which comes directly or indirectly from the churches and from the students. It does the best it can with what it has.

Previously reported $ 7,569.85

Eastern N. C. Conference:
Plymouth$ 9.75
Wake Chapel 107.55

Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Nans)$ 36.98
Hopewell 4.00
Christian Temple 715.86
Portsmouth, First S. S. .. 6.93
South Norfolk 133.00
Spring Hill S. S. 3.07
Suffolk S. S. 40.46
Union (Surry) 20.00

Western N. C. Conference:
Brown's Chapel$ 5.00
High Point, First 30.00
Pleasant Cross 20.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:
New Lebanon S. S.	$16.10
Virginia Valley Conference:
Mt. Olivet (G) S. S.	$12.00
	1,160.70
Total to date	$ 8,730.55

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

(Continued from page 9.)

High Point—Mrs. Fannie Hartsell.
Ingram, Virginia—Mrs. Kenny Satterfield.
Lakeview Community—Mrs. Charlie Page.
Liberty, N. C.—Mrs. Estella Ray.
Liberty, Vance—Mrs. W. C. Medlin.
New Hope—Mr. Joseph Denton, Mrs. Eleanor Uzzle Wheelless.
Pleasant Grove, Virginia—Mrs. Elizabeth Sipe.
Pleasant Ridge (G)—Mrs. Graham Rowland Wisseman.
Raleigh—Mrs. C. T. Wheeler.
Reidsville—Mrs. Tucker G. Humphries, Mrs. Lawrence Scott, Mrs. Marjorie Chaney Somers, Mrs. Beulah Wright.
Salem Chapel—Mrs. C. M. Marshall.
Sanford—Mrs. S. E. Kennedy, Mrs. M. A. Wicker.
Turner's Chapel—Mrs. W. M. Cooper.
Union, Virginia—Mrs. G. W. Pollard.
Winston-Salem—Miss Angie Crew.

Memorials.

Asheboro—Mrs. E. P. Boroughs, Mrs. Hattie Cox.
Belews Creek—Mr. Dewey Harrison.
Burlington—Mrs. Vitus R. Holt, Miss Nonie Moore.
Church of Wide Fellowship—Dr. Robert Lee House.
Durham—Mrs. Geneva C. Harward.
Greensboro, First—Dr. Robert Lee House—three.
Hines' Chapel—Mrs. Carrie Smith.
Liberty, Vance—The Rev. C. E. Newman.
Mount Bethel—Mrs. Clara Simpson Cummings, Mr. Leonard Phillip Rippy.
Pleasant Hill—Mrs. Julia Hornaday, Mrs. Rodema Thompson.
Pleasant Ridge (R)—Mrs. Fannie Cox.
Reidsville—Mrs. Lena Southard, Mrs. Underwood.
Shallow Well—Mrs. Florence R. Kelley, Mrs. Mattie McNeill.
Spoon's Chapel—Mr. Coke Smith.
Union, N. C.—Mrs. Fannie T. Graham, Miss Nannie Kernodle.
Union, Virginia—Mrs. Tom Elliot.
Wake Chapel—Dr. Robert Lee House.

TOTAL RECEIPTS BY YEARS FOR FOURTEEN FISCAL YEARS.

1939-1940	$ 4,350.38
1940-1941	4,402.24
1941-1942	5,847.00
1942-1943	5,588.28
1943-1944	6,183.20
1944-1945	7,183.24
1945-1946	8,348.47
1946-1947	8,479.48
1947-1948	8,722.32
1948-1949	8,766.37
1949-1950	9,120.97
1950-1951	8,969.89
1951-1952	9,419.26
1952-1953	10,528.25

Total$105,909.35

Which gives an average per year for the period of $7,564.95.

SUSIE D. ALLEN,
Treasurer.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

It is good to have faith in God that he will help us reach the required goal of $65,000.00. I believe we have done and are doing a good job at the orphanage for the 84 children who have had to be placed here. And I believe that God will help provide for them, and give us sufficient funds to run this institution on a good and respectable basis. I have disappointments and discouragements, to be sure, but nevertheless I know there are enough friends of these children and of this home to see that we have sufficient. Other orphanages in our state have endowments and resources which lessen the burden of their week by week obligations considerably. They are spending in 1953 what they collected in 1952. Here we have no reserves and have to "appeal" to you constantly to keep from going too deep in the "red" before the end of the year.

There are enough good people in our constituency to see this and to make a special place in their giving for this situation. I pray that it may be so. I want to ask you who read these lines to make your own contribution gladly and in a spirit of real gratitude to God for his goodness to you, and also I wish to ask you to pray with me that there shall be enough. I am glad our children here do not complain, but seem real happy and truly appreciative of their home. They are a really happy and healthy lot of children.

Fifteen of our children will go the third Sunday in this month to Flint Hill, Randolph County, where the Rev. Avery Brown is pastor for a program of songs and little plays and speeches. Our children have such a good time on these programs. Getting to ride there and back is to them a joy and the kind things people say to them and do for them is of real value in their little lives. Beside they get a real thrill out of doing something for their home and for the churches that help us. Our program this fall includes the following children: Marie Proctor, Helen Watkins, Sandra Ferrell, Betty Jean Proctor, Billy Proctor, Betty Jean Rowland, Jo Ann Black, Cecelia Wilson, George Morningstar, Roy Black, Johnnie Rieh, John Crumpler, James Crumpler, Betty Oaks and Ella Jean Haith.

They have to memorize and practice their parts in addition to their school work and their regular chores. I hope they do well. Miss Foster is in charge of the program and she manages to get up a good program every time.

We covet the privilege of going into many churches, not only for the information we may render our churches about one of its finest pieces of work, but also for the sake of the children themselves. If you would like us to come to you at the Sunday school hour, the church hour, or an afternoon or evening service please let us hear from you. We need your help and we wish to do our part to merit it.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR OCTOBER 15, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

Maude Hedley Bible Class, Rosemont Church, Clothing.

Mrs. E. E. Wagner, Suffolk, Va., Shoes & Clothing.

Woman's Miss. Soc., Pleasant Ridge Church, Ramseur, N. C., Coupons.

Cong. Christian Church, Winston-Salem, N. C., Coupons.

Bethel Missionary Society, Elkton, Va., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $11,124.44

Eastern N. C. Conference:

Auburn S. S. $ 79.95

Ebenezer 36.53

Hope Mills 10.00

Morrisville 8.28

Plymouth75

135.51

Eastern Va. Conference:

Burton's Grove, Special . $ 2.00

Franklin 47.23

Christian Temple 90.93

Portsmouth, First S. S. . 7.84

Spring Hill S. S. 10.99

Suffolk 285.90

Suffolk S. S. 150.00

594.89

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Greensboro, First $ 63.26

Mebane 5.00

68.26

Western N. C. Conference:

Pleasant Cross S. S. $ 8.26

Pleasant Union S. S. 16.63

24.89

Virginia Valley Conference:

Mt. Olivet (G) S. S. $ 4.00

Timber Ridge 48.00

52.00

Total $ 875.55

Grand total $11,999.99

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $15,705.88

National Bank of Burlington, N. C. (interest) ... $ 36.00

Mary Sue Brittle Sunday

School Class 5.00

Miss Clarice Gunn, Reids-

ville, N. C. 25.00

Young People's Class,

Reidsville Church 15.00

Wade Barber, Pittsboro,

N. C., in memory of Mrs

Vester Dickens 10.00

Philathea Class, First Ch.,

Reidsville, N. C. 10.00

W. J. Ballentine, Fuquay

Springs, N. C. 150.00

Woman's Guild & Shelton

Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va., in memory of Arthur W. Sayers .. 5.00

256.00

Grand total $15,961.88

Total for the week $ 1,131.55

Total for the year $27,961.87

Perhaps the most touching gifts are those given in memory of loved ones—a beautiful way to recognize the services of those "whom we have loved long since and lost awhile."

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased)

(City)

(Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written)

(Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Pledges to Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

(Corrected to Oct. 19, 1953.)

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Antioch—E. J. Rohart	$ 343.00
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	106.00
Bethel—H. V. Harman	377.00
Dry Run—R. E. Newton	129.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton	211.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardeastle	$ 872.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark	200.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Gran-ger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Bay View—.....	724.00
Norfolk: Christian Temple—W. Millard Stevens	5,330.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dol-lar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardeastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eu-gene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein	1,459.00
South Norfolk—O. D. Poythress	2,500.00
Suffolk—.....	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—.....	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—Carl Wallace	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowder-milk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal	132.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	$ 400.00
Lakeview—Curtis Young	82.50
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisse-man	3,292.00
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Maek V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register	1,395.00
Union (Va)—Mark W. Andes	1,498.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

are to be brought up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord.

God hath set the solitary in fami-lies. Thank God that he did! The nearest thing to heaven on earth that many of us know is the Christian home and the Christian family. It is a foretaste of, and a preparation for, the Father's house of many man-sions. Where Christ is the Head of the home and the unseen Guest in the home, life has meaning and dignity and joy, come what may.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erec-tion of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church build-ing financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Con-vention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this pur-pose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church

By Secretary or Clerk

Address

..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

How Can I . . .

Forgive as I Ought To Forgive?

The Last of a Series of Sermonettes

By REV. HENRY E. ROBINSON

Several places in the gospel accounts manifest Jesus' deep concern over this matter of forgiveness. In the Lord's Prayer, in several of the parables, in his last words on the cross, Jesus lays great emphasis upon the need to forgive others and the need of each of us to be forgiven of God.

No account of what happened on the cross would begin to reach the heart of the matter until it dealt with man's forgiveness. Why was Jesus so concerned about forgiveness? Why did he make so great a place about forgiveness in his teachings? I have a feeling when I talk about the necessity of forgiveness that people begin to lose interest as if so many other things are more important. I believe that this whole matter was of much greater concern to Jesus than it is to the average Christian today. If we are to follow Jesus and are to possess the mind of Christ, we need as much as anything else to re-evaluate this whole matter of forgiveness.

One of the foremost objects of religion, and one of the primary goals of Jesus' mission in the world is to draw man and God together. A nation is drawn together by its lines of communication. A principal task of a defending army is to sever the communication lines of the enemy. Bombing bridges, cutting wires, ripping up highways and railroads, greatly weakens the opposition. This is exactly what sin does to our communication lines with God. Our deliberate choices of evil set up barriers and break contact with our Heavenly Father. Religion's first task is to break down the barriers which sin has set up between man and God, and in their place to re-establish the lines of communication which will bind man and God together. The only known power to accomplish this is God's forgiveness of us and our forgiveness of one another. Jesus knew this, and that is why he placed such stress upon the processes of reconciliation.

Many people are cold when approached on the subject of church attendance. The reason they give may be that when they were children they were forced to go to church and lost all desire forever to frequent the doors of a church. The real reason is perhaps the fact that they do not wish to come to grips with a sin which besets them and which they full well know is incompatible with what goes on at church. Often the good church member will say that worship leaves him cold. He cannot make a contact with any force outside himself. The difficulty may be that forgiveness has neither been sought or given. The old barriers remain the impregnable fortress between him and his God. People often say that their prayers are unavailing. It is like knocking on a closed door. But may it not be true that they are living under the weight of a sin for which they have never asked forgiveness, or living with the burden of a broken relationship which they have never honestly tried to repair? Forgiveness is the key to worship, prayer, peace of mind, and true Christian growth.

But how can I forgive as I ought to forgive? It takes all the Christian graces. It requires often more love than we possess. Look upon the cross of Christ and upon his attitude toward his accusers. Bury vanity and pride in some deep hole from which they can never raise their ugly heads. Seek out him against whom you have sinned and ask his forgiveness; and then seek out him who has sinned against you and offer your forgiveness. Then get down on your knees and pray God to forgive you all your sins and failures in his sight. See if a heavy weight has not been lifted from your soul; see if your attitude toward others doesn't take on a fresh, new feeling; see if a rebirth hasn't taken place in your soul; see if you have not indeed become a new creature in Christ.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, OCTOBER, 29, 1953

NUMBER 43

Elon College Library X

Bethlehem Buys a New Parsonage

The Bethlehem Congregational Christian Church of Nansemond County, in Eastern Virginia, is one of the latest of our churches to provide its pastor with a new parsonage. Located on the Holland road, near the church, the property was purchased at a cost of $21,000. The Rev. R. E. Brittle and his family expect to move in not later than November 15.

News Flashes

We regret to learn that Dr. N. G. Newman is having to continue his treatments at Duke Hospital. He is living in Raleigh with his daughter and is going to Duke for treatments.

The ministers of Richmond were the guests of The Byrd Theatre on Tuesday evening of this week to see the presentation of the picture produced from Floyd Douglass' book, The Robe.

In Appreciation

The pastor, the officers and the members of the South Norfolk Congregational Christian Church wish to take this opportunity to thank Mr. and Mrs. William Overton for the gift of a grand piano for the church sanctuary. This lovely gift adds much to the beauty of the auditorium. It was a most timely gift and may God add his riches blessings on these fine Christian friends.

O. D. POYTHRESS.

Miss Mabel Staley reports: The Congregational Christian Church of Sophia, North Carolina, with the assistance of the Woman's Missionary Society, has bought a site for a new church, to be started very soon with the help of our pastor, Rev. Avery Brown. We are confident of going forward. We have set the fifth Sunday as Building Fund Sunday. New officers for the church and Sunday school were recently elected, and each one plans to do their best.

Program of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference

Following is the tentative program of the one hundred twenty-eighth annual session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference of Congregational Christian Churches, to be held on Tuesday and Wednesday, November 10 and 11, 1953, with The Congregational Church of Christ, of Tryon, N. C., Rev. O. H. White, Minister.

Tuesday—Afternoon Session.

- 2:00 Conference Convened by President W. W. Snyder.
- Worship service—Rev. F. E. Ratzell.
- 2:15 Roll Call of Ministers and churches.
- 2:25 Presentation of Program—Rev. M. W. Andes.
- 2:30 Report of Executive Committee—Rev. W. J. Andes.
- 2:40 Recognition of Visitors and new Pas-

- tors—Dr. W. T. Scott.
- 2:45 Report of Treasurer—Mr. Russell V. Powell.
- 2:50 Report of the Committee on the Ministry—Dr. Stanley C. Harrell.
- 3:10 Report of Committee on Stewardship and Apportionments—Dr. H. E. Robinson.
- 3:20 Conference Missionary Association—Rev. K. D. Register.
- 3:35 Home Missions Report—Rev. K. D. Register.
- "The Church Building Society"—Mr. Algie Blaylock.
- 3:55 Address—Miss Alice M. Huggins.
- 4:25 Christian Rural Overseas Relief—Rev. Carl R. Key.
- 4:35 The North Carolina Council of Churches—Rev. Morton R. Kurtz.
- 4:45 Report of Committee on Nominations—Mr. George D. Colclough.
- Miscellaneous Business.
- 5:00 Adjournment.

* * * * *

Dinner—6:30 o'clock.

During dinner reports will be received on the work of Women, Laymen, and Pilgrim Fellowship—Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, presiding.

* * * * *

Tuesday—Evening Session.

- 7:30 Worship Service—Rev. O. H. White.
- Address—Dr. W. T. Scott.
- Licensing and Ordination of Candidates for the Ministry.
- Benediction.

* * * * *

Wednesday—Morning Session.

- 9:00 Conference called to Order.
- Hymn and Prayer—Dr. C. M. Heymann.
- Reading of Minutes.
- Enrollment.
- 9:15 Report of Committee on Evangelism—Rev. M. V. Welch.
- 9:30 Report of Committee on Religious Literature and Christian Education—Rev. John S. Graves.
- 9:40 Elon College—Dr. L. E. Smith.
- 10:10 Report of Committee on Memoirs—Rev. G. C. Crutchfield.
- 10:20 Report of Committee on Social Action—Rev. H. P. Bozarth.
- 10:30 The Christian Orphanage—Dr. John G. Truitt.
- 11:00 Report of Committee on Finance—Dr. H. E. Robinson.
- 11:10 Report of Committee on Resolutions—Mrs. H. E. Robinson.
- 11:20 Miscellaneous Business.
- Reading of Minutes.
- 11:45 Worship Service—Rev. F. E. Ratzell.
- 12:00 Final Adjournment.
- 12:15 Lunch in the Church Dining Hall.

Elon Religious Emphasis Period A Great Success

Elon College has just completed observance of what students and faculty alike generally regard as its most successful Religious Emphasis Period in recent years. Sponsored by the Student Christian Association, and engaging a large number of student leaders in preparations over a period of several months, interest and attendance surpassed all previous records for events of this nature. Special guest leaders were Rev. William R. Sengle, pastor of Tyler Memorial Presbyterian Church of Radford, Virginia, and Professor of Religion at Radford College; and Dr. W. Millard Stevens of the Congregational Christian Temple of Norfolk, Virginia.

Professor Sengel opened the Period program with a vesper service, October 18, and spoke at morning devotions before classes each day, as well as conducting an evening forum hour in West Dormitory parlor, Monday and Tuesday nights, and the concluding Communion Service of Wednesday night in Whitley auditorium. Dr. Stevens was the chapel speaker on the three mornings, Monday through Wednesday. Both men shared with local faculty members in dormitory sessions held Monday and Tuesday nights in student rooms over the campus. Others participating in the dorm sessions were: Dr. Ferris E. Reynolds, Dr. James H. Hess, Dean Earl Danieleley, Dr. H. H. Cunningham, Dr. Gilbert Latham, of the college faculty, and Rev. Howard P. Bozarth, minister of the college church and advisor of the Student Christian Association.

Attendance throughout the period was voluntary, except the morning chapels which all students attended with faculty. There were some 140 students present for the final communion service, and attendance at the

(Continued on page 3.)

Southern Convention Dates to Remember

- October 28-29—Eastern Virginia Annual Conference Session
Congregational Christian Church, Newport News, Va.
- November 4-5—Western North Carolina Annual Conference Session
Pleasant Hill Church
- 10-11—North Carolina & Virginia Annual Conference Session
Congregational Church of Christ, Tryon, N. C.
- December 8—Eastern Virginia Christian Missionary Association
Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danicley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

McLelland Heads Elon Laymen

Approximately thirty-five of the laymen of the Elon College Community Church met Friday October 23 for the regular quarterly dinner meeting. The fine dinner which the group enjoyed was prepared by the Woman's Missionary Society of the church.

Martin Garren, an outstanding layman from our Greensboro Church, was present and delivered a challenging address. Mr. Garren called for greater participation on the part of laymen that the ministry of the church might be more effective. He emphasized the importance of having dedicated, Christian layman not only in the church on Sunday but in everyday jobs all during the week suggesting that influence of the Christian in his job might be greater than anything which may be said on Sunday morning.

Officers elected by the group include Marsh McLelland, president, William L Williams, Jr., vice-president; T. H. Mackintosh, secretary and Howard Edgerton treasurer. This group of officers will also serve as a planning and executive committee for the group during the coming year.

* * *

A poem repeated from the fellowship.

God gives us joy that we may give;
He gives us joy that we may share
Sometime He gives us loads to lift
That we may learn to bear.
For life is gladder when we give,
And love is sweeter when we share,
And heavy loads rest lightly too
When we have learned to bear.

—Arthor Unknown.

* * * * *

Notes from Liberty Spring

L. T. Luter, Jr., of Suffolk, Virginia is the president of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Liberty Spring Church. William P. Tucker serves as secretary, and Jonnie Morgan is the treasurer. The group, which was organized in 1949, now has about 45 members. It is their practice to have monthly meetings. They have undertaken some projects for the improvement of church grounds and properties.

Laymen's Day Worship Service at Pleasant Ridge

A Layman's Day worship service was presented at the Pleasant Ridge Congregational Christian Church of the Western Carolina Conference, Rt. 1, Asheboro, N. C., on October 25.

The service was conducted exclusively by laymen, Mr. Theodore Cox acting as leader. A regular service was presented, consisting of hymns, responsive reading, and prayers. Special music, "Zeal, Our Watchword," was rendered by the men's chorus. There were three sermons by laymen: "His Call in Today's Crisis," by J. C. Newell; "His is a Special Call to Men," by Floyd Brown, and "He Calls Men to Positive Belief," by Quinton Hicks.

Rev. Max Vestal is pastor of this church.

ELON RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS PERIOD

(Continued from page 2.)

Morning devotional periods, and evening forum hour ran close to 100, with students later crowding into the dorm rooms where bull sessions were conducted. The faculty cooperated throughout by agreeing to lighten the study load for students during the period encouraged attendance, and morning class periods were adjusted to make way for the special devotional period after breakfast, in Whitley. Both Professor Sengel and Dr.

(Continued on page 7.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Saydor, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year$3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195...

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Let's Climb a Little!

By RICHARD K. MORTON

Life always involves the challenge of climbing, at one time or another. Christianity is, in part, a challenge to climb, to advance, to fulfill and to perfect life.

There is no greater tragedy in life than to have God-given capacities for climbing, and yet to be content to do nothing but stay on the same old level of thinking and living. To be immersed in this world, to be carnally minded, to be overcome by evil, to refuse to heed the call to sacrifice and service—this is indeed lamentable.

Years ago, in the town where I lived, the early models of automobiles used to have a terrible time trying to climb a hill near the center of the business district. Nowadays, they climb it without ever shifting gears. Such is progress in the automotive field. But there are still lives that cannot climb the hills of life any more strongly and confidently than in the days of yore.

Surveys will show, I think, that one of the largest factors in the unhappiness and failure and evil that creeps into life is that of meaningless, uninspiring, aimless work. All of life is affected when for years we decline to climb, to study, to improve, to adventure, to develop.

"We may not climb the heav'nly steps to bring the Lord Christ down," as the lovely hymn has it, but we surely must be ever aspiring and working and attempting, if we are to utilize what God has given us in our lives.

I often think of the stirring phrase in the hymn, "The Son of God Goes Forth to War," which declares, "They climbed the steep ascent of heaven through peril, toil and pain." As life stretches out before us, we too must accept the challenge of "the steep ascent of heaven." The attainment of spiritual goals and religious ideals, as set forth by Jesus, means a steep climb—but there are great rewards.

We have often lost sight of spiritual and moral ideals because of our very industriousness in using our material blessings and our mental energies. Recent questionnaires have shown that many among us know the need of protecting health, acquiring education and acquiring possessions, and all that. But at the same time, we have tended to forget the need we have for basic moral principles, for integrity, and for character. The things we have in our hands sometimes corrupt the things we hold in our hearts. We fill our minds with knowledge, but empty our hearts of love. We seek preferment among our fellows, but lose our soul before God.

Some of the less fortunate among us lose heart and say that the struggle upward is too great and is not for us. Heavy clouds are in our skies. We ought then to remember what the weather man tells the glider pilot: Every cloud means a lifting power. The very presence of a cloud shows that there is a process going on in the atmosphere which involves a column of rising warm air which meets a higher column of colder air, causing condensation and the cloud. Therefore, the glider pilot, wishing to stay aloft in his powerless plane, tries to seek out clouds, keeping under them so that he may utilize the lifting power to be found under them. If more of us kept this in mind, we would not so easily surrender to the difficulties which face us.

In climbing a little, we find out what our lives really are and can do. We get a blessing and a thrill—and perform a service. Now is the time to start climbing and to get on a constantly higher level, for in later years, the climb may be too steep and unnecessarily exhausting.

I had a real instance of this, this summer, when I was on vacation in the western North Carolina hills. The map showed that our route was crossed by mountains several times, and I wondered how we would make out. I found that when we came to them, the mountains were as high as expected, but the road over them wound and spiraled so gradually that our automobile made the climb without noticeable effort. I think that this is the way we get over some of the great peaks of daily experience. We cannot expect to go directly, in a straight path, up a very steep ascent, but if the road winds a bit, we can make it easily.

With many of us Christians you would think that we had to depend solely upon our own little strength and wisdom. You would think that there was no divine Helper, no spiritual strength. You would think that all the ascents were pathless and replete with untold dangers. You would think that the grade was so steep that nobody could possibly make the climb!

We ought, as Christians, to be climbers, in the best sense. We ought to see what a healthy body and mind and spirit, given the blessings of youth, can do in a climb.

The early Christians knew the high rewards of this kind of faith, and as they climbed and struggled and suffered, they grew in grace and in vision, and they beheld the glory of the face of their Lord when they had come to their mountain top.

The Fruit of Missions--Conflict

Extracts from an Address Before the Annual Session of the American Board

By DR. RAY E. PHILLIPS

"The Christian Gospel brought peace from tribal wars to the Africans, but it also brought a sword. It awakened Africans from their age-long subservience to the ancestral spirits and to the purveyors of magic, and set their feet on an upward path to a new, abundant life, in the attaining of which they naturally clashed with the white man's schemes for exploiting Africa and its abundant labor. So the result of missions in many parts of Africa is conflict. . .

"The present troubles in Africa, with the promise of much more to come, should impel us to consider what future task, if any, we have as American Christians in that continent. Is our task completed when the Gospel has been preached; the Africans freed from their hell of paganism; churches organized, and a modicum of education provided? Or have we still some responsibility? If so, how much? . . .

"Today, in our part of Africa it would be difficult to find a district, a village, a home, hardly an individual, to whom the appeal of the Gospel has not come. Official statistics state that in 1949, in our Union of South Africa, over four million Bantu (4,053,770) out of a total of less than eight million people officially recorded (7,831,915), or 52 per cent of our entire Native population, are Christian and members of some recognized Christian church." . . .

But the job of the Christian missionary in Africa is far from done. "To bring the Gospel and create a social conscience and then leave it at that is merely creating a vacuum into which Communists and other radicals may step with their programs," Dr. Phillips pointed out.

"The Christian missionary has freed the African people from their ancient bondage to evil spirits and jealous ancestors and has given them a glimpse of the 'real opportunity to develop all the God-given potentialities of their minds, souls and bodies. Missionary activity has created new demands for higher education; for Christian homes with all the amenities we have for relieving the drudgery from woman-kind; for a thousand and one items which we associate with cultured Christian living' . . .

"Now these new demands can only be met by people trained to function in an environment as different from the old tribal order as day is from night. For in the primitive days there was no such thing as progress, or economic competition; no one saved for the future; there was nothing that passed for money. The home was the unit of the extended family consisting of uncles, aunts, nephews and nieces to a remote degree. Sexual relationships outside marriage were rigidly controlled. Delinquency and crime were almost unknown. There were no goals or prisons. . ."

The African in the city looks to someone to help him in his confusion, to aid him in strange problems of housing, leisure time, control of his children who are running wild in the streets. "They want to learn how to understand our rules of order and how to use the white man's constitutional methods for obtaining what he feels he should have."

"Is it any wonder that the African is confused when he finds himself in a modern city like Johannesburg, of a million people, with its skyscrapers and shops, mines and industrial plants, its scramble for material goods, and its multitudinous laws for the control of its citizens? All this is new and strange. In their bewilderment a million African people in 1951 found themselves guilty of offending against the laws of the white man, being dragged before the courts, and paying fines or going to jail. A million Africans punished for breaking laws which do not apply to white men, and which they did not know in their primitive tribal life!"

"So our African gradually becomes resentful—at the police who are always hounding him for passes, arresting him for vagrancy, for trespass, for carrying a stick, for attending a public meeting, for entertaining his brother in his home without a permit. He becomes embittered at the eternal pushing and hustling by petty government officials, by railway and municipal authorities. He is tempted, finally, to lump all white men together as domineering, unjust, hateful,—except that white man on the street corner or at the secret meeting place in the location who speaks of brotherhood and equality and hotly urges the Africans to revolt and obtain their rights by force. This man and the few Indians and Africans who stand up and talk with him are the only ones who seem to understand his difficulties. Is their way the only way out?"

Dr. Phillips illustrated the situation facing the native African by telling of a young man who came to the city to start a small business—a grocery store. Soon a relative who was poor came asking food, for in the old tribal custom the family shared all they had. If he refused his relatives he became an outcast and if he gave food all the rest of the tribe will come asking aid.

Dr. Phillips was asked to visit a textile plant which had been started with the laudable aim of bringing employment to the people so they would not have to move hundreds of miles from home. At first the native boys learned rapidly and gave every promise of becoming skilled workers. Then the Juvenile labor force began to disintegrate with a 100 per cent turnover within 12 months.

When Dr. Phillips investigated he found the food and living quarters good, and the payment satisfactory. "The only thing wrong was the white man's knowledge of African culture. He did not know that the normal incentives of the white man did not apply to those youths. All they wanted was a cow-boy hat, a shirt and a pair of trousers. Their pay, over three months, enabled them to make these simple purchases, then they went back home."

Dr. Phillips raised the question as to whether it was not the task of Christians to help these young Africans to regular habits of work and to learn to use the income from their labor to improve their health, erect good homes, and educate themselves and members of their families.

"I believe that those of you who have been carrying on the task of supporting missions will agree that a big task of present-day missions, in Africa, at least, is to ease new Christians into the society into which they will have to live, and explore with them the various choices they will have to make between the various values of our civilization. If we are sensitive to this need of our Christian community in Africa it will not be necessary for other organizations to appear to do just this job."

Stressing the need for a better trained African clergy, and young
(Continued on page 10)

Our Churches Report . . .

South Norfolk Church Reports Most Successful Year

The South Norfolk Congregational Christian Church has had a most successful year. This was the first year that our church has operated under the Unified Budget program, and I am sure we are all very proud of the results. Forty seven new members have been received into the church and according to our pastor, Rev. O. D. Poythress, who has already completed 38 years of ministry in South Norfolk, this year has been one of the best in the history of the South Norfolk Church.

This fall, the laymen of our church organized a "Men's Fellowship for Christian Service." This organization had charge of the evening service on Sunday, October 18, in observance of "Layman's Day." The choir was composed of all men. The speakers were Mr. Elsworth Morris, Mr. Herman King, Mr. Eugene Tull and Mr. F. C. Hare. This layman's group is contributing much toward the spiritual growth of our church. They meet once a month for a business session and fellowship hour. On each Wednesday night, they meet with the pastor for a short devotional service, then go out for visitation. Mr. T. R. Eason is president.

On Wednesday mornings, the women of our church meet at the altar to pray for those who are sick in the community. This group is increasing week by week and those who come receive a real blessing.

Our Woman's Missionary Society has had a wonderful year under the able direction of Mrs. C. N. Harris. The president for this year will be Mrs. W. B. Evans. Mrs. C. N. Harris has re-organized our "Youth Fellowship," and will act as counselor. This Young Peoples' Society meets each Sunday evening in the Social Hall at 6:30 p. m.

Our church has already purchased lots and the Parsonage Committee has selected plans for a parsonage. We hope to break ground within the next sixty days. Our Sunday school is now in the midst of conducting a six week's attendance contest. We are already seeing wonderful results. Last Sunday we had 416 present on time. Also, the attendance at our worship services are very gratifying. Our goal for this conference year is one hundred new members.

Suggestions on Going to Church

By CHARLES F. KEMP.

It is a significant thing to be able to go to church. Men have died for that privilege. In Rome it is still possible to visit the catacombs where men risked imprisonment and death for this privilege. The first thing the early settlers did in this country was to build churches so they could worship. The first thing they did when they landed in Virginia was to select four trees and spread a sail between them for a roof. They put boards across a stump for a pulpit and thus were able to hold church services. That was one reason they had come to this new country.

We want to think in this article about going to church. Everything that we are going to say is commonplace and, perhaps, it is "carrying coals to Newcastle." Going to church is so common, so available, and we do it so often that we need to remind ourselves that the things we do in church are things of great importance, so we shall speak of the various items that comprise a morning worship service, familiar though they are.

First, we would remind ourselves that these are nothing new. We should have a sense of perspective when we go to church. We link ourselves with a great procession of worshippers over a period of many centuries. This is not something that our generation has thought up. Dean Sperry said, when he visited a cathedral in Europe, "it seemed inhabited by all generations gone and all yet to come." One can have something of that feeling in any church. It is the oldest institution in existence. A service club was honoring a man whose firm was observing its one hundredth anniversary. The chairman asked, "Does anyone here represent an institution that is older?" A minister stood up; the guests laughed, and then they realized that it was true. It goes clear back to the time when Jesus went to the synagogue "as His custom was," and when the Hebrews sang in Jerusalem, "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord." (Psalms 122:1) It is interesting how certain elements in a worship service have persisted throughout the centuries. Of course, some things have changed. The Bible is now a book, whereas once it was a scroll. Our musical instruments have been improved. Church architecture has changed. Sermons in New England once were timed by an hour glass that was put on the pulpit and the hour glass was often turned two or three times in one service. On occasion a sermon could not be completed in the morning and so was finished in the afternoon. But the basic elements are the same; they have spoken to the needs of men through generations. Consider some of the things that are in the average church service. Everything is there for a purpose.

I.

First there is the music: prelude, hymns and anthems. Music is something that cannot be said in words. It has always been the voice of religion. The Bible is full of exhortations to sing hymns and the psalms as an expression of religion. The hymn-book is a great devotional storehouse. Each hymn has a story.

"O Love That Wilt Not Let Me Go" was written by George Mathieson, a blind poet and preacher. He had known a lifetime of difficulty and discouragement. He was expressing his own faith when he said, "I trace the rainbow through the rain," and "O light that followest all my way;" this was out of his own life so he gave this statement of his great faith.

"I Would Be True" was written by a young man only twenty-three years of age. He was writing from a foreign country to his mother. He had no thought of writing a hymn, but his mother had it published in a magazine and it was later set to music. It has become a favorite with youth groups everywhere.

"My Faith Looks Up to Thee" was the expression of a young man alone in a strange city. He was tired and discouraged and wrote this poem on a scrap of paper to meet his own needs, and then carried it around in his wallet.

"Blest Be the Tie That Binds" was written by a minister of a small church in England. He had received a call to a large city congregation and, while the movers were loading his household goods, he and his wife

(Continued on page 9)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Where Should We Place the Emphasis

As we approach the end of the Conference Year, the local church begins to check up to see what has been completed. It seems that we are more conscious of unpaid bills and of unpaid apportionments than we are of other shortcomings. This seems to be necessary since bills must be paid or the church will be in ill repute; that conference apportionments must be paid or boards and institutions will not be able to pay their bills which will be a reflection on their credit. There are other items, however, on the local church program, that are just as essential to the ongoing of the church as are its financial responsibilities. In fact, if these other items are completed, as a rule the financial requirements will be met easily.

There aren't many things that will quicken the life of a church and increase its ambition and multiply its efficiency like an evangelistic effort that revives the sleeping spirits of the saints and brings conviction and conversion to the sinners. At times you wonder why the apparent indifference and lack of concern for the spiritual life of the church, for those in the community who are not Christians, and who are not members of the church.

At the recent session of the Virginia Valley Central Conference, the matter of evangelism, of crusading for Christ, received considerable attention and emphasis. After a fervent and interested discussion of the local churches' business in its community and why it had not reached the unsaved and unchurched in its community, a set of resolutions was passed requesting each individual local church to do three things: First, to make a survey of its community, to determine all who live in that parish who are not Christians and who do not belong to the church, to locate them by name and address. Second, the church is requested to organize its membership into teams and conduct a period of visitation evangelism when they would take the church and the claims of Christ to the individual, seek his acceptance of Christ and his request for membership in the church. It was stated that any church that would put these two resolutions into effect would, in all probability, add twenty percent or more to its membership. In order that the ones who are reached in this campaign might be more profitable members to the church and more devout servants of man and God, a third resolution was passed: that in this crusade for Christ the question of stewardship should be brought before the entire membership of the church and community, that all might be aware of their individual financial responsibility and the blessings that would accrue from a complete discharge of that responsibility. These resolutions were passed by unanimous vote of conference and the representatives of every local church agreed to see that this campaign was put on in his church and furthermore, the ones present took it on themselves to see the churches that were not represented and induce them to join in this crusade.

This was the high moment of conference, filled with inspiration that resulted in consecration and determination. The hope was expressed that all conferences constituting the convention would join the Valley in this effort, so that throughout the entire convention, we would have a crusade for Christ conducted by the local churches, culminating in a glorious in-gathering on Easter Sunday. May the Spirit of God bless us and move our hearts to undertake a program of this kind. Should the church give itself to this crusade, every other responsibility of the church will be more easily borne and it will be looking for new fields in which to plant new churches.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

It would seem useless to give a word of exhortation and encouragement to our Sunday schools and churches at this time concerning conference apportionments. Two of our conferences have already met in annual session. The remaining three will meet every week hereafter. I trust sincerely that other interests of the church have fared better than its institution of higher learning. You are compelled to feel that the churches will pay their apportionments in full, that the convention, her boards and institutions may be financially able to meet their obligations. At any rate, we are dependent upon our churches and we have a conviction that they will not fail in this hour of need. We have a very good report this week; we hope that next week's report will bring the college to a figure equal to that of last year at this date.

Previously Reported	$ 8,730.55
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Henderson	$ 94.00
Mt. Herman	24.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Barrett's	$ 20.00
Dendron	1.10
Mt. Carmel	47.97
Norfolk, Second	94.00
Oak Grove	25.00
Portsmouth, First	157.79
Suffolk	661.47
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Bethel S. S.	$ 5.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Liberty	$ 35.00
Sophia	20.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Leaksville	$ 8.89
New Hope S. S.	19.00
Wissler's Chapel	17.00
	1,235.22
Total to date	$ 9,965.77

ELON RELIGIOUS EMPHASIS PERIOD

(Continued from page 3.)

Stevens held the interest and attention of the students exceptionally well, and that is a genuine tribute in itself.

The theme for the period was, "A Life to Spend," with each speaker developing different aspects. The questioning of the students both at the evening forum hour and in the dorm sessions bespoke genuine concern for the realities and resources of the Christian faith and commitment. All who had any part in the fine program of the week feel it was a success beyond any hopes they had dared entertain, both in student and faculty participation, and in the quality of the services conducted by the resource leaders. A lasting contribution has been made to the spiritual growth of those sharing the life of our college.

HOWARD P. BOZARTH,
Pastor.

The good that men do adds to the world's riches. The evil they do lives only in the negative values that do not satisfy or bring peace to the world.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

Mrs. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Thank Offerings for Mindanao

By Miss Virginia Brinkley.

The Thank Offering project for 1953 is "Our Mission on Mindanao" in the Philippines, and the offering received will go to further our work there. It is very fitting that the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Convention selected Mindanao this year, for 1953 marks the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the mission on the islands.

Since 1903, work by our missionaries, even though slowed up by disease, hostile tribes and war, has gone forward. This is evidenced by the number of hospitals, churches and schools that have been established and by the Christian leaders that have been trained. Yet, much more must be done among these people who still feel the effects of the ravages of war and who need assistance in the rebuilding of their nation. Here is a place where our women can translate their love for their fellowmen into action by giving generously of their possessions.

Our 1953 Thank Offering program, a service of rededication and reconsecration, has as its theme "The Voice of God is Calling Us"—to love our fellowmen, to serve our fellowmen, and to sacrifice for our fellowmen. It is hoped that our women will find joy in sharing in the Thank Offering.

November 1 has been designated as the Sunday for the presentation of the program and for the offering to be received. If the service cannot be held at that time, it is suggested that it be given at the earliest possible date.

* * * * *

Berea Off to a Fine Start

The Woman's Auxiliary of Berea (Nansemond) began their work for the new year with zeal and inspiration on October 6. Mrs. Russell Bradford, the president, entertained all of the women of the church in her beautiful home with a luncheon. About fifty women were present.

All officers had been installed at the September meeting, so all work for the year was planned, and everybody was ready for a good year.

Mrs. Mae Galliford, guest speaker, brought us a lovely message on prayer. Mrs. I. W. Johnson conducted the devotionals, and Mrs. J. R. Vick brought a lovely message in song.

Each woman felt that it was good for us to have been there and determined to make all phases of our church work for the coming year a pleasure and a profit, not only for our local church but for the church at large.

Mrs. HERBERT P. HARRELL.

* * * * *

New Society Gives First Goat

The first goat for Puerto Rico reported to your editor as paid for in the Asheboro District come from Antioch Society, which was organized during the last year.

Mrs. H. Winfred Bray, wife of the pastor of the church, presented the

A PRAYER.

To be Used Daily at the Noon-Hour.

O God, who hast put into the hearts of men a great longing for peace, but hast also given to man the power to choose, grant us the will to make our choices in accordance with Thy will. Bind the world together, O God, in fellowship, service, and love, and grant that we may take our part in the fulfillment of Thy purpose. Through Jesus Christ, our Lord. Amen

—Mrs. HARPER SIBLEY.

(From "A Booklet of Prayers" used at the Sixth National Assembly of the United Church Women) idea at the last meeting of the society, thinking they might help send a goat to provide milk for Puerto Rican children. Whereupon the society voted to pay the entire cost of a goat, taking the money from their treasury. At last report, we are not sure whether the goat is to be "Jolene" in honor of the minister's wife. However, we are proud of this relatively new society in the Asheboro District. Let us see what society will be the next to report the purchase of a goat for Puerto Rico.

* * * * *

Concord Missionary Society Closes Successful Year

The Woman's Missionary Society of Concord Christian Church, Caswell County, North Carolina, has closed another year of good fellowship together under the leadership of our very conscientious president, Mrs. Allen Tate.

Mrs. Tate has led us in an inspiring way toward true fellowship and cooperation in our church and society. May we ever remember the special thoughts and efforts she has given to our society.

Our monthly meetings have been well attended. We gave Friendly Service to Ellis Island. For Community Service we gave Christmas boxes to shut-ins and medicine for a T. B. patient. Our project for the year was to buy a pew for the church.

Our public services were World Day of Prayer, Thank Offering program for the Carroll County Mission, and the showing of the film, "More for Peace."

We have made quarterly reports to the state treasurer and have met most of the achievement goals.

As we go forward in the new year, under the leadership of Mrs. Preston Allred, we hope to accomplish many things for the Master.

Mrs. W. R. SIMMONS.

* * * * *

Attention, North Carolina Women!

If you did not have time during our busy but wonderful day on October 6, at Greensboro, to subscribe to Social Action Magazine, perhaps you would like to right away so that you may receive it for use during the 1953-54 conference year. The issues deal with a variety of subjects of deep concern to Christians. We know that we are called upon to "share with our Father in the task of creating a better society," in the "effort to make the Christian Gospel more effective in society," and "to be doers and not hearers only."

The subscription rate for Social Action is $1.50 per year. I shall be glad to send to anyone interested literature on Social Action ordered for the literature table at the North Carolina Woman's Conference. Mrs. Carl Wallace is the new chairman of Social Action for the conference, and she will do everything within her power to help us all to do a better job in this most important expression of our Christian convictions.

PATTIE LEE COGHILL.

* * * * *

Some Experiences at the National Assembly of United Church Women at Atlantic City

Eastern Virginia was highly honored at the sixth national assembly of United Church Women which met in Atlantic City, October 5-8, 1953.

(Continued on page 13.)

Some Things for Christians to Think Through

Sometimes men think that they personally need not subscribe or give regularly to missions, the church benevolences; that they will let their wives do their benevolent giving in their women's society, and their children in the church school. No, they cannot afford to turn it off that way, for it is a very personal matter, a spiritual privilege and duty; nor is it sufficient, for example, to hold an ice-cream social "to raise our apportionment." Giving to a local church for current expenses and for missions is an individual matter. It is an act of worship and cannot be treated lightly. No one can do another's giving for either. Every act of worship is personal. "Let each one of you.

Then there are churches that use one budget for current support and benevolences, that take a certain percentage of the sum subscribed, say 10, 15, or 20 per cent, for the missionary work. They say, "Then we will be sure of our benevolence apportionment." That seems very plausible on the face of it. The apportionment for benevolences may thus be secured. "If we have the double budget, it just will not be secured." Grant that the budget is subscribed and the apportionment met, but is that the only question? Look a little deeper. Suppose one subscribes 50-50 for the local work and for missions, is it right to take only a smaller percentage than 50 per cent of it for benevolences? Suppose he is opposed to missions and does not wish to give anything to them, is it right to take another's surplus giving to make up the anti-missionary person's? Is the principle of misappropriation of funds involved? Is nothing involved but the reaching of the apportionment?

Incidentally it should be noted that experience reveals that when the double budget is used both parts are subscribed more easily. It should also be remembered that budgets are minimums, the low ceiling; not the upper ceiling.

Another custom obtains in some churches, that of ignoring the members of the choir when the worship offering is received. Why should they be slighted? Giving is an act of worship and is personal as is every act of worship. Do the members of the choir not need to have the chance to worship with their gift in the same way and at the same time as other worshippers? Do you treat them differently than other worshippers with the communion? Why not pass them by then?

Still another item has not been thought through by some churches. I visit your church to-day and place a dollar on the worship plate as it is passed to me—what becomes of it? Has your church adopted a policy and instructed your Financial Secretary and Treasurer how the loose plate offerings are to be divided? Of course it should never be left to the decision, whim, prejudice of some officer. The dollar was given to your total program and there is no reason why some officers without instruction should have to take the responsibility of deciding what share should go to the local work and what to the benevolences. The church should adopt a policy and give a proper division.

The church should be an example, a leader in principles, just methods, correct policies. Churches need to examine their habits and customs. Some of them have grown up without much thought.

WARREN H. DENISON,
Grinnell, Iowa.

SUGGESTIONS ON GOING TO CHURCH

(Continued from page 6.)

were watching. Suddenly she said, "I can't do it," and he said, "Neither can I," so he told the movers to take the furniture back into the house. That night he wrote, "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love." So, some hymns are prayers, some are expressions of faith, some are calls to action, some express love of country, some the beauty of nature. Each hymn has its own story and each has its own message. The hymn book is the church's greatest storehouse of devotional literature.

We speak much about ecumenicity today—we really have it in our hymnals. "Love Divine" was written by Charles Wesley, one of the founders of the Methodist Church. "O Little Town of Bethlehem" was written by Phillips Brooks, an Episcopalian; "O Master, Let Me Walk With Thee," by Washington Gladden, a Congregationalist; "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," by Martin Luther, founder of the Lutheran Church, and "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind," by John Greenleaf Whittier, a Quaker. And so on down the list. Each hymn has a message; each hymn has a history; and each hymn has its own contribution to make. They should be used with greater thought and appreciation than they are.

II.

A second element is scripture. A professor of Biblical literature used to say that there were three elements in the Hebrew synagogue. They were described as "man to God," which was prayer; "God to man," which was the scripture; and "man to man," which was the sermon. The Christian church took over all three of these elements, adding the New Testament to the Old. The scripture is not something that we need to argue about. It has proven itself in the lives of countless people. It has been written into our legal systems; it has inspired the greatest characters; no other writing has even approached its influence. The scriptures are not entertainment in one sense, perhaps, but if we lived by the scripture we could lift our lives to a new level. They are read in a service of worship for a purpose.

III.

Prayer is the heart of worship, as it is the heart of religion. The Lord's Prayer is sometimes referred to as "The Model Prayer," for it was taught by Jesus Himself. It contains six petitions—three that concern themselves with God: (1) the reverencing of His Name, (2) the coming of His Kingdom, and (3) the doing of his will; and three that concern themselves with man: (1) the need for daily bread, (2) the need for forgiveness, and (3) the need for victory over temptation, or for character. This prayer contains only fifty-two words, yet all of man's spiritual needs are included. It opens with a personal statement of faith in the personal God who is like a Father, "Our Father which art in heaven." It closes with a conviction of the majesty and power of God, "For thine is the kingdom and the power, and the glory forever." The prayer of the pastor attempts to express the adoration, confession, aspiration, and intercession of all the people. Some churches also include a period of silent prayer. We all need to develop the art of silence. The Quakers have much to teach us here. We need to discover something of the meaning of the verse, "Be still and know that I am God." (Psalms 46:10) This is why we include moments of silence and meditation. Archbishop Trench wrote, "Lord, what a change within us one short hour spent in Thy presence

(Continued on page 11.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Why We Should Give to the Church Building and Loan Fund

The crisis is here. Now is the time when we must decide whether we want war or peace. I know all of the world really wants peace. The only way is to teach people the Christian way of living. For that we need more churches. Children need to be taught in the church from the beginning for this is our future, our peace.

We organized our Church Building Society in 1853 and since then it has been helping thousands of churches all across the country. Through the loans and grants, repairs and improvements have been made possible upon church buildings, parsonages, education buildings and also many new churches have been built. These funds are capital revolving loan funds. They do not diminish with their using. They are loaned for the building of churches for ten years and parsonages for five years. In actual practice, the funds revolve about once every eight years.

Even with this there are more people living in unchurched and inadequately churched communities today than at any other time in history and many requests of aid have been refused in the last two years for lack of funds. Inter-denominational co-operation indicated that our Congregational Christian share 333 churches. Building a church is exercise for the soul. It unites a collection of individuals into a Christian fellowship. It creates a community out of a group of houses. It is a new witness to the gospel of Jesus Christ for the world. It provides a sound foundation for a real Christian community, a rewarding, fruitful life. New communities with the church at their centers and a new generation brought up in the Christian faith means peace for the world. The time to build churches is now.

JUDY BASON.

* * * * *

"Practice Visit"

By MABEL-RUTH JACKSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

From the doorway of an adjoining room Mrs. Donaldson watched her son with satisfaction. Greg had brushed his teeth and cleansed his throat—doing a really good job according to the latest accepted methods.

And his mother thought to herself, now there is something else he must be taught. She had already arranged for Greg to go with her to the dentist's office. She had talked the matter over with Dr. Brown and he had gladly agreed to cooperate. Today was the time set for a visit.

"What's a dentist, Mommie?" asked Greg, as they were on their way.

"He's a doctor who tells you how to keep your teeth in good condition, and if there's anything wrong he fixes it." Not a very adequate explanation, Mrs. Donaldson thought ruefully, but perhaps it would do for a beginning.

It seemed best to have Mrs. Donaldson sit in the chair first, so she took her place, smiling at little Greg, who watched, wide-eyed. "Open your mouth wide, please," said the dentist, and with a slight, knowing wink at Greg that made him feel grown-up, too, Mrs. Donaldson obeyed. The dentist looked at her teeth with the help of his little mirror. Then the young lady attendant handed her a paper cup of water and she rinsed out her mouth.

"I want a drink, please," said Greg suddenly.

"You will have to sit in the chair, then," said the dentist.

Mrs. Donaldson surrendered the chair to her small son, who was fascinated when the dentist put his foot on a lever and raised the seat. "Open your mouth, Gregory," he said.

"What for?" asked the small boy, gazing at him uneasily.

"I want to look at the inside of your mouth with this mirror, just as I looked at the inside of your mother's mouth," explained the dentist carefully.

Greg looked at his mother, and she laughed gently. "It's fun, isn't it, Greg?" she said.

"Yes." He opened his mouth and the dentist explored the small pink interior carefully.

"Now may I have a drink?" Gregory asked.

The smiling young lady filled a paper cup. Greg drank the water and grinned over the top of the cup at his mother. Then he asked to hold the mirror, and he looked at himself in the tiny circle.

"Well, young man," said the dentist cheerfully, "will you come to see me again some day?"

Greg nodded. "Sure," he said. "Now will you give me a ride down?"

"Here's something to take home to remember us by," said the young lady, and she handed Greg a tiny truck, an inexpensive toy from the dime store.

"Thank you," said Greg gravely. "Goodbye," he said to the dentist.

Mrs. Donaldson felt that the visit had been a great success and, also, a wise preparation for the time when her son's teeth might need some real attention. Though that coming visit might not be as enjoyable as this one, still there would be no apprehension on the part of Greg. Now he knew the dentist and his chair. He would not be afraid.

THE FRUIT OF MISSIONS— CONFLICT

(Continued from page 5.)

people's workers, as well as trained men and women from America to assist Africa in Christian fields of living, Dr. Phillips said "Africa needs everything that the colored people of the South needed at the end of the Civil War."

"In South Africa, the government can be counted upon to assist to some extent, but it is hampered through lack of trained personnel and finance. The government will help, but the initiative must come from outside. American missions have the confidence of Africans and government to a unique degree. If we will study our fields from the standpoint of the up-building of a total Christian culture, we can count upon being given freedom of action and such financial help as can be shown to be necessary. In Johannesburg, the government is contributing nearly $200,000 per annum to various schemes initiated or carried on at present with the co-operation of American mission workers. With respect to American government aid—the Point Four Program—our South African Government is a proud government and will never ask for a penny of such help from an outside nation."

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Relax With Max

For the last time. . .

For three years I have filled poorly the position as the editor of this page. I have enjoyed the opportunity of keeping in pretty close touch with our youth work. For most of this time I have been at Elon College, where I could pick up the news from our offices there. Now that I am a student at Duke Divinity school it is impossible for me to know what is going on. For this reason, I have sent in my resignation to Pattie Lee Coghill, hoping that an editor may be found who can do a much better job.

I would like to express my thanks to those youth groups who have been active and who have sent to me reports of their activities. Many other interested persons have sent me articles, jokes, and criticisms—all of which I greatly appreciated.

Please do not think that my quitting this job is because of my lack of interest in youth activities. It is rather because of my interest and the realization that someone should have the job who is closer to the center of our activities at Elon College.

I don't know who will be taking over, but I will suggest that each of us make a special effort to send him the news of our group. Our Pilgrim Fellowship has grown greatly during the last three years, and I'm sure that with the help of God it will continue to grow. May God bless you and your group always.

* * *

Let Us Pray

That we may be green—
Green enough to continue to grow,
And green enough that though we may bend
We will never break under temptation.

My Impressions of Moonelon

For two summers Mrs. Neese and I have had the opportunity of directing your activities at the Moonelon Convention Center. Our work there has been enjoyable and the visits of members from the convention churches has renewed many friendships.

It is regrettable that so few of the convention churches know what a heritage we have at Moonelon in the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Sellars. It would be difficult for me to describe fully the many advantages to be found at our convention center. Within the 25 acres of land is a spacious two-story house overlooking a large beautiful lake. The swimming pool, the largest in Alamance County, is forty feet wide and one hundred and twenty feet long and is kept filled with 72,000 gallons of cool spring water. The picnicing facilities are excellent. There are tables and benches which will accommodate about 100 people. Also, there is a large shelter under which is conveniently located a large wood range for out-door cooking and nearby are two places for weiner roasting.

It is hoped that the soft ball diamond, areas for horse shoe pitching and the tennis court will be ready by next summer. All these advantages await your enjoyment at Moonelon.

Dr. Scott and Dr. Robinson are to be commended for their untiring labors toward the development of such a wonderful convention center. However, your help is needed. I hope that the pastor's and laymen of our churches will give the project their wholehearted support. There is quite a bit of underbrush that needs clearing out. There is a need for a central dining hall and several cabins to be constructed. It is estimated that about $500.00 will build the type cabin recommended. Surely there are several churches in the convention that could be responsible for one cabin. It could bear the name of your church or some organization in your church.

I am very much impressed with the possibilities at Moonelon and only wish I could be there to do my part in its development. However, my physical condition makes this an impossibility. It is my prayer that this project will lay itself on your heart as it has on mine and let's develop it for a better convention fellowship and the growth of the Kingdom of God.

REV. J. L. NEESE,

So many of our prayers are unanswered because our reliance is counterbalanced by fear and unbelief.

SUGGESTIONS ON GOING TO CHURCH

(Continued from page 9.)

will prevail to make." This is true if we really pray.

IV.

There is an offering in the average service of worship. The thing that we stress here is that it is an offering and not a collection. The offering is as much a part of the service of worship as is the pastoral prayer. The oldest reference to worship in the Bible is to the bringing of an offering to God. In that spirit we include an offering in the service of worship as an act of dedication to the church, to the Kingdom of God. It is an expression of the share we want to have, and an expression of gratitude for the church, for all that it stands for, for all that it has meant to the world, to our families and to ourselves. What is money? It is condensed time, ability, skill, effort and labor. It is a part of us, it is that which we have earned, so we dedicate it to the Christian cause. All of us cannot go to India and speak their language and teach them and care for the sick there, but through our contribution we can be a part of that program through the missionary activity of the church. Through the offering I give I can transfer a portion of my life, my time, energy, and skill that have gone into this money, to the church and to the cause it represents. The offering is a real act of worship.

V.

We need not say much about the sermon here for obvious reasons. Preaching is not easy. It is an attempt to meet the needs of so many people of different ages, with different backgrounds and interests, with different problems and life situations. Every minister knows how far short he falls. Of course, the test of a sermon is what it makes us do, how much it stimulates our thought, how sincere an effort we make to apply its truths.

These are all elements that have been included in a worship service for centuries. There are certain generalizations that should be made.

(1) Going to church will have the most meaning if we do it regularly. We "do well the things we do often." It may seem at times as though it

(Continued on page 13.)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Stronger Churches—Better Communities"

LESSON VI—NOVEMBER 8, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Let your manner of life be worthy of the gospel of Christ."—Philippians 1: 27.

LESSON: Acts 2: 41-47; Philippians 1: 27-30; I Peter 2: 4-5, 9-10.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Psalm 122.

A Causal, Not a Casual Relationship.

The relationship between a church and a community is more causal than casual. For instance, go through a community in which the farm land is poor, in which outbuildings are in poor repair, in which the homes are unpainted and ill-kept, in which conditions are quite evidently not so good, and you will find poor churches. This does not mean that there are not good people in poor communities. It does not mean that people cannot worship God in a simple building. It does mean that better communities mean better churches. It also means that better churches mean better communities. The state of the church is reflected in the state of the community; but the church should improve the state of the community. Given good leadership in a small and even a poor church, great things can be done in and for the community.

Poor land means poor crops, poor crops mean poor incomes. Poor incomes mean inadequate income for a pastor and hence inferior leadership. Poor incomes also mean inadequate buildings, inadequate programs, inadequate resources.

Stronger churches mean better communities. The title of today's lesson is the truth.

A Growing Church.

The scriptures for today reflect some of the factors and the characteristics of the early church. At the beginning, of course, there was little if any formal organization, and no prescribed method of doing things. But there was a vital spirit in the life of the church, and it grew. And as it grew, there sprang up the need for organization and programs. And today's lesson gives an account of the growth of the church.

As a result of Peter's sermon, and of the power of the Holy Spirit, three thousand people were converted and baptized on the day of Pentecost. The little group of one hundred and twenty became multiplied twenty-five times in one day! To be sure that was exceptional. There is no record that it happened again. But it is the symbol of what biblical preaching and the power of the Holy Spirit can do in the life of the church. And there is significance in the statement of what the new converts did after they had been converted. They continued steadfastly in the apostles' teaching and fellowship, in the breaking of bread, and in prayers. They wanted to learn more about the Christian way of life, they had fellowship with the church, they attended Communion services, they prayed. These are all sound habits for new converts. By them and through them, they will grow in grace.

A Sharing Church.

There was need among the new members of the early church. Many of them were poor, and in some cases in need. The church was made up of a fellowship of those who care. Many of them sold possessions and goods and shared with their needy brethren.

Don't get excited, Communists! This was not communism. There was no evidence that they sold all their goods and possessions. They kept their own homes and the things that they needed for themselves. They simply pooled their resources and established a "Poor Fund" or a "Fellowship Fund," or whatever you may want to call the fund with which your church helps the unfortunate members of the church or the community. Furthermore, there is no evidence that the plan lasted very long. It was simply an example of the spirit of unselfishness and devotion of these members of the early church to their fellow-members. And it was the beginning of organized charity in the church. Or perhaps compassion or concern would be better words.

A Courageous Church.

Would you join the church if you knew that you might be thrown to the lions the next morning, or persecuted for your faith? These first century Christians did. As the apostle writes, it was given to them not only to believe on Christ, but to suffer for his sake. It took courage to be a Christian then. It often involved hardship. It was the hard thing to do.

There is danger of making religion too easy. Churches appeal to folks by advertising the fact that they have softly cushioned pews and air conditioning, and that people can worship God in comfort. Well there is no particular virtue in punishing one's self; but those first century Christians would have probably smiled a bit—in secret because they were too polite to do it to one's face—at the comparative ease with which we moderns worship, and at the ease with which folks become members of the church today. There are not many present day Christians who are suffering for their Christian faith. There are not many who are making any appreciable sacrifice for the church. There are not many who are running the risk of trouble and hardship by their faithful witnessing for Christ. There are not many who are really willing to stand up and fight against the giant evils of our day. How many, for instance, are willing to take a determined stand on racial equality? Or against the liquor traffic? Or in behalf of unpopular causes? The modern church needs grit as well as grace.

A Peculiar Church.

The King James version refers to the people of the early church as a "peculiar people"; or to quote the whole description, "a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, an holy nation, a peculiar people." And Peter goes on to tell why: "... that you should show forth the praises of him who called you out of darkness into his marvelous light." The church is peculiar in that it is different. It is supposed to be made up of people who have been changed by the Spirit of God—they have been born again. They are to be the light of the world, the salt of the earth. They are to show forth the excellencies of the One who has called them out of the darkness into the light. They are to walk worthy of their calling. They are to live differently. As strangers and pilgrims, they are to abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul, and to let their manner of life be honest among the Gentiles. The church of Christ is unique. It is different from any organization on the face of the earth. It is peculiar in origin—it came down from

(Continued on page 13.)

In Memoriam

VAUGHAN.

Mr. James Asa Vaughan, a native of Mecklenburg, County, Virginia, was born March 24, 1873, and passed away at his home on September 26, 1953.

Mr. Vaughan is survived by his wife, Mrs. Nora Newton Vaughan; four daughters, Mrs. Rosalie Daniel, Mrs. Nannie Bet Parker, Mrs. Edna. Miles, all of Nelson, Virginia, and Mrs. Melissa Elliott, Oxford, North Carolina; five sons, James M. of Dearborn, Michigan, William Patrick, Elmo, Lewis, and Nathan, all of Nelson, Virginia; 35 grandchildren and 12 great grandchildren.

Mr. Vaughan became a member of Hebron Congregational Christian Church, Nelson, Virginia early in his life and maintained his membership as a member in good and regular standing. Funeral services were conducted by his pastor, Rev. Mark W. Andes, and assisted by the local Baptist minister, Rev. Joe Sorrell. The service was held at Hebron Church, with burial in the church cemetery.

Our prayers abide with the family in this hour of need.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK

(Continued from page 8.)

In the very colorful formal opening, Mrs. W. B. Williams (our beloved Tudor) was selected from among the state presidents of our National Fellowship to carry our denominational banner, and was followed by our national president, Mrs. W. B. Buckham. After all the denominational banners, each state had a flag-bearer for its own flag. Mrs. Garland Spratley, president of the Eastern Virginia Conference, was honored with this duty for Virginia, and was followed by Mrs. J. D. Deal, the president of the Virginia Council of Church Women.

The large auditorium was well filled. The organ music by Mrs. Lois Wilson added much to the spirit of worship on this opening session, as well as throughout the entire convention.

Our denomination had one of the largest delegations there. Among those present were: Miss Helen Kenyon, who served as the parliamentarian for each session; Mrs. Douglas Horton, who was on the program and brought a report on "The Study of the Status of Women in the Church"; Miss Margaret Hargrove, our national secretary, who will be with us next spring for our District Rallies; Dr. Nels F. S. Ferre, who led us in our morning worship each morning; Mrs. W. H. Medlicott, of our Missions Council. Mrs. Harper Sibley, Mrs. Ross Snyder, Mrs. James D. Wyker, Pauline Frederick, and President Dwight D. Eisenhower, were some of the notables who spoke to us. The President of the United States spoke to the assembly on Tuesday morning.

The whole conference was a wonderful experience, with some very high moments of worship. We felt that Christ calls us to deeper fellowship.

MRS. RAY F. GORDON.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

(Continued from page 12.)

God; it is peculiar in nature—it is the body of Christ; it is peculiar in mission—it is to save all men and all of the man; it is peculiar in fellowship—it includes men of all races and religions in a bond of unity in Christ Jesus. It is an elect race—the called of God, a royal priesthood—bringing men to God and God to men, a holy nation, and a people for God's own possession. Here is the challenge of the church to every church member. Let us walk worthy of our high calling in Christ Jesus. Let us not be afraid of being called "peculiar" because we do not do some of the things that others do, or because we do some things that others will not do. It takes courage to be a Christian, a true Christian, in our modern world.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

SUGGESTIONS ON GOING TO CHURCH

(Continued from page 11.)

has little effect, but if one attends regularly through the years, the power of accumulation can make a tremendous difference in one's life.

(2) Going to church has value only as we do it sincerely. Early in most services we find a "call to worship." That's what it is—a call to worship. If we go to church to be entertained, the chances are we will be disappointed. If we go to criticize, we will find flaws. If we go to worship, we will find value. Jesus said, "God is spirit, and those who worship him, must worship him in spirit and truth." (John 4:24) We need to go to worship. We need something in our lives that reminds us of the things the world tends to make us forget. We need something that makes the eternal real, that deepens our faith, that challenges our best selves, that assures us of divine companionship.

(3) Of course, this all cannot be confined to Sunday. Those to whom prayer is real on Sunday are those who pray in solitude during the week. Those to whom the Bible has value in the service of worship are those who read the scriptures on other occasions. The test of worship is the life one leads. Those who strive to live their daily lives at their best, to be of service to their fellowmen, to live by faith, will find the hour of worship most valuable. They will also find that that hour of worship has value in enabling them to live their lives more effectively and on a higher level.

Inscribed over the door of a high school in western New York are these words, "Enter to learn, go forth to serve." We might well inscribe over the entrance to a church, "Enter to worship, go forth to serve." Each Sunday through the year we should enter to worship regularly and sincerely, as Jesus said, "in spirit and in truth." Then we should feel our kinship with those of all ages. It should be an hour in which the Eternal becomes real and his purposes find a place in our lives. Then we should go forth to serve, with new resolves to live lives of usefulness and helpfulness, with our ideals strengthened and our faith deepened, and with a new certainty of the Companion on the Way. "Where two or three are gathered in my name, there am I in the midst of them." (Matthew 18:20)

Collection Plate Fight on Crime

Galveston, Texas—A "collection plate" fight on organized crime in and around Galveston has been launched by church groups of the area.

The Rev. Harry Burch, spokesman for Protestant clergymen in nearby La Marque, said "we are going to call on all our congregations to give funds toward stamping out lawlessness in our county."

He said collections taken up at church services will be turned over to the Galveston County Citizens' Committee to give it needed financial support in its war on bawdy houses and gambling.

The Galveston Ministerial Alliance also voted to seek clean-up funds from church members. The Galveston financial drive has been set for September 27.

—Church Management.

The Orphanage
J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

I wish to ask all my friends and all the friends of the orphanage to be thinking about Thanksgiving season and what it may mean for the boys and girls here at the orphanage. We need the help and goodwill of every member of our churches plus the goodly number of folk beyond our own church lines. The task will be easy if enough people help. It will be easy if you who read these lines will take it upon yourself to do a little work for our Thanksgiving offering. Two things you can do. You can make a donation yourself, and then ask others to remember the orphanage during the Thanksgiving season.

The Southern Convention and five conferences have generously allotted November and December as "Orphanage months." During those two months the church's big job for the financing of the orphanage is to be done. This job cannot be done except with your help. With your help it can be done. What is more I have faith to believe that you will help and that it will be done. Ask your men's classes, your women's classes, your Sunday schools, your churches to "remember the orphanage" with a special offering during the Thanksgiving season. And ask some of your friends who may wish to make a donation to help a homeless child in gratitude for the fact that God has given them the privilege of living for and rearing their own to make a real thanks giving contribution.

You can count on me doing my best to help with this program. But I have so many things I have to do right here that I cannot give all the time I have to it. You must let me persuade you to help. Today I had to hear two school children explain why they played hooky from school. Couldn't a matron do that? Yes, and had. But this was a second offence. Today I was asked by some boys who are old enough to join the scouts if they might. It was a good time for me to talk with them, and to come up with the affirmative answer. Today I was asked by our builder of the Holt Memorial Chapel how soon could we get the last loads of brick on our grounds. Will the steel roofing supports be ready in a few days? There are dozens of questions which seem to work their way into my office, and problems a plenty. These all are a part of my task. So many questions are answered and problems solved by my faithful helpers I wish here to praise them, but they like to see me here as much as possible and they need my support and help. So I begin the day at 6:30 every morning and stay with it often till late at night. And sometimes when I should be sleeping or relaxing I am too concerned with the wellbeing of 84 children and their often over-worked helpers I cannot relax.

But just as the workers are faithful here I know the friends will be faithful out there everywhere, and this makes me glad. This helps me to go to my work for these children with an abiding faith and trust in the goodness of God. Every day somebody makes me happy with their donation. Every day somebody puts forth a helping hand. I want to see these reports climb. And I trust you to help me see it come to pass. Thanks for the gifts listed in this week's report. Help me make the report twice as much next week. Thanks to one and all.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR OCTOBER 22, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

- Mrs. Richard Haff, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
- John Hannah, Elon College, N. C., Clothing.
- Mrs. Mamie Miller, Elkton, Va., Soap.
- Mrs. J. E. Harrell, Holland, Va., Gloves and Coupons.
- Woman's Miss. Soc., Antioch Church, Harrisonburg, Va., Coupons.
- Mrs. Ester Jinkens, St. Paris, Ohio, Coupons.
- Circle no. 1, Woman's Fellowship, Liberty, Vance, Church, Coupons.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hutcherson, Cottonwood, Arizona, Coupons.

Mrs. C. A. Ballentine, Varina, N. C., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$11,999.99
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Wentworth	$ 90.00
	90.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Newport News S. S.	$ 12.00
Portsmouth, First	31.77
Windsor S. S.	10.00
	53.77
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Bethel S. S.	$ 5.48
Durham S. S.	28.24
Salem Chapel	6.56
	40.28
Western N. C. Conference:
Zion	$ 30.00
	30.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
New Hope S. S.	$ 19.98
Wissler's Chapel	17.00
	36.98
Alvin O. Jacobs	10.00
Total	$ 261.03

Grand total $12,261.02

Special Offerings.

- Amount brought forward $15,961.88
- Mr. & Mrs. E. T. Sanders, Burlington, N. C., in memory of George Isley $ 10.00
- Rev. W. B. Fuller 5.00
- Mr. & Mrs. Clayton Pugh, Winchester, Va. 10.00
- A Friend 5.00 || First Cong. Christian Ch., Roanoke, Ala. | 9.00 |
| H. O. Byrd, Suffolk, Va. . | 10.00 |
| Mr. & Mrs. Tom Zachary, Graham, N. C., in memory of C. R. Faucette .. | 5.00 |
| Philathea Class, Suffolk Christian Church | 5.00 |
| From two Friends, Richmond, Va. | 10.00 |
| Mrs. Nancy E. March, Holland, Va., in memory of Mrs. Edna K. Duke | 10.00 |
| C. H. Darden, Greensboro, N. C., in memory of Mr. | |

(Continued on page 15.)

MEMORIAL GIFTS
"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Pledges to Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

(Corrected to Oct. 19, 1953.)

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Antioch—E. J. Rohart	$ 343.00
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	106.00
Bethel—H. V. Harman	377.00
Dry Run—R. E. Newton	129.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton ..	211.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00

Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Harcastle ..	$ 872.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo ..	459.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark ..	200.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Bay View—.....	724.00
Norfolk: Christian Temple—W. Millard Stevens	5,330.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dollar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Harcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein ..	1,459.00
South Norfolk—O. D. Poythress	2,500.00
Suffolk—.....	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00

Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—.....	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—Carl Wallace	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	1195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	1166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00

Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ..	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:

Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder ..	$ 400.00
Lakeview—Curtis Young	82.50
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wiseman	3,292.00
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wiseman ..	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ...	1,057.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Union (Va)—Mark W. Andes ..	1,498.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ...	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

THE ORPHANAGE

(Continued from page 14.)

and Mrs. Boyce	25.00
C. H. Darden, Greensboro, N. C., in memory of Carter Hagan	25.00
C. H. Darden, Greensboro, N. C., in memory of Glenmore Stone	25.00
C. H. Darden, Greensboro, N. C., in memory of Britt M. Armfield ...	25.00
Harold E. Parker, Varina, N. C.	35.00
The Dorcas-Twiddy Class	25.00
Special Gifts	198.50
	437.50
Grand Total	$16,399.38
Total for the week	$ 698.53
Total for the year	$28,660.40

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:

(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church

By Secretary or Clerk

Address

..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

EXTRACTS FROM AN ADDRESS ENTITLED

"This is My Church"

By DR. RONALD BRIDGES

"The radicalism of Jesus was so sweeping and pure that it makes secular radicalism look puny and horrid by comparison," said Dr. Bridges, speaking Wednesday evening, October 21, before the Midwest Regional Meeting of The American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, of which he is president, Quoting from John Donne, "No man is an island entire in itself; every man is a piece of the continent, a bit of the mainland," Dr. Bridges his home town church, the North Parish Congregational Church of Sanford, Maine, as an island, but "not a floating island. It is a bit of the whole connected body of the earth, which means a part of the Universal Church of Jesus Christ. . . .

"My church is a lay church, and I am proud to be a layman standing before the throne of God with my fellow ministers and priests—not a meaner species who must stand in the rear of the throne room or in the vestibule. . . .

"My church is a radical church, and I say that with pride, even though I am also proud of being a conservative Republican from Maine. My church has accepted the mandate of our Lord that all things must be changed if we are to grow in grace and build the kingdom of God, and that no change can be complete and find favor in his sight until individual men and women have been changed to give themselves unreservedly to God. . . .

"My church is a teaching church. Jesus was called "Rabbi" and his disciples taught as well as preached. Whenever the church has been truly great, it has been a time when it taught, greatly, at home and in the congregation, in the market place, in the schools, and along the wayside. . . .

"My church is evangelical. It preaches and teaches Jesus Christ, in whom God was made manifest. My church is the Holy Catholic Church, not a collection of individual churches, not the aggregate of floating islands, but one. When I joined the church, my pastor made it plain to me that I had not joined the North Parish Church, but had joined the Church of Jesus Christ—The Holy Catholic Church in the North Parish, in Sanford, Maine."

HISTORICAL SOCIETY, 1955.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, NOVEMBER, 5, 1953

NUMBER 44

Thanksgiving Time is Orphanage Time!

Remember the Christian Orphanage Children

The Boys and Girls at the Christian Orphanage and Their Birthdays

It may be a surprise to some of you folks, but the boys and girls at the Christian Orphanage have birthdays just like all other boys and girls.

Is this little lady unhappy! If she is it is unusual for she is one of our most dependable girls. She has been here over 10 years and is in the Junior Class at Elon Consolidated High School. Jeannie Cook is sponsored by the South Norfolk Church, and they do a good job at it. They sponsor others here, too, and love it. Some very interesting results have come out of their kindness. One of the boys they sponsored until he graduated at high school last May has a good job with Burlington Mills and is a fine capable, worthy fellow, David Haith.

Barbara Jean Arnold	8-15-44
Clara Lee Arnold	4-3-46
Jo Ann Arnold	7-30-41
Raymond Arnold	7-14-43
Jo Ann Black	1-18-42
Ben Black	12-4-39
Roy Black	12-18-37
Billy Burgess	5-22-41
Bobby Burgess	5-22-41
Jimmy Burgess	12-27-36
Woody Byrd	8-17-45
Jeanie Cook	6-2-36
Hubert Cook	11-7-39
Frances Coggins	3-10-44
Joyce Coggins	3-5-46
Peggy Coggins	6-22-47
Brenda Crumpler	8-31-46
James Crumpler	4-25-44
John Crumpler	10-22-41
Larry Crumpler	4-22-45
Jean Daughtrey	4-28-37
Bobby Daughtrey	8-10-40
J. C. Davidson	10-8-38
Sandra Ferrell	4-5-45
Kenneth Ferrell	2-23-43
Angelee Haith	4-24-42
Ella Jean Haith	11-1-40
Woodrow Haith	8-16-37
Raymond Harvell	1-31-41
W. C. Harvell	10-16-37
Margie Hayes	5-2-39
Frankie Hayes	9-29-42

Larry Jones	1-8-44
Ray Kinch	10-22-37
Billy Lamberson	6-8-47
Laverne Mecimore	4-20-43
Garland Mecimore	1-13-47
Phyllis Morningstar	8-28-46
George Morningstar	11-23-42
Dewey Morningstar	10-4-44
Betty Oakes	7-4-44
Jeanette Oakes	3-2-49
Marjorie Oakes	7-18-40
Ruby Oakes	4-23-42
Alvis Oakes	2-7-47
Billy Proctor	10-7-44
Betty Jean Proctor	4-7-40
Marie Proctor	12-22-38
Brenda Proffitt	2-25-50
Roger Proffitt	1-24-49
Gerald Rash	5-31-47
Ann Rich	11-2-43
Wilma Rich	4-19-47
Kay Rich	8-2-40
Floyd Rich	9-23-41
Johnnie Rich	6-28-48
Jerry Rich	10-19-49
Frances Rowland	10-16-41

Roy Black is trying to let his "crew cut" grow so he can comb his hair like his younger brother Ben. But however his hair is he has a keen mind and a ready, co-operative spirit. Everyone here is fond of Roy, and so are the people at Hanks Chapel. Their friendship, their contributions toward his clothes and their invitations for him to come to see them vacation time and some other occasions give Roy a sense of belonging and security that is developing him into a well-rounded boy. And what is said for Roy can be said for many of the boys and girls here. This job here requires the help of every church and friends beyond our churches. Who can estimate how much good may be done by giving a boy or girl a good home under good influence and good training?

Betty Jane Rowland	11-4-44
Larry Rowland	8-3-40
Robert Rowland	11-20-38
M. B. Rowland	9-17-43
Peggy Rowland	1-16-40
Jo Ann Rowland	1-16-40
Clara Spicer	1-2-48
Dorothy Spicer	9-10-43
Janis Spicer	11-30-42
Jessie Spicer	6-7-45
Charles Spicer	2-17-41

Dorothy Taylor	6-27-40
Donnie Taylor	12-18-47
Garland Troxler	6-6-48
Melvin Troxler	2-20-45
Raymond Troxler	10-23-43
Wallace Troxler	11-22-46
C. A. Ward	6-13-41
Charles Ward	11-7-42
Betty Ann Ward	8-6-37
Helen Watkins	6-27-41
Nancy Watkins	2-18-40
Rachel Wilkins	2-21-42
Jackie Wilkins	1-26-44
Betty Lou Wilson	2-17-39
Cecelia Wilson	2-26-41

TRY!

I'll go to Jesus, through my sin
Like mountains around me close;
I know His courts, I'll enter in,
Whatever may oppose.
Prostrate I'll lie before His throne,
And there my guilt confess;
I'll tell Him I'm a wretch undone
Without His Sovereign grace.
Perhaps He will admit my plea,
Perhaps will hear my prayer;
But if I perish, I will pray,
And perish only there.
I can but perish if I go—
I am resolved to try;
For if I stay away, I know
I must forever die.

—William Jones.

There he is! That barefoot boy with cheeks of tan! In the immediate background is part of a large alfalfa field with the dairy in the distance. He is one of 43 boys whom you are supporting with your contributions. Classes and organizations have a good time "sponsoring" such boys and giving them a two weeks vacation in summer. If classes would take a child and furnish his clothing it would help us a great deal. However, if they do not wish to do as much any lesser sponsorship would be much appreciated.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

"The Congregational Christian Layman and His Devotional Life"

PROGRAM FOR NOVEMBER

SUGGESTED HYMNS: "Have Thine Own Way, Lord," "He Leadeth Me."

SUGGESTED SCRIPTURES: St. Matthew 7, 33-34.

PRAYER: Gracious Lord, cleanse our hearts and minds of all that is unworthy. Help us to know how to live and then give us courage and strength to so live each day. Amen.

MEDITATION:

Jesus is Lord of all or not at all.

More people today are reading devotional literature than ever before. Congregational Christian folk are buying and reading Daily Devotions while others are purchasing The Upper Room, Power, or hundreds of other books or pamphlets like them.

Families are finding it a new adventure to have the blessing at every meal, all holding hands and saying one aloud, sometimes singing one or taking turns and everyone saying one of their own choosing.

With a new interpretation of the Bible available, sales of the greatest book ever known are steadily rising. New bible classes are being formed and groups are meeting for the study of the Bible. No estimate is known of the people all over the world who are enrolled in Bible study courses, through correspondence and otherwise.

God can be and is very near and dear to people. By spending a few minutes in meditation each morning, a difference is noted during the day. Even when unforeseen difficulties arise during the day, a minute of complete silence and relaxation, or a silent prayer to God, will bring help that the world knows little of or can otherwise give.

When a man goes into his closet alone, retreats into the presence of God whenever possible, he is never the same again. There is a transforming power in the presence of God. Prayer does make a difference.

QUESTIONS FOR DISCUSSION:

1. How can God be made more real to men through Devotional Life?

2. What is the true meaning of worship?
3. Why has worship been limited to Sunday mornings at 11 o'clock?
4. When should the presence of God be most felt or sought for?
5. Why does it help to study the devotional life of other men?

* * * * *

Personal Note

Tuesday, October 27 was an extremely important day in the life of the editor of this column. Ned Daniels Danieley arrived at 10:00 p. m. and weighed in at slightly more than eight and a half pounds. Mrs. Danieley and Ned are both getting along very fine and it is hoped that the column editor may soon get his feet back on the ground.

J. E. D.

Their home had been burglarized, and the occupants had been somewhat remiss in reporting the matter to the police.

"Surely your suspicions were aroused," the police officer quizzing the lady of the house said, "when you returned home, to find every dresser draw pulled out, and the contents strewn all over the place."

"Not at all," she replied. "I just thought my husband had been looking for a pair of socks."

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $ for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

How Does the Orphanage Serve the Churches?

AN EDITORIAL BY DR. JOHN G. TRUITT

The Christian Orphanage was authorized by the Southern Convention in 1904, and opened its doors for the reception of children in 1907. Since that time it has served 708 children. These children have come in the main from Christian church communities, and now from Congregational Christian church communities and homes. At the present time there are 84 children in the orphanage.

The orphanage is the property of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc., and is under the direction of a Board of Trustees elected by the convention. Serving on the board at present are: V. R. Holt, president; C. D. West, vice-president; C. W. Gordan, secretary; Mrs. Mark W. Andes; W. J. Ballentine; D. L. Boone; L. E. Carlton; Dr. J. P. Cross; L. R. Jones; Dr. H. B. Kernodle; Mrs. J. H. McEwen; Russell V. Powell; I. H. Vickery; L. P. Waldo, Jr.; and T. W. Walton. This board hold regular meetings in September and February.

How does the orphanage serve the churches? Frequently it answers a churches plea to care for a homeless child, or children, left in its community. Members of the church ask their pastor to see if he can get the homeless child in the orphanage. The compassion of the church is aroused for the little one left by death or desertion. The church does not have to provide a home for the homeless but it desires to do so. They know the circumstances and with their pastor bring these facts to the orphanage, and the child is given a home. Through their contributions the churches provide a place to meet such a need. All the churches thus join together to do what one church would find it difficult to do.

Not every church in the convention has had to appeal to the orphanage to receive some homeless child in its community. Besides standing ready to help that church with the problem of a homeless child the orphanage cultivates by the very nature of its appeal a spirit of charity and benevolence in the members of the church. Parents of children teach their own children to be kind and charitable to others. They realize there is real character-building in such teaching. From the kindergarten to the adult class in the church school the orphanage furnishes a good teaching point in kindness to others, especially the needy. It is a christian teaching and springs from all that is best in the understanding of the faith and teaching of the Scriptures. "A father of the fatherless, and judge of the widows, is God in his holy habitation," and when the church fulfils its obligation to its homeless ones and its needy it is acting divinely. The orphanage serves by calling attention to this truth in every church and in many communities.

To be sure there are many other avenues through which charity may be shown and lessons learned. Many of them are a part of the business of our churches in the efforts to bring the Kingdom of God on earth, but one would have to go far to find a more appealing object of charity than a little child who turns to the churches for help. Says the Christ "In as much as ye do it unto one of the least of these ye do it unto Me."

In many communities and churches men and women reared at the orphanage are making good members of the churches and good citizens in their communities.

Activities at the Christian Orphanage

The Christian Orphanage Has an Outstanding Dairy Herd

Running the Farm, Dairy and Garden is a Real Business at the Orphanage

The running of a farm and dairy entails the expenditure of funds. But while the net income from our farm and dairy is not as much as we would like it to be, we find that it is a veritable training ground for the older boys. "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," and on the other hand "nothing to do," no responsibility and no chance to help make their way in early training is also disastrous. A group of boys doing jobs well within the reach of their ability is one of our most valuable assets. They themselves like it. And also by having our own farm with its vegetables fresh from the gardens, corn for eating and canning fresh from the fields, chickens and eggs fresh from the poultry yard, veal and beef, pork fresh and cured, and whole milk fresh from the dairy help to keep our children healthy, happy and properly fed. Booster feed for the dairy and for little chickens and laying hens run into a sizable figure but it is more than offset with the results. Total operating expense for farm, gardens, dairy, poultry, hogs and cattle in 1952 was $25,228.86: This included salaries, wages, fuel, feed, seed, fertilizer, replacements and repairs of machinery, purchase of live-stock and insurance.

On the following report the item, "Vegetables—estimated" is probably low because we do not accurately keep count of every basket of turnip greens, garden peas, tomatoes, etc., as they are daily gathered for the kitchen. Enough checking has been done to show us that that figure is not high enough, otherwise accurate measure and weights have been used.

650 bu. Corn at $1.85	$ 1,202.50
2,355 bu. wheat at $2.10	4,945.50
2,140 bu. oats at $1.00	2,140.00
175 bu. sweet potatoes at $2.50 .	437.50
2,450 bales straw at $.40	980.00
140 tons corn silage at $9.00 ...	1,260.00
815 bales oats and alfalfa hay at $1.25	1,018.75

3,650 bales lespedeza hay at $1.00	3,650.00
520 bales soy bean hay at $1.25 .	650.00
1,600 lbs. lespedeza seed at $18.00 per 100	288.00
25 bu. Irish potatoes at $2.00 .	50.00
9,801 lbs. dressed pork at $.30 .	2,940.30
510 lbs. dressed veal at $.60 .	306.00
786 lbs. dressed beef at $.45 ..	353.70
340 gals. Canned tomatoes at $.65	221.00
370 gals. canned peaches at $.35 per qt.	518.00
2,696 doz. eggs at $.60	1,617.60
89 hens at $2.00	178.00
210 fryers at $1.50	315.00

(Continued on page 8)

Puzzle picture! Find six boys and the dairyman in among these mostly Holstein milk cows. Boys who get up at 5:30 to go to the milking barn so that they may get the job done and the place all scrubbed up before time to get ready for school get to know what fun it is to have a job to do and to do it. Some of our boys are just about expert at the job shown above. Most of the milking is done with electric milkers and the milk is handled according to A-grade standards.

Religious Activities at the Christian Orphanage

The children of the Orphanage have more opportunity for worship and spiritual guidance than most children living in their own homes. They attend Sunday School and church at the Elon College Community Church. They take part in the Willing Workers groups and Pilgrim Fellowship.

The Orphanage also has its own program of religious activities. Each day is started with a devotional period led by a matron just before breakfast. At each meal the children join in a group blessing. Twice a month the older boys and girls gather at Johnston Hall for their regular worship service. They have hymns, prayers, poems and meditations. Dr. Truitt is now bringing a series of messages on children of the Bible. Other ministers and religious leaders visit the campus from time to time to speak to the children at these worship programs. We look forward to the time when the Holt Memorial Chapel will be completed. We will then have a special place set apart for our worship and the programs in the Chapel will be in the proper setting of a church service.

Boys who are going out for basketball. Left to right—Robert Rowland, Woodrow Haith, Roy Black, W. C. Harvell and Ray Kinch.

Two years ago this past spring, a Religious Emphasis Week was started here. Rev. Clay Ferrell was the minister who brought the messages to the children that first year. Last year Rev. Fred Register was here and held afternoon services for the Baby Home children and the regular nightly meetings for the older boys and girls. Mr. Joe Stephenson led the singing for that group of meetings. We feel that these meetings have been a blessing to children and workers and we hope they will be continued for the benefit of all.

MELVA FOSTER, Director of Religious Activities.

The Irrigation Project

Three summers have seen lack of rain to make corn and gardens. This summer was worst of all. Last summer (1952) we were unable to can any corn because the corn was so nearly a failure. And there were not sufficient vegetables for canning. This summer the corn was almost a total loss, as were the gardens. In spite of the drought some beans and a little early corn, and some tomatoes were produced for the kitchen.

We have six acres of land especially set aside for gardens and expecting that this summer surely there would be rain special preparations were made to have the best gardens and corn ever. We put time, labor, money out for fertilizer, seed, plants, etc., trying to do our best with the belief minute. This stream is right near the dairy barn and will give sufficient water. The lake will be about four acres in size and can be tapped for the six acres of gardens, 15 acres of permanent pasture, and several acres of crop fields nearby. It will cost $1,800.00 to build the lake according to State specifications making safe and ample spillways and overflow. The government will stock the lake with fish free of charge. The water will be pumped with tractor power already on hand. Necessary additional equipment and the setting it up will be around $3,000.00. When it is completed and in use we have sufficient water for gardens summer long, green pastures for our dairy and beef cattle, corn, tomatoes, and beans for kitchen and canning; and if the demand is like it was this summer enough for sale to bear half the cost of the equipment the first summer it is in use. Besides this our mild supply was badly cut this summer. We had more than enough for use, but we failed to sell nearly as much as hitherto. So it looks like the project might pay for itself in a couple of summers and more than pay for itself in the years ahead.

J. G. T.

Mrs. Glover, Matron of the Baby Home and some of her children.

that it would pay off. Nearby members of our Board of Trustees were looking forward to good success with our gardens, hay and corn crops. And already I have told you the results.

By the Board of Trustees it was decided that irrigation was the answer, after our farmer, Mr. Wagoner, had visited irrigation projects in several places, seen the results, and estimated the cost. As I write these lines a dam is being built on one of our streams, which stream has run all this summer more than 15 gallons of water per

A man cannot get these Divine blessings if he does not want them. You take a hermetically sealed bottle and put it into the sea, it may float about in mid-ocean for a century, surrounded by a shoreless ocean, and it will be as dry and empty inside at the end as it was at the beginning. So you and I float, live, move, and have our being in that great ocean of the Divine love in,

Children in the Fall Program.

Christ, but you can cork up your hearts and wax them over with an impenetrable cover, through which that grace does not come. And you do do it, some of you.

—A. Maclaren, D. D.

News Flashes

The Alabama Conference met on Tuesday and Wednesday, October 27, 28, with Antioch Church, Andalusia, Alabama.

The twenty-first annual session of the East Alabama Association met on Wednesday and Thursday, October 14, 15, with Lanett Church. Rev. Joe A. French is the pastor of the host Church and Moderator of the Association.

The Rev. Tucker G. Humphries wishes to use the good pages of the SUN to express his appreciation to Mr. Leonard Wray and Mr. Joe Saunders as they retire from the Deacon Board and to Mrs. John Briggs as she retires as president of the Women's Auxiliary and to Mr. John Dockery as he retires as teacher of the Baraca Class. These good people must have the satisfaction of a job well done and the benediction of their heavenly Father—Well done thy good and faithful servant. Mr. Boyd Waynick, and Mr. Clifford Hall replace Mr. Wray and Mr. Saunders on the Deacon Board. Mrs. Waynick is the new president of the Women's Auxiliary. Mr. William Oakley is the new teacher of the Baraca Class.

Activities in Reidsville

On Tuesday night, October 13, the Women's Auxiliary of the Reidsville Church gave the old folks of the community their annual "Old Folks Party." More than a hundred ladies of the Women's Auxiliary and their guests gathered in the dining room of the church, which was beautifully decorated in a fall motif. The program included singing of old songs; a skit or two presented by the pastor, his wife, and Mrs. Briggs; a song by Mr. Walter Scott. Then prizes were presented to the oldest man and the oldest woman present and the couple married the longest. After this part of the program the pastor of the church, Tucker G. Humphries, who acted as master of ceremonies, invited the boys and girls, and the boys and girls meant the guests present who were sixty-five years of age or over, to participate in the program by reciting a poem, telling a story, or telling an experience of yester year. Delicious refreshments were served after benediction had been pronounced, and the hostesses and guests mingled together for a visit as they wandered down memory lane. It was a delightful evening, and all left saying it was good to have been in God's house on such a happy occasion.

* * *

We have in the Reidsville church a group of boys and girls nine, ten, and eleven years of age known as the Willing Workers group. This group is under the leadership of Mrs. Humphries, and the program always consists of worship, study, and play. The first meeting of this year a party was planned. The party began with a hay ride, which ended at the parsonage with an outdoor supper followed by games and play time. There were thirty children present. It was a good start for a good organization for a good year.

* * *

The last week in September the Rev. Clyde L. Fields was the preacher at Reidsville's fall revival. Mr. Fields brought some inspiring messages and was welcomed home by his many friends of yester year.

* * *

Sunday, October 4, was Rally Day in the church. Mr. Walter Anderson, former prison director of North Carolina, was the Sunday school speaker. At the eleven o'clock service Dr. L. E. Smith of Elon College installed the new officers of the church and rededicated all old officers and teachers of the Sunday school as the church began its new year. At the service ten new members were received into the fellowship of the church and the sacrament of holy baptism was administered to twelve.

* * *

On the press at this moment is the first issue of a new church paper in which various activities of the church will be featured from time to time, and the membership of the church kept abreast with the activities of the church and news items.

* * *

Plans are underway now for a fellowship supper to be held at the Lawsonville Avenue School on Saturday night, November 14. The Deacon Board, along with the pastor of the church, believes it is good for a church family to break bread together and laugh together. The program for the supper includes no speeches, but skits will be presented, good singing will be featured, and fun will be the order of the evening.

A young man, who sent the following definition of the word "money" to a London paper, won a prize. It may be well for us to memorize it. "Money is an article which may be used as a universal passport to everywhere except heaven, and as a universal provider of everything except happiness."

Above is a scene taken on the Elon College campus showing part of the annual "Christmas Party" given for the children at the orphanage. The students see to it that Santa Claus is very generous and every child at the orphanage made very happy.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The Sustaining Fund

Over the earth comes a gleam of hope. At present the morrow seems cloudy and filled with gathering darkness. The convention's expressed interest in the financial support of its own and only institution of higher learning gave to those responsible for its life and conduct a bit of hope. It is always hopeful when a large group of people express their interest in a given undertaking. When that expressed interest fails to materialize, the hope is dimmed and the way does not seem clear. Of course, there is always the possibility and the hope that the assistance promised will come. It is only delayed. The delay may cause anxiety, but if it comes, the delay will not be serious. The constituent supporters of Elon College are abundantly able to meet its needs and send it on its way rejoicing. The Bible is not in error, nor is it excessive in its request of a tenth of a Christian's earnings. The Christian himself is in danger when he withholds for himself that which justly belongs to his God. In his withholding, he denies himself of blessings financially, spiritually, and otherwise. "Bring all of your tithes into the storehouse," saith the Lord, "and try me therewith and see if I do not pour out a blessing such as there will not be room to receive. Give and it shall be given unto you—good measure, press down, heaping up and running over." No man can rob God without robbing himself. May we be given the faith and the courage to discharge our Christian duty to the full.

Below is given a correct statement by conference of the churches' contributions to the Sustaining Fund for the current year; also the churches which have put the Sustaining Fund in their budgets. These figures certainly are indicative of the church's interest in the financial support of the college. Of course, the year is not closed and surely there will be more churches contributing to the Sustaining Fund.

Eastern N. C. Conference:
Church	Paid
*Beulah
*Chapel Hill	$ 118.00
Henderson	325.00
Lee's Chapel	40.00

Morrisville	22.00
*New Hope
*Sanford	238.00
Southern Pines	52.71
*Wake Chapel	290.00
Youngsville	15.00
	$ 1,146.71

Eastern Va. Conference:
Barrett's	$ 5.00
Berea (Norfolk)	275.00
Burton's Grove	2.00
Dendron	30.00
Franklin	375.00
Holland	325.00
*Holy Neck	341.00
Isle of Wight	45.00
Johnson's Grove	34.00
*Liberty Spring	358.00
*Mt. Carmel
Newport News	507.50
*Christian Temple	854.00
*Rosemont	528.00
*Oakland	450.00
*Richmond, First	100.00
*South Norfolk
Suffolk	61.00
*Union (So.)	250.00
Union (Surry)	26.00
*Windsor	150.00
	4,716.50

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Hines Chapel	$ 105.00
Ingram	187.00
Monticello	92.00
*Pfafftown	54.00
Pleasant Grove	248.00
Tryon	331.00
*Union (Va.)	300.00
*Winston-Salem	100.00
*Beverly Hills	60.00
	1,477.00

Western N. C. Conference:
*Asheboro	$ 164.00
Hank's Chapel	239.00
Liberty	75.00
Providence Chapel	12.90
	490.90

Virginia Valley Conference:
Joppa	$ 8.00
Linville	31.00
Mt. Lebanon	5.00
Timber Ridge	50.00
Winchester	100.00
	194.00

Total	$ 8,025.11
-------	-------------

* Indicates churches with Sustaining Fund in budget for 1952-53.
* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

Three of our conferences of the Southern Convention have already met. I trust that payments on apportionments for the college from these conferences are not all in by any means. To date, the amount is nearly $4,000 short. Due to existing financial conditions at the college, it is essential that the full amount be received.

The college hopes sincerely that the two conferences yet to meet in annual session—the North Carolina and Virginia Conference and the Western North Carolina Conference—will raise their apportionments in full. These two conferences are the nearest to the college. In fact, near enough for students to live at home and drive to and from the college which reduces the cost of their education materially.

Elon College is delighted to serve and it is depending upon the church to assist it financially that it may continue to serve.

Previously reported $ 9,965.77

Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia	$ 11.00
Martha's Chapel	2.00
New Elam	20.00
Pope's Chapel	4.00
Pleasant Hill	25.00
Southern Pines	63.00
Youngsville S. S.	15.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Antioch	$ 12.00
Spring Hill	18.89
Eure	54.00
New Lebanon	10.00
Waverly	140.68

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Belew Creek	$ 5.00
Concord	55.00
Burlington, First	296.08
Carolina	27.00
Hines Chapel	30.84
Liberty S. S.	26.59
Mt. Bethel	43.00
Haw River	107.00

Western N. C. Conference:
Bennett	$ 10.00
Spoon's Chapel	20.00
Antioch (R)	10.00
Ether	30.00
Needham's Grove S. S.	20.00

Virginia Valley Conference:
Bethel	$ 12.00
Mayland	3.00
Newport S. S.	23.14
Winchester S. S.	8.34
	1,102.56

Total to date $11,068.33

RUNNING THE FARM, DAIRY AND GARDEN IS A REAL BUSINESS AT THE ORPHANAGE

(Continued from page 5)

Sale of eggs and chickens	137.30
Sale of pigs	1,936.66
sale of pork	307.00
Sale of Cows	460.43
Sale of milk	6,207.41
8,047 gals. milk used at orphanage at $.60	4,828.20
Vegetables (estimated)	1,050.00
350 loads cowpen manure at $1.00	350.00

Total income for 1952 $38,398.85

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Compliment from a Gentleman

The Rev. Walstein Snyder, pastor of our Beverly Hills Christian Church in Burlington, recently sent in an article about that society for this page. The letter accompanying the article interested me greatly, and I think it will you, too:

"We feel real good about the progress this group has made during the past year and feel that they will continue to grow in strength and size. No little credit for this progress goes to the fine set-up in organization that you women have in the Convention. It certainly will be wonderful when our laymen's work becomes as highly organized as the women's work. Maybe 'we' can catch up then!"

Sometimes those who work at jobs in the Women's Convention feel that their efforts are in vain—this letter will make them feel better.

And here is the society report:

Beverly Hills

During the past year our missionary society at Beverly Hills has made splendid progress. We have been able to meet all the achievement goals set up by the Woman's Convention with the exception of one, and that was the giving of a Life Membership or Memorial. Also we gave our support to various phases of the program of our local church. We gave to the Building Fund this month a check for $300.00. We also sponsor the Cradle Roll Department of our Sunday School. Then, too, we are in charge of the eleven o'clock Nursery Hour.

This year we are trying something that is new to our group. We are dividing our society into two circles. We feel that in this way we can make even more progress. For as we were last year our society had become so large it was difficult to work as efficiently as we ought. Our group feels in this way we can promote better attendance and give more people something to do in our total society.

The officers of our Woman's Missionary Society are as follows for the new year: President, Mrs. H. J. Hefke; vice-president, Mrs. T. A. Vincent; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. R. F. Kirkpatrick, Jr.; superintendent of nursery, Mrs. J. C. Rhodes; chairman of the eleven o'clock nursery committee, Mrs. Howard McKinnty; chairman of Friendly Service, Mrs. Zeb Lynch; chairman of Family Life, Mrs. J. O. Gregory; representative to the Burlington Council of Church Women, president of the society; Circle No. 1 chairman, Mrs. Norman Burkt, assistant, Mrs. Robert Lynch; secretary-treasurer, Mrs. W. C. Perry; Circle No. 2 chairman, Mrs. J. L. Faulkner, Jr., assistant chairman, Mrs. Holland Phillips, secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Melvin Smith.

* * * * *

New Executive Board Meets

The newly elected officers of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference met in the parlor of our

A Prayer.

When We Feel Ourselves to Have Been Wronged

Lord Jesus Christ,
Who hast commanded us
Not to return evil for evil,
But to pray for those who hate us;
Enable us by thy blessed example
To offer a true prayer
For those who have wrought us harm.
If in anything we have given offense,
Teach us to confess our fault,
That a way of reconciliation may be found.
Deliver them and us from hatred;
And may the peace of God rule
In all our hearts for evermore. Amen.

(Found in "A Booklet of Prayers" published for the recent National Assembly of United Church Women.)

church in Chapel Hill on Tuesday, October 22. The Chapel Hill women, of whom Mrs. J. R. Ellis is president, did a wonderful job of entertainment, serving lunch in the hut, where delicious food was enhanced by attractive table and mantle decorations of fall flowers.

The general purpose of the meeting was to discuss the duties of each officer, carry on business of the Conference, and make plans for the new year. Seventeen members were present, which was an excellent attendance. The assistant superintendent of the Asheboro District, Mrs. Winfred Bray, and Mrs. Frank Apple, representing the Henderson District, were invited guests. The pastor of the host church, Rev. Richard Jackson, and Rev. W. B. O'Neill, newly elected president of the Eastern N. C. Conference, were guests at lunch.

We had an excellent meeting, and will share with you in later issues of THE SUN some of the reports for the past year, as well as plans for this year.

MRS. W. T. SCOTT,
President.

* * * * *

Special Guest in Convention

Miss Alice Huggins, veteran missionary of the American Board to China, is a special guest in the Southern Convention at this time. "Detained" in China for fifteen months as a "guest" of the new regime, Miss Huggins has personalized information to give about life in China under Communist domination. Not only a missionary, but an author, she wrote the well-received book The Red Chair Waits while in concentration camp. Engagements are being arranged by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill for this distinguished guest, who is speaking this week at the Western North Carolina Conference, in Albemarle on Friday evening, at Asheville on Sunday morning, our new Hendersonville Church on Sunday evening, and will be at the North Carolina and Virginia Conference at Tryon next week. She spoke in Chapel Hill last Sunday morning, launched the new Bethlehem Women's Society on Sunday evening, and spoke at our Burlington (First) Church on Monday.

It is hoped that many of our people will avail themselves of the opportunity to hear her speak at the Conference sessions, for this is a rare privilege for us.

* * * * *

Compliments to the Valley

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, in a "P. S." on a letter concerning Miss Huggins' itinerary, says, "I'm just back from the Valley of Virginia and the Woman's Conference there was a very lovely one this year. Well planned in every detail by Mrs. Cecil Whitlock, and a beautiful day, and held at the lovely new Bethlehem Church. I thought it was grand. They will, no doubt, send a write-up to you for THE SUN. The Young People's Rally on Sunday was one of the best I have attended for a long time, with a large representation and many young people's groups participating in the program. It was held at the Mayland Church."

We are intrigued by this much and shall hope to have reports of these meetings published in detail in THE SUN. Just send them in, and Max Vestal and I will do the rest!

A Page for Our Children

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

Conference meet at my church last week. When I say "My Church" it could be Newport News, Portsmouth, Richmond or Southern Pines, for they are all "My Church." On Sunday mornings I sit in my pew, waiting for the service to begin, and think of each of them in turn, their buildings, people and problems and pray that they may have a rewarding day. But this time the meeting was at Newport News. Conference is such an exciting time with reports and messages and greetings. We were glad to have them with us.

Thursday I went to Richmond for a different meeting and I had the privilege of ridding with Miss Pattie Lee Coghill and Miss Alice Huggins, formerly of China and an author, and what fun we had! Miss Huggins grew up in China where Dr. Charles Shelden, who wrote In His Steps, was pastor. She recalls such interesting things about him and his work and has vivid childhood memories. She proves a point of mine—children should go to church! They never get as tired as grown-ups think and in later years there is such a rich experience to recall. It was a fine ride we had in the much needed rain.

Thursday night was spent in the home of the Ashby Truslows of the Richmond church. Mr. and Mrs. Truslow have been leaders in the Richmond church orchestra which is an outstanding musical organization and an asset to the community. Some of the church people came to visit and we had a pleasant time.

Friday was spent at the Virginia Education Association meeting and the old city was jam packed with over 5,000 school teachers. Does that scare you boys and girls?

Sunday found me in my pew again for the Thank Offering Service that our women gave. The money is going to the Phillipines and it brought memories of the visits Dr. and Mrs. Frank Laubach and their son, Bob, paid us at Richmond. It was hard to think what the Moros people are like.

"My Church" at Southern Pines has a wonderful minister who has come for a little while. He is Dr. Oswald McCall who has had a full life of fame and success. It is with pleasure that I think of him there in our pulpit.

The reason I have told you so many of the things that I have done lately is the number of people at conference who said, "Tell us about yourself, please." And I haven't said a word about going Trick or Treating or teaching school either!

* * * * *

"A Child's Indoor Play"

By M. LOUISE C. HASTINGS.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

We have a dollhouse in our kitchen which my daughter fashioned for a little six-year-old. It was made from two grapefruit crates, adding a beaverboard roof, and it is painted, papered, curtained, and furnished. Every child who comes to our house plays with it, for a boy appears to enjoy it as much as a girl does. It is a very profitable diversion to have in any home, since it provides pleasant entertainment for a visiting child, so that the parents are free to talk with their host and hostess.

Shirley, my granddaughter, in her home, worked out a very educational play. Her mother provided her with a large piece of beaverboard, which she placed on the playroom floor. She made a cardboard house and garage, and then she proceeded to lay out the grounds with crayons. She drew walks and fences, stone walls, and gardens. It was an extensive project and covered half the floor. By means of pictures, sheep, cows, horses, dogs, and cats lived in their appointed places. From magazines Shirley cut out all sorts of machines for the cultivation of the farm. Also, there was a haying field with a father and his children getting in the hay.

In winter the beaverboard was covered with thin sheets of cotton batting. Stone walls appeared here and there, and those wall were not mere drawings made with crayons as the earlier ones had been. Those were "real." Each "stone" was formed separately of plasticine and carefully fitted into place, so, of course, these walls stood up above the cotton-batting snow and looked quite natural. The last time I saw my granddaughter at work she was making picket fences of used matches, to set up for spring and summer scenes. These, she told me, would be needed in addition to the stone walls. I gave her a box of empty spools. These she planned to use as foundations for trees, placing branches in them and making an orchard and a pine grove. This kind of play will last her for a long time.

A sand table is enjoyed by children of all ages. The older children like to make scenes with the sand similar to Shirley's farm, though usually they are much less pretentious. As boys and girls study geography, a sand box may become an expression of whatever they read. One box may be an Icelandic presentation, another, perhaps, an Indian wigwam village. A good deal of the activity that each scene would suggest would be changed or added to day by day, as new facts were learned.

Have you ever noticed how differently children conduct themselves when playing alone? Some talk out loud with every move they make. Some play silently. It is an interesting study to watch them.

And then there is a table-top play. If Father will make side boards—a framework around a table, not too high but high enough so that the toys cannot be pushed off the table—this will provide opportunity for hours of quiet play. One of these table-top outfits that I had set up each winter for several years had cotton-batting snow for the table covering, with a mirror, ten by six inches, laid flat, for a pond of ice. That was all, except for the pipe-cleaner dolls dressed up in suitable winter clothes. Occasionally, one child would merely change the position of a doll as she passed the table. Sometimes, as soon as the children came home from school, they would stop for a few minutes to play before they went out of doors again. This was just fragmentary play that went on day after day.

FOR THESE REASONS:

I will stand by the church; I will give her my sacrificial devotion; to her I will dedicate a just proportion of my means that her influence may be enlarged; that her spirit may be dominant in my community and her gentle ministry known to earth's farthest ends.

Christ loved the church and gave himself. I will love the church and give myself. —William H. Boddy.

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

Youth Groups of Epsom and Henderson Meet Together

The youth groups of the Liberty Congregational Christian Church of Epsom and the First Congregational Christian Church of Henderson meet together September the 13 to elect new officers for the coming year. They are as follows: president, Miss Ann Paschall; secretary, Miss Margie Lee Newman and treasurer, Alton Foster.

In the fall of 1952 these two groups planned to hold joint meetings the second Sunday night of each month, the meeting place alternating. The Women's Missionary Circle of the host church entertain with refreshments at the close of the business session.

Although we have had no extensively mission projects, we have contributed annually to the Moonelon Foundation. We have also treated the local County Home on special occasions. When the Franklin Center was developed we made waste baskets for the rooms and contributed an assortment of linens for their use.

Our programs have varied from time to time. For the past season we have studied the religions. Some of our latest topics have been "What is Judaism," "What Does it Mean to be a Christian," "The Birth and Growth of the Congregational Christian Church" and "What is Christian Science."

We feel that the added pleasure and fellowship of combining our meetings has stimulated interest. In fact, we have been so successful in this operation that we recommend it to all the Pilgrim Youth Fellowship groups.

MARGIE LEE NEWMAN,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Valley Conference Youth Fellowship

Seventy-four young people and twenty-one adult advisors gathered at the Mayland Church, Sunday October 11 to consider the purpose and work of the Valley Conference Youth Fellowship. The program was planned to include participation by as many as possible. Wissler's Chapel young people gave a presentation of the play, "Moab Hartlie" followed the group's examination of the pamphlet, "The Time to Build Churches is Now." After this presentation of the Building Loan Fund several of the youth groups gave money to be applied on their own church's declarations.

The program was also designed to illustrate the three Pilgrim Fellowship commissions—Faith, Action, and Fellowship—which were next described by Miss Pattie Lee Coghill. The Work Day for Christ was discussed; the proposed Southern Convention Youth conference next spring was approved; and the next conference rally was suggested for January in Winchester with a missionary emphasis.

In the evening the Concord youth group led the rally worship service; the Bethel group deminstrated a program from "Youth Fellowship Programs"; and one member of each group took part in a Bible Bee which was won by Janice Miller of Antioch. The program closed by an installation service led by the Rev. H. V. Harman at which a quartet from Linville sang. The new officers are:

President, Donald Litten, Quicksburg; secretary, Iris Gail Allen, E. Monmouth St., Winchester; treasurer, Betty Showalter, Route 4, Harrisburg and reporter, Leroy Rogers, Elkton.

Commission Leaders are: Faith, Jane Short, Route 3, Luray; Action, Betty June Stroop, Route 1, New Market and Fellowship, DeLois Sandridge, McGaheysville.

* * * * *

Dear Fellow Contributor:

Congratulations on such an alert, readable, and helpful column in THE CHRISTIAN SUN! You are indeed doing a fine job.

For what they are worth—if anything—I might advance the following suggestions for youth work today:

1. The arrangement of a series of meetings or talks on The Pilgrim Faith, or the history of our Congregational Christian heritage, and the development of a series of slides and tape and disc recordings of talks on the same by some of our regional and national leaders. Taping or otherwise recording some youth forums or rallies might also help in some sections.

2. The sponsoring of a regional youth rally and seasonal project or work camp to undertake some specific work, like assisting a blind student or handicapped child.

3. The use of youth deputations in parish evangelism and visitation. If some unresponsive adult is visited by a couple of enthusiastic adolescents, the result can accomplish electrifying results under the proper conditions.

4. The arrangement of a personalty clinic—having sessions of youth with psychiatrists, social workers and others who can detect and deal with various types of difficulty, such as inferiority complex and the like.

5. Youth sponsorship of a Prayer Chapel in some room of the church, to be available at many hours and just before all services.

6. Serving as special assistants to the pastor and the janitor.

7. Furnishing a schedule of musical and other entertainment for nearby hospitals, convalescent homes and other institutions.

Of course, I know that it is relatively easy to come up with suggestions of this kind—and much harder to implement them and get them into action.

Here, in a downtown situation, we have our grave problems—for youth dwell suburbanly!

I have been interested in your work because I have a background of long service—even from being a Christian Endeavor member and union officer, and later conference and chapel speaker and youth institute leader. I do hope that together we can all attack these problems that face us and do something vital for young people.

If any of us can participate in any meeting or project, we should deem it a great honor.

I spent August in Lake Junaluska community and visited 14 colleges and universities in and near North Carolina during the last few months. I really came to know a bit about the Tar Heel State.

Best wishes to you!

Faithfully yours,
RICHARD K. NORTON.

* * * * *

Dear Max:

I am sending another writeup that I promised you. I was proud of the
(Continued on page 13)

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Good Stewards of God's Gifts"

LESSON VII—NOVEMBER 15, 1953

MEMORY SELECTION: The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof; the world, and they that dwell therein.
—Psalm 24:1.

LESSON: Psalm 24:1; Leviticus 25:18-22; Malachi 3:7-10; I Cor. 16:2.

DEVOTIONAL READING: II Corinthians 8:1-9.

The A B C's of Stewardship

"The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof, the world and they that dwell therein." Stewardship is a complex thing, but it has a few simple, basic principles. The first is that God is Sovereign Owner of all things. "The earth is the Lord's, and the fulness thereof." The land is His. The sea is His. The mines are His. The orchards are His. The forests are His. The fields are His. Everything is His. Not only is the earth His, but the fulness thereof is His. He not only owns the land and the water, but He has first claim on the fruits and products thereof. Unless a man understands this truth, he can never be a good steward.

The second principle is that man is steward of all that he has and is. God owns everything. Man simply possesses or holds in trust or stewardship. God simply commits into our hands what we have to be used by us for Him and for our fellowmen. We use the words "my" and "mine" rather loosely. They all too often obscure the principle of stewardship involved in God's ownership. And if God is the owner, and man is the steward, it follows that man must give an account of his stewardship to God. There will be a day of accounting. Everyone of us must give an account of his stewardship to God. Men and nations will be called to account for what they have done with what God has entrusted to their care.

The Stewardship of the Soil.

The Hebrews had a seemingly strange custom. They would cultivate a piece of land for six years, and then they would allow it to lie fallow, they would not till it, for a year. It was a recognition by them, that their land was a sacred trust given them by God. It was a recognition by them, that soil or land, like machines and men, tend to become weary without rest. Any good farmer rotates his crops. The Hebrew farmer gave his soil a rest every seventh year. And strangely enough, it worked. The words from Leviticus in today's lesson assured the people that if they obeyed the divine law of tilling the fields only six years in succession, they would have enough and to spare in the seventh year. There is no record in the Bible that there was any shortage of food caused by the fields lying fallow the seventh year. Whatever the lesson teaches, it does teach that the land is a stewardship, to be rested and to be replenished, to be conserved and be kept productive. Conservation of the soil and natural resources is not only sound economics; it is sound religion.

Concerning the Tithe.

A lesson about stewardship would naturally have some reference to tithing. In today's lesson the prophet Malachi boldly accuses the people of the nation of robbing God. He is specific in his indictment—they have not brought their tithes to God's storehouse. Tithing, the giving of one tenth of one's income is clearly the Old Testament standard of giving. It was designed not only to insure sufficient resources for God's work, but to develop God's workmen. God was seeking not so much the gift as the highest welfare of the givers. And if tithing was the standard under the Old Testament, under the Law, it would appear that the standard under the New Testament, under grace ought to be at least as much. There is a striking statement in this passage from Malachi. God dares the people to put him to the test. "Prove me now herewith" says God, "if I will not open the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Men are richer, not the poorer by tithing.

Perhaps a personal testimony might be in point here, given not in the spirit of boasting, or with any claim to superior goodness. But the writer of these notes has been a tither since his first year in Elon College, thirty eight years ago. There has never been a year since that time when he has not given at least a tenth of his earnings to the work of the Kingdom, and as a matter of fact, it has always been more than a tenth. This habit has been one of the most satisfying and rewarding ones in his Christian experience. There have been times when it was difficult to set aside a tenth of his income to be given away, for instance when "times were hard" and when he and his wife were putting their two children through college. But the habit has paid splendid dividends, not so much in material wealth, as in satisfaction, and in the joy of having a part in the building of the Kingdom of God. The time to start tithing is when one begins to earn. It is difficult for a man to start tithing when he is established in business, or making a big salary or "big money"—it is difficult but not at all impossible, or even infrequent. The church would do well to enlist tithers among its young folks starting to earn money. And any person who puts God to the test will find that he is not slack concerning His promises.

Concerning Giving.

Although Paul's words, "Upon the first day of the week let each one of you lay by him in store, as he may prosper, that no collections be made when I come" were written concerning a special fund he was collecting for the poor of Jerusalem, the principle applies with equal force to the Whole Christian enterprise. "Upon the first day of the week"—giving should be regular and systematic, not spasmodic and dependent on the whim or mood of the giver. Furthermore it should be worshipful—the first day of the week was the Christian Sunday, and giving should be a part of worship. "Let each one of you lay by him in store." Giving should be personal. Everybody and anybody who handles any money of his own should give something. Let each one, and every one give. Giving should be purposeful. Provision should be made for giving, some plan of giving should be adopted. Let a man lay by him in store, let him make definite plans to give just as he has to make plans to meet his other obligations. "As he may prosper"—giving should be proportionate. God is fair. He does not expect the man who makes a little to give as much as the man who makes a lot. But he does expect us to give proportionately. There is something wrong when a man spends more for

(Continued on page 14)

Franklinton Center Yesterday, Today and Tomorrow

By Mrs. J. T. STANLEY

Message Given at North Carolina Woman's Conference

It is a pleasure to share with the officers and members of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference something of what Franklinton Center has meant to the Negro churches of North Carolina and Virginia.

First of all we want to say for all who have availed themselves of the opportunities for spiritual growth at Franklinton Center that we appreciate the interest you have shown is us and our work there.

We are indeed grateful for your Friendly Service gifts, the gifts from your Daily Vacation Bible Schools, your financial donations and for those of you who have given yourselves as teachers during our Women's Retreats and for other helpers you have secured and recommended. You will be interested in knowing something of the results of all you have put into the work at Franklinton Center.

One of our ministers expresses it in the words of the song, "Lift Him Up"—"And I, if I be lifted up will draw all men unto me." It would be encouraging to know how many in-service ministers have been endeavoring to grow that they might be better able to share the task of lifting up Christ, and to get recruits for the task by attending the Winter Institutes and Summer Conferences. This minister has in his own household two sons who are following in his footsteps and have dedicated their lives to the Christian ministry.

During the Franklinton Summer Conference of 1952 another son of a minister found himself and decided that he could best help as a minister. Two young women of the 1952 and 1953 conferences have made plans to enter school for religious training.

Reports from the Women's Leaders who attend our Conferences, Retreats and Sunday School Training Institutes are indicative of the fact that they are including in their church programs that which is being taught and demonstrated at Franklinton Center.

Today we are transferring our interests, our spirit of unity, hopes and ambitions to Bricks, N. C., where more adequate facilities will lend themselves to the type of program which has been in the making since Franklinton Christian College became a religious training center.

There is one great need at Bricks which was pointed out in a report made by Miss Leila Anderson who had charge of our Sunday School Teacher's Training Institute. "The workshop section met in the schoolhouse. It was a great improvement over other years but still has handicaps as a permanent answer. Many chairs had to be moved outside or into a hallway to give us room. Workshop equipment from the public school got mixed too easily with ours. Water had to be brought a long ways. A good road would solve the problem of heavy dews and rain causing wet footgear every morning, but the distance is still far from other parts of the campus. Our group hopes that the old church can be fixed, with classrooms included which are planned for workshop procedure as well as other types of class use."

Quite as necessary as space for such training groups as was emphasized by Miss Anderson is the need for a Congregational Christian Church at Bricks. A survey conducted by Rev. Percel Alston who worked as a Student pastor during the past summer shows that: "50 per cent attend church regularly, 27 per cent occasionally, and 23 per cent seldom. Average distance to and from church, 23 miles. Services held per month, 1. Twenty-four persons felt the need for a church in the community; two persons did not feel such a need. One hundred per cent pledged to cooperate in the organization of a church."

The women of the N. C. State Conference have also deemed it necessary to help renovate the old school chapel to be used as a church so that there can be a definite religious tie-in with the Bricks community. Their 1954 Friendly Service gifts are to be cash donations toward this project.

What the name of the new training center will be has not been decided, but we will rejoice in our task of making it a place of Christian training for those who would serve "In Love and Gratitude."

DEAR MAX

(Continued from page 11)

young people for their Work Day for Christ. The part which pleased me the most was their attitude toward the day. They sang and talked and not one of them complained about the work. The minister lined up the jobs and they would come back when they got through one job and ask for another. It was wonderful to see them work so well together. I asked the secretary of the Senior High Fellowship to write it up for THE CHRISTIAN SUN and I add it below in her words:

Work Day for Christ at Rosemont

The Junior and Senior Youth Fellowship of Rosemont Christian Church observed the Work Day for Christ on October 24.

Our church is now in the stages of being remodeled and not yet completed, so we decided to have a new kind of Work Day for Christ by working for our own church and in that way save the cost of labor.

We had eighteen young people to attend and worked ninety-one hours all together. On this basis, we helped the church a total of $68.25 at 75c an hour. A delicious luncheon was served the young people by the counselors. We not only accomplished a good deal of work, but enjoyed it thoroughly.

DONNA LITCHFIELD,

Secretary.

I hope your work is going fine. I continue to keep up with all my friends in and around Elon through THE CHRISTIAN SUN and by "the grape vine" when I can. Keep up the good work.

I attended the Dedication Service of the new Educational Building at Union, Franklin yesterday. It was a very nice service. Clyde Fields is doing a grand job there. Those on the program included Melvin Dollar, Jesse Dollar, Dr. Scott, Millard Stevens, and Rev. R. E. Brittle (in the order of their appearance on the program, I believe). Dr. Scott delivered the sermon and it was very good.

Give my best regards to all my friends when you see them.

Most sinserely,

RUTH H. DUNN.

Nearly three out of five Americans belonged to a church or other religious body in 1951, the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U. S. A., has announced.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

DEAR FRIENDS:

By this time I have attended three of our Conferences' annual sessions. They have been inspiring meetings, and a fine group of pastors and delegates are doing good work with the business of the church. They have each provided a good record of past achievements and made excellent forward looking plans for the next year's work. It has been a joy to meet so many friends both in the ministry and the laity. I have been greatly impressed with the attendance upon these conferences, and the attention to business which has been given.

At each of these conferences Supt. W. T. Scott has done a fine job presenting the over-all picture of the progress and needs in our many fields. His grasp of the work of each of the conferences of the Convention and his insight into all phases of the work increases. He has not asked for this kind of comment or any kind of comment on his work at all but as I see it he is doing a good job. No one knows how much he undertakes, nor how much energy and devotion is expended in his efforts to give aid in every quarter of the church. I believe the church public appreciates far more than we tell him the fine job he is doing. These things I know we all appreciate.

Dr. L. E. Smith has made and is making a good record for the college. He brings to bear upon his task his unquestioned devotion to the church and the full measure of his seemingly untiring energy. He is cordially received everywhere and is appreciated by the church for the outstanding job he has done and is doing in one of the most vital places of our denomination. He needs and deserves more than praise. The college needs everywhere the love and devotion that marked that of the founding fathers when they gave most liberally and loyally to its establishment.

Martin Garren and many others who have associated themselves with him in the National Building and Loan campaign of our denomination are doing a great job, and it is hoped our churches will make a good showing when the records are completed in this matter. Every age and generation has challenged the church. Today is no exception unless it be in the breadth and might of the challenge.

It is a good time for all followers of the Christ to stand up for their church and give themselves unstintedly for its growth and progress. We have much for which to be thankful and I have come from our conferences encouraged. The loyalty and devotion of everyone is apparent. I pray we may do even better in the days ahead.

The Orphanage needs your help. Little children here will suffer and our institution will suffer but for your faithfulness to it. It is earnestly hoped that every church and Sunday School will rally forward to one of the most liberal offerings this Thanksgiving time. I sincerely believe we are doing a good job for every child here and I humbly pray that the response to our Thanksgiving appeal will be great. Thanks to all for every good contribution you make and every good word you say, and there are many, for the Orphanage.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR OCTOBER 29, 1953.

Commodities for the week.

- Mrs. Rena Maude Iseley, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
- Mrs. R. C. Jarrett, Hampton, Va., Clothing.
- Mrs. J. H. McEwen, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
- Mrs. J. H. Johnson, Norfolk, Va., 50 copies of "The Upper Room."
- Business Girls' Circle, Pleasant Ridge Church, Coupons.
- Mrs. R. L. Gilliam, Sr., Burlington, N. C., Coupons.
- Pleasant Grove Miss. Soc., South Boston, Virginia, Coupons.
- Nettie Blythe Circle, Hunterdale Christian Church, Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

- Amount brought forward $12,261.02
- Eastern N. C. Conference:

Hayes Chapel	$ 5.00
New Elam	12.54
Wake Chapel	46.00
Youngsville	15.00
		78.54
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Concord	$ 10.39
Haw River	13.95
		24.34
Western N. C. Conference:
Bennett	$ 5.00
		5.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Mayland	$ 4.00
		4.00
Total	$	111.88
Grand total	$	12,372.90
Special Offerings.
Amount brought forward	$	16,399.38
Mrs. Rena Maude Iseley, Burlington, N. C., ...	$ 5.00
W. L. Burke, Burlington, N. C., in memory of George Williamson	5.00
New Hope Christian Ch. Roanoke, Alabama ...	2.63
		12.63
Grand total	$	16,412.01
Total for the week	$	124.51
Total for the year	$	28,784.91

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(Continued from page 12)

tabacco than he gives to the church and the Kingdom, and thousands of Christians do just that. The same thing is true of many other things for which people spend money. A man's giving ought to be fair, it ought to be in proportion to what he spends for other things which are for personal indulgence or luxuries. By a little self-denial many a person could give splendid sums to the church and the kingdom. "That no collections be made when I come"—

Continued on page 15)

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt
Christian Orphanage
Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $..... as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name.....

Address.....

Pledges to Church Building Loan
Fund Campaign
(Corrected to Oct. 19, 1953.)

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Antioch—E. J. Rohart	$ 343.00
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	106.00
Bethel—H. V. Harman	377.00
Dry Run—R. E. Newton	129.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton	211.00
Newport—R. E. Newton	426.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardcastle	$ 872.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Bethlehem (Nans.)—R. E. Brittle	2,040.00
Burton's Grove—J. W. Madren	153.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark	200.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Bay View—.....	724.00
Norfolk: Christian Temple—W. Millard Stevens	5,330.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dollar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein	1,459.00
South Norfolk—O. D. Poythress	2,500.00
Suffolk—.....	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littikin	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—.....	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—Carl Wallace	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00

Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00	Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowder-milk	300.00	Tryon—Orville H. White	*250.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00	Union (Va)—Mark W. Andes ..	1,498.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:		Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Burlington:		Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder $	400.00	Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00	* Contribution.
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wiseman	3,292.00	† Paid in full.
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00	SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00	(Continued from page 14)
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00	giving should be preventative. If
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00	people give as they ought to, there
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00	would be no cause for always asking
Lakeview—Curtis Young	82.50	for money. There would be enough
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00	and to spare.
Mt. Zion—Thomas D. Sutton ..	600.00	Based on "International Sunday School
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00	Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00	Christian Education, National Council of the
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman	364.00	Churches in the U. S. A.
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING
LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church

BySecretary or Clerk

Address

..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

Goal $60,000 THE CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE Goal $60,000

The orphanage offers you an opportunity to invest in human life!

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, NOVEMBER, 19, 1953

Elon College Library
NUMBER 45

The Time to Build Churches is Now!

Because . . .

1.--America Is Growing

Our country is in a period of the greatest population growth in its history. The Census Bureau reports an increase of 200,000 persons every month, or 6,666 a day.

In 1950 there were nineteen million more of us than in 1940 — an increase equal to the total population in 1940 of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New Jersey and New York.

Estimates for 1950-'60 indicate thirty million more, or equal to the total population, in 1950, of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

New millions need Churches and Sunday Schools. These millions need new homes, which mean new and over-crowded communities; probably unchurched or inadequately churched people.

2.--America Is on the Move

Over seventy million people moved between the years 1940 and 1950. Of these, twenty-eight million moved far enough to change church relationships, and thirteen million changed their home state. This is the greatest mass migration in our history. One-half of us are not today living where we were in 1940. There are more people living in unchurched and inadequately churched communities today than at any other time in our history.

3.--People Want and Need Churches

The Church Building is basic. The Church Building houses the vital forces of religion. Out of its doors come the men and women who maintain our system of free education, our democratic way of life, our community services and welfare agencies, and our mission of mercy and aid to all the world. The percentage of church membership to our total population is now the highest in our history—58%. Yet there are more unchurched and inadequately churched people now than ever in our American history. THE

(Continued on back page)

News Flashes

The Temple in Norfolk, Virginia, will hold its Thanksgiving Service as a joint service with the other Park Place Churches on November 26. The worship program will be held at the Knox Church, and Dr. Millard Stevens will preach the Thanksgiving sermon.

The monthly meeting of the Eastern Virginia Conference Ministerial Association was held in Suffolk on Monday of this week. The speaker of the program was Rev. Roy C. Helfenstein of the Richmond Church. He gave a review of Elton Trueblood's latest book, The Recovery of the Family.

The Suffolk Christian Church is most fortunate to have Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter as their guest minister for the months of November and December. Dr. Potter is Past Moderator of the General Council, Past President of the American Board and Dean Emeritus of Hartford Theological Seminary. He is a world traveler and lecturer, a great preacher, and a good man.

"Our Laymen's Sunday talks were all so good this year, I thought they ought to be shared with our Southern Convention friends." So writes Dick Jackson, from Chapel Hill; and we agree with him that they are well worth printing. We are offering our readers one of these articles, "God and Caesar," in this issue. The writer, Edward Lane Reticker, is the assistant director of the Institute of Government, the University of North Carolina. The other articles will follow.

THE SUN's managing editor, who, at the request of the Board of Publications, has also been serving as interim editor, was painfully injured in a fall four weeks ago, and was confined to his bed until last Sunday by a sprained and splintered ankle. He is back on the job part-time this week. He wishes to express his regrets for the delay in publishing of the last two issues, to express his thanks to the office force who carried on without either editor or managing editor to direct them, and his appreciation for the many words and acts of kindness he has received.

Palmyra Christian Church Plans Revival Meeting

Palmyra Christian Church, located two miles southeast of Edinburg, in the Virginia Valley, has arranged for revival services with Rev. Clyde O. Koon, a beloved former pastor as the guest speaker. These special services will begin on Sunday evening, November 22 at 9:30 o'clock and continue, beginning at the same hour, for eight days. A ninth service is scheduled for Sunday, November 29, at 11:00 a. m. The pastor, Rev. Ralph M. Galt, will assist in the services.

Special music has been arranged. The Woods Chapel Young People are planning to bring a Thanksgiving worship program as a part of the revival service on Thursday, November 26. The Wissler's Chapel Youth Choir will furnish several special numbers on Friday evening, November 27. There will also be solos by Miss Ezaline Nicholson, Miss Betty Carper, and others, at the other evening services. The public is invited.

The Christmas Fund

Each year our Congregational Christian churches pay tribute to the aged Veterans of the Cross through their gifts to the Christmas Fund. This is a noble tradition which makes possible relief from countless burdens for those who no longer are able to help themselves. After reading their letters of appreciation and gratitude one is humbled by their courage and devotion. To give a "cup of cold water" at just the right time transforms a physical gift intended for the body to a gift that enriches the soul.

Last year 6,746 gifts were received by the Ministerial Relief Division from individuals and churches. They came from 41 states, Hawaii, Puerto Rico and the District of Columbia. These gifts totalled $121,054.46, which was the largest Christmas Fund ever received by more than $10,000. Out of this, checks were sent to 776 ministers or their widows in 45 states, Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the District of Columbia, Canada, England, Norway and the British West Indies. Readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN may be interested to know that of the 776 Christmas checks, 23 (3 per cent of the total number) went to ministers or widows in the Southern Convention. Inasmuch as the total list of Southern Convention ministers reported in the Year Book is just about two per cent of the total

(Continued on page 8)

Oakland Sunday School Observes "Wilber" Darden Day

Sunday, November 1, was designated as "Wilber" Darden Day" at the Oakland Christian Sunday school, in honor of Charles Wilborn Darden who had been superintendent of the Sunday school for nearly twelve years. At his own request, he retired from the office, and asked the Nominating Committee to select a successor. This, in itself was a very gracious act, on Mr. Darden's part, and was prompted by his interest in, and his love for the Sunday school.

The program was brief, but impressive and inspirational. Mr. Mills E. Godwin, Jr. who was in charge of the service asked Mr. Curtis Griffin, a former superintendent to escort Mr. Darden to the front of the church, where they stood together during the service. Mr. Godwin paid rare tribute to Mr. Darden's character and service, and then presented to him an attractive scroll, appropriately worded, and neatly framed. He also presented on behalf of the Sunday school, a lovely silver pitcher, suitably engraved, and a basket of lovely fall flowers from his step-mother. Mr. W. Kass Wagner, also a former superintendent then offered one of the most moving prayers this writer has ever heard. Our hearts will be warmed upon every remembrance of this simple, but sincere tribute to a good man and a faithful servant of the Master. The Scroll of Appreciation reads as follows:

In Appreciation.

"Charles Wilborn Darden, Sr. was born near Chuckatuck, Nansemond County, Virginia on November 2, 1891, the son of David Franklin Darden and Emma Gayle Darden. As a young boy he first attended Sunday school at St. John's Episcopal Church, at Chuckatuck, and early in life began to attend Sunday school and worship services at Oakland Christian Church. He later became an active and influential member, serving as Sunday school class officer, member of the choir, member of the Board of Deacons, and for eleven years and ten months as superintendent of the Sunday school.

"The members of the Sunday school and church at Oakland wish to express their sincere appreciation for his efficient, loyal and unselfish service. His devotion to his church and its Sunday school has claimed first place in his life. His faithfulness, consecration, and strength of character

(Continued on page 8)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Eastern Virginia Laymen Hold Fall Rally

The laymen of the Eastern Virginia Conference held their annual Fall Rally at Berea Church, Great Bridge, Virginia, on Sunday afternoon, November 15. G. C. Mann called the meeting to order at 3:40, and presided. After a song service, led by W. H. Baker, there was a short worship service in which three ministers, the Revs. E. T. Farrell, Clyde L. Fields and Ellis N. Clark, took part. E. E. Waterfield welcomed the laymen on behalf of the local church.

After a brief business session, those present were divided into four groups for group discussions:

Group 1, O. F. Story of the Suffolk Church, chairman, discussed "The Best Way to Get New Members to Feel at Home in the Church and Become Active Members."

Group 2, Harold Stalnaker, Newport News, chairman. Subject, "How to Increase Participation in the Local Church Conference."

Group 3, B. L. Sawyer, First Portsmouth, chairman. Subject, "How Should the Laymen's Fellowship Function in the Church?"

Group 4, Joe Byrum, Damascus, chairman. Subject, "What Can We as Laymen Do to Increase Church Attendance?"

The fellowship reassembled, and four-minute reports were received from each group, after which there was an intermission for 30 minutes.

At 6 o'clock the fellowship reassembled in a dinner session. The invocation was made by G. R. Kilham, and all enjoyed a bountiful repast. After dinner and special music, Mr. J. L. Byrd introduced the speaker for the occasion, the Rev. Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, who is serving as supply minister at Suffolk. A short song service followed Dr. Potter's address, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. James Madren.

* * * * *

Walter Graham to Speak Before W. N. C. Layman's Group

"Christian laymen around the world have a big job ahead of them today and they are taking a renewed interest in the daily application of Christian principles," says Walter

A. Graham of Pembroke, Kentucky, Congregational Christian layman, attorney and Executive Director of the National Laymen's Fellowship of the Congregational Christian Churches. Mr. Graham will speak at the rally of the Western North Carolina

WALTER A. GRAHAM

Laymen's Fellowship, in the New Market School on Highway 311 near Sophia, N. C. November 21. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p. m. All laymen of the conference are invited to be present.

Mr. Graham is the first full time lay worker with men that the Congregational Christian Churches have (Continued on page 7.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colelough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195...

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Thoughtful Churchmanship

By RICHARD K. MORTON

Thoughtfulness can greatly increase the happiness and effectiveness involved in church work. I should like to offer here a few suggestions in this field.

Church members having bits of information of importance to the minister, for instance, will help by not choosing to give them to him in a rapidly moving line he is greeting after church. He should not hold up the line—and his mind and hands are busy with other concerns at that time. A telephone call during the week is one way out. In trying desperately to retain unassorted pieces of information, a minister may forget or garble them.

Also, church folk can help a minister by acquiring a directory of officers and information sources most often consulted, so that they do not write or call or visit the minister on matters more directly to be handled by others. For instance, in one church the board of trustees had officially designated one official to be in charge of the use of the building—and yet members would constantly make this request of the minister, forcing him to relay this request to the proper authority.

Most of us have weekly church bulletins, which are passed out to all by the ushers—and sometimes are mailed out in advance by the church office. Is it impertinence to suggest that these be read—or at least glanced over? Again and again, regular churchgoers will claim that they knew nothing of a meeting or responsibility or activity, and yet there the announcement was, right in the bulletin! We all ought also to learn when the deadline for bulletin news is, and respect it. Often we have had trouble with those who present notices about memorial flowers given for Sunday. So often these come on Saturday—and the bulletin went to press on Thursday!

In working with our organizations and committees, moreover, we ought to get our notices into the mail at the proper time. Very often, I have requests for public or pulpit announcement to come to me on Monday—and the matter should have been available for announcement the day before!

The matter of the elusive and vital church key is another one full of vexations. If the parsonage is near-by, the parsonage family may be expected to be at home, day or night, ready for the unexpected call from someone wanting to get into the church. In all fairness, I think we should try to relieve the parsonage family of unnecessary calls for this purpose, see to it that folk regularly having this rightful request have keys of their own, or designate times when the request will be made.

In ordering materials in the name of the church, also, the person ordering should give his name and identification, so that later the proper treasurer can properly deal with the bill. Sometimes people delivering materials to the church do not show judgment about when they come to the church, so that it is wise to let a business concern know when the church will be open.

I have known postal men, bakers and dozens of others to bring something to our church at 7:30 a. m., or say at 5:30 o'clock on a Saturday afternoon, when—unless by special arrangement—no one is likely to be at the church.

Persons knowing of important dates or events ahead should check with the church office or the pastor to make sure that none of these are overlooked. How many times church groups would have arranged some observance or recognition, if they had only known of the matter in time!

In making request for a pastor to call, be sure to try to give him all the needed data—the full name and correct address of the persons involved, etc. So often we do not check this, and insufficient or inaccurate data creep in.

If you are secretary of a group and the body votes a certain action, be sure to notify the persons concerned of this action. Once we had our trustees name a man chairman of a committee, and not for three months did he know that this action had been taken!

It is also important that if you plan to use certain equipment or rooms or to undertake any special activity, that persons concerned be notified. We cannot expect the janitor, for instance to prepare properly to serve meetings of which he knows nothing.

Thoughtful churchmanship simply involves trying to think ahead, to think of others and their problems and needs, and to be thorough enough to cover the details of any project we are working on. We might plan a meeting in a room at a certain time, and then find this interfered with another group's supper, the choir rehearsal, etc.

If we are more thoughtful, we can have happier as well as more effective churches.

God and Caesar

By EDWARD LANE RETICKER

Assistant Director, Institute of Government, U. N. C.

It is my sincere belief that religion applies to all of life, to everything that men do. I would like to talk a little about one part of life in which religion is having tough sledding—in which, in fact, religion is in disrepute. I mean government and politics.

In a sense, I suppose it all goes back to one of the best known stories in the New Testament, the one about Jesus and the coin. It happened in the last week of Jesus' life. Certain men with ulterior motives approached Jesus and asked him a loaded and leading question. "Master, we know that thou art true and teachest the way of God in truth; neither carest thou for any man, for thou regardest not the person of men. Tell us therefore, what thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar, or not?" But Jesus perceived their wickedness and said, "Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites? Show me the tribute money." And they brought unto him a penny. And he saith unto them, "Whose is the image and superscription?" They say unto him, "Caesar's." Then saith he unto them, "Render therefore unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and to God, the things that are God's."

Like many of the words of Jesus, these have found various interpretations. Dr. Fosdick says that this was Jesus' way of telling the Zealots, the nationalistic super-patriots of their day in Israel, that they need not look to him for a leader of their revolution—that his revolution was spiritual. But Matthew and Luke say that the Pharisees sent the questioners to Jesus in the hope of tricking him into a treasonable utterance. In this light Jesus' answer may seem a shrewd evasion, a sort of claiming of the privilege against self-incrimination. Albert Schweitzer believes that Jesus was saying that such things as money and taxes were unimportant because, as he taught, the world was going to end within a year. Under the circumstances, they couldn't matter very much.

It remained for Tom Paine, the Englishman whose pamphlets fired the American Revolution, to give the phrase one of its most important modern meanings. In Connecticut, Paine used "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and to God, the things that are God's" as a powerful argument for the separation of church and state. While it is at least doubtful that Jesus was thinking in terms of the First Amendment to the American Constitution when he answered his devious questioners, his words helped in the fight to establish the principle—a principle that has proved beneficial to both church and state.

It seems to me that the only thing wrong with the principal of separation of church and state is that it has been degraded and perverted into an entirely different principal, the principal of separation of religion and politics, the absolute divorce of government and morality. I doubt that anyone has stated this position more bluntly than Mr. Nehru, the Prime Minister of India, who said a few weeks ago, "Religion is all right when applied to ethics and morals but is not good when mixed up with politics."

Well, what is politics when it is not mixed up with religion, ethics, and morals? It can only be one thing, another name for power—government founded on power with power as its goal. In the Twentieth Century we have had plenty of opportunity to observe pure unmixed politics in action. The Kaiser, the Treaty of Versailles, Hitler, the extermination of millions of people, the development of government by torture and intimidation into an exact science are all chapters in the modern history of this kind of politics. What more proof do we need that politics unmixed with ethics and morals is the politics of catastrophe and destruction.

Who is responsible for the separation of religion and politics, of government and morality? We are. We are when we say that politics is a dirty business and we wouldn't want our children to get into it. We are when we vote for a man because he will protect our interests, and don't bother much about whether he will safeguard and advance the interests of the whole country or community. We are when we pretend to accept the idea that individually men ought to be good, but when they come together in governments, they don't have to be.

We have been so far intimidated by this doctrine of separation of government and morality that we have taken a great heritage of moral government and interpreted the morality out of it. The American Revolution becomes a war started by wealthy men to gain trade advantages. The War Between the States, only a struggle of one region against another for economic power. Today, even when we do the right thing, the moral thing, many of us want it understood that we are not doing it except out of self-interest. The modern Pharisees are also good men. They stand in the temple and pray: O God, we have been generous to our defeated enemies; we have nursed half the world back to economic health; we spend our blood and treasure to save the freedom of people on the other side of the earth. But God, please don't get the idea that we do any of these things because they are right—because they are moral. We want it clearly understood that we do them because they and in our own interests.

The fact is that many of us have been made ashamed to admit that we are acting morally even when we are. Is it any wonder that, in this atmosphere, some office-holders take the hint and accept corruption as part of the job. Is it any wonder that nations pursue, without hesitation, courses of action that are evil and dangerous.

It is time for us to go back to the true American heritage, the heritage of men who knew that government is essentially a moral problem, one of the greatest of all moral problems. This heritage is not one of moral perfection, but it is one of moral striving, and it is one of open admission of that striving. There are great things in that heritage. There is James Madison, the chief architect of the American Constitution writing to the impoverished and debt-ridden old man, Thomas Jefferson, "We cannot be deprived of the happy consciousness of the pure devotion to the public good with which we discharged the public trusts committed to us." There is Lincoln, beginning his second term at the end of the war with the words, "With malice toward none, with charity for all." Closer at hand is Mr. Dulles saying a few weeks ago at the United Nations, "Repressive measures inevita-

(Continued on page 8)

Our Churches Report . . .

Shelton Memorial Reports

We are happy to report the pews of Shelton Memorial Church of Portsmouth, Va. are being filled each Sunday, with inspiring messages issuing from the pulpet.

The parsonage has new brick steps, a fresh coat of paint and a new furnace. The church has also been painted. New hymnals have been purchased, also choir robes, and further improvements are anticipated in the near future. October being Loyalty month in our church, an appropriate hymn was written by our pastor, Rev. Thomas Britton, and has been sung each Sunday.

We are very happy over the past years accomplishments, some of which are not listed in this letter.

We are looking forward to a better and even more glorious work in the name of the Master.

MRS. FRANK H. LEWIS.

* * * * *

News from Hunterdale

Friday night, October 30, 1953, marked an enjoyable accasion for the members of Union Christian Church, Hunterdale near Franklin, Virginia.

On that night approximately 200 members gathered in the new Fellowship Hall, recently dedicated as the Scott Memorial Wing, to enjoy a fellowship supper.

The supper consisted of barbeque, cole slaw, sliced tomatoes, corn bread, and coffee.

Marvin Whitley, Steve Hornok, and Alfred Howell, members of the men's Bible Class donated three pigs for the barbeque, while other class members liberally donated funds used in preparation for the supper.

Several members of the Women's Auxiliary served the supper assisted by the pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. Clyde Fields.

An evening of fine fellowship was greatly enjoyed by all who were present.

MRS. JOY G. JOYNER, JR.,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Liberty Spring Reports

On Sunday morning, November 1, a host of members and friends of Liberty Spring Christian Church, worshipped together in a spirit of thankfulness to God for the twenty-five years of service given by their pastor, Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, to the full-time Christian ministry. Dr. Dollar, having begun his service as a full-time minister on the first Sunday in November, in the year 1928, at our church in Reidsville, North Carolina. The subject of his sermon for the occasion was, "The Principles I Have Practiced for Twenty-five Years."

The Liberty Spring Church sent one of its best reports to the Eastern Virginia Conference this year. Some of the high-lights of this report were:

Total spent for local programs	$ 7,140.00
Total given to all benevolent causes	5,475.00

Total given to all causes	 $12,615.00
---------------------------	-------------------

Number of members received—16.

Number on church roll—362.

We closed the year with a balance of $2,561.00 and our budget for this year is over-pledged $1,030.00.

Another high-light of the year was the presentation, acceptance and dedication of the following gifts: Communion Table and Chairs given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Joel E. Harrell, Sr. by their children Emily H. Lynch, Edward and Wesley Harrell. Brass candlesticks and offering plates given by Mr. and Mrs. Fermer Perry. A Baptismal Font given in loving memory of Percy Samuel Harrell by his children Mary Emma Horton and William Thomas Harrell. These gifts were given out of loyalty and love for God and the church to be used for the Spiritual Uplift of all who may worship in the church.

Our church has taken its first step towards a much needed Educational Building by appointing a committee to seek plans. This committee is composed of Wesley Harrell, Mrs. Rudolph Badger, Fermer Perry, Mrs. E. F. O'Berry, William Tucker, Mrs. Edward Harrell, and N. W. Byrd.

With our hearts and hands working together we should accomplish much during the coming year.

MRS. WILLIAM T. HARRELL,
Reporter.

Home Coming and Dedication at New Hope, Harrisonburg, Va.

The New Hope Congregational Christian Church held their all day Home Coming and Dedication of Memorial Windows on Sunday, October 4, 1953.

The most visible development of New Hope Church during the past year was building a new wall and concrete steps in front of the church, while inside beautiful Memorial Windows have been placed and new pews installed.

The interior has been painted and papered, and a new ceiling placed. Also a new oil furnace has been installed. The exterior has been painted. The grading of the lawn and driveway, and planting of shrubbery has added much to the church property.

The pastor, Rev. E. J. Rohart, had charge of the program for the day. Rev. H. B. Alexander of Port Republic was the guest speaker for the morning service with several selections rendered by the Mill Creek Quartette. At the noon hour a bountiful dinner was served.

The afternoon program opened with several selections by the young people of the church, with scripture and prayer by Rev. E. J. Rohart.

The Rev. John F. Lock of Maureytown, Virginia, preached an inspiring dedicatory sermon. The "Church History" was given by Hubert E. Liskey. A large number of friends and former members were present for the services.

Mr. Nelson L. Liskey read the familiar poem, "The Bridge Builder," and made the following comment:

Let us consider our church as a bridge, for we too, have builders for the spans. Each, in his own way, has constructed a means for youth to grow, and created a better world for those to come. The following are builders in our church:

T. ASHBY AND MARGARET LISKEY
AND ALVA LISKEY.

Better neighbors this community never knew than Ashby and Margaret Liskey and family. Down through the years they have been true friends to all in times of distress, sorrow and happiness. Even today Miss Verdie carries on as a shining example of friendliness, helpfulness and willingness to work for her church.

A. HOLMES AND MARY E. LISKEY.

Another span to our bridge was A. Holmes and Mary E. Liskey, who were pioneer members of this church. In 1905 Mr. Liskey became a deacon, serving in this capacity until his death. He also served as a Sunday school teacher as did his daughter. Today a granddaughter carries on the family tradition as a teacher in our Week-Day Religious Education program. Looking to Romans, we find a fitting verse, "As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God."

JOSEPH E. AND ELIZABETH LISKEY.

Other builders of our bridge for youth were Joseph E. and Elizabeth Liskey who were friends and helpers of all. I'm sure they often thought of this verse, "Choose ye this day whom ye will serve"; as all of their children were members of this church at one time. We regret that most of them have moved to other communities to continue the work of our Lord.

PFC. VIRGIL D. AND ELLEN KIBLER.

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." With deepest regrets we placed a gold star for Pfc. Virgil D. Kibler who gave his life for the service of his country. Virgil, a member of the church, was a young man of outstanding character and will be remembered for his friendliness toward his fellowmen.

God in his all knowing way called Ellen Kibler to her heavenly reward as a child, a mere bud, not to bloom on earth, but to blossom fully in Heaven.

STATTON A. LONG AND FAMILY.

Another link in our bridge is Statton A. Long and family. A large number of this family accepted Jesus as their savior in this church, however all but one have moved to other localities. We are very thankful for their son Leonard and his family who are whole hearted supporters of our church.

In thinking of the mother of this family I go to Proverbs for a verse. "Who can find a virtuous woman? for her price is far above rubies."

WILLIAM H. AND EFFIE M. VANPELT.

A building is only as good as its foundation. Truly William H. and Effie M. VanPelt were strong and sincere supporters of their church. Their children have continued in their footsteps of Christian service. A son, Joe, being Sunday school superintendent a daughter, Clara, president of the Woman's Missionary Society and secretary and treasure of our Sunday school, and the others continuous laborers for Christ, taking to heart what Paul spoke to the Romans, "I beseech you therefore brethren, by the mercies of God that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy acceptable unto God which is your reasonable service."

JOHN W. BRYANT AND FAMILY.

One of the first and foremost supporters of this church were John W. Bryant and family. A son, Martin Luther, was the first church secretary. He later became a minister. Two other sons, Jerry and John Eddie, were members and workers of this church. "And thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God led thee.

JOHN R. AND ELIZABETH LISKEY.

Other builders of our bridge were John R. and Elizabeth Liskey being continuous in church and community service.

Mr. Liskey was the son of one of the first deacons of this church, and served as a church trustee for a number of years. At one time all of the children of this union were members of this church. But along the way most of them transferred to other fields of worship. Only one, Hubert E., remaining an active worker, serving now as a Sunday school teacher, a deacon and church secretary.

We thank God for having given us these great examples of Christian Life. May we pick from their footsteps the way to Life Eternal.

H. E. LISKEY,
Reporter.

WALTER GRAHAM TO SPEAK TO W. N. C. LAYMEN.

(Continued from page 3.)

had. He was "drafted" for the job from an active business and professional life and from much experience as a Christian layman in church work.

In 1948 Mr. Graham visited Europe and Great Britain conferring with laymen in no less than eight countries. He was the first lay worker from America to visit the vocational training centers for Christian laymen in Europe. While there he conferred at length not only with laymen but European church leaders. In Italy he had diversified experiences, including an audience with Pope Pius XII and conferences with the Waldensian (Italian Protestant) leaders.

In 1947 and again in 1950, Mr. Graham visited Puerto Rico helping to establish a Laymen's Fellowship there. He was the first layman to go to Hawaii as a representative of the laymen of the mainland.

As Executive Director of the Congregational Christian Laymen's Fellowship, Mr. Graham travels from coast to coast addressing groups of laymen and counselling with lay leaders. He also is a radio commentator with a special monthly program entitled "Let's Take a Look" from station WHOP in Kentucky.

One of Mr. Graham's main objectives is the development of better churchmanship so that the church may be a strong instrument for the building of Christian character in the community, both local and worldwide. Both from the platform, in conferences, and on the radio he talks to men in a language they can understand. He speaks to the "man in the back pew" who, he believes, is anxious to put his talents to work for the church.

Experience in business, law, government service, management and teaching, lie back of this energetic lay leader, who is an attorney and member of the United States Supreme Court Bar, the United States Court of Appeals in Washington, D. C., and the Courts of his home state of Kentucky. For a time he was City Attorney in his own home town of Pembroke, Kentucky, and vice-president of the local People's Bank.

Mr. Graham was in Government work for 13 years including a special confidential assignment in Puerto Rico during World War II and held posts in the Department of Commerce and the Office of Censorship.

A Kentuckian by birth, Mr. Graham was educated at Kentucky-Wesleyan College, Yale University Law School (LLB), Benjamin Franklin University and George Washington University. He always has had a deep interest in religious education, especially for young adults. He lists among his hobbies, bowling, golf, swimming, tennis, baseball and music.

Special Notice

Under the scheduled program of the Convention THE CHRISTIAN SUN is issued 50 times during the year. It so happens that there are 53 Thursdays this year instead of the usual 52. This would mean the publication of an additional issue or the missing of two weeks at the end of December. After consultation with the chairman of the Board of Publications, it was decided to omit one issue in November and issue the Christmas paper on December 24, 1953.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Homecoming

The annual Homecoming for Elon College was held Friday and Saturday, October 30 and 31. The program was opened with a very brilliant affair in the new gymnasium. There were several hundred alumni, students, and friends in attendance. The decorations were unusual and attractive. Mrs. Scott Boyd, the new Alumni Secretary, was in charge. Everything moved with precision and in harmony. It was a most enjoyable occasion. All pronounced it a great success.

On Saturday a complimentary luncheon was served to Elon graduates who are at present teaching in the public schools of North Carolina and Virginia. There were sixty present. Short talks were given by Mrs. Boyd, Roger Gibbs, field secretary, and President Smith. The purpose of the luncheon meeting was to acquaint those who are teaching with existing conditions at the college and present needs of Alma Mater. The services of all present were solicited in an effort to secure top-grade students for Elon for the ensuing college year. The fellowship was fine and the enthusiasm was at a high pitch.

Boarding students decorated their respective dormitories and anxiously awaited the decision of the judges. Miss Rena Maud Isley, Mr. W. B. Terrell, and Mr. Ernie Gero acted as judges. Their decision was not given until the half-time period of the football game that evening. North Dormitory won the decision.

At three o'clock the annual parade got underway. There were twenty-one shining convertibles, three touring cars, and two floats, piloted by motorcycle policemen and a patrolman. From Elon College the parade went to Burlington, through Burlington, Brown's No. 2, Whitsett, Gibsonville, and back to the college. It was quite a spectacular affair. The float entered by Sigma Mu Sigma Fraternity won the prize.

Preceding the game which was played in the Burlington Stadium, a pep rally was held in Burlington City Park, and from the park the students marched to the stadium for the game. For this annual Homecoming occasion, Western Carolina Teacher's College came from Cullowhee, North Carolina to engage Elon College in a football game. The game was packed full of thrills and enjoyed by everyone, particularly the Elon fans. The score was 13-7 in favor of Elon. With this game Elon got in the winning group. There were between 1,500 and 2,000 present. The 1931 football team was presented at the half. It was good to see these old graduates back and have them participate in the Homecoming occasion.

All in all it was a very inspirational and successful occasion for the college. When one Homecoming program is over, there are those of us who begin to look forward to another year when we shall again meet friends and alumni.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

Another conference year (1952-53) will have come to a close by the time this issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN reaches the reading public. Of the $15,000 apportioned to the churches for the college $11,815.06 has been received to date, leaving a balance of $3,184.94 due. It is not necessary, I am sure, to remind our churches and friends that the expense of conducting the college has increased approximately $10,000 over last year. With deficits in conference apportionment for the college and the Sustaining Fund, it looks as if, for the first time in years, that we shall sustain a considerable deficit in current funds. In light of these facts, won't the Sunday schools and churches of the convention that have not paid their conference apportionments either in part or in full please make an effort to raise the amount apportioned and forward the same to the convention office for the college? The college is dependent upon our church constituency for a modest part of its support. Please do not disappoint us in this fund. We are grateful for what has been given and appreciate your cooperation from now until the end of the year.

Previously reported $11,068.33
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Hope Mills $28.00
Mt. Carmel 18.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:

Bethel	$ 30.00
Durham	425.87
Greensboro, Calvary	5.00
Kallam Grove	30.00
Long's Chapel	30.51
Mt. Zion	56.45
New Lebanon	38.90
Shallow Ford	20.00
Union (Va.)	59.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Providence Chapel	$ 5.00
	746.73
Total to date	$11,815.06

CHRISTMAS FUND

(Continued from page 2)

roll of Congregational Christian ministers, this will indicate that the veterans of the Southern Convention are not neglected.

Gifts to the Christmas Fund may be sent through the Southern Convention office or directly to the Christmas Fund, The Board of Home Missions, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y. Make checks payable to "The Christmas Fund."

FRANK J. SCRIBNER.

"WILBER" DARDEN DAY

(Continued from page 2)

ter have been an inspiration to many. His church, Sunday school and community are better because he has served so long and so well. To him it has been a labor of love, and now, and in the days to come, may it always be a source of endless satisfaction of a task well done.

"Presented to Charles Wilborn Darden, Sr., by the Sunday School of Oakland Christian Church, November 1, 1953."

H. S. HARDCASTLE.

GOD AND CAESAR

(Continued from page 5)

bly lead to resentment and bitterness. This does not come about through artificial stimulation, it comes about because the Creator endowed all human beings with the spark of spiritual life."

A few moments ago, I mentioned Mr. Nehru. He is far from speaking for all Indians. In closing I would like to quote from the Upanishads, a part of the Hindu Scriptures, the words Mr. Rajagopalachari, the Prime Minister of Madras State, used recently in addressing a political meeting: "God pervades everything in this world. He who denies the soul will find the world all dark and without light to guide his steps." I think we might add that he who believes in it, but is afraid to admit it, will also find the world dark.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Report of President of North Carolina Conference

The health of the North Carolina Woman's Missionary Conference for the past year may well be declared alive and alert if the recordings of the "pulse" and "heartbeats" have been accurately taken. The reports from each department and from every district have indicated the very earmarks of life and have shown at least some degree of growth.

Several of our churches deserve stars! Two new societies have been reported, Antioch in the Asheboro District and Mt. Gilead in the Henderson District. New circles have been formed at Union, Virginia, in the Halifax District and at Lebanon in the Raleigh District. The society at Kallam Grove was reorganized (Greensboro District) and two meetings were held with the women of the Bethlehem Church (Burlington District) for the purpose of talking through plans for organization of a new society there. We shall hope to report this "new society" right soon. These signs of growth might well be credited to the faithful service of our District Superintendents who have done a splendid job this year.

May we share just a few of the highlights from the reports?

Offerings amounting to a grand total of $10,528.25 were contributed by the approximate 2,312 members of the conference. This record means that we not only reached our goal but that we gave more than five hundred dollars "over the goal," or a gain of more than eleven hundred over the grand total of last year. Two other figures might be of great interest: Thank Offering—$2,279.24, and Life Memberships and Memorials—$770.00. We rejoice not only in the achievement of our financial goals, but in the faith that much ultimate good may be accomplished with the aid of these material instruments. May God bless our gifts!

Our Mission Study Theme was "Building With Love and Gratitude." Sixty-two of our 83 societies used the literature packet.

There was a visible gain in Life

Memberships and Memorials. Seven more certificates were issued this year than last year and three more churches contributed.

Fifteen societies report having local Councils of Church Women, six more than were reported last year.

Only four churches reported no Friendly Service projects and those reported community services performed.

Under Visual Aids there was the request for more information on our own missionaries and our own mission work. This is surely a helpful sign for further growth.

The goal for Family Life has been Every Family a Church Family.

The Young People report having a good year with projects centering around foreign missions and around the North Carolina Conference projects, especially centered at Moonelon.

A new department of Social Action was reorganized.

Six hundred children enrolled in our Cradle Roll. Their offerings amounted to $463.96.

It is the earnest desire of the Children's Department to stimulate more interest in missionary education for our children. Thus the urge for the women of our conference to assume a greater responsibility for promoting this phase of our total program.

Without a spiritual thermometer it is hard to report the temperature of the Spiritual Life of our conference, but we can report that much effort was made in this department to encourage well planned devotional programs. Seventeen publications were assembled and mailed to each society. Thirty-two publications, including books, pamphlets and leaflets, were purchased and made available to our women.

There has been a beautiful spirit of cooperation and vital eagerness to serve among the members of the Executive Board (may we at this juncture include the editor of our Women's Page in THE SUN and also the executive secretary of our convention.) My personal gratitude for such consecrated Christian co-workers. The local societies, too, have proved themselves "live cells" of the conference, and are to be commended on the great amount of work reported. All together we may rejoice in the accomplishments of the year and give thanks to God for his many blessings.

The Task of the Church Around the World is the challenge ahead of us! The gospel of Christ must be taken to every creature, beginning with ourselves. Will we accept our share of this responsibility, this Task of the Church? May God help us as we plan and set the new higher goals for the next year.

MRS. W. T. SCOTT.

* * * * *

First Thank Offering Reported

On November 1 the Missionary Society and Young People's Choir of Pleasant Ridge (R) Church united in presenting the Thank Offering Service, which was held at church. The project was "Our Mission on Mindanao" and the theme, "The Voice of God Is Calling Us." Miss Kittie Lee Cox led in the call to worship and the youth choir sang "We Gather Together," followed by the congregation singing "Lord, Speak to Me That I May Speak." The scripture, Matthew 25:31-46, was read by Miss Emma Allen. Mrs. Harry Stewart led the meditation. "To Love Our Fellowman" was the topic on which Mrs. Carl Lowdermilk spoke; "To Serve Our Fellowman" by Mrs. J. C. Newell; and "In Sacrifice for Others" by Mrs. Sybrant Pell. Mrs. Harry Stewart led in the thank offering prayer of dedication and the congregation united in singing "Jesus Calls Us." Mrs. Stewart pronounced the benediction.

MRS. RUTH NEWELL,
Secretary.

* * * * *

New Meeting Place for Southern Pines

The Women's Society of the Church of Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines held its October meeting in the newly completed Educational Building.

The church parlor is not large, but a glass wall with sliding doors, opening into a tiled patio, gives it an air of spaciousness.

Newly upholstered and refinished furniture, and vases and baskets of flowers made the room most attractive. A framed photograph of the three Chinese girls whose Christian education has been made possible

(Continued on page 14)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Armistice Day Reminiscences

November 11 was Armistice Day, a day when people think about peace and wish that all wars would end. Just a few weeks ago, two world-famous men received prizes for the work they have done to make the dream of peace become real.

One of them was Dr. Albert Schweitzer, whom many consider to be a living saint. He is one of the people that I would like to meet. His life has been a sacrifice for others and to God. He is a great doctor, preacher and musician.

The other, is a man I know, General George Marshall. We met him as a family not too long after we moved to Southern Pines. The General lives at Pinehurst on Linden Road in a simple little frame cottage that he calls "Liscomb Lodge."

Our Jonathan became better acquainted with him while he and the General waited their turn for haircuts in Wesley Stoltz' barbershop. Wesley sang in the choir of the Church of Wide Fellowship. On this day, General Marshall asked Jonathan some questions about national holidays and one of them was "When is Independence Day?" Jonathan had to admit he didn't know, but when the kindly old gentleman said: "Jonathan, you have never heard of the fourth of July?" Jonathan had a quick some-back: "Surely have—why didn't you say so!"

Once at a large community gathering the General stepped on my toe and was quite apologetic. I told him "Never you mind—it will be something to tell my grandchildren about." The last time I saw him was shortly before my husband's death. We met him at the door of Pappy Tate's Hardware Store door and he paused to chat and asked Dr. House how he was feeling. In every way he is a gentleman, a quiet person and one who never acts like the great soldier who has seen so many great places and people.

At the moment he is sick and here is a sincere wish that he will soon be well again and back home in Pinehurst. I must be fair to my home state and say that General and Mrs. Marshall spent part of their time on their farm at Leesburg, Virginia.

Two great men—one a soldier, and one a man of God. Yet the two of them, each in his own way, has worked for peace and won the Nobel Prize. Each of us can work too, each in the way we can best serve. God has told us how, or if he hasn't, if we will stop and listen, may be he will tell us. We should all work for peace.

* * * * *

"When Children are our Teachers"

By LOUISE C. HASTINGS.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"It's all right, Olive. I don't mind a bit. If you want to go home first and then come back to take me home, I don't mind a bit. It's all right with me. I don't mind a bit. You can call up Mummie and ask her if I may stay to supper at your home. I'd like to. If she says 'No' that's all right. I'll go home. If she says 'Yes' that's all right. I'll stay to supper at your home. I don't mind a bit."

Little four-year-old Susan evidently liked the rhythm of these words. She kept repeating them over and over as we rode along in the car. It is wonderful philosophy, whether used by a four-year-old or by an adult. Accepting tranquilly the inevitable is something each of us would be thankful to do.

I notice the word "home" that Susan used. She did not say "house"; it was "home." So often it is necessary to explain to adults the difference between a house and a home, and here was a small child using the word correctly, with apparently complete understanding.

Another child, Irene, was a little over eight years old. Her father died suddenly. It was hard for her mother to explain things to her. "Does it have to be this way?" she asked her mother. "Yes," her mother answered. No more was said. Irene accepted the sad loss without any further questioning.

It is, perhaps, an unusual thing for parents to think of their children as being teachers in the home. We are usually so satisfied with being the teachers ourselves that we are not conscious there is any appreciation due from us to our children for the things that we learn from them. They are our helpers—yes, and they often give us more real assistance than we realize, but our teachers—no; we do not consider the children our teachers.

Since little Susan presented her philosophy that whatever was to be done was "all right," declaring repeatedly "I don't mind a bit," it is amazing how frequently we quote her and how it really helps us to do small things that are troublesome without hesitation, though we would much rather do them at some other time.

One day Michael came out with the opposite of Susan's words. "I don't want to do that," he said. However, he added pleasantly, "But I will." His mother, in the thoughtless way that we mothers all have at times, had called out to him, with no consideration for the fact that he was in the midst of his play, "Michael, go up to my room and get my scissors, please. Don't wait; go at once."

Do we not all very often feel like saying as this boy said, "I don't want to, but I will"? Although this was an interference with his play, Michael went without pouting or mumbling.

Few children—or adults either—enjoy being interrupted when absorbed in what they are doing, especially when immediate compliance is required. I have found it wise, and many another mother has, also, to prepare children for interruptions. For instance, a mother may say, "In a few minutes, Marjorie, I would like to have you go upstairs on an errand for me."

My daughter gave Peggy a tuna-fish-salad sandwich. A few minutes later Peggy said, "Next time, Auntie Olive, I'd rather have a peanut-butter sandwich than one made with tuna fish, if you don't mind. But I like this," Peggy added quickly, and she ate every crumb as she walked around the yard looking at the flower beds. Accepting things comfortably is an art!

There are other ways in which our children teach us. By their little kindnesses, their patience with us, the way they overlook our idiosyncrasies, and their forgiveness of our many misdemeanors, our children teach us every day!

The wise carry their knowledge as they do their watches, not for display, but for their own use.—Browne.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Thanks for the report we are able to make this week. Just please help us bring our total to $65,000.00 by the end of the year. We shall need that much to complete the work of this year.

To my desk this morning comes a report from the Baptist Orphanage in Georgia stating that last Thanksgiving's offerings for that institution totaled more than $200,000.00, which the report added was more than one third of the resourses for the year. The amounts they reported as donations from individual churches were a revelation indeed.

A report coming to my desk last week from the Western North Carolina Methodist Conference showed 38 churches that gave more than $1,000.00 each to the Methodist Orphanage in Winston-Salem. These churches ranged from $1,000.00 to more than $6,000.00. I believe we care for the homeless with the same sort of kindness of heart. I believe we shall all be glad to give this Thanksgiving and give liberally for our own 84 homeless children at our Christian Orphanage.

With more than 35,000 members of our 200 churches, we should be able to raise the needed $35,000.00 to reach our goal. For many churches it will be a brave and beautiful thing to do. Because they have their own church building or repairing programs and are therefore raising special money for that. However, these children cannot be allowed to suffer, and our work here at the orphanage cannot be allowed to lag. When we present an appeal to our people for funds to care for the children we shall get the funds. Main thing is to present the appeal in a sympathetic and appreciative way. The funds will come. Give our people a chance and they will take care of their own homeless children as well as other denominations do.

Pastors, Sunday school superintendents, leaders of classes and leaders of women's groups are urged to allow the people a chance to make an enthusiastic Thanksgiving offering to the orphanage. It will not hurt or hinder the local church. If done in the spirit of true charity it will be a blessing according to the teachings of the Bible.

A lot of good could be done by speaking a kind word for the work being done here, the long hard hours of patient and oftentimes sacrificial service put in by the matrons; the loving care offered each child by every staff member; and the politeness and appreciation shown by these children from the youngest to the oldest. It is a good and proper work. It is a really Christian work. He will bless those who bless them. He will repay. There is a joy in serving little homeless children—boys and girls without a father and mother, or with one or the other of their parents gone, and no home left for them. God has blessed us all. Let us show real gratitude in our response the benevolent cause sat before us. Let us give a tithe of our income and more. Let us take him at his word and be in step with him. Anxiously I await your generous Thanksgiving donations.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

- REPORT FOR NOVEMBER 5, 1953.
- Commodities for the Week.
- Shirley Richardson, Suffolk, Va., Clothing.
Miss Nellie White, Greensboro, N. C., Clothing and coupons.
Mrs. Eaton's Circle, Woman's Council, Christian Temple, Clothing.
Mrs. G. D. Ellington, Reidsville, N. C., Clothing and coupons.
Miss Beatrice George, South Norfolk, Va., Clothing.
Mrs. Frank Mills, Varina, N. C., Clothing.
Miss Edith Jones, Holland, Va., Clothing.
Powell and Jones Hardware, Fuquay Springs, N. C., Clothing and shoes.
Mrs. Elmer F. Wilcox, Braintree, Mass., Coupons.
Newport Miss. Soc., Stanley, Va., Coupons.
Mrs. L. E. Carlton, Paces, Va., Coupons.
Miss Vera E. Gilliam, Greensboro, N. C., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Amount brought forward	$12,372.90
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Mt. Auburn, S. S.	$ 6.72
Southern Pines	2.55
	9.27
Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Nans) S. S.	$ 36.61
Bay View	5.00
	41.61
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Mebane	$ 5.00
Monticello	2.50
Mt. Bethel	71.00
Union (Va.), S. S.	5.00
Winston-Salem	82.00
	165.50
Western N. C. Conference:
Antioch (R)	$ 10.00
Needham's Grove S. S.	20.00
Randleman	35.00
	65.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Newport S. S.	$ 29.03
Palmyra S. S.	5.00
Winchester S. S.	8.34
	42.37
Total	$ 323.75
Grand total	$12,696.65
Special Offerings
Amount brought forward	$16,412.01
Garland Huffman, Burlington, N. C.	$ 20.00
The boys and girls of Hillcrest School, Burlington, N. C., in memory of H. G. McBane	100.77
A Friend, Norfolk, Va.	5.00
*Mr. & Mrs. Gordon Haskins, Suffolk, Va.	5.00
*James W. Hill, Elon College, N. C.	10.00
Miss L. Kennedy, Worthville, N. C., in memory of John W. Ward	5.00
State of North Carolina (gasoline refund)	57.25
J. L. Owens, Suffolk, Va.	100.00
Pisgah Christian Church, Pisgah, Alabama	10.00
	(Continued on page 14)
* Thanksgiving Offering.

MEMORIAL GIFTS

"Instead of Flowers"

Dr. John G. Truitt

Christian Orphanage

Elon College, N. C.

Dear Dr. Truitt:

Please acknowledge the enclosed $ as a memorial gift sent to the Christian Orphanage in lieu of flowers in memory of:

(Name of Deceased) (City) (Date of Death)

(Survivor to be Written) (Address)

Name

Address

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Christian Compassion for a Needy World"

LESSON VIII—NOVEMBER 22, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "But if any one has the world's goods and sees his brother in need, yet closes his heart against him, how does God's love abide in him? Little children, let us not love in word or speech, but in deed and truth." I John 3:17-19. (R.S.V.)

LESSON: Matthew 9:35-36; Mark 1:32-34a; 8:1-9.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matthew 25:35-40.

Compassion means "fellowship in feeling" or "suffering with another." The word comes from two Latin words, "pati" which means to bear or to suffer, and "eum" which means "with." Perhaps the word sympathy, which means "to feel with" is the nearest word to compassion. Perhaps callousness is the word which best expresses its opposite. Compassion means to care, to be concerned, to feel pity, to suffer with, to feel for. The spirit of compassion is a mark of manhood at its best. Folks who don't care about others lack an elemental quality of good character, no matter how many other good qualities they may have. The person who can move through life unconcerned and unaffected with the troubles and sorrows and sickness of others, lacks one quality of Christian character at its best.

The lesson for today gives us three examples of the compassion of our Lord Jesus Christ. Let it be said right here that "we do not have a High Priest that cannot be touched with a feeling of our infirmities." Our Lord Jesus Christ took upon himself the form of a man, and entered intimately and feelingly into all the experiences of the human race. He cared for people, he was concerned about them, he had compassion on them, he suffered with them. And he cared enough to do something about it. And as one who cared, he founded what we might call "The Fellowship of Those Who Care." Or at least his spirit has led his followers to manifest the spirit of compassion in many ways and through many institutions. Hospitals, charity organizations, orphanages, old folks' homes, clinics, foundations, CROP, CARE, Red Cross, Anti-Tuberculosis Society, Cancer Fund, March of Dimes, and hundreds of other organizations and institutions are examples of the organized compassion of Christ for those who are in need. And of course the spirit of Christ moves thousands of individuals to works of charity and compassion.

Jesus' Compassion for the Shepherdless.

"But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion for them, for they were distressed and scattered, as sheep not having a shepherd." There was something about that great multitude that tugged at the Master's heart. Here they were, driven, harassed, fleeced, exploited. He wanted to gather them all up in his arms, enfold them to his great heart, give them guidance and rest and peace. He wanted to share with them his secret of the more abundant life. He identified himself with them, and suffered with them. "He was moved with compassion"—what volumes they tell us of the character and compassion of God made known in Christ Jesus! That was one reason why the common people heard him gladly. That was one reason why the multitudes flocked to him and followed him. They knew he cared. They knew he had compassion on them.

How do you suppose our Lord looks upon the multitudes today in Russia who are as sheep not having a shepherd? Or the millions today in Communist dominated lands being exploited by the Soviet masters, who are like sheep without a shepherd. And there are multitudes in our own land who are being exploited, fleeced, misled, preyed upon. Today as then, the Master looks at the crowd, or the multitude, and he is moved with compassion for them.

And you, how do you look at a crowd? Is there anything about a great gathering of people that tugs at your heart? When you think of their hopes and their fears and their sorrows and their sins and their sufferings, are you moved with compassion?

Jesus' Compassion for the Sick.

The second section of Scripture reveals Jesus' compassion for the sick. "In the even time they brought unto him all that were sick, and them that were possessed with demons . . . and he healed many that were sick with divers diseases, and cast out many demons." It is significant how much of Jesus' ministry was devoted to healing the sick. Sick people tugged at Jesus' heart. In his threefold ministry, teaching, preaching and healing, healing had a prominent part. We call him the Great Physician, and we do well, for so he is. All of those individuals and all of those institutions which are concerned with bringing healing and health to the children of God are an expression of the compassion of Jesus for the sick. And this goes for those who are dealing with the mentally ill as well as the physically ill. Society is just beginning to wake up to the responsibility which it has to deal sympathetically and patiently and lovingly with those who are sick of mind, and with those "who have lost the kindly light of reason."

Think of the sick folks in the world today! Even here in America where we have the highest standard of living in all of the world; look at the hospitals, the doctor's offices, the nursing homes, the private homes in which there are sick people. Think of the institutions for the mentally ill, for chronic alcoholics, for the criminally inclined. Be sure of this, God is not being a monarch sitting easily upon a throne, unmindeful of the sickness and the suffering of the children of men. The compassion which Jesus showed was a revelation of the heart of the Heavenly Father as he looks upon the multitudes who are sick, not only in our land where there are so many doctors and institutions of healing, but especially in other lands where there are so few doctors and so few institutions of health and healing.

Jesus' Compassion for the Hungry.

And then there is that revelation of the Master's compassion for the hungry of his day, and of our day, as expressed in the feeding of the multitude as recorded in Matthew. "I have compassion on the multitude . . . because they have nothing to eat." That does not describe those of us who read these Notes. We sometimes talk about being hungry, and we do not know what it is to be hungry. Most of us suffer from eating too much and not from eating too little. But in our world today there are multitudes and millions who are hungry, and in some lands as in India, in which they are hungry all the time—there is never enough to go around. Ah, the pain there must be in the heart of God today as he looks upon the hungry people of the world. How dare America eat drink and be merry, when there are so many who have nothing to eat. It is worthy of note that the church as a church has been doing something in recent years about feeding the hungry. CROP and CARE are instances in point. And many mission stations regularly feed the hungry as a part of their ministry in Christ's name. Be assured of this fact. Christians must be concerned about the hungry people in the world today, and concerned enough to do something about it.

* * * * *

A World of Opportunity for All

LESSON IX—NOVEMBER 29, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream." Amos 5:24.

LESSON: Deuteronomy 24:14-15, 19; Amos 5:10-15, 24; II Thessalonians 3:7-10.

DEVOTIONAL READINGS Isaiah 58:1-9.

Three men of God, under the guidance and the impulse of the Holy Spirit speak in today's lesson. Their times differ, their backgrounds differ, their words differ, but they all emphasize the same thing: "It is that in the plan of God there is opportunity for every person to earn an adequate living and receive a just return for his labor." This is what Moses is saying in Deuteronomy, what Amos is saying, what Paul is saying. It is what needs to be said today.

Moses Speaks.

It should be said at the beginning of this lesson that God does not blast the rich simply because they are rich, nor does he bless the poor just because they are poor. The poor of the land are to be objects of pity, but not of special favor. Those who had were to share with those who, through no fault of their own did not have. But as far as was able, every man was to work for that which he got.

The Old Testament dwelt more upon justice than it did upon love. A hired servant was not to be oppressed because he was poor, whether he were a native or, what is perhaps more to the point, whether he were a foreigner. He was to be given a living wage and to be paid promptly. On the other hand, the servant was to give a good day's work. The rich were not to take advantage of the poor. The law against holding a man's garment, given as a pledge, overnight, was a protection against oppression. The nights in Palestine were cool, and to hold a man's outer garment overnight was to subject him to discomfort and suffering. Because the laboring man of that day was usually poor, his wages were to be paid every day, for otherwise he could not provide food for the next day. Or again, when the land-owner harvested his grain, he was not to make a clean sweep. What was left in harvesting was to be placed at the disposal of the poor. Readers of the Bible will recall how Ruth gleaned in the fields of Boaz. In short, what this man of old time is saying is that there is enough for all. The poor have rights and privileges. But they also have obligations. Those who cannot work must be taken care of. But a man who can work and will not work does not deserve help. Men must realize their responsibility each to the other.

Amos Speaks.

When we come to Amos, we come to fire! His words still crackle and snap across the centuries. He lived in a time when oppression was rampant, when great riches abounded in the midst of widespread poverty, when usury was common, when bribery was practiced, when priests were corrupt, when rulers were callous, when religion had become sterile and formal. Spirituality and morality were at low ebb.

And he spoke out against all this. He was the first, and among the foremost, of the social prophets. He courageously and scathingly denounced the sins of the rulers, the rich, the priests, the people, and predicted the judgement of God and its consequent doom on the nation. He summoned men to repentance. "Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live. . . hate the vile, love the good, and establish justice in the gates." And in words that have been repeated again and again through the centuries wherever the social gospel has been preached, he says, "But let justice roll down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream." It is the same emphasis which Moses emphasized. It was a call to the application of the spirit and principles of Jesus Christ to the common, the ordinary lives of all people, rich and poor, high and low, learned and ignorant. One of the ironies of the situation is that when formal religion was at its flower in a sense, social justice and ethical conduct were at their worst. Religion to be effective must be vital. It is not enough for a man to go to church on Sunday; he must carry the church with him through the week.

Paul Speaks.

Like the other men of God in today's lesson, Paul does not say all that there is to say about the matter. But when he writes his well-known words, "If any will not work, neither let them eat," he announced a principle that has a timeless application. If lazy people are looking for comfort in the idea that the Christians will always, somehow, take care of the poor, even the shiftless poor, they will not find any comfort in Paul. Or anywhere else in the Scriptures. The Bible gives no comfort to the lazy and shiftless. For it there is a dignity to work and labor. In it there is the obligation on every man to do his part by honest toil. There should be charity for those who cannot work; there should be no charity for those who can, but who will not work. In order to avoid any suspicion, Paul worked at his trade to earn a living, even though he was preaching the gospel, for he did not want to put too great a burden on his converts.

What about those who will not work today? Government and state unemployment insurance is right and necessary in some instances. But there is a great deal of abuse in the system. There are thousands of healthy and able men in our country who would rather take their cut from the state or the government, than to do honest work. And the matter of subsidies needs to be considered in the light of the principles announced in today's lesson.

Dr. Staley said on more than one occasion, that about the hardest thing he had to do in his ministry, was to administer charity wisely and well. All too much charity is mere sentiment. Charity should not be cold and calculating but it should be careful and consonant with the facts.

"A World of Opportunity for all" is the title of our lesson. We are not all created free and equal, the Declaration of Independence to the contrary notwithstanding. There are many inequalities in birth, station, ability, circumstances and environment. But God did intend that we

(Continued on page 14)

Youth at Work in the Church

REV. MAX VESTAL, R. 1, Asheboro, N. C.

In Our Churches

By MAX VESTAL.

There are songs to be sung,
Prayers to be said,
Sorrows to be borne,
And tears to be shed—
There's work to be done.
There are words to be written,
Books to be read,
Sick to be healed,
And blind to be led—
There's work to be done.
There are bills to be paid,
Carpets to be laid,
Angers to be stayed,
And progress to be made—
There's work to be done.
There are minds to be taught,
Truths to be caught,
Literature bought,
And a hope to be sought—
There's work to be done.
There is work to be done—
Work to do,
Work to re-do,
And some work to undo—
There's work to be done.
Work to be done? 'Tis true—
Too much for me and you.
Tell you what we'll do!
We'll tell everyone
There's work to be done.
But they know there's work to be done.
You look at them—
They look at you.
If that's all the two of you do,
There's still work to be done.
But why don't you be the one to begin?
Then watch them join right in.
The work's not done
Tell everyone learns
That the work's to be done by him.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

As an answer to popular demand—well, there are a couple who asked about it—I have agreed to continue relaxing with you folks for a while longer. Thomas Madren, a ministerial student at Elon, and president of the Western North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship, is going to take over the news end of the page with the help of the officers of the other conferences, and with the support of each of us. Thomas will do a good job; so let's give him plenty to work with.

* * *

The Pleasant Hill church was host to the Western North Carolina Conference this week. And what host they were! I've never seen so much to eat and so many preachers and laymen eating so much in all my days. Thanks, Pleasant Hill!

* * *

A father was telling about his son. "My little Sammy won a prize in school today," he said. "The teacher asked how many legs a dog had and my boy said three and won the prize."

"Your boy said three legs on a dog and won the prize?"

"Yes, he was the nearest to it."

That little story has a moral for us, I think. Just because we may be nearer to the truth than some other people are doesn't necessarily mean that we know it all.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK

(Continued from page 9)

through the Isabel Graves Memorial Fund was presented by Mrs. J. R. McMillan.

Our president, Mrs. Bryan Poe, discussed various projects that are to be undertaken during the coming year and our program chairman, Mrs. Harry Pethick, gave a brief pre-view of some most interesting programs to come.

HAZEL SHIRING.

* * * * *

New Project for Amelia

Sometimes we say we don't know just how to express our sympathy to the family of a friend or a neighbor who has passed away. At our missionary society in September we decided to be helpful to the family when death comes in our community. Each member of the society is to take some food in such a case, so an entire meal can be served. Together we will take some meat, vegetables, bread, salad, cake and tea to the family of that deceased person in our community.

We also discussed a plan for raising money for our church and we sold cakes and pies and sandwiches in Clayton during the Cotton Festival.

In Memoriam

McBANE.

The passing of years removes from our fellowship, those who have won for themselves a place in the hearts of men. Such was the loss of the Loyal Men's Class of the First Christian Church of Burlington, N. C. in the untimely death on September 14, 1953, of one of our beloved teachers, Henry Grady McBane, a devout Christian, teacher and friend. We feel our loss very deeply and shall always cherish the memory of his years as our teacher.

We commend his example of love and loyalty to God's Kingdom, to all who found in him a friend. "He rests from his labor, but his works do follow him."

Therefore be it resolved:

1. That we humbly submit to the Father's will, knowing that he doeth all things well.

2. That the members of the class, emulate his traits of Christian character, and in so doing pledge ourselves to a more loyal service to our church and our God.

3. That in his passing, our class has lost a very devout member. The public schools of our city have lost a most sincere and able teacher, having been connected with our schools for a quarter of a century. Our city has lost a valuable, upright citizen, as he gave himself unreservedly to the welfare of our community.

4. That we extend to the family, our heartfelt sympathy in the loss of a loving and faithful husband and father, and we commend them to the Great Comforter who knows all sorrow.

CHARLIE MILES,
GARLAND F. HUFFMAN,
EGBERT TRUITT.

We have been studying the Book of Colossians and our meetings have been pretty successful. We trust that God will bless us all.

ENA FORD,
Reporter.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(Continued from page 13)

should all have equality of opportunity. Every man should have the opportunity to make the most of himself, to get work, to serve his day and generation.

There is point to today's lesson because of the decision which the Supreme Court in due season will have to make in regard to the constitutionality of segregation, which is only a part of the larger picture in contemporary life, both in America and around the world. Christian people and the church ought to be giving serious thought and prayer to this momentous issue. We will need the mind and spirit of Christ whatever the decision is.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

Pledges to Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

(Corrected to Oct. 19, 1953.)

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Antioch—E. J. Rohart	$ 343.00
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	106.00
Bethel—H. V. Harman	377.00
Dry Run—R. E. Newton	129.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton ..	211.00
Newport—R. E. Newton	426.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten ...	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardcastle	$ 872.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo .	459.00
Bethlehem (Nans.)—R. E. Brittle	2,040.00
Burton's Grove—J. W. Madren .	153.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark .	200.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Bay View—.....	724.00
Norfolk: Christian Temple—W. Millard Stevens	5,330.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dollar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein .	1,459.00
South Norfolk—O. D. Poythress	2,500.00
Suffolk—.....	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—.....	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—Carl Wallace	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ...	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00

Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	$ 400.00
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisseman	3,292.00
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Lakeview—Curtis Young	82.50
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Mt. Zion—Thomas D. Sutton ..	600.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren .	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00

Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Tryon—Orville H. White	*250.00
Union (Va)—Mark W. Andes ..	1,498.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00

* Contribution.
† Paid in full.

ORPHANAGE REPORT
(Continued from page 11)

Philathea Class, Reidsville Church	10.00
Special Gifts	227.80
	550.82
Grand total	$16,962.83
Total for the week	$ 874.57
Total for the year	$29,659.48

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195.., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- ☐ 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195.., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- ☐ 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- ☐ 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- ☐ 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.
- Church
- By Secretary or Clerk
- Address
- Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

The Time to Build Churches is Now!

(Continued from front page)

CHURCH IS NEEDED! There are needed 10,000 new Protestant churches, now! Interdenominational co-operation indicates that our Congregational Christian share is 333 churches.

Over fifteen million boys and girls under seven years of age are without any form of religious education! DO WE AS AMERICANS DARE FAIL TO PROVIDE CHURCHES FOR THESE CHILDREN?

4.--Churches of the Southern Convention Need Aid

We have already received generously from our Congregational Christian Church Building Society—more than $130,000.00 during the past five years. Yet, until now, we have contributed nothing to these funds. The Church Building Loan Fund Campaign is our greatest opportunity. Let us not fail to support it. If you have not already done so, accept your church's quota NOW! We are in a growing area, and our churches must accept their responsibility for providing other churches—if America is to be Christian.

We need assistance from the Building Church Fund. THEN LET US SUPPORT IT!

Our Record to Date

Conference	Quota	Goals Accepted to Date
Virginia Valley Central	$ 5,736.00	$ 3,736.00
Eastern Virginia	51,000.00	43,227.00
Eastern North Carolina	17,690.00	10,022.00
Western North Carolina	11,476.00	3,410.00
North Carolina and Virginia	50,552.00	20,993.50
Totals	$136,454.00	$ 81,388.50

The amount need to complete our goal is $55,065.50. As stated above, up until now we of the Southern Convention have contributed nothing to the funds of the Church Building Society. In self respect and out of a desire to share in this great Home Missionary effort, we MUST raise our quota in full! We repeat: If your church has not accepted its goal, will you not urge it to do so today?

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, NOVEMBER, 26, 1953

NUMBER 46

THANKSGIVING--1953

Things to be Thankful For

For all the things that God has made,
For sun and showers, trees and shade,
For mountains towering away up high,
For sunsets in the western sky.

For things created just for man:
The gold and oil, and then again
The fruits in every land, that grow,
The summer warmth, the glistening snow.

All these, the things that bring us joy,
The family ties, the girl and boy
Who come back home Thanksgiving Day,
With little ones, who laugh and play.

And most of all, in peace, this land,
A nation working hand in hand,
will celebrate, with feast and prayer,
A privilege to us most rare.

To Him who guides us, from the skies,
For all these things, Thanksgiving Day.
And shall we pause, with lifted eyes
Give thanks, in our own feeble way,

—Elmer D. Brown.

"Let us come into His presence with thanksgiving"

News Flashes

We wish for each of you a most joyous Thanksgiving.

Superintendent Wm. T. Scott was a visitor at the office of publication in Richmond on Thursday morning of last week.

Our belated congratulations to Dr. Jesse H. Dollar upon the completion of "a quarter century" of service in the work of his Master. May he add many, many more years to a useful life.

A revised edition of the Southern Convention Manual has just come off the press. If you desire a copy, it may be obtained from the Convention Office at Elon College, N. C. The price is 50 cents plus 5 cents postage.

November 29 is the last Fifth Sunday in the year 1953. It is a privilege and an opportunity for your Sunday school and mine to give a record breaking offering for Elon College and wipe out the deficit in our College Apportionment. Won't you do it?

Mrs. Robert Lee House, the editor of our Children's Page, was a visitor in Richmond on last Sunday, together with her three children. We were glad to see her, though she found the writer of this note back in bed on doctor's orders. However we limped out again on Monday.

About eighty men gathered last Friday evening at the First Church, Burlington, N. C., for the annual banquet of the Loyal Men's Bible Class. Mr. C. C. Linnemann, principal of the Walter M. Williams High School gave the address. This class is the oldest one of its kind in the City of Burlington.

Dr. Richard H. Hoffman says that there are three great killers in modern life—the telephone, the clock and the calendar. The tyranny of the telephone is interruption. The tyranny of the clock is appointment. The tyranny of the calendar is apprehension. All are symbols of hurried living and the enemies of tranquillity. Says the Good Book: "In quietness and confidence shall be your strength."

Beautiful Altar Vases for Bay View

Members of the Bayview Congregational church in Norfolk, Va., are grateful to the family of Mrs. Mary Etta Wicks for two beautiful altar vases, given in memory of their mother, whom God in his infinite wisdom saw fit to call to her eternal home, July 19, 1953.

Mrs. Wicks was loved by every member of our church. Her life of service to her church and humanity

"THE BOOK OF HOPE"

TENTH ANNUAL WORLDWIDE

Bible Reading

THANKSGIVING TO CHRISTMAS

1953

The Scripture selections for Worldwide Bible Reading follow:

NOVEMBER

25. Thanksgiving	Psalms 103
27.	Psalms 23
28.	Psalms 43
29. Sunday	Psalms 130
30.	Psalms 147

DECEMBER

1.	Jeremiah 17: 1-15
2.	Luke 5: 27-39
3.	Luke 6: 1-26
4.	Luke 6: 27-49
5.	Acts 2
6. Sunday	Acts 26
7.	Romans 5
8.	Romans 8
9.	Romans 12
10.	Romans 15: 1-13
11.	I Corinthians 13
12.	I Corinthians 15: 1-22
13. Universal Bible Sunday	Psalms 119: 41-56
14.	Psalms 119: 105-120
15.	Galatians 5
16.	Ephesians 4
17.	I Thessalonians 5
18.	Hebrews 11: 1-16
19.	I John 3
20. Sunday	Isaiah 40
21.	John 1: 1-18
22.	Isaiah 9: 1-7
23.	Isaiah 53
24.	Matthew 1: 18-25
25. Christmas	Matthew 2: 1-12 reflected the love of Jesus, that was in her heart.

She gave so freely, of all she had, to so many. The children at Elon Orphanage were her pet project, she couldn't do enough for them. No one person gave more generously of money, time and prayer for the erection of our new educational building than she did. What an earnest passion she had for doing God's work.

She is not dead, that spirit strong and sweet, but gone home, her Master and Lord to meet.

JESSIE L. MCAUSLON,
President.

Hope Mills Church Dedicates Robert Lee House Memorials

On Sunday night, November 15, three very significant events took place in the life and work of the Hope Mills (N. C.) Congregational Christian Church.

First, the supply minister, the Rev. Carl R. Key, presented the new pastor, the Rev. Carl Wallace of Fayetteville, who brought the Communion Meditation on the theme "This Do In Remembrance of Me."

Second, a set of candelabra, a graded cross and an altar were dedicated by Mr. Key and Mr. Wallace and the congregation. The candelabra and the cross were given by the June Joy House Bible Class of the Sunday school under the leadership of Mrs. Claude Smith in memory of Dr. Robert Lee House, a former pastor. The altar was made by Deacons C. E. Culbreth and Claude Smith. The first suggestion for this beautiful worship center with these Christian symbols came from Dr. House one week before his death. The Hope Mills Church is to be congratulated on the fact that they have carried the idea through to completion. When the reredos has been placed back of the altar, every one will admire it and much will be added to the worship services by these new appointments.

Third, the Key family, the Wallace family and the deacons and congregation joined in a very deep spiritual experience in the Holy Communion to mark this historic occasion.

There is always a marked sense of worship and a deep feeling of "belonging to the Kingdom of God" felt in the Hope Mills worship services. The new pastor and the people are conscious of this treasured achievement. As this experience is lived out in the community the Hope Mills Church will grow and prosper.

The National Protestant Church of Geneva, Switzerland, recently celebrated the 500th anniversary of the Gutenberg Bible. The Gutenberg Bible, the world's first volume printed from movable type, was produced at Mainz, Germany, by Johann Gutenberg in 1452. Special interest in the anniversary stems from the fact that Geneva was one of Europe's principal printing centers in the 16th and 17th centuries, and during those years Bibles turned out on Geneva presses circulated throughout the continent.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Beginning Again

The idea of beginning again, of having another chance or of being given a second opportunity is as old as the hills.

Dusk and darkness come each day but always there is the dawn. Weeks and years wind their ways through or out and another week and year begin.

How about individual life? Do individuals or personalities have the lot of starting over? What, too, of churches?

So far as time goes, all of us have all the time there is. When someone says that is worthwhile, should not they be gently reminded that the busy and idle fellow both have the same amount of time?

God in his wisdom, grace and goodness, found it expedient to fit us with minds that as Paul said, forgetting those things behind, we can press forward.

A new church year is just beginning. Buildings and folks will now bustle with activity, plans and programs.

From mountain top experiences, recreated minds, bodies and spirits, high moments of pleasure, we go to the valley of daily toil and so-called routine existence.

Our aim in life, including all of its phases, is to be Christian and to build a peaceful world. When we fail, as temporarily we must, there is always the comforting thought of a chance of again beginning anew.

Laymen will especially welcome the opportunity to have a share on the planning and carrying out of the new church year program. For it must be said again and again that the work of the Laymen's Fellowship is not a part from the program of the church; rather it is the men of the church and community at work in the church, ever old and new.

WALTER A. GRAHAM.

* * * * *

Suggestions for Vitalizing Our Laymen's Program

Dr. Richard K. Morton of our church in Jacksonville, Florida has written to your editor making some suggestions as to things which might be done to assist in vitalizing our Layman's Program. Although some of the suggestions may be difficult to implement, we are printing them completely as he sent them with the hope that the ideas may prove helpful in the work of some of our local fellowships. It is also to be hoped these suggestions will bring out other ideas from some of our men.

1. A follow-up to Reformation Sunday a regionwide effort to enroll adults in a course of institute on The Pilgrim Faith or The Congregational Christian Faith.

2. The systematic attempting of regular laymen's visitation.

3. A plan of adult-youth cooperation through a community or parish council, to arrange projects that can be done together by adults and young people.

4. The arrangement of many home weekday meetings for prayer and discussion to be led by laymen.

5. Providing for some brief summertime services and displays along highways frequented by travelers—perhaps through the help of people who live along these highways.

6. Distribution of leaflets to co-operative motels and other stopping places.

7. Participation in plans to provide recorded or printed aids to laymen for worship and general inspiration—such as sample prayers, meditations, and the like.

8. Undertaking specific projects to aid elderly, handicapped, and those in remote sections, etc.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195 . . .

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $ for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

"I Thank My God"

A Thanksgiving Guest Editorial

By REV. H. H. SMITH, Ashland, Virginia

"I thank my God," "We are bound to give thanks unto God," "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ," are Paul's favorite expressions of thanksgiving in writing to the churches he founded. It is an interesting and helpful study to note the things concerning his converts for which Paul was deeply grateful.

To the Christians at Rome, he wrote: "First, I thank my God through Jesus Christ for you all, that your faith is spoken of throughout the whole world." Paul was a Christian strategist and knew the importance of planting the Gospel in the populous centers. That Christianity should have taken root in Imperial Rome—so hostile to such a spiritual religion as Christianity—was enough to move the apostle to profound thanksgiving to God.

When Paul wrote to the Church at Corinth, he expressed thanksgiving for the grace of God which had been given them in Jesus Christ, and for the spiritual enrichment Christianity had brought to their lives. What Christianity did for the Corinthians can be appreciated only when we remember how notoriously wicked was the city of Corinth in Paul's day. It has been said that we should have to combine all the vice and sin of the worst cities of the world today to equal the evils of Corinth at that day. Bearing in mind what the Gospel had accomplished in the wicked metropolis, no wonder Paul rapturously cried out: "Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift!"

Turning to the Church at Ephesus, Paul exultantly praised God who "hath blessed us with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ" . . . and "hath chosen us in him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." And he adds that this high calling of God in Christ brings us into the family of God and we become his children. To bring pagans out of darkness into the marvelous light of the Gospel and see them transformed by the mighty power of Christ is enough to make one exultantly praise God.

His beloved Philippians—the only church for which he seems to have had no rebuke—moved him to write: "I thank my God upon every remembrance of you, . . . for your fellowship in the Gospel from the first day until now; being confident of this very thing, that he who hath begun a good work in you will perfect it unto the day of Jesus Christ." In the secret of a happy Christian life, which Paul gives the Philippians, thanksgiving finds a place. Briefly, it is this: Worry about nothing; pray about everything; in everything give thanks.

To the Colossians Paul writes: "We give thanks to God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you, since we heard of your faith in Jesus Christ, and of the love which ye have to all saints, for the hope which is laid up for you in heaven whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the Gospel." Their love for the brethren was proof enough that their profession was genuine, for the Master had said: "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."

Paul thanked God for "the work of faith and labor of love, and patience of hope" among the Thessalonian Christians, who "received the Word of God not as the word of men, but as it is in truth, the Word of God, which effectually worketh in you that believe." And he rejoiced that the Gospel "came not unto them in word only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance." That the report of their conversion was widespread was also occasion for thanksgiving. "From you sounded out the word of the Lord, not only in Macedonia and Archia, but also in every place your faith to God-ward is spread forth." In his second letter to this church, Paul says: "We are bound to thank God always for you, brethren, as is meet, because that your faith groweth exceedingly, and the charity of every one of you all toward each other aboundeth; so that we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulations that ye endure."

No wonder that Paul was continually sounding forth praise and thanksgiving to God. He saw a world lying in wickedness, without hope and without God—but he saw more. He saw the Gospel of Christ prove to be the power of God unto salvation, and from the darkness of heathenism there came forth a Church composed of sincere followers of the Lord, growing in grace and becoming more and more Christlike in character.

As we survey the Church of God today, what are its achievements that move us to give thanks to God?

A Call for Personal and National Thanksgiving

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

The president of our nation and the governors of the various states have in their Thanksgiving Day Proclamations, called the American people to personal and national thanksgiving. God knows and we all know that we in America individually and collectively, have much for which to be thankful. No other nation has been so blessed with opportunities, advantages and material values as have we.

The record of the first American Thanksgiving Day, as observed by the Pilgrim Fathers on historic Cape Cod, reveals two objectives which characterized their observance, first, the Day was designed to be a time for religious fellowship calling those sturdy pioneers to give special thanks to God, the Author of life and of all life's blessings, for his gracious providence to their enterprise in the New World; and second, the Day was designed to be a time for social fellowship in the farternizing of neighbors, friends and relatives. That first American Thanksgiving Day was indeed a time for religious and social rejoicing.

As believers in God and as worthy Americans, we are glad for the provision of a Day of Thanksgiving in our nation's calendar. The day is an important factor in our national heritage. And each year we are anxious to observe the day in keeping with the original purpose which inspired that first observance of Thanksgiving Day on the bleak New England shore as the people gave special thought on God's goodness to them, and the rejoicing that should be theirs for the blessings of his Divine Providence.

In receiving the blessings of Providence for ourselves, a sense of gratitude and honor prompts us also to wish all good things for all mankind just as our Heavenly Father does; nor would we claim that we merit the kindness of Providence in its lavishing favors upon us as a nation, favors that are withheld from so many lands across the sea. Gratitude for the blessings that are ours should inspire us to want to share our blessings of abundance with those not blessed with plenty as are we. As a nation and as individual Americans we have reason greater than have the people of any other land to render heartfelt thanks unto the God of heaven and of earth. No other people have been so greatly blessed as have we—and that not because of our greater merit.

One of the peculiar paradoxes of life is that those who have the least for which to be thankful are often the most thankful. A boy may be more thankful for the apple he carries in his pocket than his father is thankful for the bumper crop of apples stored away for winter's sale. The beggar may be more thankful for the unexpected dime tossed to him by a kindly hand than the man who counts his dollars in seven figures. The family who feared being ejected from their home because of unpaid rent, when permitted to remain another month, may be more thankful than the family who through all the years has lived in its own comfortable home never for a single moment being anxious about the future. The family in Ireland with but a simple fare of bread and potatoes made possible by the most rigid economy may sit down to their meager meal more thankful to God than the American family in affluence sits down to its sumptuous feast, never having felt a slightest pinch of want, and in whose vocabulary the words "economy, thriftiness and carefulness" have never found place. The man who, by the aid of double glasses, is able to read with great difficulty the printed page or to recognize his friends a few feet away may be more thankful for being able to see at all, than the man who without glasses can with perfect vision see both near and far. The person who with difficulty makes his way from place to place with cane or crutch may be more thankful for being able nearly to get about than the person who with perfect freedom can walk or run and go as far and as fast as he may choose. The person who has but a single friend in whom he knows he may safely confide, a single friend who he knows will always understand, one who in every conversation will with the hand of love separate the wheat from the chaff—one who believes in him—a person with a single friend such as that may be more thankful for the one friend than are some of us who can count our friends by the score.

And thus it is with all the blessings of life, those who have the fewest blessings are often the most thankful. What a reflection that fact is upon those who have much of the world's goods, much for which to be thankful, but in whose hearts the springs of gratitude have dried up!

If those who have but little are profoundly thankful to God for what they have, think you what gratitude should find expression in Joyful Thanksgiving on the part of those whose every want is supplied!

Thankfulness is best expressed in thanksgiving. With both God and man, words go a long way in the expression of thankfulness—but only deeds go all the way.

And the person who gives should always be more thankful in giving than the person who receives. That is what Jesus meant when he said, "It is more blessed to give than to receive." The giver's position, the ability to give, is so much more to be desired than the position of being in need of receiving.

Too many people spend their time in counting their troubles instead of counting their blessings.

On this Thanksgiving Day, for our own sake, for the sake of those we love and for the sake of our Lord let us think of how thankful to God we should be for life and the privilege of living in God's world as daily recipients of God's providential care—and let us in true sincerity thank God. How long could any guest remain in your home, enjoying the delights of your home and your gracious hospitality, if failing ever to voice his gratitude for your many courtesies, but taking everything for granted? Two days or only one? And yet there are people who have lived in God's world for forty, sixty, eighty years who never once have paused to say, "God, I thank you."

Thanksgiving Day calls us to think of how thankful we should each one be for life, for health, for friends, for work, for loved-ones, for opportunity, for food, for clothing, for art, science, music, good books, a sense of humor, good amusements, democracy, education, religion and the chance to become acquainted with our own self!

Every blessing we enjoy can be traced directly back to the loving heart of a loving God, and Author of life and "The giver of every blessing known to man."

(Continued on page 10.)

Our Churches Report . . .

My Father Worketh Hitherto, and I Work

These words of Jesus (John 5:17) might well be the motto of the Congregational Christian Church of Sanford during this year of its 50th anniversary. For a half century this church has served the spiritual needs of an ever-growing group of people which has in turn taken care of the material needs of the church. Now on its 50th anniversary this church has not only a rich heritage and a wealth of experiences, but a beautiful and modern building with ample class rooms, which shares with the modern parsonage all the natural splendor of well planted grounds in a quiet section of the city.

Rev. Will B. O'Neill, D. D., the minister of this church, has surrounded himself with a dedicated group of competent officers and teachers who, while serving the needs of every age group and cherishing all past achievements, seem determined to go onward to new and greater things. Like most churches, the women of the Congregational Christian Church at Sanford have been very active and have accomplished much that is good. Now it would appear that they would do well to look to their laurels because the men of the church show many indications of increased activity. Last month the men's Bible Class met at the Wildlife Club for an evening of fellowship and enjoyed the wonderful food that was served by the ladies of the Underwood Guild.

On Sunday, October 18, at 11:00 a. m. the Sanford church observed Laymen's Day by having the entire worship service conducted by the men of the church. The willingness of the men to work together as a smooth, efficient team made the service especially valuable. This service proved that the men of Sanford church can assume active leadership and are willing to take time out from the hustle and bustle of the market place to work for the onward and upward progress of the church and community. "Each man bring a man" was the goal which the men set before them with the constant reminder that we "Strengthen ourselves by making others strong." To see how the men tackled this job was in itself an inspiration. Nothing was left to chance, plans were carefully laid and thoroughly carried out. An experienced publicity committee arranged for spot announcements to be made over our two local radio stations, and that the local paper carried several articles covering the event. It also brought into use the printer's art in the production of attractive "Admit One" cards which provided space for the worshipper's name and address that we might have a record of all who attended and at the same time secure the names of prospective members for class and church. An Invitation Committee made personal calls on the men of the church inviting them to this Laymen's Service and special invitations were tendered those men of the community without church affiliation. Every effort put forth was highly rewarded and it was an inspiring sight to see the pews on one side of the church, that were reserved for the men, completely filled.

All of the men met outside of the church and led by two altar boys, the all-male choir, and the eight participating laymen joined in the processional singing "Onward Christian Soldiers." The Call to Worship was given by V. C. McIver and the Invocation by Raymond Pigford. Burke Buchanan led in the Responsive Reading and Rex Thomas read the Scripture Lesson. A tenor solo, "Bless This House," by Bobby Matthews was rendered in a most pleasing manner. Taking as their theme, "Jesus Calls Men," which was the general theme suggested by The United Church Men of the National Council of Churches, the two speakers sub-divided it into two parts, James T. Brumeloe taking the theme; "Jesus Calls Men—to Positive Belief." He called attention to some of the beliefs Christians hold, and why they do so. He urged his hearers to make their faith positive, not a passive thing, something vital which would sustain them through all the changing scenes of one's life.

Garland Keith presented the second part, "Jesus Calls Men—to Positive Action." He warned that believing was not an intellectual pastime but a process which should result in better citizenship and a better world. He characterized the present as an age of great unrest and peril, but also an age of great possibilities if all men would hold to positive beliefs and then engage in positive action. The speaker urged the congregation to engage in an active partnership with their pastor in making a better church and community; and into a partnership with God in creating a better today and tomorrow, and issued a real challenge in his closing words by saying, "We were created by God to serve as a shuttle that must carry one thread back and forth through this tapestry that we call life—whether we add just a little color or leave a bold stripe across it is up to us. Let us make the pattern pleasing to the Master Weaver who looks down on it because you and I have heeded the call to "Positive Belief and Positive Action."

When Dr. O'Neill had dismissed the service with a short prayer the men marched out of the church into the fellowship hall and there joined others of the congregation for fellowship over a cup of coffee.

Surely this service caused many to remember Peter's words, "Lord it is good to be here."

October 19 brought another memorable event to the Sanford Church, again demonstrating the increased interest and activity of the men. At 6:30 p. m. the men met in Fellowship Hall for a supper of barbecued chicken to inaugurate the monthly meetings of the newly organized Fellowship, this first meeting was designated as "Ladies' Night," and the men of the church brought their wives along to share in the delicious food and to hear a most interesting talk given by Mr. Elwin Buchanan on some of the highlights of a recent flying trip to England and Europe. Mr. Buchanan was introduced by his brother, Burke Buchanan, who is the chairman of our fellowship, told of his visit to some of the old world cathedrals which had withstood the onslaught of the centuries and whose beauty and magnificence remained as eloquent expressions of man's faith. Mr. Buchanan spoke with sadness of war's destruction and how its ravages had reduced many of man's priceless treasures to rubble, and he expressed the hope of all of us when he said that the nations of the world should find the way to an enduring peace.

G. S. KEITH,
Reporter.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

Two and One Half Million Dollar Campaign Fund

Nothing has been said about this campaign for months. Consequently, nothing has been done about it. The Executive Board of the Convention requested that the college withdraw from the churches with its appeal and campaign for the development program of Elon College until January 1, 1954. The withdrawal was dequsted in interest of the Church Building Fund Campaign. The Building Fund Campaign has met with a great deal of success. Elon College is delighted that it has. I am sure that our churches that have supported the Church Building Fund Campaign will be glad to give support to the college campaign. Elon College does not propose to return to the local churches, conferences, or the convention money, either in grants or in loans, but it does propose to return to our churches, our conferences, our convention, and to our church as a whole a substantial dividend in trained leaders, leadership for the pulpit and the pew, without which our money would be as dust and our hopes will fall to the ground fruitless.

For more than sixty years Elon College has given its best, its all to the high task of training leaders for church and state. The Southern Convention with its boards, institutions, commissions, and committees are largely the fruits of our college. If the college surpasses the church in its broader aspect and observes its former students and graduates in positions of trust and honor in church and state, it rejoices in its achievements and in the prospect of a more abundant harvest as the years come and go. Nothing could be more convincing evidence of the lack of vision or long range interest than for the church to fail in the least to give support to that one institution that has served as its lifeline and reservoir of inspiration for more than half a century. The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches has within its grasp an opportunity which if utilized, will mean more to its strength and progress than anything else at hand. Our Lord could not establish his church without man.

His church cannot fulfill its mission today without man, without conscientious; consecrated men and women who know what their task is and who will fulfill that task with the greatest degree of efficiency. I know that the financial boom is on the wane; that money is not as free as it has been. It may mean a bit of sacrifice but even so, our religion is a religion of sacrifice and it is difficult for us to fulfil completely the will of God without some semblance of self denial and of personal sacrifice. May God give us the courage and the grace to do our duty by the college and thus fulfill our mission in this our day and generation.

Fifth Sunday

OUR SUNDAY SCHOOLS ARE PRIVILEGED TO MAKE AN OFFERING FOR OUR COLLEGE

* * *

Elon College

* * *

Let every Sunday school in the Southern Convention take advantage of this opportunity!

Apple's Chapel and the College Campaign

In planning for the Two and One Half Million Dollar Campaign, it was understood that this was not to be strictly a church campaign, that is that quotas would not be assigned to each local church, but in order that each local church might know what is expected of it and the community in which the church is located, it was decided that if each local church would secure from its membership, the alumni living in its community, and the business and manufacturing interests located within its community, an amount equal to $7.50 a year for every member enrolled in its church, that the total amount of $2,500,000 would be secured for the college. This seems to be reasonable and acceptable. The church is not responsible for the entire amount but it is responsible for canvassing its community, the alumni, and business and manufacturing establishments within its territory.

The Reverend John Robert Lackey, pastor of Apple's Chapel Church, North Carolina and Virginia Conference, has accepted its quota of $7.50 per member for the Two and One Half Million Dollar Campaign. That is good news and marvelous for this church and its pastor. May the Lord bless and prosper them that they shall be able to meet this obligation as the years pass. It will prove an investment that will bear rich dividends.

May others of our churches be inspired by this example of Apple's Chapel Church and follow in its train. Congratulations to the church and its pastor.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

The conference year has come to a close. This article is supposed to be optimistic. It should be optimistic. The writer wishes above everything else to make it optimistic but, my dear reader, can you explain how you can muster optimism in the face of apparent defeat?

The total apportionment of the churches for the college is $15,000. To date the college has received from the Convention Office $12,218.95, which is $2,017.56 less than we received last year and $2,781.05 short of the total apportionment.

Some years ago the college asked for the privilege of operating on the calendar year. That is, that all money received prior to January 1 be credited on the current year. We have a month and a half yet to go. The college hopes sincerely that all churches that have not paid their conference apportionments in full may make a special effort to do so. It is useless to say that the college is badly in need of funds. $2,000.00 isn't too much money, but it certainly would help if that amount was placed in the college treasury today. Won't our churches please do their best for their college?

Previously reported $11,815.06

Eastern N. C. Conference:
Fayetteville $ 9.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Apple's Chapel 53.56
Belew Creek 35.00
Berea 46.00
Bethlehem 141.00
Happy Homes S. S. 70.33
Hebron 59.00

403.89

Total to date $12,218.95

Missions at Home and Abroad

Dr. Reuling Writes of Mission Work in South Africa

Johannesburg,
Union of South Africa,
October 3, 1953.

Dear Friends:

Again I find myself in South Africa at the beginning of another secretarial visit to American Board Missions in the Union, Southern Rhodesia, and Angola. This time I am accompanied by my wife for whom this is the first return to Africa in twelve years.

We left Boston by Pan American on September 21, spent the next three days in Lisbon, studying certain matters connected with our work in Portuguese West Africa, and flew to Johannesburg in a little over 28 hours, with stops at Dakar, Monrovia, Accra, and Leopoldville. We were met at the new Jan Smuts airport which lies between Pretoria and Johannesburg by Lee Bergsman and Corrine Nordquest, Johannesburg missionaries, and by the Dannhausers, South Africans who were former colleagues at Adams College.

Johannesburg, which is so frequently written up in American magazines and papers, is the same as always, and yet somehow different. The old hustle and bustle is still there. The traffic problem at rush hour rivals that of downtown Boston. Nineteen or twenty new steel-frame, multi-story buildings, almost in the skyscraper class, are pushing their way upward, and many more recently completed give a new appearance to the skyline.

Housing is scarce and very expensive, in spite of many new housing developments in the suburbs. The shops are filled with radios, refrigerators, furniture, and all of the necessities and accessories of the type of life with which most Americans are familiar, but at what seems to us to be prohibitive prices. Second-hand cars sell for about as many pounds sterling as they would in dollars at home, that is, nearly three times as much, year for year, and although a stringent shortage of new cars has pushed up used ones a little above the normal ratio of South African prices to American, it is still indicative of costs.

On the other hand food is relatively cheap, prices in markets and restaurants being way below those at home. However, I can never escape having a guilty feeling when enjoying a delightful meal, knowing that the hard work of producing the meat, fruit and vegetables has been done by people who in all probability never have enough to eat themselves and who certainly never get enough cash to purchase more than the barest minimum of the high-priced manufactured articles that form such an important part of modern living.

Senator Hickenlooper was quoted in today's Johannesburg paper as saying that American press reports of South Africa racial strife were greatly exaggerated, and that he was convinced that South Africans were fully aware of their problems and were taking, he was sure, the proper steps to solve them, in the light of their long experience.

I must disagree strongly with the honorable Senator. He was fair enough to state that he could not form a completely balanced judgment, because he was only in the Union for a few days. During such a visit he was undoubtedly at all times under the guidance of government officials. They showed him model townships for Africans, of which there are a number, but didn't show him the squalor, filth, and generally unsavory character of places like Moroka, where the people who desperately want good housing just can't get it. I doubt if he studied the statistics of deaths from tuberculosis, now being run daily as a public service feature by a white newspaper trying to rouse the public conscience. New cases and daily deaths, which make the rate shockingly high for a city that prides itself on being modern, are noted in the same way that American papers sometimes note car accident statistics, in an effort to cut down the death rate.

Africans are naturally law-abiding, but there are numerous instances where they have been dangerously roused. For example, a meeting organized in an African area in one of the large Cape cities was to have been addressed by Mrs. Ballinger, member of Parliament representing Africans on the segregated voters roll, and another exceedingly liberal white person who has labored long for the African. These devoted people were shouted down and the meeting had to be called off because these Africans had been driven to such a stage of desperation that they refused to listen to any white person, no matter how friendly.

The really responsible Africans still hold out for cooperation and for a lawful and orderly approach, but they are finding it increasingly difficult to maintain their positions of leadership in the face of those who point out, correctly, that the parliamentary "forms" of democracy are being used to take away the rights and privileges of the people and permanently to fix them in an inferior and undemocratic position.

But perhaps the best argument against the senator's felling that South Africa problems will be easily solved and that this country will not become a danger to the rest of the world is in the statements and actions of responsible white South Africans, who unlike Mr. Hickenlooper have been observing conditions first-hand for a lifetime. All but those who for one reason or another are firmly committed to the principle of complete apartheid express deep concern, not only for their own future security but also for the rights of the non-white peoples. The English language papers are filled with news articles, strong editorials, and letters to the editor pointing out dangers and injustices in, for instance, removing the Coloured (mixed-race) people from the common voters roll and placing them on a segregated roll.

Proposals by the government bodily to move thousands of people are protested strongly. Increasing numbers of whites are devoting themselves to African service because of a sincere conviction that the situation is explosive.

Yesterday I attended a luncheon meeting of the Native Affairs Committee of the Johannesburg Rotary Club. The thirty or so members of this committee regularly give large amounts of time, thought, and effort to the problem. The particular discussion of the day was on the Native Education Bill, which removes education of Africans from the control of the four provinces, and transfers it to the Union Government, but not under the Union Educational De-

(Continued on page 13.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Bethlehem Church Women Reach All Achievement Goals

The Bethlehem Church Women (Suffolk) have been enjoying a very successful year. We have reached all of our achievement goals.

Each year we do something for our young people. This year we entertained the Youth Fellowship and their guests, the young people of Cypress and Eure, at a supper in the Fellowship Hall. At this meeting Mrs. Clyde Umphlette of Cypress taught their foreign study book. Young people like to repay, so they entertained the ladies of our church at a reception with a well-planned program.

Family Life Night is one of our outstanding events of the church. This was held May 6 with a covered dish supper. The picture, "I Beheld His Glory," was shown.

Six new members have joined our fellowship. We feel that we have made a step forward in our work this year when we combined the two organizations of our church, the Women's Missionary Society and the Ladies' Aid, naming it "Bethlehem Church Women." We are hoping to have every woman of the church a member of this group.

One thing that we are especially proud of is that for the last several years we have given nine Life Memberships and Memorials. We feel the causes for which the money goes are most helpful and needed.

Eight of our ladies had the privilege of attending the School of Missions. Not only did each individual enjoy and receive inspiration from their stay at Elon, but by their going we feel that the work of our local church for the new year will have good success.

Our society is divided into three groups with spiritual life leaders in each. They have given us inspirational programs each month, which we feel have inspired each of us.

We pray that our church and societies will grow as he would have them and for the strength to help them grow.

MRS. W. E. HORSLEY,
Secretary.

Missionary Society at Plymouth Reports Prosperous Year

We of the Plymouth Ladies Missionary Society have, we think, had a very prosperous year with Mrs. Bowland as our president. We meet once a month in the home of one of our members, which makes our meetings less formal and more enjoyable. These are some of our activities:

We sent boxes to Franklinton Center, Elizabeth City and Ellis Island. Included were toys, books, candies, sewing supplies and drawstring bags made by Mrs. H. I. Sauls, our president of a year ago.

Hoping to make our church more attractive, we sowed grass seeds, worked and fertilized the shrubbery and cleaned the graves. Also we bought venetian blinds for the pulpit and the windows beside it.

At our Christmas meeting we met in the home of Mrs. Bowland. The program for that night was on foreign countries, and our tree was decorated solely by flags from all nations. Afterwards cookies were served, along with other refreshments, made by our hostess using recipies from other countries. This was especially enjoyed. Also we played games from other countries.

During the year we have enjoyed several book reports given by our members and Mrs. Merle Swicegood spoke to us on "Attitudes."

At the first of the year we decided we'd like to do something among ourselves for enjoyment, so we started a secret pal club, and calling ourselves "mission sisters." We drew names. At Christmas time we will include our name in a final gift and the secret will be out.

We served complete dinners for three neighbors on occasion of death in the families; took a thank offering for Carroll County to help build a church; sold vanilla flavoring and other household articles; sent $10.00 to the orphanage to buy shoes for children. Also, two of our members made a robe from material purchased by the society for a member of our church afflicted by rheumatism.

During our revival we held prayer meeting for all our church along with our regular meeting at the home of Mrs. Clyaburn Brown.

Mrs. Manly Harmon and her sister, Mrs. Jordan, made a beautiful patchwork quilt and presented it to the society to be sold for the benefit of the society.

Now, with our new preesident, Mrs. Partin, just elected, we look forward to a new year with high hopes. We want not only to improve in our old endeavors, but also to conquer many new tasks and to receive many new members into our society.

MRS. FORREST RYALS,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Newport News Auxiliary Has Very Successful Year

The Woman's Auxiliary of the First Congregational Christian Church, Newport News, Virginia, has had a very active and successful year under the leadership of Mrs. L. J. Brown. Our officers were installed by the president of our Southern Convention women, Mrs. W. B. Williams, at our September meeting.

Fifteen members attended the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference at Christian Temple, Norfolk, November 2. At the morning worship service Mrs. L. L. Taylor, Mrs. W. B. Williams and Mrs. L. J. Brown presented the thank Offering service.

Our boys and girls in service were remembered at Christmas with gifts from the auxiliary. The program on Ellis Island was presented at our December meeting and we sent eleven boxes to Mrs. Pratt there.

The foreign mission study book on Africa was reviewed by Mrs. Nettie Garrett, our spiritual life superintendent.

Our Home Mission study book, These Rights We Hold, was presented by Rev. Mr. Granger.

We celebrated our fifteenth birthday with a nice party on February 11. Members with their husbands as guests sat at tables decorated to represent the month. More than 100 attended.

The World Day of Prayer service was held in our church. Several of the neighboring churches participated in the service.

Each of the circles has chosen a friendly service project. Several boxes have been sent to the Christian Orphanage at Elon.

Eight members attended the Woman's Missionary Convention in Burlington, N. C.

(Continued on page 13.)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

When we seat ourselves at our lovely Thanksgiving tables and bow our heads for grace, may we think of the boys and girls around our world, who have so little to eat and so little for which to say "Thank You."

If you haven't already given your good used clothing to the CROP drive for Korea, please do so. Think of the cold and hungry children in that far away land.

God has given us:

Mother and Father
Brothers and Sisters
Churches and Schools
Doctors and Hospitals
Teachers and Nurses
Ministers and Workers in the Church here and around the World.

Music
Art
Food Clothing
Love
Laughter
Flowers
Trees
Sunshine

Oceans and rains
Books and words

His Son, Jesus, and many, many other things for which you can say "thank you."

One little girl said "If I don't tell God how good and happy I feel I may burst at the knees and elbows." Let's not burst, let's tell him.

J. J. H.

* * * * *

"Red Letter Day"

By INEZ RICE.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

He came leaping into the kitchen—a leap which had the appearance of a tangling up of legs and feet and a spreading of arms.

I gasped at such a wild, enthusiastic entrance so early in the morning. But I gasped more when I actually looked at the bundle of enthusiasm himself. His eyes were so bright they were practically casting up a halo around his tousled curls. However, it was a tilted halo, since his head was cocked to one side as if he were listening. No doubt, he was listening for my comment. But, naturally, while I was so astonished I was unable to speak. I could only look. And this is what I saw.

A striped T-shirt with terribly crooked stripes—stripes which had not zigzagged like this yesterday. The crew neck was fairly hugging his chin, but, of course, that could be due to the fact that the back of the shirt was on the front of my little boy.

There was something queer, like a sash, tied around his waist. But, little boys do not wear sashes ordinarily, not in our neighborhood. A little closer inspection revealed that it intimately resembled a towel—a green bath towel. Unquestionably, this was a convenient place to carry it, in case one should happen to wash one's hands during the day.

Allowing my eyes to travel downward, below the towel, I saw the usual dungarees, but they looked slightly unfamiliar because of the manner in which they were bunched around the knees. It was apparent that such bunching was necessary in order that there might be plenty of room to pull on to the feet below two socks, one blue and one yellow. But the feet themselves struck me as the queerest of all. They seemed to match even less than the socks, though both shoes were of the same color—a scuffed brown. They stood as if the legs should be crossed, but his legs definitely were not crossed. They were wide apart!

My son had such a weird appearance that I felt weak with amazement, and I reached for the nearest chair. I tried to compose myself so as to be able to speak. My boy shuffled those odd restless feet about—both seemed to be left feet—and there were small metallic taps made on the linoleum by the ends of the dangling shoelaces.

In spite of everything, I knew I should find those vital words of praise. I must! They were so very necessary!

This little boy of mine had, without question, "climbed a mountain"—a tremendously high mountain. He was standing on the very top now, or, rather, wiggling on the very top, waiting for my appreciation. Don't ever think it hadn't been a struggle for him. It may be a long, long time before he will ever struggle so hard again, and only for words of praise from me, too!

Of course I gave them to him. I praised him to his hearts' content. This was a red-letter day for him, and he was, oh, so happy that I had shown him I realized it. Why was it a red-letter day? Because, today, for the first time in his short span of years, my little son had dressed himself!

A CALL FOR THANKSGIVING.

(Continued from page 5.)

is "The consciousness of God," the realization of man's absolute dependence upon God, and a sense of personal obligation to God.

It is in recognition of that need that society has its churches and synagogues. And in recognition of Thanksgiving Day should remind us that the greatest need of humanity that imperative and basic need of men and women and boys and girls, the ministers of all churches consecrate their time, their talents and their efforts to the task of calling people to think about and become acquainted with God. They want that every man, woman and child shall know God, "Whom to know as a Loving Heavenly Father is life-eternal." That is their aim, their purpose and their passion.

They do not ask

For churchly pomp or pageant,

Or music such as wealth alone can buy:

They only pray that as they voice the message

He may be nigh!

They do not ask

That men may sound their praises,

Or headlines spread their names abroad:

They only ask as they voice the message
Hearts may find God!

For when men find God, they find life, and hope and strength; and their happiness no longer depends upon things or circumstances but upon opportunity to serve. When a man finds God, even though the bottom may fall out of the stock market and though business may shift into reverse for him, the bottom can never fall out of life and hope within his soul will brighter burn with every passing day.

What we each should be the most thankful for on this Thanksgiving Day is for God himself. We may well thank God for life. We may well thank God for home. We may well thank God for friends and loved ones. We may well thank God for church and synagogue and for every opportunity for selfrealization. But

(Continued on page 15.)

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

No News Is Bad News

You have often heard it said that "No news is good news." But I cannot agree in this specific situation. Where newspaper work is concerned, "No news is bad news." There had been plea after plea for news articles of your activities by our past editor, Max Vestal. He has done a wonderful job as editor of the Youth page but he was limited in his work. He could only edit the news as our youth groups reported it. We greatly appreciate the work that he has done, but now the same problem faces your new editor. Many events that should be reported are slipping past us every day. News is not being sent in as it should be. Our youth groups are having many activities that should be of interest to us all, but nothing is said about it.

Such is the case of several events I recently heard of this past week.

1. A joint fellowship supper of the Henderson and Liberty Vance Youth Fellowship.
2. A social affair of the youth at Bay View Church.
3. Activities of Christian Temple Young People at recent meeting.
4. Officers meeting of Western N. C. Young People at Asheboro.
5. Project of the Liberty Vance (Epson) young people. Raising cotton.

Not only these, but there are numerous other happenings of our youth that should be reported on this page.

As your new editor, I am to serve you. But I need your help. I urge you to send in all news of activities of your local group.

With your cooperation, we can make this page very profitable. This page is set aside for the youth work in our churches, so why not make use of it.

THOMAS MADREN.

* * * * *

Western North Carolina Youth Rally at Grace's Chapel

The fifth Sunday of November is drawing near and it is time for us to make preparation for our next rally.

Your officers and counsellors met in Asheboro on October 25, 1953, and discussed the plans for the next rally. The program is under full swing. Now we need you.

We have a very interesting program planned for this rally. The theme is "Problems of the Christian Youth," with a panel discussion on this topic. The program will start promptly at three o'clock, so be sure to get registered before that time.

Now here is one thing that is essential—that you bring all the young people you can with you to this rally. I hope that all of our churches will be represented with at least one if not the entire group of your Youth Fellowship. Someone told me the other day that one of our newest groups, the Randleman Church, was going to charter a bus to bring their group. Now that is the spirit and interest we need. We want you to come and represent your church whether you have an organized fellowship or not.

Also, along with yourself and your friends, bring a well-filled basket of food for our picnic lunch together. The host church will provide the drink.

Don't forget the Date, November 29, 1953. This rally is to be held at Grace's Chapel Church near Sanford, N. C. It is four miles south of Sanford on Highway 1, on the left of the road after you pass through Tramway, N. C.

The young people of this church are looking forward to a large group of us at their church so let's not disappoint them.

Come and be with us for a day of worship, fun and fellowship together.

THOMAS MADREN,
President.

* * * * *

New Youth Group Organized at Randleman

A new young people's group has been organized and the newly elected officers took office when they were installed at an Installation Service in the church on October 25, 1953.

This group of active young people in the Randleman Congregational

Christian Church of the Western North Carolina Conference met to organize themselves into a Pilgrim Fellowship and elect their leaders.

Rev. and Mrs. Winfred Bray were in charge of a very inspiring service that officially installed the young leaders as officers of the group.

The officers elected were Leon Lamb, president; Bill Kennedy, vice-president; Peggy Dorsett, secretary-treasurer; counsellors are Fred Reece, Bauzie Reece and Mrs. Winfred Bray. Loretta Kennedy is the director of the Youth Choir.

This new group of Randleman young people has nineteen charter members. They are, Fred Reece, Myrtle Reece, Marie Freeman, Talma Freeman, Billy Kennedy, Peggy Dorsett, Loretta Kennedy, Rauzie Reece, Alma Reece, Leon Lamb, Judy Hill, Rose Reeding, James Brown, Rachel Brown, Elva May Stanley, Hilda Lamb, Fay Reece, and Jolene Bray.

Other new members are being added as the group works toward their purpose of organization.

This group, along with the adult advisor and pastor, Rev. Winfred Bray, is to be commended on their fine progress and work.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Had a letter from Pattie Lee Coghill today. It was a nice letter, and I certainly did appreciate it. Probably would have appreciated it more had I been able to read it. Those of you who have never seen one of her letters don't know how to appreciate this. You are accustomed to reading letters written from the top of the page to the bottom. Pattie Lee doesn't write this way—ah no! She begins in the center of the page and writes out in all directions. They certainly are interesting.

* * *

Hope you don't let Thanksgiving pass without giving thanks.

* * *

A gift to Christ at Christmas would be very appropriate, it seems to me. After all, it's his birthday.

* * *

Doctor: (Arranging patient on operating table)—"I'll be perfectly frank and tell you that four out of five patients die under this operation. Is there anything I can do for you before I begin?"

Patient: "Yes—help me on with my shoes and pants."

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Government Under God"

LESSON X—DECEMBER 6, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "He will not fail or be discouraged, till he have set justice in the earth; and the isles shall wait for his law." Isaiah 42: 4.

LESSON: Romans 13:1-10; Acts 5: 25-29.

Different Conceptions, the Same Objectives!

The words of today's lesson are from two men, with different conceptions of government, but with the same objective. Paul stood at the end of a long era in which men bowed to kings and hoped for the best. Peter stands with a blazing torch at a time when a new era was displacing an old era. But both men had the same objective—good citizenship under good government. Both had a profound respect for law and order, that is good law and good rulers. And both looked for a higher guide than written laws—both looked to love as supreme law and to God as the Supreme Ruler. What each was saying is that good government and good laws are essential to a better world.

Paul.

"Let every soul be in subjection to the higher powers; for there is no power but of God; and the powers that be are ordained of God." That is a hard saying for us. The best commentary I can give on it is to quote from a writer of the book, The Great Redemption, by Chester Warren Quimby. "To us such a position is unthinkable. But that is because our premises are different from Paul's. Our ideas of democratic government were unknown to Paul. It must be remembered that theories of government vary. With us governmental authority derives from the people. We are authority. We grant and we delegate power. The people give and the people can take away. The Russian theory holds that the powers of government derive from the party. The party is the authority. It grants and it rescinds. That is why opposition, not to the nation, but to the party, is treason. Therefore, Russia can, with justice in her eyes, conduct vast liquidations and purges. Loyalty there is not as with us, to the constitution, the flag, the people, but to the party. Looked at with Russian eyes, such denial of human rights is not wrong. There are no such rights. To purge and protect the party is just and noble. It is necessary, when interpreting Paul, to remember this truth—that theories of government differ."

Now Paul believed that all governmental authority derived, not from the people, but from God directly. In his view, government was a theocracy. The real ruler of any nation was God himself. This was one reason why ancient emperors took divine titles. It was also the source of the later, divine-right-of-kings theory. For God cannot rule directly on earth in person. He must have a person to represent him. In theory this person will do God's will and enforce his laws with justice and righteousness. In practice, however, the thing never worked that way. Kings usually were little concerned with divine rule, although they never ceased to claim divine authority. If the sovereign became a terror, he was still God's representative. One could only pray that God would deliver his people by encompassing the tyrant's swift removal.

Against the background of this general principle, Paul says certain things. He warns against flouting decent public law and order, and for good reason. For the most part, the Roman administration under which he lived and the people to whom he wrote lived, was by and large marked by wisdom and tolerance. And during his lifetime the Roman state had not manifested any real hostile intentions toward Christianity. But wise man that he was he saw that the time might come, when the state, any state, might go too far and oppress the church. He provided for that, for while calling for obedience to the governors: when rulers became a terror to the good, to good works and good men, then they were no longer of God, and no longer fit to rule.

Paul went further. He enumerates in detail some of the responsibilities of citizenship. a. Respect the authorities as long as they merit your respect, b. Pay your taxes, c. Honor your debts. d. Do all in love. In other words Paul's theory of government may be a bit obsolete from our modern standpoint, but his summary of Christian citizenship is still a goal that most of us have yet to reach.

Perhaps it should be said that if our forefathers had obeyed Paul literally, there would have been no United States of America. They would have "taken it lying down" from King George of England. But they rose up in wrath and in armed might against his tyrannies, and won their freedom, and established a republic, and instituted a democratic form of government. But even before they did that, they drew up a long list of grievances, twenty-seven of them, "repeated injuries and usurpations" by the old king. He had forced his laws on the colonists, bad laws at that; he had refused to let them make good laws; he inflicted taxation without representation; he dissolved competent colonial governmental bodies; he denied the right of free ballots and free elections; he obstructed the administration of justice; he forced foreign armies on the colonies; he denied the right of trial by jury; and so on. One doubts that Paul would have enjoined obedience to this high-handed tyrant!

Peter.

Peter's words, "We ought to obey God rather than man" or rather "We must obey God rather than man" sums up the Christian philosophy of the relation between church and state. Generally speaking a man is under obligations to obey the state and properly constructed authority. But when it comes to a matter of conflict between God and the state, men ought to obey God. A man's first and highest allegiance is God. According to the Christian view, the state cannot coerce the conscience of man. Here is the crux of the difference between Communism and Democracy. Communism makes the state supreme. It claims sovereignty over not only the bodies and the minds of men, but over their consciences and their souls. With it, the state is supreme.

But with us, men have certain inalienable rights and freedoms: freedom of worship, of thought, of expression, of assembly in public. Our nation seeks to guarantee these rights to all, and to defend them against all the forces that would destroy them. To be sure the thing does not always work in practice, but our

(Continued on page 14.)

MISSION WORK IN SO. AFRICA.

(Continued from page 8.)

partment, but rather the special department known as Native Affairs.

These white business and professional men, hard-headed and practical as their American counterparts, held a lively discussion. Many were quick to point out injustices in the bill. Others protested the dangers of creating a "state within a state" and the giving of completely arbitrary powers to the Minister, without any provision whatsoever for legal review. He can, for instance, close any school whatsoever on the grounds that it is teaching or practising things prejudicial to the Union. Even including mission schools, there is at present accommodation for only 30 per cent of the African children in the country. By their own efforts and with the help of white friends, including missionaries, Africans establish private schools for themselves in places where the government hasn't yet been able to provide facilities, which incidently are increasing at a rapid rate. All such schools, even one held in a garage by a white man who wants to help his servants to become literate, must be registered and can be closed if the Minister (or his snoopers) disapprove of anything said or done.

One very responsible man said to me: "Under the present laws of South Africa I can envisage a school being closed because of the reading of the Sermon on the Mount, without comment, but with certain inflexions and emphases."

Some white South Africans feel that it is already too late to do anything, that the mistakes and wrongs have gone so far that conflict is inevitable. Most, however, feel that tragedy is another question.

After looking over the situation on the ground I do not feel that American press reports of fear, tension, violence, hatred, danger have been exaggerated. In fact, I think that most such reports have been very moderate and balanced in so far as they have reported specific situations.

Where these reports have been in error is in not giving full recognition to those white South Africans, Dutch and English alike, who on Christian, ethical, and economic grounds, have been waging a valiant battle, although unfortunately it may be a rear guard action, against the forces of evil that are abroad here. Americans so frequently ask me: "How can the South Africans be so blind that they can't see that they are heading for the precipice and destruction? Why don't they do something about it?" Large numbers are not blind, they see the danger to themselves and to the world, and they are doing something about it, but the battle is hard, the enemy is powerful, and they are frequently discouraged by world criticism, from America, Europe and Asia which conveys the impression that every white South African stands over the African with a whip in his hand.

In all of this, Christian churches, Christian missions, our own included, play an important, significant part. Many of the white people who are devoting so much time and effort to this battle originally were alerted to the situation by Drs. Fred Bridgman and J. D. Taylor, missionaries of a period just closed. Today there is great respect for the Phillips and Bergsman families who radiate strength. On the one hand African leaders respect, trust, and admire them, affectionately. On the other hand responsible Europeans, knowing that they understand the complexities of the situation, are sympathetic. They do not pass harsh judgement but are wholly helpful. The work of Dr. and Mrs. Phillips in the Jan Hofmeyer School of Social Work is widely known. The African section of the community sees them rendering a real, urgently needed service and is grateful. The European section sees a solid contribution being made to the whole country, stops to question, then admires and praises, and then, in many instances, becomes involved itself, cooperating, developing increasing fellowship.

The Bergsmans serve the pastors and evangelists of the wide-flung churches, using their home as a center for business, training and social fellowship. In them Africans see real sincere friends, and so some at least are led to examine all white people a little more carefully and to pick out those who are likewise willing to be friendly even in spite of the inevitable awkwardness of the South African situation.

Corrine Nordquest, a first timer, is making her way in developing a sound program of religious education for young people, which in its way will help too.

Paul Robeson and others are doing their best to give Africans the idea that Americans are imperialists; that there is no justice in us. Yesterday at an informal tea, held in the Bergsman home so that we could meet those pastors and their wives, together with representative laymen from areas that our brief time will not permit us to visit, an African business man, deacon in his church, expressed on behalf of his community in Western Native Township, deep gratitude to American Congregationalists who through the authorized special program gave funds for the rebuilding of the fire-destroyed church and school. These gifts supplemented the tremendous efforts of the people themselves, and the building is nearing completion.

The periodic visits of Lee and Madge Bergsman to this place, the Sunday school organized by Corrine Nordquest and run by volunteer teachers trained by her, will be constant reminders to many hundreds of Africans that Americans, Christians in particular, are not as Mr. Robeson pictures them and that to have a white skin is not necessarily to be a tyrant. And when they are not there because of the necessity of visiting dozens of other such places, the neat simple building will continue to remind the people. They take deep pride in it because it represents the ultimate in sacrifice by themselves, but they also have an affectionate regard for it because its completion was made possible by friends across the sea.

This church and school, used seven days a week, is symbolic of love and friendship that is possible between peoples separated by seas and continents. It is also representative of faith, character, knowledge, that is being developed in a struggling, confused, bewildered people, in a thousand such places all over the land by devoted African pastors, teachers, nurses, who are aided, advised, encouraged, and sometimes confronted by your representatives, the missionaries.

Sincerely yours,
JOHN A. REULING.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK

(Continued from page 9)

We gave our church slip covers, drapes and lamp shades for the parlor.

Our society purchased two life memberships and two memorials.

We feel very thankful to God knowing that it was through him we were able to achieve these things. We now look forward to a more consecrated new year.

MRS. GLENN GIVENS,
Secretary.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Thank you! If the people across the Southern Convention know and realize our need at the orphanage we shall come along all right. A few dollars for everyone will not impoverish anybody and will do a fine job here. Our report this week is fine and I pray it may be a pleasure for everyone who has access to this letter to make a contribution, and also to boost the offering with others. If we could only reach the entire church public our problem would be solved.

Real often some news comes my way that makes me very happy. A letter following up a suggestion made me at the Eastern Virginia Conference by Emmett and Allen Piland just received from Dr. Jesse H. Dollar suggested that four of our rural churches—Liberty Spring, Cypress Chapel, Bethlehem and Holy Neck—and friends, will send us two box-car loads of peanut vine hay to keep us from having to reduce our A-1 heard of Holstein milk cows on account of the very complete drought here this summer and fall. Now I call that rallying to the orphanage's needs in a most magnificent way. Further, Brother Cornelius Savage of the Bethlehem Church told me at conference that God had been good to him with his corn crop this year, and that he was going to bring a truck load of corn to the orphanage. How about that!

Further still, today I received a letter from Chaplain Johnson Griffin of Fort Knox, Ky., telling me that in the General Protestant Chapel in the 3rd Armored Division at Fort Knox an offering had been received for this orphanage in the amount of $332.11. Now what do you know about that!

They were two happy churchmen from Varina, N. C.—Messers. W. J. and C. A. Ballentine. The trailer which they had hitched to the automobile was loaded—and I mean loaded—with good things. There were several large packages of goods from the stockrooms and shelves of the Powell and Jones department store, many things from shoestrings to shirts, from caps to corduroy jackets and trousers. This was a valuable contribution and we have sent the donors our thanks and blessings. But it did not stop at that. The Ballentines, and a neighbor Mrs.

Frank Mills, had added gifts of packages of pecans and baskets of tomatoes. Well, it was a joy to these two loyal friends to see what others were doing for the orphanage, and I was so happy to have their help. Our children are always glad to see either or both of the Ballentines. They crowd around them and make them happy.

The adult Bible class of the Elon Community Church is doing a wonderful thing. They have appointed a committee to see every family in the church and solicit them for a Thanksgiving offering for the orphanage. They are here and know our need. And it is good and big of them to rally to it. I was delighted to make a contribution when they called on me, and I feel sure everyone else was. Every church would be happier if they set out to make a good, big, Thanksgiving offering for the orphanage this fall. Adult classes in our First Greensboro Church are making a special effort to boost their offering this time. This giving of attention to it, planning it and giving the people an invitation to help will bring the needed funds—and as I say, no one will be hurt. Everyone will be happy. The First Church at Reidsville has been organizing their efforts, and so has First Church in Burlington. At Ingram and Pleasant Grove last Sunday we were given two great offerings, and they requested us to make them as "special, above and beyond."

And I wish you would read that list of friends who have added their contributions to the gifts of the churches. Well, people can do the nicest things. Every now and then somebody is thinking of something good and gracious to do for the orphanage. Kindest thing I know of right now would be to help us pay our current bills.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR NOVEMBER 12, 1953.

Commodities for the Week.

Mrs. J. Allen Kimball, Manson, N. C., Clothing.
Rev. Park W. Fisher, Charlotte, N. C., Coupons.
Palm St. Christian Church, Greensboro, N. C., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $12,696.65
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Hope Mills $18.00
Mt. Carmel 12.00
Piney Plain 41.86

Eastern Va. Conference:
Liberty Spring S. S. $20.00

South Norfolk 23.48
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Bethel S. S. $11.04
Bethel 11.85
Burlington, First S. S. ... 130.28
Durham S. S. 31.50
Kallam Grove 18.00
Shallow Ford 18.00
Union (Va.) 9.00

43.48

Western N. C. Conference:
New Center $20.00
Pleasant Cross S. S. 5.54
Zion 141.75

167.29

Virginia Valley Conference:
Bethel S. S. $2.00

2.00

Total $ 514.30

Grand total $13,210.95

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward $16,962.83
Damascus Missionary Society, Sunbury, N. C. $25.00
The Happy Sharers' Club, Greensboro, N. C. 10.00
Mary Sue Brittle S. S. Class, Bethlehem, Nans. 5.00
Mrs. Elizabeth G. Bennett, Trenton, N. J., in memory of Luther Atwater . 5.00
H. O. Byrd, Suffolk, Va. . 10.00
Dorothy Williams S. S. Class, Franklin, Va. ... 10.00
W. P. Robinson, Chicago, Ill. 1.00
Thanksgiving Offerings:
Miss Vera E. Gilliam, Greensboro, N. C. 10.00
Dr. C. D. Johnston, Jr., Elizabeth City, N. C. . 50.00
P. K. Holt, Burlington, N. C. 100.00
Special Gifts 158.00

384.00

Grand total $17,346.83

Total for the week $ 898.30

Total for the year $30,557.78

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(Continued from page 12.)

government is based on this theory. And our nation recognizes them. For instance, a Quaker with a conscience against fighting, does not have to take up arms in the time of war. The Congress cannot pass a law that prescribes a form of worship or gives preference to any brand of religion.

But with Paul, Peter would emphasize the same principles of citizenship. Both rightly interpreted their Lord when he said "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's and unto God the things that are God's."

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons," Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

Pledges to Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

(Corrected to Oct. 19, 1953.)

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Antioch—E. J. Rohart	$ 343.00
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	106.00
Bethel—H. V. Harman	377.00
Dry Run—R. E. Newton	129.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton	211.00
Newport—R. E. Newton	426.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Harcastle	$ 872.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Bethlehem (Nans.)—R. E. Brittle	2,040.00
Burton's Grove—J. W. Madren	153.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark	200.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Bay View	724.00
Norfolk: Christian Temple—W. Millard Stevens	5,330.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dollar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Harcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein	1,459.00
South Norfolk—O. D. Poythress	2,500.00
Suffolk	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—Carl Wallace	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal	595.00

Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal	132.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	$ 400.00
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wiseman	3,292.00
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Lakeview—Curtis Young	82.50
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Mt. Zion—Thomas D. Sutton	600.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wiseman	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen	1,057.00
Tryon—Orville H. White	*250.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register	1,395.00
Union (Va)—Mark W. Andes	1,498.00

Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

* Contribution.
† Paid in full.

A CALL FOR THANKSGIVING.

(Continued from page 10.)

on this Thanksgiving Day and in all our days to follow let us not forget to "Thank God for God."

There is something strangely touching about the prayer spoken by a little seven year old English girl at the time of a bombing raid over London, "O God, take care of me and mama and papa and brother Jack and uncle George and aunt Rhoda. And dear God, don't forget to take care of yourself, for if anything happened to you we'd all be sunk."

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195..., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195..., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church

By Secretary or Clerk

Address

..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

"Let Us Give Thanks"

By H. ALLAN GLEASON, JR.

As the harvest is completed, our thoughts turn naturally to thanksgiving for the good things of life. We remember the thoughts of the psalmist: "It is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord." Though that is certainly true at all times, yet it is in the autumn that we think of it especially. Among all nations, the season following the harvest is a season of thanksgiving. At the close of their first year in America, the Pilgrim settlers set aside a day for special thanksgiving. That custom they continued to observe every year, and it spread through the entire nation. Therefore every November this country sets aside one day as a special Thanksgiving Day.

If our nation as a whole recognizes the need for thanksgiving, how much more ought the Christian people of America! And how much more meaningful ought our Thanksgiving be! We should especially give thanks unto the Lord, for we know that all good gifts come from God. The harvest, the beauties of nature around us, the joys of life, life itself—all these things and more are gifts of God. And we know that there are a great many things which we never notice, or just take for granted, which also are gifts of God. For these unknown gifts we are also thankful.

As Christians, we know that we can do nothing of ourselves. The good things that we seem to produce come from our working together with God. We do our part; God does his. Our efforts seem great in our eyes; but without the help of God, we can do nothing. This we know, and we therefore cannot fail to be thankful unto God for the fruits of our labors.

But as Christians, we have much more to be thankful for than that. God has given us "the power to become sons of God." This we know as the best of His gifts. We rejoice for the love which God has shown us, "in that, while we were yet sinners Christ died for us." We are continually thankful for His love, which goes with us, for the opportunity we have for service in His Kingdom, for the new meaning and purpose which we have in life.

Christians have always been marked off from others by the fact that they are continually thankful. In times of great trouble and hardship, when there would seem to be little for which to be thankful, they remembered this greatest gift of God and rejoiced in it. They did not let their hardships blind them to the good things which they had. Our national Thanksgiving Day grew out of such a time. The Pilgrims suffered greatly from all sorts of unaccustomed hardships; yet with the winter season approaching, they gathered into their little church, giving thanks to Almighty God for the good things they had.

So ought Christians today to give thanks: for "it is a good thing to give thanks unto the Lord."

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, DECEMBER 3, 1953

NUMBER 47

Enlarged Plant of Rosemont Church Consecrated

The dream of a devoted minister and a loyal congregation becomes a reality as the greatly enlarged plant of the Rosemont Church, Norfolk, Virginia, is completed and consecrated to the building of God's Kingdom on earth.

(See consecration story on back page.)

News Flashes

We present this week the second of the articles by laymen of the Chapel Hill Church. Its writer, Mr. S. H. Basnight is one of the outstanding laymen not only of his conference but of the Southern Convention.

We learn with regret that Dr. N. G. Newman has not responded to treatment, and that he is now in the Rex Hospital, Raleigh, North Carolina. Let's offer our prayers that if it is God's will he may have a speedy recovery.

THE SUN's "office boy" has had quite a few inquiries as to his recovery. He is now at the office full-time, although his ankle is still somewhat swollen and painful; but he is very thankful. This is for the information of those who are interested.

The Executive Board of the Southern Convention will meet in its Fall Session at the Elliott Hotel in Suffolk, Virginia, on December 8 and 9, 1953. The meeting will begin with supper at 6:00 p.m., on Tuesday, December 8, and will adjourn on Wednesday, the 9th, at noon. From the reservations that have been received at the Convention Office, there should be a full attendance.

Dr. Francis Carr Stiffler, secretary of Public Relations of the American Bible Society, is on the air on each Monday in December, on Mutual's popular program entitled "Faith in Our Times," at 10:15 a. m., EST. His themes are: December 7, "Christmas is Coming"; 14, "A Time for Remembering"; 21, "O Little Town of Bethlehem," and 28, "The Year that You've Been Waiting For."

From November 16 through November 20, the Portsmouth Christian Workers' Training School was held at the First Presbyterian Church. Churches represented in the school were Methodist, Presbyterian, Disciples of Christ and Congregational Christian. From our First Church, Miss Caroline Gort served on the Enrollment Committee, W. W. Piland on the Finance Committee, and Rev. W. P. Smith on the Entertainment Committee. The school was a great success, with a total enrollment of 414 persons.

In a letter from Rev. Richard L. Jackson, secretary of the Eastern North Carolina Conference, there is this statement: "I am sending you an account of the recent action of the Eastern North Carolina Conference of Congregational Christian Churches together with a statement of Rev. Mr. Jones. . . . Many of our ministers and laymen have followed the Charles Jones incident with much interest and, I am sure, will be glad to hear the final outcome." We are printing the statement sent in by Mr. Jackson in this issue.

Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Riddle.

Celebrate Golden Wedding Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Luther John Riddle of near Pittsboro, North Carolina celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary on Sunday, November 1. About 150 relatives and friends visited them during the afternoon party to congratulate them. Mr. and Mrs. Riddle have lived in the Hanks Chapel community since their marriage. Both have been members of Hanks Chapel for more than 50 years. Mr. Riddle has served as a deacon for 36 years and has taught a class in the Sunday school for a number of years. Thirteen children were born to this couple, of whom nine are still living and reside in or near Pittsboro.

Are Christmas gifts bothering you this year? You can send four subscriptions to THE CHRISTIAN SUN to friends for the whole year, for just a ten-dollar bill. Where else can you find such a bargain?

Much Interest Shown in Church Program for South Boston

Members and friends of the Congregational Christian denomination in the vicinity of South Boston, Virginia, are vitally interested in beginning a new church. Interest was stimulated at a rally in South Boston in 1952. Two exploratory meetings have been held in South Boston recently.

A group of fourteen met on October 12 at the home of Misses Pattie and Willie Adams in South Boston. At that meeting a committee, composed of Messrs. Herbert Landrum, Lewis Elliott, E. M. Walton, and T. S. Earp, was appointed to investigate possible building sites. A second committee, Messrs. Carroll Seat, W. T. Madren, M. W. Andes, Mrs. E. M. Walton, and Miss Pattie Adams, was appointed to make arrangements for future meetings.

A second meeting was held in the Powell Chapel on November 5, with
(Continued on page 11.)

Standing Committees of the Eastern North Carolina Conference for the Year 1953-54

Executive—Will B. O'Neill, Carl E. Wallace, A. Glendon Johnson, T. N. Daughtry.

Education and Standing of the Ministry—Fred P. Register, J. Frank Apple, Carl E. Wallace, Richard L. Jackson, K. M. Lindner.

Christian Education—Carl E. Wallace, G. Julius Rice, Charles M. Jones, C. W. Russum.

Home Missions—S. H. Basnight, A. H. McIver, I. H. Vickery, E. M. Powell, R. L. Jackson.

Foreign Missions—W. A. Rich, E. M. Carter, Mrs. R. L. Jackson.

Apportionments—L. L. Vaughan, I. H. Vickery, W. A. Grissom.

Stewardship—W. C. Farrell, T. N. Daughtry, A. Glendon Johnson, R. E. Tally.

Evangelism—J. Frank Apple, Fred P. Register, George M. Tally.

Social Action—W. A. Grissom, Mrs. George Nicholson, W. A. Rich.

Program—Members of the Executive Committee and Minister of Entertaining Church.

Public Relations—R. L. Jackson, K. M. Lindner, L. L. Vaughan, Jas. T. Brumbelee.

WILL B. O'NEILL,
President.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieleley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

The North Carolina and Virginia Laymen's Fellowship Meets

The North Carolina and Virginia Laymen's Fellowship met at Monticello Christian Church on Saturday night, November 7. After enjoying a fellowship supper served by the ladies of the host church, the meeting was held in the church auditorium.

Dr. Henry E. Robinson of Burlington, was the guest speaker. He presented the Moonelon project, telling of its many needs and possibilities. Some of the needs stated by Mr. Robinson are as follows: a central assembly building for group meetings and dining hall facilities; twelve cabins; shower rooms, etc. The central unit would cost from $12,000 to $15,000. The cabins would probably cost from $800 to $1,000 each. These additions, along with the facilities already located on the property would take care of approximately 100 campers.

The conference site would be used for summer camps, conferences, retreats, group meetings, etc., by our church people throughout the whole Southern Convention.

The meeting was opened for discussion. After talking the project over, it was voted that the North Carolina and Virginia Laymen's Fellowship accept the task of developing the Moonelon project as our project for the year 1953-54. There were eighteen churches represented at the meeting, and the vote on the above motion was 100 per cent.

It was then voted that the chairman appoint a key layman from each district in the conference to form an executive committee, and that in addition to this committee a key layman from each local church be appointed to be responsible for the promotion of this project within his local church.

Officers for the year 1953-54 were elected, as follows: T. A. Vincent, president; A. E. Pye, vice-president; W. P. Mahan, secretary and treasurer.

Definite plans are now under way which we hope will get the ball rolling on this project. Watch THE SUN for further information on this matter.

W. P. MAHAN,
Secretary.

Laymen's Day Worship Service at Morrisville

A Laymen's Day worship service was presented at the Morrisville Congregational Christian Church on Sunday, October 25, by Mr. Joe Stephenson. A regular service of scripture, hymns and prayer was presented. Mr. Stephenson brought a wonderful message in song, "Because I Love Jesus." He spoke on "Christian Living," giving a message which was an inspiration to and enjoyed by all.

MRS. G. J. GREEN,
Church Secretary.

* * * * *

Newport News Laymen Hold Organizational Meeting

An organizational meeting of a men's group of the First Church, Newport News, Virginia, was held on Wednesday, November 11, in the Fellowship Hall.

The meeting was called to order by Rev. A. Lanson Granger, Jr., the minister of the church, who gave a few introductory remarks. Mr. Harold Stalnaker presented an outline of the work of the Laymen's Fellowship in the Eastern Virginia Conference. Mr. W. B. Williams, chairman of the Laymen's Fellowship of the Southern Convention, spoke on the wonderful possibilities of a local organization working with the entire group of the Southern Convention.

(Continued on page 9.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardestel.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Suydor, G. D. Coleclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195 . . .

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $ for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

The Full Life

By RICHARD K. MORTON

An elderly and wealthy man, in one community, annually gives a big dinner to many associated with him in civic enterprises, and at the same time opens it to many poor children, sending baskets to the homes of many who cannot attend. Years back, he was shocked at the privations encountered by chums of his—and he has never forgotten.

All of us could cite cases along this line, tending to show how much adequate food and provision for life's needs is associated with happiness and a sense of satisfaction.

The full life involves the thankful life. Life cannot be full without genuine thankfulness—to God and to man. The only way to give God full thankfulness is to live the full life—full of faith and love and hope, concern for others and diligence in growing and serving.

The full life is the response of faith. God wants us to have the abundance of the things of the mind and spirit and body that is possible for us. We are challenged to do the utmost with our endowment of knowledge and strength. If we are really thankful, we will show this in all aspects of daily living.

One of the happiest individuals I know has found a real avenue of service and is at it about eighteen hours a day. He seems tireless and pours out not only his time and talent, but also his money. He is always grateful, happy and optimistic, for, he will tell you, he is so fully occupied with what he regards as important and a work for God, that nothing discourages or thwarts him.

One of the few men I know who have celebrated fifty years of ordained ministry told me not long ago that he thought one of the secrets of his long life and richly blessed and happy ministry was that he always tried to fill everything to overflowing. He never held back—in an effort of spirit or mind or body. He always made everything a full experience. Psychosomatic teachings would help us to understand, I think, the justification for his confidence in his way of life.

Wise counsel is contained in I Thessalonians 5:18: "In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." It is not simply in words but also in deeds that we should give thanks.

The full life is the one which finds materials for faith and fullness in every aspect of the daily round. It is the one that is alert and far-seeing, just and generous.

A college and graduate school alumnus told rather ruefully, one day, of a letter he had received from the secretary of an alumni association who really was a promoter and a money raiser. The secretary had sent out a previous letter, and the responses had been neither as numerous nor as money-producing as he decided was imperative. His next letter thus was even more demanding—and definitely scornful of those who could not respond or who, if responding, could give only a small sum of money. Somewhat nettled, the alumnus gathered together papers, pictures and various exhibits from his own great work, publications, honors, and services, far and near—and from the works of a few other alumni. He sent these in to the alumni office, with the suggestion that perhaps success and alumni importance were not to be judged solely on a man's financial resources.

Much of the real success of life, from a spiritual standpoint, lies in the daily ability to express that thankfulness in terms of living.

The full life is one that is aware of God and God's law. It is one that is aware of its own solemn obligations to God and to fellow men. It is one that finds real discipleship in being full—full of the Holy Spirit, full of power and full of love.

In order for life to be full, there must be a real desire on the part of the individual to use whatever energy, strength, wisdom and skill he has in the interest of his own development and the betterment of society. He must desire to increase people's reasons for thankfulness and their attainment of happiness.

The full life is the answer to God's redeeming love. It is also the answer to the riddle of the universe as science knows it. If we fill our time with thoughts and projects of questing after God and utilizing whatever opportunities we have for making a contribution to our times, we are living a full life.

No Thanksgiving season can be without proper retrospect, and humble and respectful thought of the lives and works of those who have gone before us, who laid the foundations, fought many a battle, sowed the seed and prepared the highways.

The full life is indeed the strong life and the happy life and the blessed life!

Principles I Have Preached for Twenty-Five Years

By REV. JESSE H. DOLLAR, D. D.

Outline of a Sermon preached at Liberty Spring Christian Church on Sunday, November 1, 1953, on the Occasion of the Twenty-Fifth Anniversary of his Ministry

"I press on toward the goal unto the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Philippians 3:14.

Twenty-five years ago today (dating by Sundays) I stepped into the pulpit of First Congregational Christian Church, Reidsville, North Carolina, as pastor. I have given myself unstintingly and happily to the full time ministry of the church I love more than I love my own life, ever since.

I was ordained to the full ministry in November, 1923, while I was a student at Elon College. I finished my work at Elon, in May, 1925, and entered Vanderbilt University School of Religion in September. After finishing my graduate work I taught at Southern Union College, Wadley, Alabama, for one year. I then went to Birmingham-Southern College, Birmingham, Alabama, where I taught until June, 1928. We moved to Reids-ville the following November.

Certain principles have been my passion every day since then:

I—I Have Held Unquestioned Faith in the Triune God.

I have known that there is a God.

I have known that there is a Christ.

I have known that there is a Holy Spirit.

There has never been a moment since then that I could not say with St. Paul, "I know in whom I have believed, and am persuaded that he is able to keep that which I have committed unto him."

II—To Me the Bible has Always Been the Record of God's Search and Suffering for Mankind, and Man's Effort to Receive and Write Down
God's Will for Man.

I have never felt that God quit revealing himself when John wrote Revelation, but that he continues to reveal himself unto men, even in our day. He is not through. There is yet more to come.

III—The Church to Me is the Forerunner of the Kingdom of God on Earth.

Indeed it is the Kingdom of God on earth!

1. Its ministers are not to be an echo, but a voice.

2. The church is not a follower of traditions, but a blazer of new trails.

3. The church is not the hiding place of the proud and self-righteous, but a shelter for all who seek refuge from the storms of life.

4. The church is not a struttingstage for those who crave power to order the lives of others, but a pure democracy in which each member has an equal voice in its affairs.

5. The church is not a secret order in which its plans are known only to the favored few, but whose purposes and programs, plans and endeavors, are the business of every member,
and are to be known by all.

In Preaching These Principles—

1. I have tried to be a slave to sincerity.

2. I have sought to keep myself humble for the task.

3. I have tried to love everybody.

4. I have tried to serve where I was most needed.

5. I have tried to speak simply and frankly.

6. I have tried to lead my churches courageously and intelligently.

7. I have never sought to please people when I knew a concession was contrary to what I believed to be for the best interest of the church I was serving.

8. I have tried to deal patiently with those who were opposed to progressive methods in matters of the church, but I have never, nor shall I ever curtail a progressive program because a few are unable to accept the wishes and wisdom of a majority of the membership. They will either get in step or be stepped upon by those whose eyes are fixed and whose hearts are set to keeping pace with a fast moving world—not to conform to the wishes of the world, but to transform it into a fit place for the Kingdom of God.

9. I have tried to keep posted on the best methods of doing the work of the church, and have tried to lead my churches to accept them and practice them.

10. For the future, I shall try to profit by the mistakes I have made in the past, and shall endeavor to lead into greater fields of endeavor with the firm assurance that all the spiritual and material resources of a good God are available to those who seek to do his will.

In such faith, and to such leadership, I here and now re-dedicate my life, so help me God!

Letters from Fran and Ed Riggs

2918 Regent Street,
Berkeley 5, Calif.,
November 11, 1953.

Dear Friends of the Southern Convention:

I am beginning to realize how hard it is to get letters written in the U. S.
A., because of the faster pace of living and tighter schedules than in the Orient, whether or not anything more is actually accomplished.

After a pleasant summer in San Jose, relaxing and getting acquainted with relatives, we are now here in Berkeley, where I am taking the Public Health Education course at the University of California (instead of at North Carolina, where we had at first planned to go). We are living at the Presbyterian Missionary Court, which is a small group of tiny but comfortable houses, maintained by the Presbyterians for missionaries of any denomination on furlough in the Bay area. We have neighbors from Japan, Korea, India and Brazil; and there are three other families with children the age of ours, and plenty of play space for all, so the set-up is nearly ideal.

The course in Health Education is fully living up to my expectations.
I had been considerably worried in India because of the big gap between my theories that disease prevention was cheaper and more practical than cure, and the actual facts that my program of health education wasn't getting any results. Fortunately it was only my methods that were ineffective and behind the times. The basic concept of health education seems to be valid, and it is a new specialty that has been growing in this country in the past few years, with newly developed principles and techniques that should be very applicable to the problems in India.

(Continued on page 14)

The Bible's Relationship to the Church, as Seen by a Layman

By S. H. BASNIGHT.

Our church is a place of reverence and worship—a place to meet our Christian friends. It is therefore, the backbone of our community.

It is here that we can bring our troubles and our heartaches and ask God to help us find the way to solve them. It is here that we listen to our minister guiding us in the way we should go, reading from God's Book, the Bible—The Book of books. It is in such an atmosphere that we may get closer to him.

All of us should read the Bible often. It holds the most important place in things we should do in our church. We must make it our guide and yardstick, our rule of life and faith, for in it we find the rules we must carry out. To get the most out of the Bible we should first want to study it and then the answers will come more easily. It can't be treated just as a job to be done. Be glad you have the privilege in this free country to read and study as you choose. It is really a joyous way to relax and also learn the true meaning of life.

The study of the Bible is really a big challenge to us in our family life, especially when we have children. It is our duty and pleasure to study the Bible with them and help put their feet in the straight and narrow path—the only path leading to God's Kingdom.

Remember that the early impressions are the lasting ones, so make them good impressions. This will be a great blessing to you in later life when you enjoy seeing them doing good in this world of ours. I enjoyed a children's quiz program on the radio this morning. The moderator quoted parts of sentences from the Bible and each child, in turn, was given the opportunity to complete the quotations. It was unrehearsed and only one or two misses were made. It thrilled me considerably to know that these children were so familiar with quotations from the Bible. Maybe we should try some quizzes with our children. Have you joined a Bible Study Group?—Do so now.

We do need more rooms to teach them in and an assembly room where such programs can be carried out. This very thing is in the making now as we want to start as soon as possible on an Educational Building. With everyone's shoulders to the wheel, we will push on hard to its completion—for God will help us.

Join a Bible Study Group as announced.

Eastern North Carolina Conference Receives Rev. Charles M. Jones into Full Membership

The Rev. Charles M. Jones, formerly minister of the Chapel Hill Presbyterian Church, was received as an ordained minister of the Eastern North Carolina Conference of Congregational Christian Churches on October 20, 1953, in the Shallow Well Church.

Mr. Jones was removed from his pastorate by the Orange Presbytery, February 24, 1953, and, although no charges were ever made against him, was refused a letter of transfer as an ordained minister to the Congregational Christian Fellowship.

Rev. Mr. Jones and Conference Officers.

The Eastern North Carolina Conference took the following action:

"Voted: that the Rev. Charles M. Jones, a member of the United Church, Chapel Hill, and ordained by the Prtsbytery of West Hanover Synod of Virginia on April 20, 1932, who has declared himself in full accord with the principles, polity and government of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, subscribes willingly to the ordination vows required by candidates by our conference, and who has given your committee every assurance of his willingness to cooperate in matters of denominational concern, be received as a minister of this conference in full standing."

Mr. Jones, in applying for membership to the Congregational Christian Churches indicated the following qualities of mind and spirit which led him to seek admittance:

"First, its emphasis on Christian experience as primary and one's creedal or intellectual description of that experience as secondary. Believing that God speaks to men directly and individually, I know that richness can be imparted from one Christian to another when such experiences are shared. New light can come into our understanding of the truths of God and his ways with us as one faces the Christian life not as a creed to be accepted but as a life to be lived. It is this freedom that accords men the privilege to respond to God in their own way and in their best thought and to share the fruits of that response with one another that I value highly.

"Secondly is its emphasis on democracy both within the local church and the denomination. We have learned in the South that 'absentee ownership' of large businesses has resulted in domination of communities by those who knew little about their needs. The emphasis of the Congregational Christian denomination on freedom for the local congregation is another reason I would wish that denomination for my spiritual home.

"Then, too, the denomination offers both the individual and the local church an opportunity to work with and through other churches. Any Christian or local church that has no broader horizon than himself or his town, any Christian or local church that does not join his strength and concern with that of fellow Christians far and wide, falls far short of measuring up to the spirit of Christ.

"I am looking forward to what I confidently believe will be years of 'growth in grace and knowledge' as a member of the denomination."

R. L. JACKSON,
Secretary.

Special! Special!

The new film, "For Every Child," was heard in many places over the radio and television broadcasts during Christian Education Week, the first of October. It is one of the finest films yet produced for use in local churches. The rental charge is $8.00, and you may order it from Miss Doris Boswell, Box 336, Elon College, N. C. We may have this special rate only until February, so churches should place their requests soon. Rev. Alexander B. Ferguson, who has charge of Visual Aids in our denomination, says, "The film is designed to recruit teachers for the church school, but has a much broader emphasis too, in that it also points te the total Christian Education responsibility everyone has for children." PATIE LEE COGHILL.

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

"The Deeds of Four"

Upon one occasion Christ came preaching the gospel of the Kingdom and healing the sick as he went. It was noised abroad that he was near that community. There was in that community one sick of the palsy. He was paralyzed, helpless. He realized his condition. He believed that the great Physician could help him, but he could not go to him. There were four neighbors who realized his condition and knew of his desires. These four men came, put the palsied man on a couch and bore him to the Master. But there were so many people gathered about the house that they could not get the lame man to the Physician. The faith of the four men was dominant. They would brook no defeat. They came to the house where the Physician was preaching and healing. They climbed up the wall, tore away the roof, and let the palsied man down before the Christ. When he saw their faith, he said to the sick of the palsy, "Thy sins are forgiven thee," and he was made whole.

Down in Carteret County, by the sea, lives a family of Taylors. To the father and mother of this family, there were born four sons—Daniel, William, Alfred and Leslie. These sons were endowed with ability, vision and a quality of human kindness not easily surpassed in the hearts of any. These sons, brothers they were, grew up in this community. They knew the needs, the desires of their neighbors and friends. Reaching maturity, they went out into the world and invested their talents. Their efforts were blessed, their vision widened. They went from success to success. Their possessions increased. They were humble and grateful. They never forgot their home, their childhood surroundings. They wanted to do something to help the people of their own community and county, and at the same time would be a blessing to any who might come.

To carry out this desire and demonstrate it to the world, they took a part of their holdings, employed experts, surveyors, engineers, landscape gardeners, architects and builders, and erected one of the most complete and artistic, one of the most scientific and serviceable hospitals in this entire country.

This hospital is located at Sea Level, North Carolina, the village of their boyhood days. Only a few hundred feet from the hospital, they have erected a beautiful motel for the convenience of the families and friends whose relatives might be patients in the hospital or visitors in the community. Only a short distance away they erected a pier at the waters edge where boats and yachts may dock.

The Sea Level Community Hospital, donated by the four Taylor brothers, was opened on Saturday, November 22, at 11:00 a. m., with fitting ceremonies and a program that did honor to the occasion. Prominent citizens, educators, physicians, financiers, politicians, statesmen and ministers from all parts of the state, and from Virginia, Florida and Cuba were present. These four boys—Dan, William, Alfred and Leslie, by their vision, deed of human kindness and magnificent generosity, have built a marvelous instrument for the relief, the comfort, and the convenience of the unfortunate of Carteret County and surrounding communities. This is a miracle of mercy, and its creators shall not lose their reward.

* * * * *

Elon College Looks to the Future

With a magnificent past, replete with service to needy young men and young women as they sought an education and preparation for life as they had chosen to live it, Elon College now faces its present responsibilities and future widening opportunities. Its vision and desires, unfortunately, are not matched with available resources to make real its needs to achieve its plans.

In 1926, with the completion of its five new buildings, Elon College was considered to be the best equipped small college in the South. This appraisal was doubtless true twenty or more years ago, but time moves on, requirements are multiplied, and demands increase. Today for instructional purposes, Elon College is efficiently and adequately equipped, but for the accommodation and comfort of its students and for financial resources for the support of the college, it is considered inadequate and its needs are evident.

Present facilities for boarding students need badly to be replaced with modern dormitories and up-to-date dining room and kitchen. We have four dormitories and some off-campus rooming houses for students. These dormitories, however, were erected from 1890-1905. Necessary improvements in construction, convenience and accommodations have changed drastically since that far away day. Young people live in better homes and more pleasant surroundings now than then. Naturally they require and expect living quarters of a more recent construction.

The constituency of Elon College, including the church, alumni and friends, should count it a privilege to provide these accommodations for the would-be students of Elon College. Specifically, Elon College now needs two new dormitories for men, two new dormitories for women, and a new dining room for the entire campus. Our permanent dining room was destroyed by fire in 1941. Since then we have endeavored to get along with temporary facilities for preparing food and feeding our students. We cannot continue to use these inadequate facilities if we are to attract to our campus the young people who should come and keep them for their college education. The time has come, and is now, for something to be done to meet these evident needs and to put our college on an equal basis with sister institutions engaged in the same business as Elon is.

In 1946 the church and Board of Trustees launched a campaign to secure $2,500,000 for Elon College in a ten-year period, closing in 1956. There have been interruptions in this program, but even so, the authorities have forged ahead, and have certain definite achievements to their credit. Of the $2,500,000, $1,300,000 has been secured. With this money a new power house has been built, a new gymnasium erected, 23 faculty houses and apartments provided, approximately $300,000 added to endowment funds and $75,000 of liquid assets in invested funds. In addition to these achievements, student apartments, temporary dining room, aviation laboratory, etc., have been added. The remaining $1,200,000 of the $2,500,000 is to be allocated for new dormitories and a new dining room. These facilities are needed so very badly today. This need should appeal to

(Continued on page 9.)

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Year at Dendron Enjoyable and Profitable As Well

The work in the Dendron Missionary Society this year has been an enjoyable task under the leadership of Mrs. Garland Spratley. And we feel it has been very profitable and helpful as well.

We are glad to report that we have met all requirements, and we have met each month. Perhaps our December meeting and Christmas party is the most outstanding of the year. In our society we play the game "Bluebird." Each member writes her name, date of birthday, and anniversary. These are drawn and you become the secret bluebird of the person whose name you have drawn, bringing her happiness by gifts, cards, etc. Our December meeting was held in the class room of the church, which had been beautifully decorated for the occasion with holly, candles and a lighted tree under which the gifts of the bluebird were piled. After scripture and prayer, the story of the nativity interspersed with songs was given by record. A story "The Littlest angel," poems and Christmas carols were enjoyed. After the program the gifts were presented and each member found out who had been their bluebird during the year. Refreshments were served and social hour enjoyed.

We are looking forward with faith to a successful year, trusting Christ who never fails us. REPORTER.

* * * * *

Little Creek Society Completes Year With All Requirements Met

The Little Creek Missionary Society has completed the year's work with all requirements met, but I shall only write about our Friendly Service. We have received pleasure in doing it. At Christmas we sent gifts to Ellis Island. "Glory Bags" went to Africa, used clothing to Korea and Mexico. We were so impressed by a letter from Mrs. Moulton stating the dire need in India for wells, that our women sent forty dollars to be used to dig wells.

As we dedicated our gifts the words of Jesus, "In as much as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethern, ye have done it unto me," took on real meaning for our women.

Some of our women worked in Vacation Bible School and missions were stressed there also. We took India as our project, and each day a missionary story was told, and on the last day an offering taken for India to be sent to Mrs. Moulton.

Our church has two missionary friends in Mexico who were home on vacation this summer. Our missionary women in cooperation with the church gave them a pounding of medicines to be used among the Huasteca Indians.

The stewardship film "More For Peace" was shown in our church and was a challenge to each Christian person to give more for Christ's work. REPORTER.

* * * * *

Reports from Societies

The following reports were received some time ago, but lack of space has prevented their being published until now. They report on activities for the last conference year.

PLEASANT RIDGE (G).

The Woman's Missionary Society of Pleasant Ridge Congregational Christian Church has enjoyed a very successful year's work. We have had our regular meetings with good attendance and well planned programs. One of our achievements was our Thank Offering Service. We had for our speaker Mrs. W. E. Wiseman of Greensboro. She made an inspiring talk and showed the great need of this church in Carroll County. Our offering was more than we had expected.

In December we had our Ellis Island party at the home of a member of the society. The tree was decorated with little flags of many lands. We played games of other lands, and then our program represented the immigrants at Ellis Island. A nice lot of gifts for them were placed around the tree.

In January we were invited to the book review "Human Rights" by Mr. C. W. Phillips. He did a very fine job. We joined the other churches in Greensboro for the World Day of Prayer.

From the sale of Christmas cards and a few other little activities we were able to pay $100 on a new carpet for our church, which we are all proud of. We are giving a Life Membership as we have for the past several years.

The Business Girls' Circle has also done a splendid year's work. We all work together and in that way we all can do more and better work.

We have what we call a "sunshine fund." From this fund we send flowers or do something for the sick and shut-ins. After all, happiness comes from making others happy. As we go into the work of a new year, let us give of our best to him who gave his all for us.

MRS. CALLIE HUFFINE,
Secretary.

* * * * *

HOLY NECK.

The Woman's Missionary-Aid Society has completed its year's work for 1952-'53 under the fine and capable leadership of our new president, Mrs. Robert Warren.

We have had very inspirational programs given each month using the packet prepared by the convention literature committee. Our attendance has been very good at our meetings.

We had good representation at the conference and rally. We also had delegates to attend the Twenty-First Biennial Session of the Woman's Missionary Convention of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches which was held at the First Christian Church, Burlington, N. C., in April. And we had delegates to attend the School of Missions held at Elon in the summer.

We have cooperated with the other churches in our community in observing the World Day of Prayer, which was held at our church, and World Community Day.

One of the highlights of the year is our May Fellowship Supper and meeting held jointly each year with the Woman's Missionary Society of the Holland Church. This year we were their guests. They served a delicious meal and the fellowship was delightful.

After the meal, the program was given by our society. Mrs. Allen Piland gave a very inspiring talk. Then Miss Phyliss Weaver rendered a solo, accompanied by Mrs. J. O. Davidson.

We are looking forward to our next May Fellowship supper, when the Holland ladies will be our guests and they present the program.

The young people of our church met with us for the Bible study, when we had the Book of Colossians taught by our pastor, the Rev. Allen Hurdle.

We also enjoyed the study book, "These Rights We Hold," taught by Mrs. Jim Wright at our all-day meeting last January. A covered dish luncheon was served and was enjoyed by all.

At our March meeting, Mrs. I. W. Johnson taught the foreign mission book, "Africans on Safari," which we enjoyed. We are always glad to have Mrs. Johnson with us and to bring us inspiring and uplifting messages.

We were very pleased with our Thank Offering and sent it to the suggested project. We have sent gifts to other projects we were supposed to, as well as contributing to needy in the community. We sent "The Upper Room" to shut-ins.

We are indeed grateful for the good year that we have had together and look forward to another year's work in the service of our Lord and Master. May we always be willing and eager to share our talents, money and time in the upbuilding of his kingdom, that others may know him as their Lord and Saviour.

MRS. J. E. MARCH,
Secretary.

* * * * *

HOLLAND.

When the Woman's Auxiliary of the Holland Congregational Christian Church met in September, they had visible proof of some of the work done by the group during the last year—the kitchen was ready for inspection after having been renovated and painted. The electric range had been moved and a new double sink installed, making the work centers more accessible to a greater number of women. The walls had been painted a soft shade of green with the cabinets finished in the natural wood. Red inlaid linoleum on all the work space gave the entire room a bright atmosphere. For several years it had been the ambition of the group to completely do over the kitchen—and it was gratifying at last to have it clean and convenient and attractive. Nearby thirteen new folding tables were stacked, ready for use when dinners are served by the auxiliary.

As the various reports were read, we had met every achievement goal and had also done work in our community. Perhaps the very best feature of the meeting, though, was the fine spirit of cooperation and of dedication to the work of the church. It was very evident that the members felt a pride in the accomplishments of the past year and an inspiration and determination to make the coming year show forth even grater work.

MRS. H. V. WHITE,
President.

* * * * *

ANTIOCH.

The Women's Missionary Society of Antioch Christian Church has held meetings each month during the year. Mrs. W. E. Garrison, our spiritual life leader, has given us inspiring messages at each meeting following the Bible study as outlined in the packet.

We have also had programs each month using the literature suggested.

We had representatives at the fall Conference and spring Rally. We observed World Community Day and the World Day of Prayer.

In May we had a fellowship supper and the program on Christian Family Life was in charge of Mrs. J. F. Morgan. She brought us a very inspiring message.

We have sent Friendly Service gifts to Ellis Island to be given to the immigrants.

We have given a Life Membership to our oldest member, Mrs. Ella M. Butler.

We had a Thank Offering program and sent offering to suggested project.

We have made quarterly reports and will meet our apportionment for the year.

We heard both home and foreign books reviewed.

Now, as we near the end of the year, we know we have fallen short in many ways, and we hope that in the new year we may do better work for the Master.

MRS. J. H. GODWIN,
Reporter.

LAYMAN'S FELLOWSHIP

(Continued from page 3)

and what could be accomplished through unity.

A great deal of interest and enthusiasm was shown by all present, and it was the consensus of opinion of all present that a fellowship should be formed. It was decided to select a name at our next meeting.

A nomination committee was appointed, and the meeting recessed for refreshments, after which the committee presented a slate of officers for the ensuing year.

The officers elected are as follows: H. D. Stalnaker, president; G. G. Givens, vice-president; R. W. Aldridge, vice-president; Gene Corbitt, vice-president; A. T. Jarvis, secretary, and E. T. Mason, treasurer.

The newly elected officers were instructed to appoint sufficient additional officers or committees as needed to complete the organization and present a full program at the next meeting in January, 1954.

The meeting adjourned with everyone feeling that it had been a very progressive evening.

A. T. JARVIS, Secretary.

NEWS OF ELON COLLEGE

(Continued from page 7)

the entire supporting constituency of Elon College, together with friends.

In a united and determined effort, we could and should provide for these needs of the college. At the turn of the year, the $2,500,000 campaign will be re-inaugurated and re-vitalized, with a determination to complete the fund and to erect our dormitories and dining room.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

There is such a thing as between seasons, when it is difficult to say that this is winter and this is spring. At present there seems to be a lull in the support of the college on the part of our Sunday schools and churches. The majority of our churches operate on the conference program; that is within the conference year. These churches are beginning a new year. Elon College is in the closing months of 1953. Our conferences have different years; that is, they begin on and end on different months. It is simpler for Elon College to end its year on December 31, and begin the new year on January 1. However, it is perfectly all right for the churches to make the endings of their church years as they wish.

The Convention Office will keep their records correct. The college will keep its records and total offerings within the calendar year. It matters not when contributions on conference apportionments are received, they shall be properly credited. These contributions mean a great deal to the college. We are grateful whenever they come.

Our apportionment balance stands at $12,455.95. There were no receipts reported this week.

A Page for Our Children

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Boys and Girls:

Those of you in school have heard about it being Book Week. Some of your schools have fairs or exhibits and show the people of the community what kinds of books you read and like to read.

Are you a book worm? There aren't too many of those these days, lots of "Vidiots" (know nothing but what they see on TV), they say, but readers.

It's a shame too for reading is one of man's greatest blessings. A book requires no channels, current, no antenna or converter. All one needs is a comfortable spot, the book and the time! That's another thing we lack—time. But nonetheless, reading is so important it should not be neglected.

Some people have given up their very lives for books. It was true of some of the men who first translated the Bible into English. They died unpleasant deaths so that others might read what God had to say to his people. Others gave their lives in printing the books.

The people of our world who are truly great are readers, and they have read the Bible. One of my favorite teachers was the late Dr. Douglas S. Freeman. He preached, taught and wrote. He used to tell us that young people who wanted to succeed in life must "read the King James Bible and Shakespeare." He was a successful writer, and he knew both.

The first books for boys and girls were made on horn and shaped like a square with a paddle-like end with a hole through it, and a cord attached to hang at the child's waist or around his neck. The Abe's were on its border, the Ten Commandments and the Lord's Prayer, too. Their first reading was the Bible. Think how hard the words are!

Today we can buy a beautiful, well-printed, beautifully illustrated book for a quarter. The words are just right for the reading ability of different children. The story is interesting, and friends made in books may be lasting friends.

Do you know the Pied Piper, Velveteen Rabbit, Chicken Little, Doctor Dolittle, Black Beauty, Pinnichio, Wooden Doll, Peter Pan, the Soldier from the "Tinder Box"? There are many, many more, and the real living people from the Bible, and Christian heroes since the days the Bible was written.

They await your opening the pages of their book and letting them come alive for you, as your friends. A salute to Book Week!

* * *

Miss Huggins, whom we mentioned last week, grew up in Kansas, not in China, as we said. She went to China after she was grown.

* * * * *

The House Family at Southern Pines During Thanksgiving

The House family spent a very happy Thanksgiving time, divided between home and our former home at Southern Pines.

We were grateful that we could be present for the consecration service of their lovely new building and for the memorial to Robert Lee House, naming the little chapel for him.

Southern Pines has a natural beauty unequalled in America. The educational building takes advantage of this, and many lovely vistas are seen through the clear glass windows. The view of the pines and magnolias through the Fellowship Hall is almost breath-taking.

There were many guests and there was a lovely dinner following the service. The church folk felt grateful that at last they have a place of their own. They recalled those who had gone before and worked so hard, those now working, and the ones to come.

The church was filled with beautiful flowers and greens, which added to the loveliness. It was good to be there and to see the beauty, and to worship the Lord in his holiness.

Dr. Oswald McCall, interim minister, is a very fine gentleman. His leadership is of a high nature.

Congratulations to the church and people!

* * * * *

"Faith in Themselves"

By LAURA GRAY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Ronald was not bright—so everyone said. Though ten years old, he was in a room with boys and girls of eight and nine.

Today a new teacher, Miss Breen, had taken over the class, and all were alert to see what she would do. She wore a pretty red dress and smiled a lot. Ronald followed the lesson with so much interest that he forgot all about the blotting paper with which he had planned to make ink balls.

"Ronald,"—her eyes rested on him—"will you come to the board and work out some problems for me?"

What? Surely she could not mean him! He glanced around, but there was no other Ronald.

A girl jumped up, breathless, She said, "Please, the other teacher never asks Ronald to work at the board!"

"Will you come?" Miss Breen repeated, smiling.

He rose quickly. He had followed the lesson with such interest that he found he could do all he was asked. He walked back with a new feeling about himself. Maybe he was not stupid after all. Yet, he must be—everyone said so. She would find it out, too.

But Miss Breen continued to believe in him. She helped him without making him feel inferior. Gradually even the class came to change their thoughts about him.

Before very long, he was able to take his rightful place in school. He was never brilliant, but he learned to work, to do his best, and he succeeded in living down his reputation of being stupid.

Children, especially, live up—or down—to our thoughts of them. Thoughts can be more potent than scoldings. Sometimes we see whole families of brilliant members. One after another they go out into life and rise to the top, each in his chosen line. Part of this is due, no doubt, to innate ability, but much more is caused by the thoughts held at home regarding them. They have heard remarks such as these: "A Trenton is expected to do his best in school and at sports." "A Trenton simply does not fail in any undertaking. He has good manners and is considerate of others."

"Your face is dirty!" "Gracious, when are you going to stop growing!" "How round-shouldered you are!" "Your hair is like a rope!" "If only you'd walk instead of slouching!" These are some remarks hurled at children. If only we would

(Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Box Supper at Pleasant Grove Proves Great Success

A group of young people turned to an old-fashion method of raising money and achieved wonderful benefits from it.

The young people of the Pleasant Grove church in the Western North Carolina Conference sponsored a box supper several weeks ago in order to raise money for a project of their group. The boxes were prepared by the young people of the church and were auctioned off to the highest bidder. The average price for the box lunches was $5.00, with one box bringing as much as $11.50.

The group raised $85.00 from this box supper which will be used to purchase Venetian Blinds for the church.

The boxes were decorated and a prize was given to the best decorated box lunch. Adults as well as young people of the church and surrounding Bennett area were invited to participate in the fun and fellowship of this festivity.

Rev. Bill Simmons is the pastor and youth director in this church.

* * * * *

News from Union Church of Hunterdale

On Sunday, November 22, 1953, the Union Christian Church at Hunterdale, near Franklin, Virginia, was visited by the High School Glee Club from Snow Camp, North Carolina.

On that day 35 or more boys and girls, accompanied by their principal and his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Primm, traveled by bus to Hunterdale. The Glee Club, under the direction of Mr. Fred Easter, music teacher and director in the Snow Camp High School, led the 11 o'clock worship service in song.

At the close of the morning service, the Youth Fellowship group of Union Church, assisted by their counselors, Mrs. Larry Overby, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Coster and Edgar Blythe, were hosts to the visiting Glee Club at a luncheon served in the Fellowship Hall.

During the afternoon, the boys and girls, with their hosts, toured the paper making division of the Camp Manufacturing Company.

At 5 o'clock in the afternoon, a congregation of members and a number of visitors assembled in the auditorium of the church for a concert of sacred music given by the Glee Club. The boys and girls thrilled the congregation with their wonderful performance.

The visit from Snow Camp of this group will long be remembered by those present for the occasion.

MRS. J. G. JOYNER, JR.,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Have you heard about the cow that ate blue grass and "Mood Indigo"? If it doesn't make sense read it out loud. If it still doesn't make sense, blame my brother. He told me about it.

* * *

"Doctor, if you operate, can I be back playing the violin in two week's time?"

"I can't guarantee the violin; but the last patient on whom I performed this operation was playing a harp inside of twenty-four hours!"

* * *

I sincerely hope that each of you and your youth group are planning an active Christmas season. Perhaps you know a family whom you might play Santa Claus for. Most of you will be working on plays. Give your best; you have a wonderful story to tell.

"Advent, the four Sundays next before Christmas Day, is a time of Great significance in the Christian year. It marks the time of the coming of Jesus Christ into the world. We should not let the secular and commercial appeals of Christmas obscure its true meaning for us."—W. Millard Stevens.

"A good church member will be a good son, daughter, husband, wife, father, mother, neighbor and citizen. To be a good church member one must be good in all other human relations."

SOUTH BOSTON PROJECT.

(Continued from page 2.)

thirty people present. Supt. Wm. T. Scott, Mrs. John G. Truitt, president of the Southern Convention Mission Board, Dr. John G. Truitt, and Dr. H. E. Robinson were present also to lend their support.

Much interest towards the possibility of a new church has been expressed. It was discovered that approximately 70 members of some Congregational Christian church live in the immediate vicinity of South Boston. Some of these return to their home churches and some attend local churches of other denominations. The six churches of our denomination in this area are Liberty, Pleasant Grove, Ingram, Hebron, Lebanon, and Union, Virgilina.

A worship service will be held at the Powell Chapel on Sunday evening, December 6, at 7:30. Dr. Wm. T. Scott will bring a brief message. Definite plans which are taking shape will be brought to the attention of the group present and discussed. All members and friends of the Congregational Christian churches in South Boston vicinity are most cordially invited to be present.

WM. T. SCOTT,
Superintendent.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

stop to realize what effect they must have on sensitive minds, surely we would change our methods.

Beware of discouraging anyone, particularly a youngster who has not the power, as a grownup has, to cast out thoughts that depress and crush. Rather, give children courage. Let them feel that they can succeed in anything they want to do provided they are willing to work. Help them to conquer shortcomings instead of being held down by them. Teach them to strive to give full value for money paid them instead of priding themselves on seeing how much they can get for a little—whether their contribution is service or commodities. Even where ability seems to be lacking, still miracles can happen when boys and girls have faith in themselves and can feel always our loving understanding.

"We are never secure unless there are great spiritual depths into which we can cast the anchor of our hopes."

—Temple Tidings.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"One Human Race"

LESSON XI—DECEMBER 13, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Truly I perceive that God shows no partiality, but in every nation any one who fears him, and does what is right, is acceptable to him."—Acts 10: 34-35.

LESSON: Acts 10: 9-16; 25-28; 24-35; 44-45.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Acts 17: 24-31.

Today's lesson deals with an important truth. This is evidenced by the fact that over a whole chapter and a half of Acts of the Apostles is devoted to the story. It is one of the turning points in Christian History, and an outstanding feature of the preparation of the Christian Church for its worldwide mission. Here the legitimacy of Gentile Christianity is recognized, officially recognized, and established. Here is the first recorded instance of the conversion of a Gentile. (There may have been such conversions previous to this, but they are not recorded.) Here is divine evidence, that under God, and before God, there is no respect of persons, and that people of every race and color and class and creed, can through penitence and confession and faith receive the Holy Spirit, and become members of the church, the Body of Christ. Here is authentic and irrefutable evidence that in Christ Jesus, there is one human race. Here is the solution to most of the world's woes and worries. For if every man in our world understood and practiced the principle embodied in today's lesson, we would have peace and prosperity and plenty for all.

The Men.

There are two central characters in this dramatic incident. Peter and Cornelius. The former was a devout Jew, a Christian Jew, who was beginning to understand something of the wider implications of the Christian faith and message, but who still thought of the Gentiles as outside the pale of Christian fellowship, and strangers to the household of faith. Before he had his great vision, he would not have thought of going into a Gentile home and eating with a Gentile.

And there was Cornelius, a Roman soldier, a man of high character. He had come to know and to worship the one true God. He was a man of prayer and good works and of generous gifts. Strangely enough as it may seem to some folks, this godly, generous, prayerful man was not saved! He had a great deal, but he lacked one thing—the "new birth." "Except a man be born again or from above, he cannot see, much less, enter the Kingdom of heaven" said Jesus. But Cornelius had a sincere and seeking spirit. He followed the light he had and he came into more light. And when the light came he walked in it. That is the important thing.

The Meeting.

God works in mysterious ways, his wonders and his works to perform. Here is a notable instance. Here were two men who knew nothing whatever about each other, and thirty miles apart. As one was saying his prayers the Spirit of God told him to send to a distant town for a man who could tell him what he ought to do to be saved. As the other was waiting on the house-top (the flat roof of the one story home in which he was staying) for dinner, he had a vision which prepared him for the coming of the messengers from the other man, and heard a voice commanding him to go, nothing doubting. Each was obedient to the heavenly vision. And God brought these two men together in such a way that history was made. When Peter finally got to Caesarea he not only found Cornelius at home, but he found that he had gathered his kinsmen and near friends and was awaiting him. "We are all here present in the sight of God to hear all things that have been commanded thee of the Lord." What would happen if all Christian Churches were filled with such audiences! The cynic might say that this meeting between Peter and Cornelius was coincidence. The facts indicate that it was providence.

The Message.

What did Peter say to this good man and his friends? In brief he unfolded to him the plan of salvation: The means of salvation—the name of Christ, that is Christ revealed as Lord and Saviour; The universality of salvation—to every one that believeth; the condition of salvation—belief or faith in Christ; The nature of salvation—remission of sins, for thus begins the experience which issues in eternal life. Here is the model for every preacher of every age. And our age needs it as much, if not more, than any other age.

The statement given above "In brief he unfolded to him the plan of salvation" is not quite true. Peter started to do that and was making a good job of it, but he never finished it. Even while he was yet preaching, the Holy Spirit came upon and into the hearts of the men to whom he was preaching. Even while he was still speaking, they accepted Christ, and were filled with his spirit. Thus would God have us know that the work of the Holy Spirit is independent of confession or baptism or the imposition of apostolic hands. Of course there should be confession of faith and the rite of baptism, there must be growth in new life, there must be repeated "refillings" of the Spirit. But the essential experience is the yielding of the heart to Christ and the consequent transforming of the life by the power of the Holy Spirit.

The Miracle.

The miracle has already been described—the coming of the Spirit on the Gentiles, and the validity and the authenticity which that event gave to the conversion of the Gentiles to faith in Christ and to a new life in him. And here was a sign, as John would say, that all men, Gentiles and Jews, were one in Christ, that Christ had broken down the middle wall of partition between them, that Gentiles who accepted Christ were no longer foreigners and strangers, but were fellow-citizens with the saints and members of the household of faith. This miracle needs to be repeated. For today nineteen hundred years after this experience of Simon Peter, there are multitudes of Christians who are exclusive, narrow and prejudiced, who deny to people of other races and classes and colors and creeds and cultures, equality of standing before the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Membership.

When a man stands before the altar of the church and becomes a member of a local church, the minister ought to make clear to him that he thereby

(Continued on page 14.)

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Thank you! If everyone who knows about our needs does something for us, we shall reach our goal of $65,000.00. The record for the two past weeks is good, and I am so pleased and excited. I have worked and prayed and worked again, hoping the people will help us meet the necessities before January 1, 1954.

If you have sent a contribution, now do a little "missionary" work for us in asking someone else to make us a contribution. It is not one but everyone that does the trick.

Ladies from our church at Randleman came here last Friday night at 7:30 to look the orphanage over. They took the Main Building first, and went through the kitchen, the diningroom, the halls, the girls' bedrooms and out through the living room. They were delighted with what they saw. The girls were quite pleased with them, too, and so was Mrs. Rash, their matron. From there they saw the Boys' Building, and it, too, they liked. They looked at it up stairs and down and pronounced it good. I am not sure the night was a good time to look at some of the boys' rooms, but I will say for them they had them in good shape. And especially since we were no one of us looking for them. From there, they visited the Baby Home. Here they struck their Waterloo! On the first floor little boys on pretty beds were sound asleep. They oohed and aahed, as they quietly, whisperingly, looked at them—little boys who had been tucked in bed by the church—little boys who had no mother to tuck them in. They were sound asleep and well and strong. Upstairs were little girls, in prettier rooms and sleeping just as soundly. It was enough.

They saw their matrons, and they heard their story. They were proud of their church's part, and their own part, but they said they must help more, and they will.

Then I took them to the superintendent's home, and since Adelia was not there, I showed them every room. They learned how comfortably and yet how economically built it was; and how it was built without taking any of the regular funds for it. They were again pleased, and they went away approving what they saw.

I needed their visit and their kind words to cheer me up. You come, too, won't you?

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR NOVEMBER 19, 1953.

Commodities for the Week.

Epsilon Sigma Alpha Sorority, Burlington, N. C., Fruit Juice.
G. C. Talbott, Halifax, Va., Clothing.
Turner's Chapel, Coupons.
The Woman's Auxiliary, Reidsville Church, Coupons.
Mrs. E. G. Middleton, Norfolk, Va., Coupons.
Monticello Missionary Society, Coupons.
Mrs. H. E. Pearce, Sr., Franklin, N. C., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $13,210.95
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Fayetteville $ 9.00
Morrisville 10.03
Wentworth 51.00

Eastern Va. Conference:
Newport News S. S. $ 13.00
Rosemont, Special 60.00
Windsor S. S. 10.00

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Berea $ 24.00
Elon College 3.11
Greensboro, First 50.04
Ingram, Special Offering 80.80
Pleasant Grove, Special
Offering 88.60
Union (Va.) S. S. 5.00

Western N. C. Conference:
Grace's Chapel $ 25.00
Pleasant Union, S. S. 14.42

Total $ 444.00

Grand Total $13,654.95

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward 17,346.83
Ladies' and Men's Bible
Class, Winchester Ch. ... $ 10.00
Holt Trust Fund 150.00
Truitt Bible Class, Greensboro, First Ch., in appreciation of W. B. Truitt 10.00
Mt. Zion Christian Church, Eclipse, Va., in memory of Oscar William Crittenden 10.00
Bethel Women's Fellowship, Elkton, Va., in memory of Charles E. Himler 5.00
Bethel Women's Fellowship, Elkton, Va., in memory of William Offenbacker 5.00
Mrs. Dana B. Saunders, Zuni, Va., in memory of: H. H. Munford 10.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. W. Bradshaw 10.00
W. K. Saunders 10.00

Thanksgiving Offerings.

Ladies' & Men's Bible
Class, Winchester Ch. ... $ 10.00
Mr. & Mrs. R. O. Browning, Burlington, N. C. . 37.50

R. D. Thompson, Jr., Richmond, Va. 50.00
Mrs. Mamie K. Perkinson,
Wise, N. C. 15.00
J. A. Monroe, Norfolk, Va. 100.00
Cecil Yarborough, Burlington, N. C. 10.00
C. B. Ellis, Jr., Burlington,
N. C. 25.00
Mr. & Mrs. M. M. Vipond,
Norfolk, Va. 10.00
Clarence Fields & Family,
San Leandro, Calif. ... 10.00
Mrs. C. S. Allen, Ether,
N. C. 20.00
Engineered Plastics, Inc.,
Gibsonville, N. C. 40.00
Mr. & Mrs. A. C. Shearer,
Chapel Hill, N. C. ... 100.00
Mrs. Anna Lee Johnson,
St. Petersburg, Fla. ... 5.00
V. Lee Hanbury, Norfolk,
Va. 25.00
Misses Birdie, Alice and Sallie Wilson, Virgilina,
Va. 8.00
J. H. Webster, Pittsboro,
N. C. 10.00
W. C. King, Burlington,
N. C. 5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Harvey L.
Worrell, Sr., Holland,
Virginia 10.00
Mrs. Carro Jones, New
Hill, N. C. 5.00
Special Gifts 20.00

735.50

Grand Total $18,082.33

Total for the week $ 1,179.50

Total for the year $31,737.28

REPORT FOR NOVEMBER 26, 1953.

Commodities for the Week.

Cone Mills Corp., Greensboro, N. C.,
Cloth.
Columbia Mfg. Co., Ramseur, N. C.,
Cloth.
Mrs. Lester Lohr, Broadway, Va., Clothing.
Mrs. D. J. Kelly, Richmond, Va., Coupons.
Economy Dry Cleaners, Randleman, N. C.,
Clothing.
Mrs. Herbert Yow, Randleman, N. C.,
Clothing.
Mrs. Mollie Brewer, Randleman, N. C.,
Clothing.
Mrs. Helen Owen, Randleman, N. C.,
Clothing.
Miss Faye Simpson, Burlington, N. C.,
Pecans.
Mr. & Mrs. Marvin McPherson, Burlington, N. C., Pecans.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward $13,654.95
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Catawba Springs $ 40.00
Auburn, Special Offering 247.68
Ebenezer, Special Offering 93.57
Hayes Chapel, Special Offering 72.63
Wentworth 50.00

503.88

Eastern Va. Conference:
Norfolk, Bay View $ 5.00
Rosemont 60.00
Portsmouth, First 16.99

81.99

N. C. and Va. Conference:
Mt. Zion S. S.	$ 6.59
Reidsville S. S.	68.00
	74.59
Western N. C. Conference:
Flint Hill (R), Special
Offering	$ 61.82
	61.82
Virginia Valley Conference:
Newport, Thanksgiving	$ 40.41
	40.41
Total	$ 762.69
Grand Total	$14,417.64

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$18,082.33
Philathea Class, Suffolk
Church	$ 5.00
Chaplains and men of the Third Armored Division,
Fort Knox, Kentucky	332.11
United Cong. Christian
Ch., Columbus, Ga.	7.23
W. K. Wagner, Suffolk,
Va., in memory of Mrs.
W. K. Wagner	10.00

Thanksgiving Offerings.

Mrs. H. E. Pearce, Sr.,
Franklinton, N. C.	$ 10.00
Mrs. Dora Steele, Durham,
N. C.	5.00
Friends	100.00
Mr. & Mrs. Doyle McFarland, Sanford, N. C.	200.00
A. D. Pate, Burlington,
N. C.	10.00
Bernard M. Cone, Greens-
boro, N. C.	25.00
Mr. & Mrs. John M. Holt,
Burlington, N. C.	25.00
A. L. Curling, South Norfolk, Va.	10.00
Thos. O. Morrison, Brooklyn, N. Y.	10.00
J. W. Drake, Pittsboro, N.
C.	50.00
Randleman Heart Sisters
Society	60.00
Mr. & Mrs. H. E. Oller-
head, Chapel Hill, N. C.	50.00
Jule Pace, Mebane, N. C.	20.00
A. L. Owen, Smithfield, Va.	50.00
Henry I. Jaffe, Suffolk,
Va.	25.00
Conover Furniture Co.,
Lenoir, N. C.	200.00
Mrs. M. C. Faucette, Ashe-
boro, N. C.	12.00
Miss L. Kennedy, Worth-
vile, N. C.	15.00
Mrs. Lina V. Apple, Reids-
ville, N. C.	10.00
G. D. Moore, Burlington,
N. C.	50.00
G. Marvin Holt, Burling-
ton, N. C.	25.00
W. G. Coble, Burlington,
N. C.	150.00
Zimmerman Lumber Co.,
Burlington, N. C.	100.00
E. H. Moore, Burlington,
N. C.	50.00
H. F. Huffines, Gibson-
ville, N. C.	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. J. B. Truitt,
Norfolk, Va.	10.00
T. D. Shoemaker, Chicago,
Ill.	10.00
Victor Murchison, Win-
ston-Salem, N. C.	10.00

Burlington Rotary Club	686.00
Mrs. W. M. Downey, So.
Boston, Va.	25.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. G. Sharp,
Reidsville, N. C.	25.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. H. Booth,
South Norfolk, Va.	10.00
Ambrose Sunday School,
Ambrose, Ga.	15.00
F. O. Blechman, Newport
News, Va.	20.00
Cooper A. Hall, Burling-
ton, N. C.	30.00
Neese-Shoffner Furniture
Co., Inc., Burlington	15.00
Mr. & Mrs. R. C. Jarrett,
Hampton, Va.	15.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. A. Russell,
Suffolk, Va.	50.00
Mrs. John A. Hall, Henderson, N. C.	15.00
Dr. & Mrs. Arthur H. Perkins, South Weymouth,
Massachusetts	10.00
Miss Celeste Penny, Raleigh, N. C.	15.00
Mr. & Mrs. W. C. Doffle-
myer, Luray, Va.	25.00
Mr. & Mrs. S. J. Hinsdale,
Burlington, N. C.	15.00
Alamance Laundry, Burlington, N. C.	150.00
Miss Ruth Miler, Greens-
boro, N. C.	1.00
T. M. Stroud, Sr., Greens-
boro, N. C.	10.00
C. Clarence Stamey, Falls-
ton, N. C.	100.00
Mr. & Mrs. A. Y. Allred,
High Point, N. C.	10.00
Ellen Grimes Bible Class,
First Ch., Portsmouth,
Va.	5.00
Baker - Cammack Hosiery
Mills, Inc., Burlington,
N. C.	100.00
W. P. Robinson, Chicago,
Ill.	2.00
LeRoy A. Stadler, Greens-
boro, N. C.	50.00
T. T. Holderness, Holderness & Co., Greensboro,
N. C.	25.00
W. T. McLeod, Greensboro,
N. C.	25.00
J. Saunders Williamson,
Burlington Engineering
Co., Inc., Graham, N. C.	50.00
Special Gifts	65.00
	$ 3,215.34
Grand Total	$21,297.67
Total for the week	$ 3,978.03
Total for the year	$35,715.31

LETTERS FROM THE RIGGS.

(Continued from page 5.)

The course here lasts until June; then I have three months of practical field training, which I hope to get in some health department in or near North Carolina before we sail again in September.

We were delighted to hear just the other day from our Indian colleagues in Kilenjunai, where we were last year that adequate rains had finally fallen after a severe drouth lasting all summer. But we were dismayed to learn that the medical work there will have to close up because of financial difficulties. We had hoped that it could continue without trouble when an Indian doctor was found to carry on. But apparently his salary is too much strain on their budget. Economic realities are driving the doctors in India to the cities, and we still haven't figured out a way to provide medical care where it is needed in the villages.

Best regards,

Ed Riggs.

* * *

Dear Friends:

The last two months haven't been very exciting, but we have appreciated very much just being an American family with a little home of our own. I have been learning how to shop with two children, and keep things moving along in the house so that Ed can keep up with his studies and not have to come home to too big a mess. Louis has had quite a time adjusting to the other children here. At first he was continually coming into the house in tears. Being the new boy and having a little less language than the rest, the other two boys of his age found him wonderful material to tease. Recently though, he has gotten along much better and goes bouncing out of the house with great zest. Joy has had much less trouble because she is younger and a little girl while all the rest are boys.

This is just a note to keep you posted.

Cordially,

FRAN RIGGS.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

(Continued from page 12.)

becomes a member of the universal church of Christ. That every man, woman and child anywhere in the world, regardless of the color of his skin, or the condition of his life, is a brother in Christ of his, and a fellow member of the household of faith. By one spirit have we all been baptized into one body. There is one Lord, one faith, one Spirit, one baptism, one God and Father of us all.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

Don't forget your Christmas Gift subscriptions to THE SUN.

Pledges to Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

(Corrected to Oct. 19, 1953.)

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Antioch—E. J. Rohart	$ 343.00
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	106.00
Bethel—H. V. Harman	377.00
Dry Run—R. E. Newton	129.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton	211.00
Newport—R. E. Newton	426.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Harcastle	$ 372.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo	459.00
Bethlehem (Nans.)—R. E. Brittle	2,040.00
Burton's Grove—J. W. Madren	153.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark	200.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Bay View	724.00
Norfolk: Christian Temple—W. Millard Stevens	5,330.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dollar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Harcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein	1,459.00
South Norfolk—O. D. Poythress	2,500.00
Suffolk—	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—Carl Wallace	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Morrisville—E. M. Powell	207.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. O. Lester	$ 775.00
Albemarle—S. E. Madren	885.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson	694.00
High Point—Guy H. Veazey	426.00

Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00	Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00	Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00	Tryon—Orville H. White	*250.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00	Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:		Union (Va)—Mark W. Andes ..	1,498.00
Apple's Chapel—John R. Lackey	$1,563.00	Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Burlington:		Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	400.00
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wiseman	3,292.00
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Kallam Grove—C. Fred Allred ..	344.00
Lakeview—Curtis Young	82.50
Mount Bethel—C. Fred Allred ..	213.00
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Mt. Zion—Thomas D. Sutton ..	600.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wiseman ..	364.00

* Contribution.
† Paid in full.

SUMMARY BY CONFERENCES.

Conference	Quota	Accepted
Va. Valley	$ 5,736.00	$ 3,736.00
Eastern Va.	51,000.00	43,227.00
Eastern N. C.	17,690.00	10,229.00
Western N. C.	11,476.00	4,295.00
N. C. and Va.	50,552.00	23,113.50
Totals	$136,454.00	$84,600.50

We exaggerate misfortune and happiness alike. We are never either so wretched or so happy as we say we are—Balzac.

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

Consecration Service at Rosemont Church

Sunday, November 15, was a big day for the people of the Rosemont Christian Church, as they met in their remodeled sanctuary for the consecration service. Dr. Leon Edgar Smith, the President of Elon College, delivered the Consecration Address, using as his theme, "This is God's House," The consecration solo, "Bless This House," was sung in the morning service by Mrs. Ray Morrison. Mrs. Royal Gallup was the soloist Sunday evening, singing "My Prayer for Rosemont." This was an original composition, the words being written by Mrs. J. H. Booth and the music composed by Mrs. Frank Goforth, organist of the church.

The Rosemont sanctuary has been enlarged to seat a total of 375 persons. The interior has been completely transformed, making a chancel arrangement with a divided choir. The worship center is beautiful and most inspiring.

The marble Communion Table was given by the Men's Bible Class in memory and honor of the ministers who have served Rosemont.

The brass candle sticks were given in memory of Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Downing by their children. One brass flower vase was given by Emmett Cuthrell in memory of Mrs. Lillie Cuthrell. The other flower vase was given in honor of Mrs. Maude Hedley by members of the Maude Hedley Bible Class. The altar hangings were given in memory of Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Gibson and "Aunt Betty" Gibson by the Ladies' Bible Class. The Baptismal Font was given by the Philathea Class in honor of Rev. Melvin Dollar, the present minister. The gold picture frame in the vestibule was given in memory of Mr. Merritt Laubach by his family. The picture itself was given by Mrs. Mary Booth.

The rose window in the new front gable of the church was given by Mrs. Oscar F. Smith in memory of Mrs. Gertrude Bonderant, Mrs. Alice Mills and Mrs. Sallye Roane, charter members of the church.

The new addition to the Religious Education plant consists of twenty-one Sunday school rooms. The enlarged plant can accommodate 550 pupils adequately.

It was estimated that by contract the expansion and remodeling program would have cost at least $150,000. The actual cost has been only about $100,000. The church and Sunday school plant is completely air conditioned throughout.

The remodeling program began soon after the present minister, Rev. Melvin Dollar, came to the church. During this time the church has added one hundred and forty new members, and the church attendance has almost doubled. The church program has been reorganized in the Sunday school, the Women's missionary work, the Youth work and other phases.

Rosemont Church stands in the heart of a growing community. She has gained a great deal in the last half a century, but there is a tremendous job that she can do in the future in furthering Christ's Kingdom.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, DECEMBER 10, 1953

NUMBER 48

"We Would Commune with Thee"

By REV. THOMAS H. BRITTON

Pastor Shelton Memorial Church, Portsmouth, Va.

Our God, we would commune with thee,
Our faithful love proclaim.
With all our mind and heart and soul,
We bless thy holy name,
We bless thy holy name.

For thy great Church we give thee thanks
And offer unto thee
To serve the Church's Lord and King
In steadfast loyalty,
In steadfast loyalty.

O, may his Spirit touch us here
And set our hearts ablaze;
So may our earthly lives become
A glorious song of praise,
A glorious song of praise.

Then, when our work on earth is done,
And we are called to thee,
We'll bless thee in thy Church above,
Commune eternally,
Commune eternally. Amen.

News Flashes

If you would send a Christmas gift worth while, send your friend a year's subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Next Sunday is Universal Bible Sunday, why not brush the dust off the big Bible over in the corner and put it to use.

Mrs. W. W. Sloan, of the Elon College Faculty, and a contributor from time to time to THE SUN, has promised us an article for the Christmas issue. We know you will like it,

We are running this week a sermon by Dr. Aaron N. Meckel, pastor of the First Congregational Church of St. Petersburg, Florida. The sermon was delivered on Sunday evening, October 11, to the National Foundation of Grandmothers Clubs.

The December morning services at Central Church, Norfolk, are being broadcast again this year over Station WRVC-FM. These services were so well received last year that the station manager requested the privilege of broadcasting them again this year. They are tape recorded and can be heard from 2 to 3 p. m., each Sunday at 102.5 on your FM band.

On Thursday of last week the New York Court of Appeals upheld the Appellate Division, which had reversed the decision of by the Brooklyn Supreme Court denying the right of the Congregational Christian Churches to merge with the Evangelical and Reformed Church. The ruling of the court was to the effect that "religious groups have the right to determine their own affairs without interference by the state."

"I wish to congratulate you on securing the fine article in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of December 3, 'Principles I Have Preached Twenty-five Years.' Just how many ministers do we have who have been preaching that long or longer? Principles that they have preached would certainly make good reading as well as news. We should have such an article every month. Who will be next? Mr. Minister,

In Memoriam—Robert Lee House

(Resolution passed by the Eastern North Carolina Conference.)

Today we remember and honor a beloved fellow pastor, a leader of great stature among our Southern Convention churches. Robert Lee House first began his ministry by serving churches in the Eastern North Carolina Conference while a student at Duke University in 1925. On January 20 of this year, 1953, while serving as pastor of the Church of Wide Fellowship in Southern Pines, his earthly ministry came to an end.

Utter simplicity, gallant purpose, high courage, complete consecration to the task, marked this man of God who served among us. His sudden going brings us a consciousness of an overwhelming loss.

Yet, if Lee House were to speak to us today, we are confident that he would not want us to mourn his passing, but to give ourselves more fully in high resolve and in loyal service to the cause for which his own life was given. THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Franklinton College, the Church of Jesus Christ—these were dear to his heart. Who among us will rise up and carry on where he left off? That call should ring throughout the church and evoke a great response. Thus his death may accomplish that for which he spent his life—a loving and loyal consecration of the church to the task of advancing the Kingdom of God.

Matthew Arnold has written a few lines which seem to be especially appropriate on this occasion. We do not know about whom they were originally written, but they can well be said of Lee House:

If, in the paths of the world
Stones might have wounded thy feet,
Toil or dejection have tried
Thy spirit, of that we saw
Nothing—to us thou wast still Cheerful, and helpful, and firm!
Therefore, to thee it was given
Many to save with thyself;
And, at the end of thy day,
O, faithful shepherd, to come
Bringing thy sheep in thy hand.

We recommend that the conference stand for a few moments in silence to the memory of this great Christian spirit.

what principles have you preached through the years?"—A Sun Reader for more than forty years.

Rosemont Church Closes Successful Leadership Training School

The Rosemont Church, in South Norfolk, held a local Leadership Training School, November 16-19, with a total enrollment of 71. The Board of Religious Education felt that we should invite others to join with us, so Portlock Methodist, Portlock Baptist, the Nazarene Church, and Berea (Great Bridge), South Norfolk, and First (Berkeley) Congregational Christian Churches were invited. Four of the churches invited sent representatives, and the fellowship together was grand.

Dr. H. S. Hardecastel, pastor of Berea (Nansemond) and Oakland Congregational Christian Churches, taught the course, "A Brief Survey of the New Testament"; Miss Gwendolyne Arbuckle, director of Religious Education of the Ghent Methodist Church in Norfolk, led the course in "Introduction to Teaching"; and Miss Dunn, director of Religious Education at Rosemont, taught the course on "Planning and Leading Group Worship."

Everyone seemed to enjoy the school very much, and we feel great benefits were gained for all those who attended.

MELVIN DOLLAR,
Dean.

Christmas Activities for Shenrock Charge

The Christmas activities scheduled for the Shenrock Charge in the Virginia Valley Conference which composes the following churches: Bethlehem, Concord, Wisler Chapel, Palmyra and Woods Chapel, include the following:

For Bethlehem, in Tenth Legion, Christmas Program for the entire church and Sunday school on Christmas Eve, December 24, in the Sanctuary.

Concord Church, in the Hupp community, will present a Christmas program on Monday evening, December 21.

Wisslers Chapel, in Piney Woods, will begin the season's observances with a Young People's Meeting on Friday evening, the 11th, at the home of Mr. A. N. Green, with Ruby Green and Jimmy Litten as the hospitality committee. The Christmas Program sponsored by the choir and young people of Wisslers Chapel will be given on Sunday evening, December 20.

(Continued on page 7.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieleley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

"The Layman and His Missionary Interests"

PROGRAM FOR DECEMBER.

SUGGESTED HYMNS: "We've a Story to Tell to the Nations."; "Rescue the Perishing."

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 28: 18-20.

PRAYER: "O thou Shepherd of all people, look with special favor upon all our missionaries, both home and foreign. Guide, love and keep them. Amen."

MEDITATION:

The missionary interest of a Congregational Christian layman is expressed at home through the Board of Home Missions. It has a history, of over 100 years, unparalleled in America or in any other nation.

The Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions is the organization which supports over 350 missionaries in foreign fields for the Congregational Christian fellowship. It is a thrilling story to hear not only the beginnings of this work, but also the current reports.

A lot of missionary work is being carried on by income and investments made by people who gave and have long since passed on. Appreciation is due them for their far-sighted interest and ability to leave funds for carrying on after they were gone.

In 1852, a fund was begun to help build new churches and to aid old churches in expansion or improvement. In 1953, this fund of three and one-half million dollars is insufficient. After sensing the need because of a moving and growing population, the Board of Home Missions is furnishing leadership in a building loan fund campaign to raise an additional four and one-half million dollars in a two-year period.

The American Board is continually studying its field to do the best possible job with its limited resources, and especially in training national leadership to carry on when American aid is limited or cut off entirely. Both the Home Board and the American Board are interested in helping people help themselves. Moreover, the missionary interest is not only religious, for it spills over into all phases of life—education, medicine and agriculture.

Questions for Discussion.

1. Where are the home mission fields located?
2. What are the foreign missionary stations? What countries?
3. How can more men be interested in missions?
4. Why has missionary giving declined in recent years?
5. What are the main missionary problems, home and foreign?

"What Religion Means to Me"

By THOMAS G. HURYSZ,

Student of the School of Business Administration, University of North Carolina

When asked to give a short talk on the subject, "What Religion Means to Me," I realized that I had never given much conscious consideration to the subject until a very recent illness. At that time I discovered the important position that Christ and his teachings held in my life.

In order to ease into the subject, I am going to quote Dr. William C. Menninger, a well known and highly respected psychiatrist. Dr. Menninger stated recently that 85 per cent of the "stomach trouble" and a high percentage of heart trouble could be traced directly back to emotional difficulties.

I am sure that some of you know of one or possibly several persons who have no organic disorders, but who

(Continued on page 13.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195...

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

Why the Bible is the World's Greatest Book

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

UNIVERSAL BIBLE SUNDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1953

The value of any book is determined by its message and its power to inspire depth of thought and nobility of conduct on the part of those who read it. Measured by that standard, the Bible surpasses in value any other and all other books that have been written.

The Bible, as we have it, is in fact a library of books—66 different books bound in a single volume. Some of the Old Testament books date back 2700 years—the latest of the New Testament books to the end of the first century A. D. The contention that all the books in the Bible are of equal importance is of course perfect nonsense.

The Bible is the greatest book in the world, not because it is the largest seller in the bookstores of the world, but instead it is the largest seller because it is the greatest book. We are told that there are more Bibles sold—ten to one—than any other book on the market. That record is due to the fact that it has a universal message to meet the universal need of mankind. The message of the Bible is the message of God's love for mankind, God's goodness, God's power and God's help, which is available to all who by faith and experience seek to know him "whom to know aright is life eternal."

Enemies of the Bible have tried to discount and discard and even destroy the Bible by their sophistries and their antagonisms. Misguided friends of the Bible have made claims for the Bible which the book itself will not substantiate—claims which cast reflection upon the dignity, the sacredness and the practicability of the book. Indifferent people have ignored the book and passed it by on the other side.

Centuries have come and gone, with their tidal waves of destruction lashing against every bequest of the past, and yet the Bible stands today as firm as the rock of Gibraltar. Ideas about the nature of its inspiration have changed, but, with the more enlightened understanding, the Bible has become a more wonderful book. The old idea of verbal inspiration has given way to the understanding that the Bible's inspiration is based upon the fact of the truths it reveals. The Bible is inspired because it inspires those who reverently read it. The inspiration of the Bible does not rest upon any theory of its inspiration, but upon the fact that it inspires us.

Ideas about its basis of authority have changed, but with the true understanding of its basis of authority, it has become a more understandable book. Its effect upon the lives of men and women proves its authority. "It's a good book to live by." Ideas about its infallibility have changed, but because of the new ideas it has become a more readable and a more authoratative book than ever. It is infallible in spirit and in purpose, not in letter. To be infallible in its wording would have required infallible men to write it, infallible men to translate it; inallible men to print it, and infallible people to read it.

The Bible is the greatest book in the world because in it are found the greatest truths, the most important truths, the most powerful truths to be found in any book ever written. In this book are truths that have the power to change human behavior—power to make people want to live changed lives, and power to enable people to live changed lives. "Search the scriptures"—there is truth enough here—search until you find it. Men and women who are in closest accord with God, the Author of life, and with their fellowmen, order their lives by its teachings. It is not a question as to how much of the Bible a person knows, but rather how much of it one lives. "Thy word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against thee." There is sufficient truth in the Bible, yes enough truth in certain single books of the Bible to make every sincere life happy, every worthy life successful, and to save the entire world from wreck and ruin. A proper regard for the Bible is the best credential any person can have. Tell me the regard a person has for the Bible and I can tell you what kind of a person he is.

The Bible masters men's minds and rules their thoughts; it masters men's morals and keeps them clean; it masters men's wills and keeps them strong; it masters men's conduct and keeps them true, it masters men's lives and keeps them happy and useful. A person's high estimate of the Bible is not expressed by his saying that he believes the Bible "from cover to cover." Such a statement may only reveal one's ignorance or one's insincerity. Regard and reverence for the Bible is not expressed by any such statement or by any defense which one foolishly thinks he has to make for the Bible, but by the belief one cherishes in the God whom the Bible makes known. "The Bible is its own defense." For evangelists or ministers to think that they have to bring up their artillery of pet arguments in defense of the Bible is as foolish as for boys with wooden guns to think their services are required to defend their nation in time of war. No estimate or appraisal of the Bible, no theory of its inspiration, and no statement of belief in its authority can take the place of the evidences of its influence upon one's life, one's loyalty, truthfulness, fair play, love, honor, reverence, service, and one's regard for "The Book" itself and the love one cherishes for the God whom the Bible makes known.

The Bible is a key to efficiency, to happiness, to power and to victory in life in whatever vocation or profession one follows. Someone has said that the book of Proverbs is the best text book on character or business that can be found anywhere. Other books of the Bible are the best text books on citizenship, faith, conduct and character building.

Any who have lost their way in life—beating against the wind, all the time going but getting nowhere—will find that "this book will be a light unto your feet." Countless thousands have found it so. Its truths about the "here" and the "hereafter" cannot be recommended too highly.

The Bible grows in our appreciation as knowledge of its origin and of its making, together with knowledge of its progressive revelation, increases. The idea that a person should not approach the Bible with a questioning mind is all wrong; for knowledge of and proper use of the scriptures is a mark of culture and an asset of power to any life. A knowledge of the real purpose and the true content of the different books of the Bible makes it more meaningful, more usable and more valuable. The books of "the law" give us the ethical code and the religious ceremonies of the early Hebrews. The Ten Commandments give us the moral code exacted of people in that ancient day. Certainly no one could call himself respectable if satisfied with a lower code today.

The prophetic books tell us of the call of the people of that long ago to return to the worship of the one true God. The prophets were not making predictions about the future—they were making indictments against contemporary life which, if not corrected, would lead to unavoidable and disastrous consequences. Micha exposed the oppression of the poor by the rich—demanded justice, championed the cause of the underprivileged. His prophecy has a strong social appeal. Hosea called the people to realize that "sin hurts God," and pled with the people to be true to their Creator. The prophets emphasized the fact that God's universal desire and demand was for righteousness. So with each prophetic book, the prophet calls to the people to return to the Lord. Prophecy is not a foretelling of events, but a forth-telling of needs and of truths to meet those needs.

The Gospels tell the story of the greatest life that ever trod the ways of earth—the life of the Man of Galilee. Jesus—the One "who spake as never man had spoken"—loved, and lived, and served. His life was the fulfillment of God's dream of a life that would meet all his expectations of man. The exploiting age which Jesus entered was asking, "What can we get out of men, what can we get them to do for us?" Jesus met the issue squarely with the challenge that love for God in human hearts causes people to ask, "What can we do for men?" Jesus challenged men to live in order to serve and not merely to get.

The Book of Acts, the letters of Paul and the other letters of the New Testament tell how Christ lived in the hearts and lives of men in the first century. Someone has well said, "Another Book of Acts is being written today by Christian people for the world to read."

The Book of Revelation gives intimations of the life after death—and it would not be irreverent to say that much of that book may seem fanciful instead of factual to the less mystically minded readers, but modern psychology confirms the claim of its dealing with the actual. Its writer was not only a Christian, he was also a Master Mystic. Mystics today appreciate most the message of Revelation, and mystics also have revelations and mystical experiences which, though as real to them as walking down the street, may nevertheless seem fanciful and imaginative to us who pride ourselves in being "practical minded."

Some people are so much concerned about eating places where "seconds" are served at the meals that they do not enjoy to the full their "firsts" in fearing that they may lose out on the "seconds." Just so some people seem more concerned about the "seconds" of the Bible, and are more concerned about "the Second Coming," "the Second Blessing," etc., than about the preponderous truths of Christ's life upon earth and what his presence and his teachings have meant and might mean to humanity today; and the blessing of discipleship with him now.

My experience has been that people who spend their time in thinking and talking about the "Second Coming of Jesus" and about the "Second Blessing" are missing out all along the line in failing to make the most out of Christ's first coming, and the fact that he has already come again every time a life like yours and mine has bidden him welcome.

Moreover, some people fail to recognize that the blessings of God do not stop with the first blessing or the second blessing, but that God's blessings continue into the hundredth and the thousandth blessing—and far beyond that for all who sincerely love the Lord and faithfully seek to serve him.

Let us never forget that our reverence and regard for the Bible cannot be expressed by any theory we may cherish about its origin or its nature, for the only way one can truly express any belief is by life attitude and conduct. We can only show our belief in and our regard for the Bible by our sincere desire to follow its highest teachings about man's relation to God and man's relation to his fellow-men.

We call the Bible a "Living Book," and so it has lived through the centuries, but it is a living book for us only as we live its truths. I repeat: The Bible does not need our defense in apologetics or polemics, for the Bible needs no defense. It is its own defense. But it does need our sincere acceptance and our daily practicing of its truths and our walking in its light in order to win the regard of unbelievers for the Book of books.

No life can know true peace or real fulness of joy that ignores the challenge of this Book. No home is safe that spurns its appeal. No nation can long endure that rejects its Christ. Let the world turn again to the Book of books, and the pathway for humanity will be brightened even unto the end of a perfect day. Its spiritual truths are God's revealing light for mankind; its moral precepts are the safest guide for individuals and nations; its truths are the best

(Continued on page 11.)

"A Legacy Worth Leaving"

A Sermon by DR. AARON N. MECKEL, Pastor
First Congregational Church of St. Petersburg, Florida

A minister friend of mine likes to tell about the creative influence of his grandmother on his life. As a little boy the family used to go and visit the home of the grandparents. It was his grandmother who used to sit and read to him by the hour. She knew the likes of a small boy, and patiently ministered to them. And then she had a way of placing her hand on his head as he would leave, and of saying, "Now John, see to it that you walk with God, and life will be good to you." He could never forget the kindness of this grand old lady. It was Victor Hugo who said, "If you want to civilize a man you must begin with his grandmother."

One of the greatest grandmothers of all time is mentioned in a letter the Apostle Paul once wrote to a young convert by the name of Timothy. There is but brief mention of this woman; but what is said strikes deep. And what an influence for good Lois (for that was her name) had on this young grandson of hers! Just listen, "I am reminded of your sincere faith, a faith that first dwelt in your grandmother Lois and in your mother Eunice, and now, I am sure, dwells in you!" And then Paul goes on to request the rekindling of this gift in Timothy. "See to it that you stir it up! Don't let your sacred inheritance languish!" What a legacy this is! So deep and genuine is the faith of Lois that it lasts through three generations. First in Lois, the grandmother, then in Eunice, and then in Timothy. A heritage must be vital to be so enduring.

There is much wisdom in the last will and testament of an old preacher of the Gospel. Searching among his left-overs, his family found these words scribbled on a piece of paper: "Materially, I leave nothing to my sons and daughters. Spiritually, I leave them much, for I leave them my firm faith in God and my deep reverence for his word. Having that, they will possess everything needful." There again, was a legacy worth leaving.

Suppose that we look a bit more closely at this legacy grandmother Lois left for Timothy.

I.

She left this grandson of hers a positive love for the Holy Scriptures. "From a little child," Paul is saying, "you have had a knowledge of the Sacred Scriptures which are able to make you wise unto salvation." Pray, what finer thing could she possibly have left him? Reading between the lines of this Epistle to young Timothy, there lights up the face of a sainted woman, reverently fingering the pages of Holy Writ, and faithfully reading from them to her young grandson. And when the day came that he had to go out into the world to shift for himself, he did not go morally rudderless! He had a compass to sail by, and a banner to march under. He was inwardly sound through the knowledge of God's Word.

A famous juvenile judge, here in America, recently said a very disturbing thing. In his opinion there is more genuine danger to be found in the spiritual insecurity of our youth than from the blandishments of a godless communism from without. The youth of America need spiritual rededication, he says. Joseph Fort Newton once gave it as his opinion that the greatest single tragedy of our day lies in the fact that a generation is growing up that knows not the teachings of the Holy Bible. Think of how that presents a challenge to the pastors, parents, educators and business leaders of America! Our heritage as Americans is literally quarried out of the pages of the Bible. From its pages came the vision that bloomed into our precious liberties as free men under God. And we are not getting that heritage across to our children. That is the fact that fronts us in this crucial day.

Winston Churchill once lamented the fact that the great words were going begging in England. Words that came out of the Bible, such as duty, righteousness, goodness, honor, kindness, justice. What he said about England is true here in America also, and ought to give us deep concern.

When Andrew Jackson lay dying, he pointed to the Bible near his bed and said to his physician, "That Book is the rock on which the Republic rests."

II.

This famous grandmother also taught her grandson how to make a life worthwhile, thrilling adventure. She taught him that in order to get something out of life, you must first put something into it. In a time like ours, when a lot of people are bored stiff with the meaninglessness of every-day living, this is a timely reminder.

The pages of the Book of Acts read like an adventure tale. After young Timothy meets up with the Apostle Paul, and surrenders his life to the Lordship of Jesus Christ, there is never a dull moment. He is swept upon the tidal bosom of the great revolutionary movement of that first Christian century. He goes with his master Paul to help found the first Christian churches of history. And what miracles of faith he sees worked! Dead men are raised to life. Ordinary men become extraordinary! Whole communities are spiritually revolutionized through the power of a living Christ. The seeds of a new civilization are planted, seeds which ultimately come to flower in our own continent and land. Talk about life being worthwhile! Like Sherwood Eddy of our day, this young convert to Paul's Christ could also say, "I have seen God do it!" Like Julia Ward Howe, in her thrilling hymn, he could sing, "Our God is marching on!"

That's the essential cure we need to route the pessimism abroad in our land today. It's so easy to stand by and lament the waywardness of our time. What we need to be doing just now, especially those of us who call ourselves Christian, is to take a positive and militant initiative. For historic Christianity always takes the offensive. It doesn't stand on the sidelines making excuses; it takes the initiative against evil. On Governor Bradford's monument at Plymouth, Massachusetts, are the words, "What our fathers with so much difficulty secured, do not basely relinquish."

Friends, there are negative forces of evil at work in our land. And in the name of our God, we must lift up our banners and do battle against them. And in doing so life becomes worthwhile.

III.

For another thing, Lois gave young Timothy a philosophy of hardship. "Bear your share of hardships as a loyal soldier of Jesus Christ," so Paul writes in his letter. And this

(Continued on page 9.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The New Elon

For the past twenty-two years I have been dreaming of a college free from debt, adequately equipped and with reasonable economic resources. Recently in a distant state, lodged in a hotel in a strange city, I could not sleep. My dreams were replaced with a vision. There came in plain and conscious view a beautiful campus, more beautiful than the one that had appeared in dreams, a campus with dormitories, beautiful in architecture and modern in design, with reception rooms, parlors, dens, study rooms, sleeping quarters adequately and tastily furnished; with dining room and kitchen, strictly modern in every particular—freezer lockers, storage facilities and every kind of furnishing desired. The entire campus had been landscaped and reset in appropriate shrubbery. The lake section had been surveyed and laid off in lots with a home for the president of the college as the center of the development. Walk ways, drive ways and streets all were beautifully paved.

Wonderful, we say—sure, and how was it done? Did someone with great wealth donate the necessary funds? No, not at all. The members of the Southern Convention, the alumni and friends of Elon College just made up their minds that we had been talking, planning and hoping long enough—waiting for someone else to do what we have known all the while is our privilege and our responsibility. So we made up our minds, arose, “took off our coats,” opened our purses, gave the “go” sign, and it was done.

You say that is a vision. It must have come out of a dream or off the top of an air castle. Certainly it was a vision, but let's make it real. We can if we will, and this is how. Get together, stop our talking and pulling against each other, count our blessings, stop paupering ourselves. We are able to do for our college whatever is necessary. Pool our minds, our efforts, our words, our money for this great cause, and it will be done.

Give Elon College the place in our church and in our hearts it should have. This is possible only if we will search carefully the path that our church has travelled through the years. We know what the college has done for us, our homes, our church. Where would we, our homes and our church be today without the contributions of the college? Where would you be if you had not come to Elon College? What would your home be like if neither you nor your companion had come to Elon College? Where would the church be without the leaders that our college has provided? Not simply the leaders that it has today, but that it had at the beginning and has had through the years. The question is properly raised, “Would you have a church at all if it had not been for the college?”

This is how it can be done—how our dreams may come true, how our vision, our new Elon, may be realized. Every wage earner in the church in the Southern Convention, every alumnus of the college, every friend who will join us, agree and pledge himself to give a careful account of his holdings and set aside two per cent of his earnings annually for five years—that would leave eight per cent of what a person should give for other causes. There would be no question about the transformation of our college of the real blessing that would come to each individual personally—to every local church and the cause of Christian education entrusted to our care.

It is not difficult to figure two per cent of your income. If your income is $1,000 a year, your gift to the college would be only $20.00. If your income is $2,000 it would be $40.00; if $5,000, it would be $100. You say that is a lot of money, but think what you have left. Four times that much for the other causes that you would want to support. Every Christian who is a conscientious tither is greatly blessed—blessed spiritually and mentally. Won't you try giving two per cent of your income to our college? Make up your mind and start. Start a campaign among your church members and friends, and get them to join you. Let's get going and get our job done. Write to your church and friends through THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

* * * * *

Apportionment Giving

Two years in one are just too many years. You get them mixed up and you are confused. You are not sure which comes first or which comes last. The churches, the conferences, and the Southern Convention, so far as Elon College is concerned, are operating on the conference years. The college is operating on the calendar year, from January 1 to December 31. This is always clear and definite, but, at any rate, according to the Convention, the college has received during the conference year $14,161. According to the college records, the college has received $12,744.65 during 1953. There is a difference of $1,416.35. However, there are three more Sundays to go, and the total amount by the end of this year may equal the amount reported by the Convention. Let us hope so.

We are still faced with the fact that practically all the other interests of the church have received their quotas in full and some have come far beyond, but the college is short nearly $1,000. $1,000 doesn't mean much to some interests of the church perhaps, but it means a very great deal to our college. Certainly the college is most appreciative of every contribution made for its welfare and support:

Previously reported	$12,455.95
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Pope's Chapel	$ 5.00
Wake Chapel	26.39
N. C. & Va. Conference:
Burlington, First, S. S. ..	$8.22
Rocky Ford	11.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Bethlehem (Nans) S. S. ..	$30.76
Liberty Spring S. S.	24.00
Mt. Carmel S. S.	15.80
Windsor	50.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Bethel S. S.	23.02
	288.70
Total to date	$12,744.65

CHRISTMAS ACTIVITIES FOR SHENROCK CHARGE.

(Continued from page 2.)

The theme of the program will be Christmas Around the World.

On Christmas Day, at 7:30 p. m., the young people and children of Woods Chapel will present a Christmas message in poetry, song and scripture.

At Palmyra Church, near Edinburg, the Christmas service will be presented at the regular service of worship on Sunday evening, December 27, with members of the Sunday school and the young people's society taking part before the sermon.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

"An Interesting Report"

This week our page contains the interesting report of the Children's Superintendent of the North Carolina Conference—in the form of a recipe. It also contains her more formal report, presented to the executive board of that conference. From time to time we shall be glad to print other reports of our departmental work.

* * * * *

"A World Friendship Cake"

By MRS. CARL R. KEY.

A recipe for creating in boys and girls a friendly feeling for neighbors around the world.

In planning a well-rounded program of missionary education for children, let us think of its various phases as if they were the ingredients for a cake.

As we use sugar in any receipt, we use stories to sweeten the learning process and to help boys and girls become better acquainted with friends both near and far. The mission story books from Friendship Press this year are designed for just this purpose. Once again they have provided us with most suitable books for primary and junior reading, telling or group dramatization. Many of these tales have a background of actual experiences. I recommend the following, each priced at $1.25—For Primary children: "The Round Window" and "New Friends for Nena"; for Junior children: "Many Hands in Many Lands" and "The Secret Suitcase." These may be ordered from the Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts; or Friendship Press, 247 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York.

The shortening adds richness to the recipe. In like manner we should enrich our teaching program with carefully selected scripture verses. One should search for those which express ideas of world friendship and brotherhood. These could be used in making litanies, as parts of worship services or to give added emphasis to a story. Memorizing a few verses may be of value. Remember, too, that the new translation of the Bible may be helpful in making certain verses more understandable for children.

Eggs in a cake, add vitamins, air and lightness to the mixture. Fun and food will put zest into any educational procedure. Since children learn by a variety of methods, one very satisfactory way for them to find out about other people is to play games or sample foods characteristic of other nations. Nina Millen has compiled a book called "Children's Games from Many Lands" ($1.25) which should be in the library of every children's leader. More games, recipes, folk songs and festival ideas can be found in "Fun and Festival from America's People" (Friendship Press, 50c). In fact, there is a whole series of these "Fun and Festival" pamphlets for several countries.

The flour, giving substance to our world friendship cake should be the study of the selected themes for each year. During 1953-54 we are asked to concentrate on two themes. The foreign mission theme is "The Life and Task of the Church Around the World." The home mission theme is "Spanish-Speaking Americans in the U. S. A." Each story book has a leader's guide to go with it (50c). These are important, for stories alone would give the children an unbalanced diet. These teacher's guides have a complete course of study for each group, with lesson plans for an entire unit of work. They include suggestions for background materials, worship services, discussion periods, creative activities, games, dramatizations and friendly service projects.

The leaven or baking powder which makes the batter rise and grow will find its counterpart in prayer and worship. In addition to the already-mentioned resource materials for worship, the following also are excellent: the monthly magazine Children's Religion ($1.75 a year, Pilgrim Press), and three booklets especially good for family use, "The Family Celebrates Christmas," "The Family Worships Together" and "The Family Looks at One World" (each 50c from Pilgrim Press). The Connecticut Council of Churches, Inc., 210 Pearl St., Hartford, Conn., publishes a most attractive booklet of daily devotions entitled "Thoughts of God for Boys and Girls." It comes three times a year—Autumn and Christmas, Winter and Easter, and Summertime, and costs $1.00 for a single yearly subscription.

Be sure to sprinkle the program liberally with the salt of singing, for this ingredient will make the mixture more savory and improve its taste. To help us in this department, we turn again to Friendship Press and Edith Lovell Thomas' book, "The Whole World Singing." This is a collection of international songs. By teaching children to sing and appreciate the songs of other lands, we can strengthen their friendly attitudes of world brotherhood. More good songs are to be found in "Hymns of Primary Worship" and "Hymns for Junior Worship," both available at Pilgrim Press.

Any cake would be a failure without the flavoring or spices to give it character and make it more palatable. Just so in teaching boys and girls of primary and junior ages, we need to add spice and flavoring through the medium of creative activities.

Children learn much through their fingers, so let them have hand work, but do connect it with the subject material for study. Armilda Keiser explains how to do this skillfully in her book, "Here's How and When" ($1.50, Friendship Press). This book is my pet rave because the author tells us not only "how" and "when" but also "what, where and why," and best of all, it is the book I think gives us the "mostest for the leastest." Do not overlook those wonderful picture maps (75c each from the Friendship Press). These combine useful information with satisfactory handwork. The three most appropriate ones for this year are: Picture Map of the World, Picture Map of the United States, and Picture Map of the Bible in Many Lands.

Now that all of our ingredients are in the bowl, mix with care and intelligence and bake in the warmth of love, patience and understanding.

For its crowning glory give it a generous frosting of friendly service projects and offerings, for this masterpiece would not be complete unless the children had an opportunity to share their gifts of love and friendship. Children will love to make picture books, baby bibs, stuffed toy animals, yarn balls, and many other things. Several projects are suggested in the leaders' guides and in the little yellow folder of Missionary Plans for Children, which was distributed at the North Carolina Conference.

I hope there will be many to try this recipe. It is guaranteed not to have a calorie in it. In fact, it is an excellent aid to reducing!

* * * * *

Report of the Children's Superintendent

It is the earnest desire of this department to stimulate more interest in the missionary education of our children. If they are to be the world citizens and leaders of the future, they need to become well acquainted with their brothers and sisters of all lands. We believe that good attitudes of world friendship learned in youth are most important. Therefore, we urge the women of our conference to assume a greater responsibility for promoting this phase of our total program.

Friendship Press, Pilgrim Press, THE CHRISTIAN SUN, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, and your Children's Superintendent can arm you with the best of "ammunition" for this "Operation World Friendship." Take home the books and suggestions presented at the annual meeting, and see that someone uses them. Watch for other ideas in THE SUN.

When you have done this, let us hear about it. I know the reports which come in from the district superintendents each year must be very incomplete, for they tell so little of what the children's groups are doing. We want to know about their activities in order to learn from each other. So keep the Children's Superintendent and the editor of the Children's Page in THE SUN informed.

MRS. CARL R. KEY.

"LEGACY WORTH LEAVING."

(Continued from page 6.)

"unfeigned faith" dwelt first of all in grandmother Lois. Yes, "Be a partaker in the afflictions of the Gospel," and do it with a rare sense of privilege. At the heart of this glorious Faith is a Cross!

The day came when the Apostle, now aged with toil and suffering, called for the younger man to come to him at Rome. Soon he would be "offered up" as a Christian martyr. He wants this fine young soldier of Christ by his side. What Timothy saw at Rome would have inspired the soul of any red-blooded man. If any one had a right to complain of hard usage and unjust treatment, it was Paul. Instead, Timothy beheld a great hero. Not one word of complaint. It had all been worthwhile, this suffering. And though Paul might be a prisoner, the "Word of God was not bound." His very sufferings in behalf of the Gospel, including his coming martyrdom, would be a witness.

It is quite likely that Timothy was one of the few who saw the old warrior of the Cross led away to be beheaded. He saw him straighten his shoulders, look up to heaven, and speak that amazing valedictory, "I have fought a good fight, I have run my course. I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown which God the righteous One shall give." Whereupon, he bows his head for the stroke. Friends, it must have dawned upon young Timothy, as it needs to dawn upon us, that a faith worth dying for is one worth living for.

What's this that Winston Churchill talked about during those trying days of World War II? Recall that it was a time when victory by the Nazis seemed imminent. The enemy bombs were straffing London and other British cities nightly. The morale of the people began to sag. And then, that inspiring address about blood, and sweat, and tears! Churchill dinned that into the hearts and minds of all Britain. It was by means of these that a great heritage is bought. By means of these—as Goethe pointed out long ago—a heritage is sustained. Standing at a microphone that heralded his words to a world-wide audience, Churchill spoke memorable words to this effect: "The enemy of freedom shall never conquer our spirits. We shall resist him by sea, by land, on our streets, on our very doorsteps. Let us so conduct ourselves in this moment of danger, that future generations, remembering us, shall be able to say, 'This was their finest hour.'"

That, my friends, is a philosophy of hardship that we need to get hold of. Witness the cars around the typical American school house if it rains only a few drops! Are we making softies of our children? A business man was telling me of an interview he had with a recent college graduate. One of the first questions the young chap asked was concerning the retirement plan of the company for its employees! Now we must have retirement plans, to be sure. But they are not of primary importance. What matters most is, what are the prospects for hard work and genuine service to humanity?

Blood, sweat and tears! Well did our forefathers know the meaning of these words:

Amidst the storm, they sang,
And the stars heard and the sea.
And the sounding aisles of the dim wood rang
With their anthem of the free.

How we do need that hardy pioneer spirit in America today! "Bear your share of hardships as a loyal soldier of Jesus Christ."

IV.

I hasten on to the fourth item in this legacy of worth: Lois laid the groundwork for a friendship that lasted through time and eternity. Faithful to the light she had, she yet prepared the heart of this young grandson of hers to receive the fullness of the Christian revelation. His young heart reached out eagerly and took firm hold of the Light and Truth that were in Christ.

"Timothy," writes Paul, "I know whom I have believed and that he is able to keep that which I have entrusted to him against that day." And again, "Timothy, remember Jesus Christ." That is, never forget him!

Forget Jesus Christ? How could he? He had seen him lived out in a great life right there before his own eyes. The distinguished news commentator, Eric Sevareid, tells us why our American lads fought on in Korea. In the mud and bleakness of it all, and with scant support from millions of indifferent people back home, why keep on fighting? I wonder how you would reply to that question, my friend. Mr. Sevareid points out the reason: it had to do with the parents and school teachers and pastors and scoutmasters who had been their staple when they were growing boys. In fact, I believe that he could have gone on to extend the reason into the realm of an even more specific loyalty: to God and to the Master of men who revealed him.

In the beauty of the lily,
Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in his bosom,
That transfigures you and me.

Remember it? And the hymn goes on to say something about ourselves being willing to be offered up on the altar of spiritual freedom if the call should come. Forget Jesus Christ, the Redeemer and Master of men who

(Continued on page 12.)

A Page for Our Children

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dear Children:

Our Jewish friends and neighbors have just finished celebrating their gift time, the Chanukah or Hanukkah, which we call the "Feast of Lights." This lasts eight days, and there is a candle lighted each night until eight are shining bright. It is much like our Advent candles that some people light to mark the passing Sundays of Advent. In addition to the candles, it is a joyous time and the children receive a little gift each night. That is really nicer than our many presents at one time. The "Feast of Lights" is very old, so Jesus must have helped to light the wicks of the lamps in his day.

Since Christmas is a gift time, we usually share a few ideas for presents. Discarded ink bottles make lovely candlesticks (for Advent candles, too). If you don't have any, perhaps your father has some at the office. They may be painted after you have washed them carefully to remove all traces of ink. Soak in the water a few minutes to loosen the label. Enamel will do nicely or you may use tempera paint and shellac it after it is well dried. For trimmings you may paint a simple border, a flower, or use decals which slip off easily and make pretty trims. Match your bottles, and you will have a pretty pair for mother or teacher. Don't forget to add candles! Ohh, smart painters may enamel their bottles on the inside for really lovely effects.

Most mothers like to keep a picture or two that their children have drawn or painted. Why not do an extra special one—of crayons, water colors, tempera, or colored chalk? After you have finished your drawing, then measure the size of it, and ask your father or some grown-up to have a piece of glass cut to fit your picture. This will not cost very much. Nowadays we can buy lovely shades of sticking tape at the dime store. Pick a shade that blends well with your scene and frame your picture. Cut a thick piece of cardboard to fit the glass. After cleaning the glass well, lay it face down on newspaper. Next add your picture, then the cardboard. Now use your scissors, rule and tape. Measure the tape to the proper length to fit the four sides. If you can find a gummed hanger to go on the back, you can wait and stick it on after you have finished, but if you can't, stick a hairpin through the cardboard, in exactly the middle, toward the top of the picture, and reinforce it several times with gum tape. Now carefully put the tape on the sides, allowing the same amount to show all around the edges, turn the corners neatly and trim if needed. Don't forget to write your name and age on the back, and mother will treasure it greatly.

* * * * *

"Lost"

By LAURA GRAY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Dirty fists were making mud of tears that ran down his baby face when I came upon the wee one standing by the escalator.

"Hello, sonny, are you lost?" I asked.

"Yes, Mummy's gone!" he sobbed and broke into loud crying.

"Never mind, she'll be back." I stooped to his level among busy hurrying feet. "Let me lift you up so you can see better where she is." I held him as long as I could, rested, and kept on doing this, wondering what kind of a woman we were looking for in that ceaselessly moving crowd. Judging from the child and his clothes, she would probably be small, drab, and, no doubt, frantic with anxiety.

After what seemed a long, long time, a tall, ultra-smartly dressed young woman in fur coat and colorful hat with veil came directly toward us. Paul—he had told me that was his name—dashed up to her, began kicking her shins, thumping her with his fists, and screaming out his anger.

I nodded in response to the woman's thanks for finding the child and turned away. As I ascended the escalator, I glanced at the crowd below and saw the boy was still kicking his mother. She seemed simply to be enduring this treatment as one endures rain, hail, wind—or fate.

I could not banish this incident from my mind. What ought that woman to have done? Should the child have been allowed to display, unchecked, such a show of temper? Surely not. No mother ought to accept abuse from a child. But the child's ill-behavior should have been prevented. He should have remained with his mother. She should have kept tight hold of his hand. However, even if he did get lost, would such a deplorable episode have occurred if, as far back as he could remember, his mother had been the one above all others whom he admired and trusted? Evidently this was not the first of such scenes. That boy must have received this pattern of behavior from someone else. Perhaps the mother herself "lets off steam" by striking her son. Punishing in anger, whatever the method used, is quite different from correction done quietly, first making it clear to the child why he must be punished.

Truthfulness and fairness are of supreme importance to children. Suppose a boy falls and bumps his head. Does his mother hit the chair and say, "Bad chair to hurt Tommy's head!"? Perhaps it is the table she strikes, and then exclaims, "Naughty table to hit Tommy!" Such responses to a child's tears are entirely wrong, because they are false explanations. The mother should point out the real cause—toys, maybe, left in the way, or, possibly, an accident brought about by a rumpled-up rug.

The child who must go shopping with his mother has a weary time of it—so has the mother. Bored, tired, sometimes hungry, hour after hour he trails along in a sea of legs and skirts. But words of explanation and consideration will help a lot. "Tommy, look at all those china things in the glass case. Aren't they pretty? Now Mother must buy some new gloves. I shall need you to help me choose them. This will be Mother's last purchase. When you and I have decided on the gloves we will go and look at the trains. But what will you hold on to while the clerk is fitting my gloves? Yes, to my coat. Would you like to put your hand in my pocket? There! Isn't that fun?"

It pays to be honest and sympathetic in all dealings with little ones. Else, how can they be patient, have faith in us, and know that Father and Mother understand their difficulties?

The reason worry kills more people than work may be that more people worry than work.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship Officers Meet

The representatives of local groups of the Eastern Virginia Youth Fellowship met on Saturday, November 21, at the Bethlehem (Nansemond) Church, near Suffolk, with the president, Miss Rebecca Mann, presiding.

The Devotional Service was led by the president.

The budget for the year was discussed. The foreign mission project recommended for the year is $500 for The Church Around the World. The home mission project suggested is $100 for Moonelon and $400 for Church Extension in the Southern Convention. Also, $500 is put aside for local projects such as the Southern Convention Young People, U. C. Y. M., expenses of delegates and local expenses.

Much discussion was held on Conference Rallies. Suggestions were made that each group study the organization of the Conference, Southern Convention and National Youth Fellowship, so they will understand better the work which is conducted at the rallies.

The president announced the meeting of the Southern Convention Youth Fellowship which is to be held in Burlington, First Church, April 24-25, 1954. Each church is to have two delegates for this meeting. Discussions will be led on the Three Commissions and program suggestions for each commission will be given. Each delegate is asked to study up on all of these aspects before the meeting so he will gain more from the rally.

A good group attended this meeting and we enjoyed the work and the fellowship, but many of our churches were not represented at all. Let us strive to learn more about our youth organization so we can do a better job in our local societies.

RUTH H. DUNN,

Corresponding Secretary.

* * * * *

Amelia Church to Have Student Supply Pastor

Amelia Church reluctantly accepted the resignation of Rev. John Lit-tiken, who is a student at Elon College. During the time he served us as minister, he not only delivered inspirational messages, but we felt that he and his family were one of us.

We are, however, very happy to announce that another Elon College student is to be our supply pastor. He is Rev. Thomas Madren, son of Rev. Silas E. Madren of Albemarle, North Carolina. He anticipates that he will graduate from Elon College this spring and then will enter Duke University. He has delivered only one sermon at Amelia, but there is no question in our minds as to his being a very devout and promising young man in the ministry. We feel very fortunate, indeed, to have him as our minister, worshipping with us.

We, the young people of Amelia, also are very happy to have Mr. Madren because we believe that he is interested in promoting Youth Work and we feel certain that he will be able to help us promote our young people's organization. We feel that he will be a blessing to us in every phase of the work.

MARY JOHNSON,

Reporter.

* * * * *

Youth Page Editor Writes . . .

In a previous article, I stated that a social of the Henderson and Liberty Vance Young People had not been reported. I would like to apologize for this. It was reported in a well-written article on this page in a previous edition of THE SUN.

* * *

I would like to express appreciation to Charles Mason, a student at Elon College, who has given considerable time and assistance in the preparation of several news articles for our Youth Page. Charles lives in Henderson, North Carolina, and is a member of the Holy Innocent Episcopal Church. Though not a member of our denomination, he has taken a great interest in the work of our young people. Interest such as this should inspire new interest and encouragement within our own youth groups.

* * *

Southern Convention Young People: Let us know of your activities.

Send news articles to me at Elon College. We would like to see them in print on this page.

* * *

Let us continue to give thanks each day, though the Thanksgiving season has passed.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

"That speaker certainly made a hit."

"What did he talk about?"

"About five minutes."

* * *

Saw a little sign in the window of a newspaper office the other day that read: "Why be disagreeable, when with a little effort you could be a real stinker?"

* * *

Had a very good time at the Western North Carolina Youth Fellowship Rally on the fifth Sunday in November. Had a good crowd and a fine program down at Grace's Chapel. Thanks to the folks down there and their fine pastor, Bill Simmons, former president of the conference youth.

* * *

You will have a better chance for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year if you will avoid accidents. Beware of careless driving. Watch for fire hazards when decorating the Christmas tree. If you're playing Santa Claus, don't get stuck in the chimney. I heard a terrible song about a man to whom that happened.

WHY THE BIBLE IS WORLD'S GREATEST BOOK.

(Continued from page 5.)

protection for any home; its promises are the ointment of heaven for wounded hearts. The spiritual and moral teachings of this Book are the Divine Light of the ages, and light for those of every age. It is the only sure foundation of faith. It is the only true anchorage for human hope. It is the only sure fortress for human security. It is the open-door to abundant life here and hereafter. It is the Book of Life for all who would truly live in Man's Today and in God's Tomorrow. With intelligent reverence, with open mind, and with sincere purpose, let us peruse its pages in search of its treasures, always keeping in mind that the New Testament is actually the Christian's Bible, and that from it we glean the distinctive truths on which to build our Citadel of Faith.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"The Prince of Peace and a Warless World"

LESSON XII—DECEMBER 20, 1953

MEMORY SELECTION: "Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given; and the government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God, Everlasting Father, Prince of Peace."—Isaiah 9:6.

LESSON: Isaiah 2:2-4; 9:2, 5-7; Luke 2:8-14.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Luke 1:68-79.

A minister, speaking to a group of young people, made the statement that the time would come when there would be no war. A young man, sincerely, but incredulously said to him, "Sir, you don't honestly believe that, do you?" There are thousands of people in the world today, who are like that young man—they just do not see how we can ever have a world without war. Today's lesson deals with that critical issue.

The Promise of Peace.

Isaiah's ministry covered a period of about forty years. His messages are some of the most eloquent and exalted in the entire Bible. And the central theme of his message is the coming of the Messiah, the Promised One of Israel. Centuries before the Christ came, this inspired prophet foresaw it and predicted it. To be sure it was in general outline, rather than in specific detail; but Isaiah knew that in due time God would send the promised Messiah, or the Christ.

Even as the central theme of Isaiah's preaching was the coming of the Messiah, just so was the central ministry of the Messiah to be Peace. This Messiah or Christ was to influence the life of nations in such a way that they would convert their weapons of war into implements of peace. "They shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks. Nation shall not lift up sword against nation; neither shall they learn war any more." Swords into plowshares, and spears into pruning hooks—it is a poetic, but practical way of saying that the economy of the nations will not be established on the producing of implements of war, but implements of peace. Great industrial plants will not turn out tanks and guns and guided missiles and bombers and shells and submarines and battleships, and what have you, but farm implements and household appliances and automobiles, and everything needed for better living for all. Scientists will not be doing research in biological warfare or poison gases. Atomic energy scientists will be applying atomic power to constructive instead of destructive ends. Schools and colleges will not be training young men and young women for military careers, but for peace-time living. Nations shall not learn war any more—we just won't need soldiers and fighters, according to Isaiah's way of thinking.

And it was not wishful thinking. It was not idle day-dreaming. It was all based upon Isaiah's knowledge of God and of God's way of working in the world. Isaiah believed in a God who could bring this miracle to pass. He saw God as all powerful, above all men, directing their destinies, waiting for them to understand his words and his ways. Isaiah's God was a God of infinite holiness and power and patience and wisdom. He would bring it to pass.

The Program of Peace.

But this peace was not to drop, ready-made from heaven. It would, and could come only as men and nations came to God, learned of God, did the will of God. The nations were to come unto Jehovah's house "on the top of the mountains." It was a poetic and symbolic figure of speech—the nations were to turn to God, to the house of God. There, they were to learn his ways—"He will teach us of his ways." And they were to "walk in his paths." In other words, peace has certain basic conditions. As long as men hate each other, scheme against each other, covet what one another has, act unbrotherly against one another, refuse to forgive one another, there cannot be peace. As long as men make their own decisions apart from God, as long as they depend upon military might as a guarantee of peace, as long as they neglect to worship God, or to walk in his ways, there can be no peace. Peace, ultimately, is a matter of a right spirit in the heart. God must be the Teacher of men. God must be the Arbitrator between men.

Think what a difference it would make if our world of men and nations acted toward each other in the spirit of Christ. If the leaders of the nations were guided by obedience to God instead of expediency, there could be peace even in our day. If all men had the spirit of good will, if men were committed to peace, there could be no war.

The Prince of Peace.

The Baby in the lowly manger at Bethlehem was the Prince of Peace. The angels sang an oratorio of peace at his birth. He is our Prince. It is he who has broken down the middle wall or partition between men and who alone can bring peace to individuals and to the world. The God of Peace, gave his only begotten Son as the Prince of Peace.

The best comment on this lesson is simply to get alone and to read slowly, silently, prayerfully, the story of the Birth of the Prince of Peace. Luke has told it in simple, glorious language, and told it in the language of the heart. A very fine poet, groping for words to describe the Christmas story, said, "God spoke, and silence fell!" It seems almost profane, blasphemous, even now, for anybody to attempt to describe it in mere words. Only the language of the heart can phrase what we feel about this silent, holy night. As we hear the heavenly host singing and praising God, our own tongues are stilled in the holy hush of that holy hour. And yet the silence in our hearts eventually bursts forth in songs of adoration and praise to Christ, the new-born King, the Prince of Peace!

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons," Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

"LEGACY WORTH LEAVING."

(Continued from page 9.)

had died for Timothy? How could he?

Friends, this Faith about a crucified and risen Master is the one Hope of the world. Let's stand strong and firm in it. Let the blood of hardy pioneers flow again in our veins. Let us pass along this sacred heritage to our children. Then future Loises shall not fail their grandsons. Then, we shall not fail our children. Then, we shall not be thankless and disloyal to our God.

Our Churches Report . . .

Second Church, Norfolk, Becomes "Central"

The former Second Congregational Christian Church, Norfolk, has now, with the approval of the Eastern Virginia Conference, become officially the Central Congregational Christian Church. This change of name had been contemplated at the time of relocation, but due to legal matters in the purchase and sale of properties and the securing of a loan, it was considered unadvisable at that time. Now, our new church, in a new area, has a new name, and for over a year, now, it has been receiving new members regularly. Thirty were added during the past conference year, and three new adult members were received during November.

A new Young Adult Class has been organized, and the enrollment has already reached twenty. It is anticipated that this group will soon be the strongest class in our Sunday school.

Mr. Frank B. Cobb and Mr. Fred L. Greene were ordained deacons on the first Sunday in November. These two men have been making a fine contribution to the work of the church.

The men of the church recently met one evening and painted the cinder block walls of the interior of the sanctuary. This has done much to enhance its beauty.

The women of the Church have recently held their Christmas bazaar. The returns from it amounted to $480. For two months prior to the bazaar they worked on hand-made articles — aprons, clothes pin bags, needlework, embroidery, Yo-Yo dolls, dresses, doll beds, etc. There was a plant booth, a general store with post-office in which were "parcel post" packages, and a buttery shop in which there were home-made pies, cakes, cookies and candy. From the kitchen were served sandwiches, soups, drinks and Chili with beans. The women received high commendation for their successful labors. Mrs. Ruby Pearce and Mrs. J. E. Neese served as chairman and co-chairman. The ladies gave $400 of their returns to the parsonage debt.

At the present time, the Central Church is also a synagogue. The congregation of Temple Israel is using our sanctuary on Friday nights and Saturday mornings for their Jewish services, while their synagogue is being constructed on Granby Street, near Ward's corner.

A special service of Thanksgiving was well attended on Thanksgiving Day morning at 10:00 o'clock. A Christmas program, under the direction of Mrs. Neese, is now in rehearsal.

J. EVERETTE NEESE,
Pastor.

Pleasant Ridge Harvest Day Festival

Ten dollars for a bushel of peanuts! That's what they sold for at the third annual Harvest Day Festival at the Pleasant Ridge Congregational Christian Church, near Ramseur, North Carolina. The buyer, however, was not just buying peanuts. These peanuts were the result of the year's Lord's Acre project for three young boys. These three boys, Johnny, Joseph and William Beane, ranging in age from 6 to 12, had planted the peanuts in the spring, tended them carefully, harvested them, and now were presenting them to the church. So you see, these peanuts were different from most peanuts.

And so it was with many of the other project reports on Thanksgiving evening. Each of the church's Sunday school classes and many individuals reported the harvest from their Lord's Acre for the year. Rev. Clyde Fields, a former pastor of the church, was the speaker for the evening. He emphasized the fact that we have so many simple things which we take for granted, but for which we should be thankful. As J. C. Newell, chairman of the project, tallied the project reports, he added to $1,400. After these gifts had been dedicated to the church by the writer, its present pastor, the large crowd assembled in the social room of the Sunday school building for an auction sale.

With auctioneers Jimmy Cates and Cecil Richardson crying the sale, the group participated in good-natured bidding for the products offered. Each item had been given by members and friends of Pleasant Ridge. The Memorial Quilt, containing 830 names, was the item of greatest interest. The Ladies' Bible Class had received $350 for the names. After spirited bidding, Mrs. Everette Cox purchased the quilt for $295. But there were numerous other gifts to be auctioned—cakes, aprons, potatoes, cookies, clothes - pin bags, eggs and tomatoes.

When the evening was over, the treasurer had received $1,900 in gifts. This will complete the payment for the church's new Sunday school building. The members were very happy because of the success of the year's Lord's Acre project. Not forgetting, however, the origin of their success, they paused in the sanctuary to give thanks to the Lord.

MAX VESTAL,
Pastor.

"WHAT RELIGION MEANS."

(Continued from page 3.)

are constantly complaining and worrying about numerous aches and pains. These persons are worrying themselves into one of the categories mentioned by Dr. Menninger. I am sure I was one of the 85 per cent with stomach trouble.

I am not here today to practice psychiatry nor am I here to preach to those who think they are emotionally upset. I am here to present the facts concerning a program of mental control which has helped me considerably and which I am continually practicing.

The basis for my program is this: thinking doing and saying as Christ would want me to. In the words of the Rev. Henry E. Robinson of Burlington, North Carolina, "Beautiful words and deeds can come only from minds which think beautiful thoughts."

Some other things which I try to do are as follows:

1. I try not to dwell upon and to store away petty disturbances. They may come out some day and hurt me.
2. I try to treat my fellowman with respect and consideration.
3. I try not to worry about the quality of my work after I have completed a job. I try to do my best on a job, and when I have finished, turn my energy towards other endeavors.
4. I try to leave the problems of work at work and not take them home to worry my family. They have problems of their own.

In summary, religion means the following to me: Forgetting petty disturbances, respect and consideration for my fellowman, doing my best on a job, not worrying my family, and thinking, doing and saying beautiful thoughts, deeds and words.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

Thank you so much for the good report. What a good time we had at Wake Chapel this past Sunday morning. Our children did well with their program, we had a lovely dinner in their fellowship room with such good people, and we received an offering of $1,600.00. This will put them well over the $2,000.00 for the year.

Since the funds are sent through the Convention office so their church will get credit in their conference report, the check has not reached us yet, but we know it is on the way.

Today, too late for this report, we have received nearly $500.00 in several checks. Folks are not going to let these children and this institution down. We are working hard, and are praying that we may reach our goal of $65,000.00; and if we all give some thought, prayer and consideration to it the goal will be reached.

This coming Sunday (and before you read these lines) we go to four churches in Eastern Virginia: Union at Hunterdale Saturday for supper, the program, the night's lodging and breakfast; Rosemont for the Sunday school hour; Berea (Norfolk) at 11 o'clock and for lunch, and Liberty Spring at 3.00 in the afternoon. Then back home. These are four churches we have not yet visited. There are others, but we could not get them in this time. Our children are looking forward to the trip. Miss Melva Foster, Mrs. Truitt and I will drive three cars taking about 15 children.

Now let me tell you again how very thankful I am for your fine response. Do not let up. Do a little work for us by telling others about the orphanage and asking them to send us a check. Any amount, however small, is gratefully received. If we do not reach the goal, we shall have to start the new year in debt. Please help us not to do that. And may God bless everyone.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

- REPORT FOR DECEMBER 3, 1953.
- Commodities for the Week.
- Mr. John Hay, Woolworth's Burlington, N. C., Candy.
- Darley Downs Circle, Greensboro, First Church, Automatic Washing Machine.
- Foster Hosiery Mills, Burlington, N. C., Hosiery.
- Miss Clarice Gunn, Reidsville, N. C., Coats.
- Bobby and Peggy Pritchett, Clothing.

- Smithwood Christian Church, Clothing, shoes and sweet potatoes.
- Mrs. W. A. Hensley, Elkton, Va., Coupons.
- Mrs. Roy M. Bear, Elkton, Va., Coupons.
- Mrs. Harold Wright, Franklinville, N. C., Coupons.
- Bethel Missionary Society, Elkton, Va., Coupons.
- Mrs. H. T. Hensley, Elkton, Va., Coupons.
- Mrs. Elizabeth Hutcherson, Cottonwood, Arizona, Coupons.
- Mrs. Esther E. Jinkins, St. Paris, Ohio, Coupons.
- Miss Georgia Bradley, Mebane, N. C., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.
Amount brought forward	$14,417.64
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Bethel	$ 18.36
Fayetteville, Thanksgiving	25.00
Hope Mills, Thanksgiving	18.84
	70.53
Eastern Virginia Conference:
Damascus	$ 63.00
Eure, Thanksgiving	10.00
Holy Neek S. S.	234.92
Johnson's Grove, Thanksgiving	15.00
Bay View	16.25
Christian Temple, Thanksgiving	25.00
	364.17
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Hines Chapel S. S.	$ 40.20
Mebane, Thanksgiving	40.00
	80.20
Western N. C. Conference:
Liberty	$ 40.00
Seagrove S. S., Thanksgiving	25.00
	65.00
Virginia Valley Conference:
Mt. Lebanon S. S.	$ 23.00
	23.00
Total	$ 602.90
Grand total	$15,020.54

Special Offerings.
Amount brought forward	$21,297.67
United Cong. Christian Ch., Columbus, Ga.	$ 7.17
New Hope Christian Ch., Roanoke, Ala.	5.57
Mr. & Mrs. J. E. Danielely, Elon College, N. C., in memory of Mrs. Artelia Poole	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Herman Neese, Graham, N. C., in memory of Mrs. Artelia Poole	5.00
Chester H. Roth Co., Inc. (interest)	30.00
H. O. Byrd, Suffolk, Va.	10.00

Thanksgiving Offerings.
Mr. & Mrs. M. W. McPherson, Burlington, N. C.	$ 10.00
Burlington Rotary Club	200.00
Mrs. W. C. Wicker, Elon College, N. C.	5.00
Mrs. Ruth W. Rogers, Elon College, N. C.	5.00
John W. Long & Sons, Burlington, N. C.	25.00
Dr. & Mrs. J. T. Clack, Wadley, Ala.	25.00
Mrs. James N. Williamson, Jr., Winston-Salem, N. C.	25.00
Mr. & Mrs. Charles E. Miller, Graham, N. C.	25.00
Mrs. J. L. Burford, Wins-

ton-Salem, N. C.	5.00
S. H. Basningh, Chapel Hill, N. C.	25.00
Alamance Motors, Inc., Burlington, N. C.	25.00
Melville Dairy, Burlington, N. C.	50.00
S. G. Womack, Greensboro, N. C.	100.00
W. J. Armfield, III, Greensboro, N. C.	50.00
Mrs. Bertha Isley, New Bern, N. C.	5.00
R. O. Strange, Vernon Hill, Va.	35.00
Allen D. Moore, Burlington, N. C.	25.00
Odell King, Burlington, N. C.	50.00
Miss Gertrude Herring, Richmond, Va.	7.00
M. R. Kersey, Dayton, Ohio	25.00
Erwin A Holt, Burlington, N. C.	200.00
John Chamblin, Gibsonville, N. C.	1.00
W. E. Lowe, Elon College, N. C.	1.00
A Friend	1.00
Mrs. Stella Ellis, Charlotte, N. C.	10.00
J. B. Long, Elon College, N. C.	50.00
Newlin Hardware Co., Burlington, N. C.	25.00
James H. Anderson Co., Raleigh, N. C.	10.00
Rev. T. J. Green, High Falls, N. C.	10.00
J. H. Rountree, Greensboro, N. C.	5.00
Mrs. L. E. Leete, Norlina, N. C.	30.00
Mr. & Mrs. John W. King & Children, Suffolk, Va.	10.00
Miss Helen Brinkley, Suffolk, Va.	5.00
H. H. Waters, Newport News, Va.	7.00
Mr. & Mrs. Ras Hensley, Elkton, Va.	20.00
H. M. Holland, Suffolk, Va.	10.00
A Friend	12.00
Trollinger's Florist, Burlington, N. C.	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Burke Buchanan, Sanford, N. C.	25.00
P. W. Iseley, McLeansville, N. C.	25.00
Mrs. J. E. Rawls, Sr., Suffolk, Va.	15.00
Mrs. Esther E. Jinkens, St. Paris, Ohio	10.03
Burlington Chapter No. 4, Disabled American Veterans	10.00
C. V. Hooper, Morehead City, N. C.	50.00
Miss Georgia Bradley, Mebane, N. C.	20.00
William Lovett, St. Paris, Ohio	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Frank Tearman, St. Paris, Ohio	5.00
Special Gifts	87.60
	1,449.37
Grand total	$22,747.04
Total for the week	$ 2,052.27
Total for the year	$37,767.58

Pledges to Church Building Loan
Fund Campaign
(Corrected to Oct. 19, 1953.)

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Antioch—E. J. Rohart	$ 343.00
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	106.00
Bethel—H. V. Harman	377.00
Dry Run—R. E. Newton	129.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton ..	211.00
Newport—R. E. Newton	426.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardcastle ..	$ 872.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo ..	459.00
Bethlehem (Nans.)—R. E. Brittle	2,040.00
Burton's Grove—J. W. Madren ..	153.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark ..	200.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Gran- ger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Bay View.....	724.00
Norfolk: Christian Temple—W. Millard Stevens	5,330.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dol- lar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	577.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardcastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial— Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein ..	1,459.00
South Norfolk—O. D. Poythress	2,500.00
Suffolk—.....	6,290.00
Union, Southampton—Clyde Fields	928.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—.....	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—Carl Wallace	300.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Morrisville—E. M. Powell	207.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Albemarle—S. E. Madren	885.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown...	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ...	694.00
Righ Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00

Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00	Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00	Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowder- milk	300.00	Tryon—Orville H. White	*250.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00	Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:		Union (Va)—Mark W. Andes ..	1,498.00
Apple's Chapel—John R. Lackey	$1,563.00	Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Burlington:		Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	400.00	* Contribution.
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00	† Paid in full.
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisse- man	3,292.00	SUMMARY BY CONFERENCES.
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00	Conference	Quota Accepted
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00	Va. Valley	$ 5,736.00 $ 3,736.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00	Eastern Va.	51,000.00 43,227.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00	Eastern N. C.	17,690.00 10,229.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00	Western N. C.	11,476.00 4,295.00
Kallam Grove—C. Fred Allred ..	344.00	N. C. and Va.	50,552.00 23,113.50
Lakeview—Curtis Young	82.50	Totals	$136,454.00 $84,600.50
Mount Bethel—C. Fred Allred ..	213.00	Prudence is no doubt a valuable
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00	quality; but prudence that degene-
Mt. Zion—Thomas D. Sutton ..	600.00	rates into timidity is very seldom
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00	the path to safety.—Vissount Cecil.
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman	364.00

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING
LOAN FUND
Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
BySecretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

"Makes the Whole World Kin"

By H. H. SMITH

Christianity is the greatest of all levelers. It can bring together as nothing else can, the most inveterate foes, and the battlefield, with all its horrors, has often been the scene of noble Christian acts. Major Stiles, in his book, "Four Years Under Marse Robert," relates an impressive incident connected with the battle of Spottsylvania Court House that well illustrates the thought just stated.

Major Stiles says: "It was almost dark, but as we drew near we saw a wounded Federal soldier clutch the pantaloons of Captain Hunter, who at that moment was passing by, frying pan in hand, and heard him ask, with intense eagerness, 'Can you pray, sir? Can you pray?' The old captain looked down at him with a peculiar expression, and pulled away, saying, 'No, my friend, I don't wish you any harm now, but praying's not exactly my trade.'

"I said to the chaplain, 'Let's go to that man.' As we came up, he caught my pants in the same way and uttered the same words, 'Can you pray, sir? Can you pray?' I bent over the poor fellow, found that the wound must necessarily prove mortal, and that soon. We both knelt down by him, and I took his hand in mine, and said, 'My friend, you haven't much time left for prayer, but if you will say after me just these simple words, with heart as well as lips, all will be well with you, 'God have mercy on me a sinner, for Jesus Christ's sake.'

"I never saw such intensity in human gaze, nor heard such intensity in human voice, as in the gaze and voice of that dying man, as he held my hand and looked into my face, repeating the simple, awful, yet reassuring words I had dictated. He uttered them again and again, with the death rattle in his throat and the death tremor in his frame, until someone shouted, 'They are coming again,' and we broke away and ran down to the guns. It proved to be a false alarm, and we returned immediately—but he was dead, yes, dead and half stripped; but I managed to get my hand upon his blouse a moment, and I looked at the buttons. He was from the far-off State of Maine."

"It was long before I slept that night," says Major Stiles. "It had been an unparalleled day. The last hour, especially, had brought together elements so diverse and so tremendous, that heart and brain were overstrained in attempting to harmonize and assimilate them. This was the first time in all my career as a soldier that I had heard from a dying man on a battlefield any expression that indicated even so much as a belief in the existence of any other world than this.

"What did it all mean? When that Federal soldier and I had our brief confidence and prayer on the dividing line between the two worlds, neither of us felt the slightest tremour of uncertainty about it. To both of us the other world was as certainly existing as this, and infinitely greater. Would I ever see him again? If so, would both of us realize that our few moments of communion and of prayer had meant more perhaps than all the struggles, that day, of the great embattled armies? I went to sleep at last that night, as I shall go this night, feeling that it all was and is too much for me, and committing myself and all my perplexities to the One being who is 'sufficient for these things,' and able to lead us safely through such a world and such experiences."

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, DECEMBER 17, 1953

NUMBER 49

The Flight of Half a Century

AN EDITORIAL

IFTY YEARS ago today, on the morning of December 17, 1903, an event took place that has changed the world more in this half-century than any other event since the beginning of the Christian era. On that morning, on the windswept coast of North Carolina, a man climbed into a strange looking, kite-like craft and started out upon one of history's greatest voyages of discovery.

His journey lasted but twelve seconds, but in that time, man's age-old dream had become reality. Man had achieved the power of flight. For the first time man had flown in a powered plane. But not even did the Wright Brothers, Wilbur and Orville, realize the immensity of the thing they had done.

Years passed before the importance of their discovery to mankind was realized, and then the first World War forced it to become the hand-maiden of destruction, rather than the helpmeet of peace. After that, however, it was turned to ways of peace, helping to bring the peoples of the earth nearer to each other, helping to raise high living standards higher, and making possible the lifting of the low; helping to make the world one world.

Then again the pitiless monster war raised its head, and the airplane became the instrument of ruthless destruction, carrying in its wake, fire, pestilence and death.

That is the story of the first fifty years. And today, as the second half-century dawns, this great power for good or for evil is rapidly forcing the world to a decision. What will that decision be? Will the conquerors of the air be conquerors or will they be conquered by their own evil? Will they use their achievement to carry the atom bomb of destruction, or will they use it to carry the message given them nineteen centuries ago—the message of Peace and Goodwill—throughout all the earth.

News Flashes

How many Christmas Gift subscriptions have you sent in for THE CHRISTIAN SUN this Christmas?

A survey just completed by the North Carolina Council of Churches reveals that there are 426 students from 47 foreign countries enrolled in North Carolina's institutions of higher learning.

Rev. Joseph H. Stein, the superintendent of the Middle Atlantic Conference and chairman of our Service Committee, recently flew to Naples, Italy to represent the Congregational Christian Churches of the U. S., at the laying of the cornerstone of an Evangelical Protestant Hospital in Naples. A Protestant hospital has long been a dream of Dr. Teofilo Santi, the director of the work of our Service Committee in Naples, and now this dream is about to become a reality.

Dr. Jesse Moren Bader, executive director of the Joint Department of Evangelism of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A., will retire on December 31, after 34 years dedicated to the cause of Christian evangelism, twelve with the Disciples of Christ, and 22 with the National Council and its predecessor, the Federal Council. In 1932, when Dr. Bader became associate secretary of Evangelism in the Federal Council, there was only one denomination employing a secretary of Evangelism. Today 30 denominations have 46 full-time staff members, carrying out definite and far-reaching programs.

This issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN is devoted primarily to the work of the Western North Carolina Conference and the editorial page this week has been turned over to Dr. F. C. Lester. Dr. Lester did not ask for this special edition until the 9th of the month, so in order to comply with his request it was necessary to make several last minute changes, and some material that would otherwise have been published is omitted. In as much as history declines to wait and as we had given him the editorial columns of the paper, we have used the front page somewhat as originally intended, though giving the matter involved in great abbreviation.

Here's How a Church in Illinois Raised Its Goal

The Elgin, Illinois Church put on an unusual publicity campaign to secure pledges to its Church Building Loan declaration. On November 3, the world fellowship committee of the church invited all families of the church to a "Western Nite" program at the church. The dining room was decorated in a western motif, children were invited to wear western outfits, and even adults came in checked shirts, leather jackets and riding boots.

As a prelude to the ranch type supper, groups were shown the film, "Basis of the Blueprint." At the tables later a dramatic reader presented in floor show style the story of Mrs. Moab Hartlie.

Literature was supplied freely, pledge cards distributed to be signed on the spot or taken home for family consideration. Over 400 were served.

A follow-up letter to those who have not pledged went out following the "Western Nite" program.

Miss Elsie Fletcher, chairman of the sponsoring committee, says: "The fellowship was good, the food was wonderful—we feel sure the results will be worth all the effort. We really got a chance to tell the story in a dramatic and interesting way."

* * *

Why not try an adaptation of this program in your local church? It can be made to work. Time for sending in your Declaration of Purpose is growing short. Why not do something about it now?

Talent Program at Mt. Gilead

Mt. Gilead Christian Church, near Louisburg, in the Eastern North Carolina Conference, tried something new in the way of raising money for its building fund in 1953.

In June, one hundred and twenty dollars was taken from the fund and given to twenty-four members. Each member was to see how much he could gain with the five dollars given him from then until Thanksgiving.

On Thanksgiving night, a candle-light service was held at the church. After the service, the talents were taken to the altar. We were so thankful to know that the program had been successful. The talents amounted to $314.00. This money will be used toward improving the church.

MRS. W. P. PLEASANTS,
Secretary.

The New York Court of Appeals Vindicates Right of Religious Groups to Self-Determination

A REPORT FROM COUNCIL HEAD-QUARTERS.

The decision of the New York State Court of Appeals on December 3, 1953, "is a vindication of the right of religious groups to determine their own affairs without interference by the state," declared Dr. Douglas Horton, in a statement commenting on the decision. Dr. Horton, minister of the General Council, said the decision "paves the way to go ahead with plans to organize the United Church of Christ."

The United Church of Christ would be formed by union of the Congregational Christian Churches and the Evangelical and Reformed, with a total of 8,337 local churches and 2,012,536 members.

Plans for the union have been held up by litigation started in November, 1949, by Cadman Memorial Church of Brooklyn, which opposed the union. The Court of Appeals upheld the decision of the Appellate Division. The latter had reversed a decision in behalf of the Cadman church to block the union by the Brooklyn Supreme Court. The Cadman church had maintained that the proposed basis of union might usurp the interest and property rights of Congregational churches.

Dr. Horton said a meeting, probably early in 1954, would be called by the leaders of the two communions to take further steps.

The Evangelical and Reformed group has 2,740 churches and 743,070 members; the Congregational Christian churches have 5,597 local congregations and 1,269,466 members.

The text of Dr. Horton's statement follows:

"All those who believe in the development of the strength which comes from the union of Protestant churches will be gratified at the decision of the New York State Court of Appeals.

"It is a vindication of the right of religious groups to determine their own affairs without interference by the State. It paves the way for us to go ahead with plans to organize the United Church of Christ.

"The General Council of Congregational Christian Churches continues to look forward to a united fellowship of the Evangelical and Reformed and Congregational Chris-

(Continued on page 7.)

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Laymen's Day Service at Waverly Christian Church

A Laymen's Day Worship Service, was sponsored by the "We-Men's" Club of the Waverly Congregational Christian Church, with Mr. R. M. Clarke, Sunday school superintendent, in charge. The scripture lesson was presented by Mr. L. Tomlinson, assistant Sunday school superintendent. This was followed by a splendid talk on Stewardship by Mr. R. C. Kinzie. A male chorus of 14 laymen presented their message in song. The entire program was an inspiration to a large congregation and was enjoyed by all.

LEO. B. CARPENTER,

Secretary.

* * * * *

Western Carolina Laymen Close Years Work

On November 21, 1953, the Laymen's Fellowship of the Western North Carolina Conference closed its year of work at a meeting with the Flint Hill Church, meeting in the New Market school. We were delighted to have 109 men from 17 of our 38 churches present to enjoy the delicious dinner which was prepared by the Flint Hill ladies.

At the close of the year in any organization, one may always think of so many things that have been left undone. It is true in our case with the laymen in the Western North Carolina Conference. However, we know that there have been some real things accomplished, at least in part.

At this rally $248 was turned in for Moonelon, making a total of $401 to be used for the erection of a central building. More will come later.

There were two highlights at this rally: First, the presence of our national director, Mr. Walter A. Graham. Calling to our attention some of our responsibilities as laymen, both to our church and to the world, he gave to our men a greater desire to live as men should live. We were certainly honored to have Mr. Graham come our way. The second highlight was the very fine selection of officers to lead us into greater opportunities of service for the next two years. Those selected were: Hubert Bean, president, Rt. 1, Asheboro; Ardell Simmons, vice-president, 219

East Street, Albemarle; Fred Tedder, secretary, Rt. 4, Asheboro; and J. C. Newell, treasurer, Ramseur.

I would like to take this opportunity to express my thanks to all of the laymen of this conference for their many kind deeds, considerations, patience and all the other acts of co-operation that have helped make my association with them a most pleasant one. It has been a joy to work with them, and by so doing my life has been greatly blessed. I pray that God will richly bless them in the days to come.

S. H. PELL.

No Truce With TB

By DONALD S. KING, M. D.

It was Saturday afternoon on Okinawa, that war-famed island in the far Pacific. The month was February, 1952. In the auditorium of the United States Army Hospital there were gathered many Okinawans and Americans who were interested in the control of tuberculosis among the island population as well as in the United States troops who were in contact with them. Even in this far-away spot, there was excitement over news that had made the headlines of the New York papers only a few days before. Science had discovered a new pill which made bed-ridden tuberculosis patients feel "so simply wonderful" that they were "dancing" (Continued on page 11.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardcastle.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colelough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date.....195....

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $..... for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

GUEST EDITORIALS BY DR. F. C. LESTER

Greetings from Our Conference

This issue of The Christian Sun will enter into many homes where it is not a regular visitor, and it may appear a bit strange to those who read it regularly. In all cases we appreciate a hearty welcome, and want to wish for each of you all that is usually meant in a hearty greeting.

Most of the news this week comes from the churches in the Western North Carolina Conference. This information was presented to the eighty-third annual session of that conference when it met at Pleasant Hill Church, November 4-5, 1953. It may be presumptuous to think that people all over the world will want to read about our little conference. But some of us remember how the old lady in the hills of China asked Miss Ruth Seabury to tell her about the rest of the family—meaning the church people around the world.

We like to know what is going on in other sections of our world. We are interested in how you work in your churches and conferences. We share with you a great desire to make the message of Christ effective in the lives of people in their homes, churches and communities.

Because this is so, we indulge the hope that you may be interested in us, and we are encouraged to tell you who we are and what we are doing for our Master. And with our message come good wishes from those who are part of this little conference.

The Western North Carolina Conference

The Western North Carolina Conference of Congregational Christian Churches is composed of 38 small churches located in the south-central part of North Carolina. Albemarle, Asheboro, High Point and Pleasant Hill are the only churches that have services every Sunday, with a minister giving full time to the work.

When the conference was organized in 1864, it took its name from the river around which its churches clustered; and it was called the Deep River Christian Conference until 1894, when it became the Western North Carolina Christian Conference. This name served until after the merger, it was changed to include the Congregational churches within the area. In fact, this is not a "Western" North Carolina Conference, for High Point is on its western border, and that is within 25 miles of the center of the state.

Within recent years the churches have shown signs of new life. Church buildings have been improved greatly, parsonages have been bought or erected, gifts have increased for all phases of our church work, several fine young men have entered the ministry, and friendliness has increased. Activities of men, women and young people are increasing. All of this is reflected in the annual meetings of the conference.

The youngest church in the conference is at Asheboro. It has just celebrated its fourteenth anniversary. Reports to conference indicate that it is eighth in membership, second in money raised, and that it takes first place in property valuation. A recent attempt to organize a church in Siler City had to be abandoned for the present. Leaders feel that a new church should be organized there in the immediate future.

Matters of Importance

When representatives of the churches get together and talk of the many things that need to be done, it often happens that a few things stand out as of very great importance.

One of these is to pay insurance for the ministers. Salaries are still so low that it is difficult for men to give full time to the ministry and still support a family. Last year we started paying for group insurance for all the ministers of the conference. This item will be due January 1, 1954, and all the churches are reminded to send the amount due to the conference treasurer.

A second interest that is near to the heart of our people is the care of orphan children, aged ministers, and the widows of ministers. Children are cared for in the Christian Orphanage, and many churches make an offering for this purpose near Thanksgiving. Aged ministers and widows of ministers are remembered at Christmas with a special offering that is over and above apportion-ments. It is a sort of love offering that grows out of our affection for those who have served actively and are now making life richer for us as they bask in the twilight years of life while they await the call to the new home in the Father's house. We must not forget them at Christmas.

Another major concern of those in the recent session of conference had to do with Evangelism. It was noted that we have not been growing enough, and plans were suggested that would call all the churches into a cooperative effort next spring to get the message of Jesus accepted by the people of our communities and to secure many more members—at least a ten per cent increase during the year. This matter should be put into the planning of the work for 1954. Special meetings will probably be scheduled for the two weeks leading up to Easter, and it is hoped that every church will make a list of prospects, visit in the interest of religion, hold services in the church at least part of the time, and in every way that is possible seek to win converts to Jesus Christ and members for his church.

Another matter of importance is presented in the report of the committee on Stewardship and Finance. The laymen who made this report point out that the giving by our people does not seem to indicate that we are faithful stewards of God's gifts to us. That report is short, but is worth reading by ministers and laymen alike. Unless our love for God and humanity expresses itself in our giving for the welfare of men and the spread of the Gospel, it is not very effective. Churches will do well to follow the suggestions in the report, and if they do it is certain that new life will come to our churches and our conference. It is through giving that we can go to all the world with the message of Jesus.

These concerns of our people are really matters of great importance, and when the reports for the next year are all in, it is hoped that progress will be evident all along the line.

gifts through the united church program.

We have on the field missionaries who are giving their all to this great work. They are carrying the Gospel of love to foreign lands. We should at least take a part of the many blessings that come to us and share in this great work.

It is our hope that every church will have a mission study course and learn more about the great need of foreign missions. Let's make next year the greatest year of the church, remembering that the more we give, the more we will have for ourselves.

Matthew 25:40 says, "Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

L. M. PRESNELL,
Chairman.

Reports of Conference Committees

Home Missions and the Western North Carolina Conference

In gathering information from the churches of this conference from the founding of its churches to the present time, we see that our churches have made progress and improvement, especially in building parsonages in recent years.

Several churches have built new church buildings, or enlarged or added to what they already had. We believe that most of our church properties are in the best state of repair that they have been at any time. Your committee wishes to commend all the people of this conference who have had any part in making this improvement possible.

We would also commend the women for the fine work they are doing through their missionary societies.

However, there are new churches that need to be built. We, therefore, recommend:

1. That each church continue its effort to acquire the necessary facilities for the building of a better church materially and spiritually.
2. That we give complete cooperation with the Home Mission program and the Apportionments for our denomination.
3. That we increase our cooperation by individuals and groups in contributing to our Conference Missionary Association.

JOHN Q. PUGH,
Chairman.

The Western Carolina Conference and Foreign Missions

If we are to have peace in the world, the church will have a great part to play in securing it. We know of no greater way to promote peace than through foreign missions—the sending of the Gospel to those who do not know about it.

We in the Western North Carolina Conference know very little, if anything, about going hungry, or without clothes. Yet in many countries there are countless numbers who are without clothes and food and also without the Gospel.

Just what are we as a conference of churches going to do about this great need? Last year's records show that there were 4,197 church members in the conference, and that the churches in the conference gave to foreign missions the sum of $1,538. We realize that this is not a complete picture of the situation, as it does not include what the women's missionary societies have done or the

The Work of Christian Education In Western North Carolina

Christian Education is a vital part of the life and work of our churches, and we must constantly keep this in mind if our churches are to advance in the work of God.

Your committee recommends a line of work for your church to follow this year, as we strive to do a greater work than ever before:

1. Improve our Sunday schools by discovering the principal causes for people leaving the schools. There are several leaks that usually develop in any church school: (a) the teacher problem; (b) lack of Christian spirit; (c) poor organization; (d) crowded conditions; (e) poor literature and equipment.

2. Vacation Bible Schools are the most interesting and at the same time the most challenging opportunity for enlarging the work of Christian education. More and more of our churches are conducting Bible schools each year. Is your church following this line of work?

3. Sunday evenings and mid-week nights are being used in some of our churches for special study courses. In this way the church can actually double the amount of Christian teaching.

4. Audio and visual aids are playing a great part in our Christian education program. Films, film strips and slides are available from our Southern Convention office.

5. The Pilgrim Fellowship is offering splendid opportunities for the
(Continued on page 13.)

Our Western Carolina Conference Churches Report . . .

The following information comes from church reports, both written and oral, given at the annual meeting of the Western North Carolina Conference at Pleasant Hill Church:

The largest church in the conference is PLEASANT HILL, host to the conference, with 285 members of the church and 368 members in the Sunday school. The pastor is Rev. M. A. Pollard, conference president.

PLEASANT HILL and PLEASANT GROVE churches, whose names follow one after the other in the statistical table, each report 23 members received on confession of faith and 27 members received in all—thereby tying for high score on members received during the past year. The Rev. Bill Simmons, pastor of Pleasant Grove, enjoys living in the new parsonage. The church raised $300 with its "Lord's Acre" project. Incidentally, the church reported a loss of 121 members, most of whom were dropped from active membership in a revision of the roll. The membership now numbers 252.

Two small churches, which probably had the highest percentage gain in membership were FLINT HILL (R), of which Rev. Avery Brown is pastor, where the membership increased from 40 to 48, and RANDLEMAN, of which Rev. Winfred Bray is pastor, where the membership increased from 52 to 63. Flint Hill actually received ten members and Randleman 13, so each added one-fourth to its membership at the beginning of the year. Too bad every church did not do as well! Flint Hill also improved its grounds, and Randleman spent $1,300 on remodeling its parsonage, as well as work on the church basement.

The ALBEMARLE church, with 12 new members and a total of 275, is proud of its new parsonage just across the street from the church. Rev. S. E. Madren came there in April to be the pastor, and he and his family have had the thrill of moving into a new house. The church has also recently accepted its quota on the Building Loan Fund,

The ASHEBORO church got rid of its pastor, Dr. F. C. Lester, for six months by "loaning" him to Fayetteville, and thereby had the opportunity of hearing many of our fine Elon College men preach. During the year, the church gained 21 new members, with a net gain of 11, and now has a membership of 163.

Two of our churches neither gained nor lost a member during the year. They are PLEASANT CROSS and PROVIDENCE CHAPEL. The former, where Rev. M. L. Fogleman is pastor, installed a gas heating system, rest rooms, new windows and a well during the year. Providence Chapel, of which Rev. J. U. Fogleman is pastor, has started a Sunday school, which is a real achievement, as there has been no Sunday school there for years. They also installed a new heating system and put in new doors and rugs.

LIBERTY, like Pleasant Grove, revised its roll, thereby removing exactly one-fourth of its members, 25 out of 100. However, the church gained three members during the year, adopted the every member canvass system, paid off the parsonage debt, and raised $1,200 on a fund for an educational building. Rev. L. M. Presnell is the pastor.

PLEASANT RIDGE CHURCH, of which Rev. Max Vestal is pastor, has accepted its Building Loan Fund quota, carpeted the church, and at conference time was planning for a Fall Festival, the proceeds of which they hoped would pay off their building debt. (Incidentally, this was done, as reported in a recent issue of THE SUN.) The church has a membership of 184.

The last of the "Pleasants" of our church list is PLEASANT UNION, which is also the smallest "Pleasant" numerically, having gained three members for a total membership of 45. However, its enthusiasm is great, as evidenced by the fact that it pays its conference apportionments, has accepted the Building Loan Fund quota, and has begun a building fund of its own for two new Sunday school rooms. Rev. B. H. Lowdermilk is the pastor.

It is a fine thing when a church can report having increased its pastor's salary for the next year, and that is what UNION GROVE reported to conference. The lucky pastor is Rev. Winfred Bray. The church has also recently accepted its Building Loan Fund quota, and has installed a new heating system. The membership stands at 109, with a net gain of three for the year.

The last church on our alphabetical list is always ZION, but that does not mean that it is behind the others. Maybe Zion leads in zeal. Its pastor, Rev. W. C. Farrell, reported a new organ installed and a program of Bible study during the year. They had a net gain of three members, for a total of 162.

SEAGROVE went over the 100 mark with a gain of nine members and a loss of two, making a membership now of 105. Rev. R. L. Clapp is the pastor and lives in the nice parsonage adjacent to the church. They report good attendance and very fine prayer services.

Two churches made no report to conference, and so we can give no information about them—PARKS' CROSS ROADS and PATTERSON'S GROVE. The former pastors, Rev. B. H. Lowdermilk, at BISCOE, and Rev. Lunnie Burgess at CENTER GROVE, reported that no work was being done at these places at present. MT. PLEASANT, of which Rev. G. M. Tally is pastor, had no delegates at conference, but did send its report showing a gain of four new members for a total of 89. BIG OAK, where Rev. John Bowers is the pastor, had delegates at conference who told of adding Sunday schools rooms and a heating plant. Unfortunately, their written report was incomplete, and so we cannot tell the members received during the year or the present membership. From BROWN'S CHAPEL there were no representatives at conference except the pastor, Rev. H. V. Cox. This is a large rural church reporting a membership of 198.

SMITHWOOD had the distinction of having the most representatives at conference of any church outside the host church—four delegates and alternates and ten visitors registered. Rev. John Bowers is the pastor of this church. They have 130 members.

(Continued on page 9.)

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

The Winter Quarter at Elon College

Elon College is presently operating on the quarter system, which means that students enroll at three times during the regular college year: in September, December and March. As a rule we have a number of students to drop out within a few days or weeks. There are always a number of freshmen who fail to pass enough work to remain in college. Consequently, we have a much reduced enrollment for the winter quarter, notwithstanding the fact that we have a number of new students enter for the winter quarter, but not nearly enough to atone for the losses sustained.

This year seems to be different. Matriculations for the second quarter have closed. A check-up shows that we have 59 new students, which about balances the losses; perhaps a little more so. At any rate, we have a very full school for the winter quarter, which speaks well for the field secretary and his force, the faculty and the school as a whole.

It is encouraging to feel that the student body is increasing. This will mean increased opportunity for the school to make its contributions and also increased resources for the current demands of the college. Many of these new students are veterans of the Korean War. The majority of these veterans have requested night classes. As a result, we seem to be developing at Elon a regular night school. The enrollment in this school for this quarter will run between 90 and 100, all of whom are studying for college credit.

In addition to the regular classes, we are continuing the adult education school which has an enrollment of between 40 and 50. Only a small percentage of these are studying for college credits. They are simply taking a course in which they are interested and which will better fit them for life and living in their homes or present positions.

The night school at Elon, as it is developing, is also presenting the college with certain problems that seem to be a little difficult of solution. I am sure, however, that the whole program and curriculum will finally resolve itself to the benefit of the ones who study and the college that instructs.

NEW YORK COURT UPHOLDS SELF-DETERMINATION.

(Continued from page 2.)

tian communions. This purpose is substantiated by the overwhelming vote by our General Council at its last meeting at Claremont, California, in June, 1952.

"The General Council, in this controversy, has felt that it was acting in behalf of all denominations which are democratically controlled, in accordance with the Gospel of Christ.

"As soon as possible, plans will be made for a joint meeting of the General Council of the Evangelical and Reformed and the Executive Committee of the Congregational Christian Churches to take further steps towards effecting a union."

Concord Willing Workers Meet

The Willing Workers of Concord Congregational Christian Church met in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dorman Shirkey, near Timberville, Va., on Friday evening, December 4, for the regular Christmas meeting. The women of the church prepared a delicious fried oyster supper, topped off with a Birthday Cake in observance of Mrs. Shirkey's birthday.

A Christmas worship service of scripture and carols preceded the showing of a brief colored filmstrip, "Christmas in Puerto Rico." This showed the children of a Puerto Rican family enjoying gifts brought on Three Kings' Day, twelve days after Christmas. Colored slides of the Philippines helped to visualize some of the beauties of the islands and also some of the problems of rebuilding after the destruction caused by the war.

Present at the meeting besides the Shirkey family were Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hillyard, Mrs. Jim Salyards, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Smith, Mrs. Jesse Smith, with her daughter, Miss Bonnie Ziglar, Mrs. Ralph Galt and Lester and Francis Galt.

The January meeting will be held at the parsonage, two miles east of New Market, on New Year's Day.

Western North Carolina Conference Officials for 1953-1954

President—Rev. M. A. Pollard, R. 2, Liberty.

Vice-President—Rev. L. M. Presnell, Liberty.

Secretary—Rev. F. C. Lester, 840 Sunset Ave., Asheboro.

Assistant Secretary—Rev. Max B. Vestal, R. 1, Asheboro.

Treasurer—Mr. Ira L. McDowell, R. 2, Asheboro.

Historian—Rev. J. Q. Pugh, R. 1, Asheboro.

Executive Committee, Southern Convention—Rev. F. C. Lester.

N. C. Council of Churches—Rev. Max B. Vestal, Rev. Rosser Lee Clapp, Seagrove.

COMMITTEES:

Executive—Rev. M. A. Pollard, chairman; Rev. F. C. Lester, Rev. Max Vestal, I. L. McDowell, S. H. Pell.

Home Missions—Rev. R. L. Clapp, chairman; W. W. Ritter, Paul Wilson, Miss Lola Farlaw.

Foreign Missions—Rev. L. M. Presnell, chairman; Lunnie Burgess, Von Allen, Mrs. B. P. Moffitt.

Evangelism—Rev. R. T. Grissom, chairman; Rev. H. V. Cox, N. L. Rumley.

Stewardship and Apportionments—Cyrus Shoffner, chairman; H. L. Beane, E. H. Cole.

Ministry—Rev. S. E. Madren, chairman; Rev. E. Carl Brady, Rev. R. L. Clapp, Rev. Max Vestal.

Christian Education—Rev. Bill Simmons, chairman; Rev. J. U. Fogleman, W. W. Thomas.

Religious Literature—Rev. Winfred Bray, chairman; Rev. B. H. Lowdermilk, Stacy Hayes.

Superannuation—E. A. Cox, chairman; J. A. Caviness, L. M. Murray.

Ministerial and Church Relations—Rev. G. H. Veazey, chairman; L. V. Dorsett, Edgar Freeman, Roland Farrell.

Moral Reform—Rev. M. L. Fogleman, chairman; Rev. Avery Brown, Rev. John Bowers, Alton Richardson.

Elon College Sustaining Fund—Rev. F. C. Lester, chairman; Rev. M. A. Pollard, Rev. R. T. Grissom, Cyrus Shoffner.

Church Building Loan Fund—S. H. Pell, chairman; Mrs. Orva Brown, Rev. R. L. Clapp, Rev. R. T. Grissom, Mrs. Troy Hall, Rev. F. C. Lester, Rev. S. E. Madren, Sherman Maness, I. L. McDowell, Rev. L. M. Pressnell, Rev. Bill Simmons, Rev. Max Vestal and Mrs. Glenn White.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Preparing for Christmas

By MRS. W. MILLARD STEVENS,
*Chairman, Christian Family Life,
Eastern Virginia Conference*

The Christian festival of Christmas offers the most fitting opportunity of the whole year for linking home and church together in meaningful religious observances. At no other season of the year do people feel so near to the traditions of the faith, so aware of its deeper meaning. For Christmas means the birth of Jesus, the creche, carols, candles, midnight services, and the lovely old custom of the lighting of the Advent candles.

How can we make this Christmas more significant in our homes? I would suggest that you browse around the library one day and see what books are there. Don't forget the old familiar stories like "Why the Chimes Rang," by Raymond Alden, and the story of "The Other Wise Man," by Henry Van Dyck.

The popular family book, "The Family Celebrates Christmas," by Dorothy Carl has been revised and reprinted. In this book are plans for making Christmas one of the happiest experiences of family life. Also the attractive family book, "Roads to Christmas," by Elizabeth C. Allstrom, contains plans and ideas for enriching family worship and activities at Christmas time. Both may be ordered from Pilgrim Press, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Mass., for fifty cents.

Consult your December issue of Children's Religion for ideas and suggestions for making different decorations in your Christmas work shop at home, with each member of the family participating. In this article, Louise B. Griffiths describes one way of making Christmas a "high holiday for families."

* * * * *

Report of Women to the Western North Carolina Conference

The women's work of the Western North Carolina Conference has been improving all the time. We are very proud of the women for their splendid work and eagerness to learn of new ways to become better home missionaries.

Last year one of our main concerns was that only 15 of our 38 churches had organized women's societies. We are still deeply concerned, but we have made a step to improve this. We have a new society—Antioch Church in Randolph County. From all of us to all of you, our hats are off, and here's wishing you many years of fine work and service for our Lord.

Our Spring Rally was held at Union Grove on Tuesday, March 22. We had approximately 50 women and six Congratulations!

Congratulations to Rev. and Mrs. Bill Simmons of Route 1, Bennette, N. C. upon the birth of a daughter, Sara Ann, on November 30, at 4:07 a. m. The five pounds, ten ounces, girl is especially pleasing to this young ministerial couple, because their other child is a son.

Mrs. Simmons is serving her second year as superintendent of the Asheboro District of our Women's work. Her husband is the pastor of Pleasant Grove Church, in whose new parsonage they live, and of Grace's Chapel near Sanford, and is completing his senior year at Elon College.

ministers attending this meeting. We should strive to double this number for our next rally, which will be held at Ramseur Church next spring. We are falling short on one of our main events and that is sending representatives to our conferences and conventions and to the main one—the School of Missions. This past year, we had only nine to attend the School of Missions, but we had 27 to attend the conference this fall.

For our coming year we will study a portion of the Book of Psalms for our Bible study.

Many of our societies are planning on buying a goat—not for personal use, but we are sending them to Puerto Rico, where they are desperately needed to supply milk for poverty-stricken families.

Our women's work has had a big link missing in our chain of faithful women this year, that being Mrs. E. P. Boroughs. We are greatly grieved at her death. Last year at conference time she was seriously ill and could not attend. This was the first time that she had missed in 22 years. We all feel that even though she cannot be here in body, she will always be with us in spirit. She will always remain in our memories and shine as a guiding light to us who are here and are trying to carry on the work she loved so well.

MRS. BILL SIMMONS.

* * * * *

A World Community Day Observance in Western North Carolina

On November 6, Pleasant Ridge, Holly Springs Friends Church, and Spoon's Chapel united in presenting the program "Building Lasting Peace," at the Holly Springs Church, in commemoration of World Community Day.

Members of all three societies participated, with Mrs. Sybrant Pell of Pleasant Ridge as narrator. The service opened with songs and prayer, followed by a responsive reading in which all three societies took part.

The United Church Women have made a declaration toward a program for world peace in which prayer, democracy, support of the United Nations, sharing of spiritual and material resources, and the study of the issues of peace are essential.

A dramatic presentation, entitled "We Will Build Peace," was given, with beautiful tableaux that left a lasting memory of the narrator's words. The tableaux pointed out the conditions of the world concerning hunger, soup kitchens, ignorance, the work of the UNESCO, disease, World Health Organization, division of race and creed, equality, hate and prayer.

Singing and the benediction completed a service which left an understanding of the United Nations and a will to do our part toward building lasting peace.

* * * * *

Asheboro Plans for the Year

The Asheboro Women's Society has a new president in the person of Mrs. Roy Moore, who likes to plan her work and then work her plan. The officers met soon after their election in September and laid the framework for the year's plan of action. Then the program committee, consisting of the program chairman, Mrs. Ray Beane, Mrs. Moore and the pastor's wife, Mrs. F. C. Lester, completed the definite plans for each month's work. A mimeographed year book gave a copy of these plans to each member.

There are three circles, two of which meet one evening a month, and the third of which is a morning circle. Once each quarter the entire group meets. The first of these general meetings, December 11, was in the form of a Christmas party, with a brief business session, devotional, exchange of gifts, and bringing of coupons for the Christian Orphanage. It is expected that the study books for the year will be given at later general meetings.

The monthly circle meetings consist of a devotional and the program from the packet. These were selected from the variety of material to fit in with the experiences of the Asheboro group and the season of the year. In some cases there were devotionals with the programs. In other cases the Bible study, a Psalm which particularly "fits" with the remainder of the program and not just any Psalm, has been planned for use with the program.

The Friendly Service program includes soap for Ryder Memorial Hospital, given at the December circle meetings, a goat for Puerto Rico later in the year, and gifts to the shut-in members of our church at Christmas. Our Thank Offering was the largest ever.

"The Hidden Heart" has been shown in our church this fall, along with a Family Night supper.

At the annual turkey supper and bazaar, sponsored by the women's society, $300 was raised for use on the Building Fund.

All in all, we are off to a very successful year.

OUR CONFERENCE CHURCHES REPORT.

(Continued from page 6.)

They have added new Sunday school rooms and a heating plant and have started a parsonage fund.

Another church which had a good conference delegation was ETHER, with nine besides the pastor, Rev. R. L. Clapp. And they had quite a distance to travel, too. They have accumulated a building fund amounting to $1,300, but have not forgotten sick and needy families in their community, even giving a sewing machine to one that was "burned out, or orphans in Korea. There are 77 members.

RAMSEUR has received eight new members and now has 120. Rev. Gene Thomas is the pastor. This church has installed new rest rooms and a new heating system. They also have lowered the ceilings in two Sunday school rooms. They report "all bills paid in full."

NEEDHAM'S GROVE, of which Rev. M. L. Fogleman is the pastor, gained four members and lost three, and so has a present membership of 156. They report buying the lot adjoining the church and improving their cemetery grounds.

Several churches reported starting building funds. One of these is NEW CENTER, where Rev. H. V. Cox was the pastor last year. They also did some repair work during the year. They gained three new members, and now have 57 in all.

Several years ago SOPHIA, in conjunction with Flint Hill (R), built a new parsonage. This is now occupied by the Rev. Avery Brown and his fine family. This year the Sophia church has purchased a lot on which to relocate their church. They report attendance up about 40 per cent and nine new members. The present membership is 75.

ANTIOCH (C) reports a very busy year—the church moved, four new Sunday school rooms added, a new wing on the church, a gas heating system installed, and the sanctuary redecorated. The Rev. Lunnie Burgess is the pastor of this church. It gained no new members and lost one, so now has 128 members.

ANTIOCH (R), of which the Rev. Winfred Bray is the pastor, has the distinction of being the only church in the conference which organized a Woman's Missionary Society this year. It also has a very active Pilgrim Fellowship group. With a gain of two members and a loss of one, it now has a membership of 111.

SHILOH barely misses the 100-mark this year—it has 99 members. Perhaps it can get back over 100 during this year. That would be fine. The pastor is the Rev. R. T. Grissom. A new organ has been installed in this fine rural church.

SPOON'S CHAPEL is one of our smallest churches, but it gained five new members during the year. Its membership now stands at 42. Rev. Max Vestal is the pastor. This was the first church in the conference to accept its Building Loan Fund goal, and it has also started a building fund of its own. One of its projects was helping Korean orphans.

One of our churches which is definitely hoping to build during this year is BAILEY'S GROVE in North Asheboro. During the past year its building fund has been increased, plans have been drawn, and hopes are running high. Since conference, this church has voted its share of the denomination's Building Loan Fund. The pastor is the Rev. Avery Brown.

Our church in HIGH POINT has an easier time in getting workers than it does in getting members. During the past year this church has begun construction of Sunday school rooms. It held a Fall Festival in the uncompleted building. The Rev. G. H. Veazey is the pastor of these workers. The present membership is 168.

HANK'S CHAPEL is undergoing a real "face lifting." An adequate religious education building is being erected at the rear of the church, and the large church building is being brick veneered. Rev. R. T. Grissom, the pastor, and his family, live in a nice, large, modern parsonage near the church. This church gained 16 members and lost eight, which leaves it with 245 members.

Rev. B. H. Lowdermilk is the pastor of FLINT HILL (M) church, which did some remodeling a year ago. This past year they have paid for the remodeling. This church received seven members on confession, lost four, and now has 67 on its roll.

Our congratulations to little BENNETT CHRISTIAN CHURCH for becoming independent of conference aid on pastor's salary. For a number of years this church has been receiving a small amount of help in this way. Now they are managing it alone. The pastor is the Rev. John Q. Pugh. There are 31 members, two having been received the past year.

Last, but far from least, in this reporting from the churches, we come to GRACE'S CHAPEL. This church has unanimously recalled the Rev. Bill Simmons as its pastor for this year. The young people and the women have built a clubhouse costing $3,000. Gifts were given to "burned out" and sick families in the community. The church entertained the Western North Carolina Pilgrim Fellowship on November 29. Thirteen new members were received during the year with a net gain of seven. The present membership is 182.

"Any objective is obtainable. But only the supreme objective is worthy of your aspiration and endeavor"—Anon.

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Telling the Christmas Story

Christmas is a family time and a story-telling time. Recently we have heard some lovely stories, but they were ruined because the persons giving them, read them in a rather ordinary fashion, instead of telling them with sparkle and aliveness. Anyone enjoys a story well told better than one read with little enthusiasm. Now we are advocates of reading aloud, but there are times when one needs to tell a tale. Make this your Christmas present for your children or the children you teach.

"But," you say, "I just can't remember a story, I just can't." Are you sure? Have you really tried? Professor Barney, who teaches English at Elon College, taught me children's literature. In that course, he has a sure-fire method for story telling.

1. Read the story many times to become familiar with it.
2. Break it into logical sequences, images or patterns.
3. Memorize the sections by rote.
4. Tell the story aloud to yourself. (Practice before the mirror.)
5. Share the story with others!

We would add: put some of yourself into the story, be vivacious and then forget yourself. Think of yourself as being the people about whom you tell. It is then that your small fry will hang on to each word and plead: "Tell it again!"

Here is a story on which to practice:

David was five and as lively as any five-year-old is apt to be. Right now he was a bit tired, but little boys of five never admit that they have had a full day. It was just before Christmas, and David was helping his mother make a Christmas scene to go on their mantel. David was so small he had to stand back a little ways to see the top of the mantel, but he enjoyed standing back very much.

All around him on the table lay scraps of cloth, bits of wool, paste (lots of it on David's fingers) and cardboard. Mother was taking a few stitches in a shepherd's cloak and taking a peek at David with one eye.

"David, are you sleepy? We should have stopped for your nap."

"No, no," he said to his mother.

David's mother cut the thread and stood up. She carried the figure to the mantel and put it in place. Like David, she stood back a little and looked at the scene. It was simple, but quite lovely. In the middle, they had placed a circle of blue paper, and before it was the Holy Family; and grouped around were the Wise Men and the shepherds, made of clothespins and dressed by Davey and mother.

She picked up David and held him close to the scene to see it.

"Tell me the story of the shepherds and the angels, Mommy," he asked.

Sitting down with David in her lap, she told the old, old story of the little Lord Jesus and his birth. And when she came to the part about the shepherds being afraid, David broke in, "Mommy, I know what that angel said to those shepherds."

"What, dear?" asked mother.

"The angel said: 'Don't be afraid, shepherds, the angels are just lighting up.' That's how I feel—just like lighting up!"

* * * * *

"How Many Days?"

By HELEN GREGG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

No sooner was Thanksgiving Day over than our youngest neighbor began asking, "How many days before Christmas, Mommy?" And as the days passed Gail became more and more excited and emotional. When, at last, Christmas week did arrive, Gail was nervous, tired of it all, and unwilling to take the simplest part in the preparations.

Parents sometimes forget to teach the real meaning of Christmas—the Birthday of the Prince of Peace. It needs to be exemplified. The atmosphere of the home should be kept in harmony with His coming. Father and Mother should show that they are joyfully grateful for this Gift of Gifts. The children will follow their lead.

"Every child is selfish," criticized an old lady. "All they care about is what they will get."

If the children at Christmas time are more interested in getting than in giving, it is generally because from their earliest recollection gifts for them has been the chief topic of conversation on the part of relatives and friends when talking with them at this season. Many boys and girls when they go to kindergarten learn for the first time the happiness of preparing gifts for those at home. This giving will be very different from merely distributing what someone has bought or prepared for them to give. These are gifts that they themselves have made for Dad and Mom. They can hardly wait for Christmas—not to get something this year, but to give.

During the depression a teacher who is a friend of mine discussed with her class the significance of Christmas. The children told what they were giving and for what they hoped. Angelo, a blackeyed Italian boy of nine, stood up with the rest. When his turn to speak came, he said quietly but gaily, "We are not going to have any presents, but we're going to have a lot of fun."

How true it is that many presents do not necessarily mean "a lot of fun." Here was a family that could not afford gifts, but they were going to have a happy time. Parents, in some families, and the children, too, often finish the holidays physically and financially depleted. A wise mother of my acquaintance helps her twins to control their eagerness when making out Christmas shopping lists by saying, "Let's stop and think. Wouldn't it be nice to save a little of your money for the Junior Red Cross and for some of the other friends you like to help?"

This mother when Christmas arrives stresses its real meaning. The family attend church, sing Christmas carols, deliver gifts to families less fortunate, invite lonely friends and relatives to dinner, and, too, enjoy their own simple gifts. Moreover, the housekeeper, who has been with the family for years, is spared to spend Christmas with her relatives. "Ellen wants to be in her own home," they say. "That's where she belongs!"

There is not a time of the year when we do not need the real Christmas spirit—the gracious hospitality, the cheer and extra smiles then prevalent. Amusing stories have their place, too. A little boy ran home from kindergarten with the news that he was to be in a Christmas pantomime. His busy mother overlooked the word "pantomime." Absent-mindedly she asked, "What do you say in the Christmas play, Allen?" "Oh, I don't say any-

(Continued on page 11.)

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Executive Committee of Valley Youth Holds Meeting

A meeting of the executive committee of the Valley Youth Conference was held with the members of the Winchester Youth Fellowship on Friday evening, December 4. Basketball games or practice kept most of the officers from attending, but eight Winchester young people, their advisor, Miss Winnie Whitlock, Mrs. Whitten, and Messrs. Galt, Harmon and Whitten, worked out tentative plans for the next conference rally to be held at Winchester either January 24 or 31, 1954.

This rally will feature a "flight around the world," with stops at eight foreign countries whose Christian life, songs and folk games will be portrayed by eight different youth groups. We hope also to have a missionary film and a speaker for the evening program.

HANK HARMON.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Do you like tongue-twisters? Try this one: "The big black bug bit the big black bear on the big black bear's bare back, so the big black bear bit the big black bug back."

* * *

Do you like puns? Try this multiple pun:

A German and his wife were walking with a Russian down the main street of Moscow, when a flake of snow hit the German's wife on the nose. The German remarked that it was snow.

The Russian said, "No, it is rain."

"It is rain."

"No, it is snow."

Then the German's wife said, "Let us not get in a fuss over this, Rudolph, the Red knows rain, Dear."

* * *

Someone has said that what a person does with his spare time determines what sort of person he will be. Well, most of us will have some spare time around Christmas. Let us not waste it. Let us make this Christmas a joyous one for others and thus for ourselves, by sharing the spirit of Christ. Merry Christmas to each of you!

A Report from Centerville Sunday School

According to a report made by the secretary of the Centerville Sunday School to the Prince George County Convention, the Sunday school was open every Sunday during the year. The average membership was 32, and the average attendance 60 per cent.

During the year, sick members have been remembered; a fellowship supper sponsored, and an entertainment committee appointed, which has put on several good programs.

The officers and members affiliated themselves with the leadership training school in Waverly last fall, and four of this number received certificates.

A Bible school was carried on in connection with our revival services.

The Sunday school has encouraged the young people's choir, helped to finance repairs to the church building, supported janitor service for the church, and purchased all necessary Sunday school material, as well as pins for an attendance project.

We will strive to make our Sunday school even more progressive during the ensuing year.

MRS. F. W. BARLOW,
Church Secretary.

NO TRUCE WITH TB.

(Continued from page 3.)

in the corridors." Since that day, more than a year has passed, and some of those who danced are dead.

What, then, is the place of drugs, the old and the new, in the treatment of tuberculosis, and what is the effect of this "chemotherapy" on the tuberculosis campaign?

There is no doubt, after a seven-year trial, that certain drugs are very helpful in treating tuberculosis. So, for the first time in history, we have drug treatment to add to the time-tried but never really satisfactory formula of "rest, fresh air, and good food," and the later treatment by pneumothorax, pneumoperitoneum, thoracoplasty, and surgical removal. By February, 1952, it had been determined that the most effective drug treatment was a combination of para-aminosalicylic acid and streptomycin. Then came the exciting new drug which is now officially named "isoniazid," but may be referred to by at least half a dozen other trade names. As intimated above, isoniazid has not lived up to the original expectations, but by itself it is a better drug than para-aminosalicylic acid, and it is hoped that it will also prove so in combination with streptomycin. Time and much study will tell.

But there is as yet no evidence that drug treatment can replace bed rest and surgery. It is only an extraordinarily useful addition to older methods of treatment.

And there is no hope that chemotherapy is so effective that it will wipe out tuberculosis in a few years' time and so make other efforts to control tuberculosis unnecessary.

Therefore, there must be no slackening in our efforts to fight tuberculosis. We must still conduct X-ray surveys to find early or asymptomatic disease; provide facilities for X-ray checks of large portions of the population, continue the campaign to have chest X-rays of all hospital admissions and all hospital personnel; continue support of research workers, etc. These and many other problems will need our constant attention.

But someone has to provide the money which makes such studies possible. The Christmas Seal sales have through the years provided the lifeblood for the volunteer citizens' campaign against tuberculosis. This campaign will be carried on by the 3,000 tuberculosis associations in the United States until tuberculosis is defeated.

FOR THE CHILDREN.

(Continued from page 10.)

thing," he answered. "I'm one of the wise men!"

Sandy and Terry had moved into a ranch-type house. One hot day in July the little boys rushed out into the garden and lifting blonde heads toward the sky they called at the tops of their lusty voices, "Santa Claus, we live here now. Don't forget! Don't forget!"

This new attitude toward Christmas, a more relaxed, thoughtful one, does not mean that Santa Claus is not in the picture. But Santa Claus should be only a symbol, just as Uncle Sam is our country's symbol. Santa is the children's friend and teacher. He represents good nature and happy generosity. It will be well to remember that, like every other day, for us Christmas will be what we make it.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"Thy Kingdom Come"

LESSON XIII—DECEMBER 27, 1953.

MEMORY SELECTION: "The kingdom of the world has become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever."—Revelation 11:15.

LESSON: Matthew 6:9-19; 28:16-20; John 17:18-21; Acts 1:6-8; Revelation 11:15b.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Ephesians 6:10-20.

The Kingdom of God.

The Kingdom of God was the central passion of Jesus. The words, therefore, were often on his lips. When he began his public ministry, he said, "Repent, ye, for the kingdom of heaven (or of God) is at hand." Throughout his ministry, he taught and preached about the Kingdom of God. Many of his stories had the kingdom as his central theme. And after his resurrection, during the forty days that he showed himself alive to his followers by many infallible proofs, he spoke to them "of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." (Acts 1:3.) Furthermore, he taught his disciples to pray for the Kingdom of God to come. He said, "When ye pray, say, Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as in heaven." Even a casual reading of the words of Jesus will show how much emphasis he put on the kingdom of God or of heaven—the terms are synonymous. How come all this? What did he mean by the Kingdom of God? Where was it? What was it like? When would it come? Who would be members of it? Who was its King?

Briefly put, the central idea of the Kingdom of God was, "God rules, God will rule." Taking the idea of a king, so long central in the thinking of the Jewish people, Jesus purified and clarified and universalized the idea and applied it to the relation of God to his people and to the world itself. Even in his day he saw that God was the Ruler, the King. But then, as now, he did not see all things "put under his feet. Jesus frankly faced this fact. But he foresaw the time when God's rule would be fully established, and when His will would be done on earth even as it is done in heaven. He bade his disciples to pray for this greatly-to-be-desired goal, and to work for it even as they prayed for it. The coming of the kingdom was to be a long drawn-out affair. But come it would. On the last night of his earthly life he told his disciples that he would not again drink of the cup, until he drank it new with them in the Kingdom of God.

Put it another way: for Jesus, the Kingdom of God meant the rule or reign of God in all human affairs. The kingdom is already established in heaven; let it become a reality on earth. "Let it come and wipe out wars between nations. Let it give men something better to live for than money and big houses and pleasure. Let it drive out the threat of poverty, the shadow of pain. Let it come leaping out of the hearts of men who are Christlike. Let it rule on all the earth. Thy kingdom come."

A Claim, a Commission, a Promise.

"Go ye, therefore, and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit; teaching them to observe all things that I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world (or age)." We call this "The Great Commission." It is more than that. It is first of all a great claim. Jesus Christ, the Risen Lord, claims to have all authority or power, both in heaven and on earth. God has highly exalted him and put all things under his feet. On the basis of that claim, Jesus gives his disciples a great commission. He bids them go into all the world and to make disciples of all nations. These are our marching orders. They are specific orders which give authority to missions, now and always. The man who does not believe in missions had better read his New Testament again. And finally, Jesus gives his disciples a great promise. Those who undertake to do what the Lord commands them, will find that he will go with them. He always helps us to do what he tells us to do. He will be with us even unto the ends of the earth, and until the end of time. Arise, let us be going! We should be about our Father's business!

Sent Even As He Was Sent.

"As thou didst send me into the world, even so send I them into the world." These words ought to give us pause. The Master plainly says that even as God sent him into the world, just so does he send us into the world. Not in the same degree, but in the same manner, we are to be saving elements, bringing men to God through Jesus Christ, revealing the character and love of God, fulfilling his will and building his kingdom.

Power for the Work of Kingdom Building.

Even after the Resurrection, the disciples did not understand the nature of the kingdom. "Wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom unto Israel?" they asked. They still looked for an earthly kingdom with Jerusalem as the capital. They had not yet learned that the Kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit, as writes Paul. The disciples not only lacked knowledge, but they lacked power. Jesus therefore told them to wait until they were endued with power from on high. Then they could and should be his witnesses, beginning where they were, and going even unto the ends of the earth. It was a repetition of the Great Commission in another form.

The Far Off Divine Event.

"The kingdom of the world is become the kingdom of our Lord and his Christ; and he shall reign forever and ever." John in his vision on Patmos, with inspired insight, saw the one far off divine event toward which the whole creation moves. He was a prisoner and an exile on a lonely island. But he was not looking at the things that are seen, for they are temporal; but at the things that are not seen, and are eternal. And he knew that Christ was Lord, that eventually he would establish his kingdom, that he would rule forever and ever. The kingdom does not come with observation. The mills of the gods grind slowly. A thousand years are in God's sight as a watch in the night. But come it will, this Kingdom of God, this rule of Christ, this reign of righteousness.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

REPORTS OF CONFERENCE COMMITTEES

(Continued from page 5.)

training of our young people. The rallies of our conference have brought forth many outstanding young people who are doing a splendid job as church leaders. The young people are still in need of encouragement and advice.

6. To support our college this year in a more vigorous way by sending our own children to Elon will be a great help to that institution. More and more of our young people are choosing other colleges than our own and by their doing this we are losing them to other denominations. On Elon's campus our laymen, ministers, missionaries and Christian workers are trained.

BILL SIMMONS,
Chairman.

The W. N. C. Conference and the Church Building Loan Fund

This is a progress report from your committee, which has been working to raise our share of $11,500 of the $4,500,000 Building Loan Fund of our denomination. This money is to be loaned to churches to make improvements, build in new communities, aid in places where misfortune has come, or in anyway to make it possible for children and their parents to worship Christ. By September, in the denomination as a whole, $3,500,000 had been pledged. That is fine.

How about our conference- Eight churches have entered into the program and made their declarations to the amount of $3,410, which is only about one-fourth of our total goal. These churches that have seen the need for such aid are: Asheboro, Flint Hill (R), Hank's Chapel, High Point, Pleasant Ridge, Pleasant Union, Liberty, and Spoon's Chapel.

This might indicate that your committee has not been at work. But we have had four meetings of the committee, one conference-wide meeting of the churches, and two area meetings of the churches. At least, such meetings have been called, but the response has not been too good.

However, we believe that other churches will want to make their declarations of purpose soon—the money does not have to be paid until 1955. The Western North Carolina Conference is at the bottom of the list in the conferences of the Southern Convention, so far as churches sending in these declarations is concerned. This does not give a true picture of our belief. We want others to have churches, and we do not want the world at large to think that we are happy if only our little family of churches here has a place to worship. We want the Church of Christ to be greater in every respect. If it is going to be, we must help it by giving to this fund that will always be there to help when the need comes.

One never knows when fire, storms, floods, or some other disaster may strike our own church, and we would need to seek aid. We would not want to hear the answer that so many have had to hear recently—no funds with which to aid your worthy cause.

S. H. PELL,
Chairman.

Note.—Word has just been received that the Albemarle and Union Grove churches have accepted their quotas and have forwarded their declarations of purpose to the Convention office. That is fine! What church will be next?

S. H. P.

Activities of Laymen's Fellowship of Western Carolina

It is with a great deal of pleasure that I can report to you that our laymen are among the finest in our denomination. Here we find a group of men dedicated to God and the work of his kingdom. By our dedication we will make his church a better one on earth, and through it men, women and children will be brought to the Christian way of life.

This year we have placed emphasis on missions, having a returned missionary speak at one of our rallies. At another rally we made a study of our convention center at Moonelon. We believe this is going to be a great thing for our churches, and we adopted a resolution to raise $2,500 to help make this possible. We have $968 of this amount already pledged.

We have seven churches that may be called honor-roll churches, as they have Laymen's Fellowship organizations: Albemarle, Asheboro, Liberty, Pleasant Grove, Pleasant Ridge, Spoon's Chapel and Union Grove. I would like to give an extra word of commendation to Union Grove for having a Youth Laymen's Fellowship.

Many of our churches that do not have a fellowship are represented at our rallies, for which we are very grateful. The ministers have been a great bolster to our program by their interest in the local church and by faithful attendance at our rallies.

Our final rally for this year will be held on November 21, at the New Market School, with the Flint Hill church serving as host. We will have our national director, Walter A. Graham, on the program. This promises to make for us a great meeting.

In summing up this report I would like to say, "The laymen have been working hard in the local church to make it a better church, and without their faith and work a great amount of God's plans would not have been accomplished."

S. H. PELL,
Chairman.

Motions Passed by the Western North Carolina Conference

1. Voted: To invite all visitors to be seated as deliberative members.
2. Voted: To approve program as presented, subject to necessary changes.
3. Voted: That the united evangelistic campaign for next spring be referred to the Conference Ministerial Association with power to set date and promote the work.
4. Voted. That the Conference Missionary Association should be continued.
5. Voted: That Conference hold a one-day session on Thursday, March 4, 1954, primarily for educational and inspirational purposes, and a one-day session on Thursday, November 4, 1954, mainly for business.
6. Voted: To meet at the Asheboro Congregational Christian Church for the session of March 4.
7. Voted: To have minutes printed in The Christian Annual and to purchase 200 copies to be distributed to the conference officials and to the churches.
8. Voted: That the secretary be authorized to report this conference session to the churches as soon as possible through a special issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN.
9. Voted: That the secretary be authorized to complete minutes, using editorial discretion in preparing them for publication.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

It is a pleasure to make this report. So many churches and friends have done so well by us. However, we are far from the $65,000.00 we must have before this year is finished. If there is anything you can do for us, please help us all you can.

I have been thoroughly discouraged for six months, but have had the hope that Thanksgiving and Christmas would bring us out of the anxiety with which we operate. Many people are rallying to our plea and that encourages me. However, as the year draws nearer to its close, I am re-emphasizing my suggestion to you that you do all you can to help us come out successfully, because a new year with its needs will soon be before us.

Our children are well, happy, and getting along fine in the orphanage and in school. Not all of them are making as good grades as we would like for them to make, but they do extra well at that. We are mighty proud of them.

We have had rains, not too much, but enough to help our small grain. we have 115 acres of wheat, oats and barley sown. It is beginning to show green across these pretty rolling hills. If enough of it comes up, there will be some pretty fields around here soon. I hope and pray that we may make a good crop this coming year. We do need it so badly.

Our children are looking expectantly forward to Christmas. Already plenty of candy has arrived, plenty of pecans, and individual packages are beginning to come in. Parties with oranges, apples, toys and more candy are being planned. The Elon College student body and the Burlington Civinettes are giving parties. The Woodmen of the World will give a big party for everyone. Several churches are also planning parties.

Standard Hosiery Mills of Burlington has already sent us 120 pairs of socks and hose. There is always a need for such things, as well as shoes.

Yes, people are remembering us. May God's blessings be upon every one, every individual, every class, every Sunday school and church.

There will not be another financial report before the first of the year. The editor has tabooed finances for the Christmas issue and there will be no paper on December 31. But keep sending in your gifts, and let's make sure that the first report in January will carry us over the top!

"No one stands so straight as he who stoops to help a child."

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

REPORT FOR DECEMBER 10, 1953.

Commodities for the Week.

Ladie's Bible Class, Holland Christian Church, Clothing.
Miss Annie Louise Johnson, Burlington, N. C., Clothing.
T. R. Eason, South Norfolk, Va., Clothing.
Cone Mills, Gibsonville, N. C., Cloth.
Mrs. W. H. Mercer, Bunker Hill, Ill., Toys and cards.
Mrs. John A. Hall, Henderson, N. C., Clothing and books.
W. H. Weatherly, Elizabeth City, N. C., Candy.
Pate-Dawson Co., Burlington, N. C., Bananas.
Mrs. G. O. Huber, Wakefield, Va., Clothing.
C. H. Darden, Greensboro, N. C., Candy.
Miss Phylliss Lemmond, Sanford, N. C., Clothing.
Mrs. J. R. Pleasants, Durham, N. C., Clothing.
Miss Ray Hall, Norfolk, Va., Tie Holders.
New Hope Missionary Society, Coupons.
Mrs. E. N. Pearce, Burlington, N. C., Coupons.

Sunday School Monthly Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$15,020.54
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Morrisville	$ 9.91
Morrisville, Thanksgiving	23.40
New Elam	35.00
Plymouth, S. S., Thanksgiving	35.82
Wake Chapel	1652.54
	1,756.67
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans.), Thanksgiving	$ 10.00
Bethlehem (Nans.)	32.71
Liberty Spring S. S.	20.00
Mt. Carmel S. S.	18.53
Christian Temple	45.00
Suffolk, Thanksgiving	100.00
	226.24
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Burlington, First, S. S.	$ 84.54
Burlington, First, Thanksgiving	350.00
Burlington, Bev. Hills	46.81
Greensboro, First	174.09
Hopedale, Thanksgiving	5.00
Mt. Zion, S. S.	6.82
Union (N. C.), Thanksgiving	14.00
	681.26
Western N. C. Conference:
High Point, First	$ 30.00
Pleasant Union, S. S., Thanksgiving	47.16
Union Grove	28.70
	105.86
Virginia valley Conference:
Bethel S. S.	$ 42.00
	42.00
Total	$ 2,812.03
Grand Total	$17,832.57

Special Offerings.

Amount brought forward	$22,747.04
Mrs. Elizabeth Shoop Dixon, Suffolk, Va., in memory of Mrs. Edna Bradley Maxey	$ 5.00
Mrs. Elizabeth Shoop Dixon, Suffolk, Va., in memory of Mrs. Alice Whitefield Cutchins	5.00
Mary Sue Brittle S. S. Class	5.00
Mrs. C. E. Newman, Virginia, Va., in memory of Dr. C. E. Newman	5.00
John Chamblin, Gibsonville, N. C.	1.00
Special Fund, First Cong. Church, Asheville, N. C.	50.00
Thanksgiving Offerings:
Burlington Rotary Club	240.00
Marshall Andrews, Suffolk, Va.	5.00
Mrs. Ethel S. Godwin, Suffolk, Va.	25.00
Mr. & Mrs. Vernon E. Ramsey, Suffolk, Va.	25.00
M. T. Elliott, Suffolk, Va.	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. L. S. Burton, Suffolk, Va.	25.00
A. W. Cooper and Friends, Hamlet, N. C.	34.00
Julius C. Helmer, Newport News, Va.	25.00
W. H. Scott, Franklin, Va.	100.00
R. C. Craven, Greensboro, N. C.	84.00
L. W. Wagoner, Elon College, N. C.	20.58
Mr. & Mrs. C. S. Clayton, Charlotte, N. C.	100.00
Eugene Neu, Charlotte, N. C.	5.00
Mrs. E. H. Morris, Asheville, N. C.	5.00
J. D. McClenny & Family, Suffolk, Va.	50.00
Pisgah Christian Church, Pisgah, Ala.	30.00
Mrs. Isabelle F. Robinson, Albany, N. Y.	25.00
Mr. & Mrs. R. S. Piland, Suffolk, Va.	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. Otis O'Berry, Harrellsville, N. C.	50.00
King Electric Co., Burlington, N. C.	25.00
Woman's Guild, Shelton Mem., Portsmouth, Va.	10.00
E. H. Wilkins, Greensboro, N. C.	75.00
W. C. Mull, Burlington, N. C.	100.00
Twentieth Century Baraca Class, Suffolk Christian Church	50.00
Charles Apel, Morehead, Kentucky	10.00
Clyde W. Rudd, Greensboro, N. C.	10.00
Mrs. H. N. Wellon, Burlington, N. C.	5.00
A Friend	5.00
Mr. & Mrs. J. C. Webb, Suffolk, Va.	25.00
Special Gifts	286.30
	$ 1,530.88
Grand total	$24,277.92
Total for the week	$ 4,342.91
Total for the year	$42,110.49

Pledges to Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Antioch—E. J. Rohart	$ 343.00
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	106.00
Bethel—H. V. Harman	377.00
Dry Run—R. E. Newton	129.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton	211.00
Newport—R. E. Newton	426.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardeastle	$ 872.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo ..	459.00
Bethlehem (Nans.)—R. E. Brittle	2,040.00
Burton's Grove—J. W. Madren ..	153.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark ..	200.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Bay View—.....	724.00
Norfolk: Christian Temple—W. Millard Stevens	5,330.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dollar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	877.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardeastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein ..	1,459.00
South Norfolk—O. D. Poythress	2,500.00
Suffolk—.....	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—.....	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—Carl Wallace	300.00
First Cong. Christian—John W. Rackley, Jr. (Hopewell, Va.) ..	464.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Morrisville—E. M. Powell	207.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Albemarle—S. E. Madren	885.00
Bailey's Grove—Avery Brown ..	88.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown...	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ...	694.00

High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00	Lakeview—Curtis Young	82.50
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00	Mount Bethel—C. Fred Allred ..	213.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00	Monticello—Julius Riee	460.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00	Mt. Zion—Thomas D. Sutton ..	600.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00	Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Union Grove—Winfred Bray ...	246.00	Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:		Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wisseman	364.00
Apple's Chapel—John R. Lackey	$1,563.00	Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Burlington:		Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	400.00	Tryon—Orville H. White	*250.00
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00	Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Concord—T. D. Sutton	460.00	Union (Va)—Mark W. Andes...	1,498.00
Greensboro, Calvary Christian—Thurman F. Bowers	688.00	Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wisseman	3,292.00	Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hendersonville—C. M. Heymann	160.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Hopedale—J. Harold Loman ...	603.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Kallam Grove—C. Fred Allred ..	344.00

* Contribution.
† Paid in full.

SUMMARY BY CONFERENCES.

Conference	Quota	Accepted
Va. Valley	$ 5,736.00	$ 3,736.00
Eastern Va.	51,000.00	43,691.00
Eastern N. C.	17,690.00	10,229.00
Western N. C.	11,476.00	4,629.00
N. C. and Va.	50,552.00	25,024.50
Totals	$136,454.00	$87,309.50

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE.—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

Quiz on the Western N. C. Conference

TEST YOUR KNOWLEDGE

1. What is the oldest church in the Western North Carolina Conference?
2. What is the newest church in the Western North Carolina Conference?
3. How many full time ministers are there in the conference? Name them.
4. What churches have parsonages?
5. What pastors are enrolled in college?
6. What ministers are enrolled in a seminary?
7. What minister is also the principal of a school.
8. How many ministers of this conference are retired? Who are they?
9. What two pastors have the same last name?
10. What father and son are in the ministry in this conference?
11. What minister and his daughter are both attending Elon College?
12. What church gave the most for total local expenses?
13. What is the largest church numerically?
14. What is the smallest church?
15. How many churches are in towns?
16. How many churches have full-time service?

ANSWERS

1. Pleasant Hill.
2. Asheboro.
3. Six—R. L. Clapp, R. T. Grissom, F. C. Lester, S. E. Madren, M. A. Polard, G. H. Veazey.
4. Albemarle, Asheboro, Hank's Chapel, Liberty, Pleasant Grove, Pleasant Hill, Pleasant Ridge, Randleman, Seagrove Pastorate, Sophia Pastorate.
5. Winfred Bray, Avery Brown, Bill Simmons, Gene Thomas.
6. Only one—Max Vestal at Duke University School of Religion.
7. E. Carl Brady. etaoins
8. Three—Park W. Fisher, Methodist Home, Charlotte; T. J. Green, High Falls; G. O. Lankford, Elon College.
9. J. U. Fogleman and M. L. Fogleman.
10. Silas E. Madren and Thomas Madren.
11. Avery Brown and his oldest daughter.
12. Albemarle—$27,625.
13. Pleasant Hill—number on roll 285.
14. Providence Chapel—number on roll 20.
15. Albemarle, Asheboro, Bennett, Biscoe, Ether, High Point, Liberty, Ramseur, Randleman, Seagrove, Sophia.
16. Four—Albemarle, Asheboro, High Point and Pleasant Hill.

HISTORICAL SOCIETY. 1956.
Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches.

The CHRISTIAN SUN

ORGAN OF THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION OF CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCHES

In Essentials Unity — In Non-Essentials, Liberty, — In All Things, Charity

VOLUME CV

RICHMOND, VIRGINIA, DECEMBER 24, 1953

NUMBER 50

"There Is Music in the Air" . . . at Christmas Time

The Combined Choirs of the Windsor, Virginia, Congregational Christian Church present a program of Christmas music during the 1952 Christmas season. The music was under the direction of Mrs. L. Homer Whitley, the director of the choirs and organist of the church.

News Flashes

THE SUN wishes for each of its readers a very Happy Christmas and a New Year filled with all of the good things of life.

As is the custom, there will be no paper issued on the last Thursday in December. There is provision made for only fifty issues during the year. We will be seeing you again in January.

Dr. Millard Stevens, the pastor of the Christian Temple in Norfolk, Virginia, reports that the Elon Choir rendered a most excellent program at the Temple on the evening of Sunday, December 13. This was just one of the stops made by the choir on its pre-Christmas tour.

The Richmond First Church rendered a special Christmas musical program at the morning service last Sunday. Both the Senior and Junior Choirs participated. The pastor and Mrs. Helfenstein left on Wednesday to spend the Christmas season with their daughter in Philadelphia. They will return to Richmond on Saturday. The past Sunday's Richmond Times-Dispatch carried a half-page feature article by Dr. Helfenstein, giving a different slant to the "No Room in the Inn" story.

For those who may be interested, we have just received a letter from Timothy Chang, wishing for his many friends in the Southern Convention a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. He adds: "May God bless you for the great years to come." We do not have space in this issue for the letter, but are printing the following paragraph: "The snow is piling up here, and it seems to make the Christmas season real. I expect to spend a few days during the Christmas vacation with my brother, Silas, his wife and little daughter Helen in West Chester, Pennsylvania, near Philadelphia. I wish that I might have a few more days vacation so I could come to North Carolina, but that cannot be so now. But I want you to know that I can never forget your kindness and hospitality to me while I was in North Carolina." Timothy's address is, "Fellowship House," Ohio State University, Columbus 10, Ohio.

Greensboro First Church Holds Christmas Workshop

One of the best family gatherings ever held at the First Congregational Christian Church, Greensboro, was held on Sunday afternoon, December 6, when over 200 people braved the pouring rain to participate in a Christmas workshop. Sponsored by the Board of Christian Education and planned by a committee of three, It was successfully carried out through the help of the newly formed Parent Council.

As the people gathered they were directed to the church basement where work tables were set up. Each family, with directions from two couples of the Parent Council, made

(Continued on page 14.)

The Crossroads of Time

A mother lays her new-born child in a crib . . . angels appear on a hillside . . . shepherds hurry quietly to Bethlehem . . .

Somehow, the world stood still that night. Time was at the crossroads. Men took a long last look at the Old Testament and turned their faces toward a new era—an age of love and brotherhood. With the first gurgle of that baby, Christianity drew its first breath on earth!

But why—who is this baby? Let's go over and look into that crib! There he lies—a little boy. His mother has him so wrapped that all we can see is his face—but it seems no different from other baby faces . . .

The strange, the mysterious fact about this baby boy is that the Jewish world has been talking about him for the past 1,500 years. Long ago—500 years before—the prophets had lifted up their voices and said:

"Behold! A virgin shall be with child, and bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel."

"Then shall the eyes of the blind be opened, and the ears of the deaf unstopped. Then shall the lame man leap as an hart and the tongue of the dumb shall sing."

"And he shall feed his flock like a shepherd, and he shall gather the lambs with his arm and carry them in his bosom, and gently lead those that are with young."

This baby then—this child—is he the Prince of Peace? God the Mighty? Yes, because he grew to manhood, he said that he was God, and he proved it! That's history.

And that is the marvel of the Christmas festival. It is that which brings the Christian world to its knees every year: the spectacle of Almighty God in the flesh; the devout adoration of those tiny fingers—fingers which shaped the mountains and set the moon in her place, now reaching out helplessly for Mary's face; those lips which pronounced the first Fiat of Creation, now pink and blue and cold.

Is it any wonder that today we raise our voices with angels and archangels? Today our Christ was born. Today our Saviour appeared. Glory be to God in the highest, and on earth, peace to men of good will!

"Come and behold him, born King of angels." No, we must do more than behold. We must adore our God, enthroned now in the manger, soon on the Cross!

—Anonymous.

Laymen and the Church . . .

J. E. Danieley, Editor, Box 515, Elon College, N. C.

Christmas Greetings to the Laymen of the Convention

Greetings! This is the first Christmas for the Laymen's Column in THE CHRISTIAN SUN, and your editor wishes to take this opportunity to express his deep appreciation for your kind comments during the year, for the reports which you have sent in, and for the interest which you have shown in this work. May you experience a deep and abiding peace during the Christmas Season and may you enter the New Year in health and strength and confidence that there are many good and profitable experiences awaiting you as Laymen.

During the holiday season it would be profitable for us all to, as the merchant does, take inventory of our spiritual stocks. Let us consider what we have done during the past year for our church and compare these activities with a list of the things which we should have done. And having thus looked backward to our mistakes and our failures, let us firmly resolve that during the new year we may more often be found doing the things that are worth our time and that contribute to the building of the Kingdom even on earth.

* * * * *

Convention-Wide Rally to be Held in February

Sunday afternoon, February 14, has been set aside for the Convention-wide Laymen's Rally. This rally has been, in the past, an outstanding occasion, and we have always enjoyed an interesting program. Please mark this date on your calendar and plan to attend. We will announce complete details along with the tentative program in an early issue of THE SUN.

* * * * *

Java C. Wilkins Gymnasium Dedicated in Haw River

On Sunday, November 29, the new gymnasium at the Haw River High School was officially dedicated to one of the outstanding laymen in the Southern Convention. Dr. J. C. Wilkins of our Haw River church, the oldest practicing physician in Alamance County who recently was honored by being named "physician of the year" in the county, was honored by a host of friends who gathered in the new gymnasium for the dedication ceremony.

Dr. Wilkins is an active member of our Haw River church where he has served with loyalty and enthusiasm for a number of years. He is an honored physician, a devoted and dedicated churchman and a citizen of whom we are justly proud. In selecting his name as the name of the new gymnasium, the officials have not only honored him, but have honored the church of which he is so integral a part.

The Rev. Dwight Jackson, pastor of the Haw River church offered the invocation. Dr. M. E. Yount, Superintendent of the Alamance County Schools, gave the address, and the Rev. Robert Bruhn of the Baptist church in Haw River gave the dedicatory prayer. It was an impressive service, and it gives this writer, who had the privilege of serving briefly as Dr. Wilkin's interim pastor, a genuine pleasure to report to the Laymen of the Convention this honor which has been bestowed upon one of our number.

J. E. D.

Governments, like clocks, go from the motion men give them, and as governments are made and moved by men, so by them they are ruined also.—William Penn.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and liberty of conscience is a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Managing Editor John T. Kernodle

Departmental Editors—Convention, Wm. T. Scott; Missions, F. C. Lester; Women's Work, Mrs. F. C. Lester; Young People's Work, Max Vestal; Children, Mrs. R. L. House; Sunday School Lesson, H. S. Hardestal.

Institutional Representatives—Elon College, L. E. Smith; The Christian Orphanage, John G. Truitt.

Board of Publications—Duane Vore, Chairman, S. T. Holland, Secretary; R. C. Helfenstein, S. E. Madren, W. W. Snyder, G. D. Colclough, Treasurer, ex officio.

SUBSCRIPTION RATES

One Year $3.00
Two Years 5.00

Published by the Board of Publications of The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Inc. Printed every Thursday except the last in June and December by Central Publishing Co., Inc., Richmond, Va.

Entered as second-class matter at the Post Office at Richmond Va., July 25, 1922, under Act of March 3, 1879.

Departmental material should be sent to the proper departmental editor, at the address shown on their page.

All other material and business communications except regarding subscriptions should be sent to the Office of Publication, 1536 E. Broad Street, Richmond 19, Va.

The Christian Sun Subscription Blank

Subscription Price: 1 year, $3.00; 2 years, $5.00

Date 195 . . .

Dr. Wm. T. Scott, Supt.,
Elon College, N. C.

Enclosed find $ for which please send The Christian Sun
() 1 year, () 2 years — () New Subscription, () Renewal.

To

Address

Who is a member of Church

() Renew, () Enter my own subscription for () 1 year, () 2 years.

My Name

My Address

From the EDITORIAL Viewpoint

And It Came to Pass . . .

And Mary brought forth her firstborn son; and she wrapped him in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger. . . .

And there were shepherds in the same country abiding in the field, and keeping watch by night over their flock. And an angel of the Lord stood by them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid. And the angel said unto them, "Be not afraid; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all the people; for there is born to you this day in the city of David a Saviour, who is Christ the Lord. . . ." And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God. And . . . when the angels went away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, "Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing that is come to pass, which the Lord has made known unto us." And they came with haste, and found both Mary and Joseph, and the babe lying in the manger. And when they saw it, they made known concerning the saying which was spoken to them about this child. And all that heard it wondered at the things which were spoken unto them by the shepherds. But Mary, kept these sayings, pondering them in her heart.

"The Meaning of Christmas"

A GUEST EDITORIAL BY DR. ROCKWELL HARMON POTTER

It's all in the first line of Isaac Watt's great hymn, "Joy to the World, the Lord has Come!"

Human instinct, guided by human reason, has always felt that there is in God divine wisdom and intelligence. This world, in this universe, could not have just happened. It was—and is—planned. But the human heart asks, "Does God know me?" And the age-long answer was, "I hope so"—and hope always had to struggle with doubt.

But Christmas comes to declare, "God knows." "Your Heavenly Father knoweth," said Jesus.

"Does God care?" then asks the human heart. "If God knows and does not care, how can I worship him as God?" As the long scroll of history unrolls its tale of want and war and woe, as each life meets its own experiences of temptation, struggle, sorrow and sin, it cries out, "Does God not care?"

Christmas comes to proclaim, "He cares!" It was Mary who sang, "He hath regarded the low estate of his handmaiden." Every Christian at Christmas may say and know, in his heart, "God knows me. God cares for me!"

And if he knows and cares, can he, does he do anything about it? How often, in these years of the world's human woe, has this anguishing cry gone up from breaking hearts. It is age long. Job said, "Oh, that I knew where I might find him!" And Christmas heralds the good, glad news,

"He comes!" "He hath visited and redeemed his people."

"He knows! He cares! He comes!" This is the meaning of Christmas!

But he comes not as a conqueror; not as an earthly potentate; not as a totalitarian dictator; not to impose an enforced peace upon an unwilling, unready people; not even to give his peace to one unwilling soul. He comes to reveal the Truth. He comes to show the Way. He comes to impart the Life.

He comes as a little child. He comes as a workingman. He comes as a teacher. He comes as a friend. He comes as the Master.

His only weapon is the Sword of the Spirit—and that spirit is the Spirit of Love; of Christian Goodwill. To those who will receive him he is Lord and Redeemer and Saviour.

So he came. So he comes. So he will come. This is the great and blessed thought of the "Second Coming." He comes just as soon, just as far, just as fast, just as fully as we will let him come; by our obedience, by our trust, by our loyal goodwill, our love, toward God and toward man, toward man and toward God.

So to towns and cities, so to peoples and nations, so to races and to humanity he comes.

God knows! God cares! God comes! That is the meaning of Christmas! And in that meaning there is "Joy to the World"

"Stars--A Christmas Meditation"

By DR. HENRY E. ROBINSON, Pastor
First Christian Church, Burlington, North Carolina

A few days ago I was in Suffolk, Virginia, and noted a beautiful star posted high on some structure. From the star were streamers of lights. It was an eye-catching Christmas symbol which could be seen for some distance as one approached the city.

In Roanoke, Virginia, there is a colossal star high on the mountain-side which can be seen for miles. The city, I believe, is called the "Star City."

More modest use of the star is common at this season. In our sanctuary there hangs a beautiful Moravian star. I also have one at the parsonage as a part of the exterior doorway decorations.

Most every Christmas pageant I ever saw included somewhere a star. If it wasn't there, the audience would be looking for it.

These stars, indeed, are beautiful and symbolic; but in themselves what a poor and weak counterpart they are. From each a wire must go, connecting the so-called star with one of man's little machines. If the latter fails, the star goes out. To support these little stars of men are standards, poles, structures of one sort or another. Any one or all of these could give way and let the stars come falling down. By these little stars no traveller would chart his course or check his compass. For after all, they are man's stars, little symbolic images of God's stars.

* * *

God's stars! "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handywork." Those stars, God's stars, need no secondary source of light. They need no structures to hold them up. Indeed, they are set in their courses and their paths are ordered through time and space. A calamity far greater than all the atomic explosions combined would occur if our star, the sun, should lose its way or collide with some celestial body. But who would bother his poor mind to worry about that. God's stars are set and guided by their Creator. If ever we are tempted to doubt God's power or plan, we lift our eyes to the heavens which declare his greatness beyond our utmost capacity to conceive much less to comprehend. We know of the dependability of the stars by reason and by intuition. To the healthy mind it never occurs to doubt or to worry about the behavior of God's resplendent heavenly city. What the stars on a clear cold night do to us is significant. Awe, wonder, glory, infinitude—these are some of the feelings and thoughts that come when we face the stars which God ordained. If we are too poor in spiritual sensitivity to be so moved, then let us drink into our bodies the warmth, and thank God for the light of his sun, earth's star, without which our planet would grope through dark space as a great frozen mass devoid of life.

* * *

Even with the warmth and light of the sun, the people walked in darkness. And many still walk in darkness which St John of the Cross has called the "dark night of the soul." God in his mercy saw the affliction of his people and gave the world another star—the Bethlehem Star. It has been given many names: the star out of Jacob, the star of the East, the guiding star, the star of hope, Messiah's star.

We scan the heavens for the Bethlehem Star. Where was it exactly? Where is it now? Will it reappear? Did it actually exist? Was it an astronomical event which happened near the time of Jesus' birth, which was accorded special meaning. (Halley's comet appeared October 8, 12 B. C. Jupiter and Saturn were in close conjunction three times in 7 B. C.) What weird strainings these questions lay upon the heart? If we could give the final answer to each, would the soul be fed? Nay, my friends, Jesus of Nazareth has enthroned these stories. These stories are not needed to enthrone Jesus of Nazareth.

The Star of Bethlehem is needed as much today as it was needed then. Where is it? It is in our own hearts and hands. Through us, our concern, and our sacrifice of time, energy and substance, the Bethlehem Star will shine in the east and guide, not the Magi, but persons now living, into the presence of God's holy gift to men—Jesus, the Christ, the Door of the fold, the Hope of the world!

The Voice of the Christ Child

The earth has grown old with its burden of care
But at Christmas it always is young,
The heart of the jewel burns lustrous and fair,
And with its soul of music breaks forth on the air;
When the song of the angels is sung.

It is coming, old Earth, it is coming tonight!
On the snowflakes which cover thy sod;
The feet of the Christchild fall gentle and white.
And the voice of the Christchild tells out with delight
That mankind are the children of God.

On the sad and the lonely, the wretched and poor,
That voice of the Christchild shall fall;
And to every blind wanderer open the door
Of a hope which he dared not dream of before,
With a sunshine of welcome for all.

The feet of the humblest may walk in the field
Where the feet of the holiest have trod.
This, this is the marvel to mortals revealed,
When the silvery trumpets of Christmas have pealed,
That mankind are the children of God.

—Phillips Brooks.

Let's Keep Christ in Christmas

By C. REXFORD RAYMOND

If we rescue Christmas from the commercialism of the market place, we must keep Christ in Christmas. If Christmas is to be known as the birthday of Jesus, we must rid its observance of its vestiges of the Roman Saturnalia. It is said that fire-crackers were invented by the Chinese to usher in their New Year with noise and clamor. It is also said that many in America use Christmas as an excuse to drink. Neither alcohol nor gunpowder have any valid connection with the birth of Jesus.

Go to the Bible and read what Matthew, Luke and John wrote long years after the birth of the blessed Baby in Bethlehem. Their wondrous stories about his birth reflect their growing understanding of Christ. If it had not been for his words and acts during the brief years of his public ministry, for his sacrifice on the Cross, if it had not been for the experience of his followers, which convinced them that he had conquered death, the Gospel stories about his birth would have never been written. . .

The matured testimony of the later days of the Apostles and their friends as preserved in the earliest record of his life, sound the salient notes in the harmony of our observance of Christmas. Every reader of the Bible will find his own appreciation of Jesus. I suggest the following enduring reasons for a proper celebration of his birth.

First. It is written that he should be called Emmanuel, God with us. His birthday is the annual reminder that God with us is to be a perpetually renewed experience of all in whom he abides. This means that the will of Christ revealed in the days of his flesh reveals the purpose of God.

Second. We are told that Jesus is the light of the world. God so loved the world that he gave his only Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish. It was not left for America to discover that this is "One World."

Third. The story of the shepherds who heard the angel sing and came to the manger to see the Christ reveals that he is the Redeemer of those who labor and are heavy laden. The humblest worker in the world may find Jesus as his friend.

Fourth. The story of the Wise Men who came from afar to find him and bring their gifts, reveals that Jesus came not only to the humble and unlettered, but to shed the light of life on all students who seek the truth. His wisdom is for the philosophers and the scientists to whom he brings the way of life.

Fifth. The Star which the Wise Men followed across the far places in their search for him reminds us that he may guide all seeking souls if they will follow him. He is a prophecy that "every man's life is a plan of God."

Sixth. The carols of Christmas remind us that songs are a part of God's plan for man. Following Jesus is a joyous singing way of life. The great music of the Church is an enduring and ever growing reminder that the inner meaning of the Gospel is "good news." Christians can sing!

Finally. The gifts of the Wise Men remind us that the essence of the good life is generosity. Gifts to children. Gifts to the aged. Gifts to the needy. Gifts to those who can give us in return nothing but love. Gifts to the Church, which in the body of Christ. All this re-echoes the word of Jesus when he said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of these least, ye did it unto me." These are seven ways in which we can keep Christ in Christmas.

A Christmas Carroll

By JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL

"What means this glory round our feet,"
The magi mused, "more bright than morn,"
And voices chanted, clear and bright,
"Today the Prince of Peace is born."

"What means that star," the shepherds said,
"That brightens thro' the rock glen?"
And angels, answering overhead,
Sang, "Peace on earth, good will to men!"

'Tis eighteen hundred years and more
Since those sweet oracles were dumb;
We wait for him like those of yore;
Alas! He seems so slow to come.

But it was said in words of gold,
Nor time or sorrow e'er shall dim,
That little children might be bold
In perfect trust to come to him.

All round about our feet shall shine
A light like that the Wise Men saw,
If we our loving wills incline
To that sweet Life which is the law.

So shall we learn to understand
The simple faith of shepherds then,
And, clasping kindly hand in hand,
Sing, "Peace on earth, good will to men!"

And they who do their souls no wrong,
But keep at eve the faith of morn,
Shall daily hear the angels' song,
"Today the Prince of Peace is born!"

News of Elon College

PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH, Elon College, N. C.

"When the Angels Sang"

When Adam and Eve disobeyed God in the Garden of Eden, sin was in evidence. Disobedience of the command of God is sin. Sin made man unhappy. It always does. No man can be happy with sense of guilt toward God in his heart. Sin made God unhappy. As man's sins multiplied and became more despicable, it grieved the heart of God so much that God repented that he had made man. His grief was so great that in his heart he would destroy man but instead he loved man. He sought to restrain man in his wickedness, pled with him through his prophets and priests and multiplied his blessings. Through precept and law he would inform and guide man. By service and sacrifice rendered and offered by the priests of God, he would free man from his sins and cleanse him of the stains of unrighteousness.

All the while man was conscious of his waywardness, of his distance from God, of the wall of partition that stood between him and his maker, of the darkness—the intense darkness, that clouded the very way in which he walked. He prayed for the lifting of the cloud, the scattering of the mist, the opening of the skies that he might find God, might behold him, might know him, and might possess him as his God. But the clouds would not lift; the darkness would not disappear. The skies were as brass and man was still in his dilemma and distress.

God was aware of man's weariness of his sin and the greatness of his burden. He knew of man's desire to hold him and to possess him. He inspired his prophets to tell of his plans and his purposes. For one day the gift of God would "bruise the serpent's head." One day the darkness that had obscured man's vision would be scattered and his people that had walked in darkness would see a great light. One day their despairing hearts would be filled with hope. For one day "a virgin would conceive and bring forth a Son, and his name would be called Immanuel. God with us."

That day, that glorious day, came. It came one lonely night in Bethlehem while shepherds were keeping watch over their flocks. His coming was heralded by angels, a great host of them. They came singing, "Glory to God in the highest, peace and on earth good-will to men."

The angels sang and man's heart has been singing ever since. His spirit has been set free and his soul filled with the harmony of heaven. Today he sings "Silent Night, Holy Night", "O, Little Town of Bethlehem", "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing", "O, Come All Ye Faithful." Some day, some glad day, the redeemed of God shall walk the streets eternal and join the one hundred, forty and four thousand whose robes had been washed and made white in the blood of the lamb and a great multitude which no man could number. All eternity shall ring with a song of Moses and the land.

A Christmas Prayer

By HENRY HALLAM TWEEDY

Lord, make my heart thine inn!
Wide-open door; clean rushes on the floor
Each lamp well trimmed and burning bright
My table set for thee on Christmas night—
No manger now awaits, if thou wilt come

To grace this home!

All, all is thine,

O Guest divine!

Lord, enter in!

Lord, make my heart thy star!
A shining world that sees unfurled
Heaven's banners waving over thee, its King,
And stops to listen while the angels sing!
So let me pause in all the rush and roar,
Of passion seeking more;
Shine with thy light
On Christmas night,
Thy flaming star!

Lord, make my life thy song!
Help me to sing while anvils ring!
Let brain and body join thee in thy toil,
Till love and labor build God's city; foil
The lust and hate and selfishness and wrong
That spoil the song;
Till heaven's choirs
And pealing spires
Join in thy carillon!

So would I keep thy birthday, Christmas, Lord;
Kneel at thy feet with shepherds; greet
Thy coming with the Magis' wondrous gifts;
Enfold thee, as thy gracious Mother lifts
Thee in her arms, the Miracle of time,
God's Gift sublime!
An inn, a star, a song—
All, all to thee belong,
O Guest adored!

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

Mrs. F. C. LESTER, Editor

840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

Our Christmas Issue

What would make a good women's page for the Christmas issue?

For one thing, a message in poetry for individual reading or perchance for use in society or church program. And so, since women know that love is the most important thing in the world, a poem written about 100 years ago by an English woman who believed in "Love Incarnate."

For another, reports on Christmas meetings from some of our societies. And, fortunately, two such reports have come in before December 12, when this is being written.

And what could be nicer than to tell of the "birth" of a new society? Mrs. W. T. Scott, North Carolina president, has just sent information about the newest society in her state.

And, of course, it is the time of year when no editor can resist a personal note—so that will finish the page. Hope you like it!

* * * * *

A Christmas Program at Pleasant Ridge (R)

Christmas and all it means brought warmth and good cheer to the hearts of the members of Pleasant Ridge Church, Route 1, Ramseur, at their December meeting which was held at the home of Mrs. J. C. Newell.

Mrs. Sybrant Pell, who was in charge of the program, had a map of Puerto Rico as the point of interest and told the group about the people and country. The work our Congregational Christian churches are doing there is, of course, of great interest to us and this was explained in five parts: Miss Emma Allen told about the 48 churches on the island and how much they mean to the people; Miss Kitty Lee Cox had as her topic Ryder Memorial Hospital and its clinics; sugar cane and harvesting at Yuquiqui was explained by Miss Velma Allen; Miss Shirley Lowdermilk told about the seminary which is supported by five groups; and Mrs. Colbert Allen told about the young people who go from the mainland to Puerto Rico and help in work camps, thus developing a better understanding on the part of all.

The theme "A Lamp Beside the Door" brought Christmas thoughts as the group sang softly "Away in a Manger," before a worship center which was the manger scene. Mrs. Pell read a poem "The Trimmed Lamp" and told about the tradition of the Christmas tree and Martin Luther. "The Children's Magic Christmas Tree" was told by Mrs. Pell, after which the group presented their gifts of soap and powdered milk for Puerto Rico. Following a prayer by Mrs. Pell the goat fund was presented. We named our goat "Miss

Incarnate Love

Love came down at Christmas,
Love all lovely, Love Divine;
Love was born at Christmas,
Star and Angles gave the sign.

Worship we the Godhead,
Love incarnate, Love Divine;
Worship we our Jesus:
But wherewith for sacred sign?

Love shall be our token,
Love be yours and Love be mine,
Love to God and all men,
Love for plea and gift and sign.

—Christina G. Rossetti.

Bertha" after Mrs. Everett Cox, who is one of our most faithful and loyal workers and who was in charge of raising the fund

After a short business session, Mrs. Quinton Hicks pronounced the benediction.

The group enjoyed Christmas games which were in charge of Mrs. Earl Lowdermilk and Mrs. J. C. Newell. The co-hostesses served holiday refreshments in the candle-lit dining room.

MRS. RUTH NEWELL,
Secretary.

* * * * *

Chapel Hill Christmas Program

Friendly Service was beautifully symbolized in the United Church (Chapel Hill) women's Christmas program on Puerto Rico. The colorful setting was a symbol of learning and giving; for one one side were the map of Puerto Rico and the speaker's lectern, on the other were large wooden figures of the three wise men bringing gifts. The soft light of an open fireplace and a star made us thoughtful as we worshipped, remembering our Christian friends who celebrate the giving of Three Kings more than Santa Claus

The meaningful program with decorations and refreshments was prepared by the following members of one of the circles of our newly divided Fellowship: Mrs. Andrew Shearer, Mrs. Joe Tyson, Mrs. D. D. Marley, Mrs. P. R. Perry, Mrs. Jesse Basnight, Mrs. H. F. Watts, Miss Lillian Edwards, and Mrs. Mytrie Harrell.

Not only were scuffs, powdered milk and soap brought forward but more than enough money to send a goat. So the Women's Fellowship of United Church joins once again with the church women who observed Christmas by giving to those in need.

DOROTHY JACKSON.

* * * * *

Pope's Chapel Organizes Society

From Mrs. Avon Fuller, secretary, comes the information that a Woman's Missionary Society has been organized at Pope's Chapel, Franklinton, North Carolina, through the excellent guidance of their pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. E. M. Powell.

Other officers are: president, Miss Corrine Holmes; vice-president, Mrs. Ben Perry; and treasurer, Mrs. Howard Conyers.

Mrs. Fuller says, "We are very proud of our new society and have great hopes that with God's blessing we will grow in strength and size during the following year."

Mrs. W. T. Scott gives us this additional interesting information: Pope's Chapel had a society about twelve years ago. This present organization, as stated above, is largely due to the efforts of Mrs. E. M. Powell, who is the new superintendent of Henderson District for our women's work, and her husband, who is the pastor. The group organized on December 1 with eleven members and two visitors present. Their work for the year is all lined up with officers elected, committees appointed, and program planned including Bible study.

What finer gift could the women of any church make in December than an organization whose prayers and gifts will be used to spread His

"Unto Us a Child Is Born"

By MRS. W. W. SLOAN

Elon College, N. C.

If you met an expectant father pacing the corridor of a hospital with a football helmet in one hand and a college pennant in the other, you would know without asking his ambitions for that soon-to-be son of his.

For thousands of years the hope of Jewish fathers and mothers for each new-born son was that he might grow up to be God's chosen ruler for their people,—as the ancient hope of their prophets reads: "and the government shall be upon his shoulder." So would Israel come to be respected among the nations. "In the fullness of time" their wish became flesh.

What are our ambitions for that boy or that girl of ours? If wishing could make it so, what would we choose for them? That our child might become a wise statesman and leader who will guide the people of the world into the paths of peace? A medical doctor who will one day discover a cure for cancer? A scientific farmer who will show the world how to feed all its hungry mouths? Or shall we, remember perhaps the privations of our own childhood and youth, ask only: "Let my children always be happy as they are today! May they have less suffering, fewer hardships than have been my lot in life."

God has great ambitions for that child he has given us. But these puny little wishes take out of his hands the very tools with which he makes great men and women. Let us ask, not that our children be hap-

Kingdom around the world? The best wishes of our women will go with Pope's Chapel during this new year.

* * * * *

A Personal Note

Dear Readers of this Page:

A very Christlike Christmas for you all—that is my wish. A time of sharing with family and friends, a time of participation in church activities (which I hope will include worship), and a time for a little quiet meditation on "the finer things of life."

Please remember that I am interested in your society and its "doings," and please share with us your activities and interests during the coming year.

EMILY C. LESTER.

pier than we, but that they may be better than we are. Let us ask, not that they may have a steady job, a good wife or husband, and a comfortable rut to settle down in, but that they may learn to love and help their neighbor, that they may have strength and wisdom to solve tomorrow's problems in their town and state, their nation and their world.

A grandfather once chided his grown-up son for always saying "don't" to the children. "But," said the young father "they use such poor judgement. They make such foolish mistakes if I don't tell them." "And where," asked the grandfather, "did you get your better judgement?" "From experience, of course," answered the son. "And how did you get the experience?" the older man inquired with a twinkle in his eye. "Oh, I guess that came from using my poor judgement. I see what you mean, Dad. My boy and girl need to make lots of little mistakes in order to sharpen their wits for the big decisions later on. And the child's mistakes are much less costly than the mistakes the older boy or girl might make, or the man or woman who has had no chance to develop good judgment out of bad."

We are told that Jesus "grew in wisdom and in stature, and in favor with God and man." Every normal child grows in these things. But how? By getting into troubles and then getting out of them himself, with a little guidance, perhaps, and a lot of encouragement, but not by having things done for him.

Did you ever see a three-year-old trying to get his tricycle over the corner of a rug, or to maneuver it around a piece of furniture? Hands off! It's his problem. He is in training for the bigger and tougher problems of tomorrow. Doing hard things is the best and only way God has of preparing him for the job ahead. It is necessary practice for the boy who will make the team or the man who will solve knotty international questions.

The same is true of his dressing himself. Unbuttoning and untying are great achievements for a small child, and if we realize this we shall rejoice with him in his success, instead of being cross because he happens to succeed at inconvenient times. He needs to repeat it, anyway, until he can do it perfectly, then tackle something new.

Not only do our children grow by doing. They grow also by asking. Happy is the parent whose child is always wanting to know "Why?" Why is that wrong? Why is this right? Why must I, or why can't I? That father or mother has a perfect opportunity for helping him grasp the truths of God's universe and of our relationship to each other. A Christian explanation will strengthen his faith by showing how he always can depend on God's laws, the seasons, the Golden Rule.

When a child asks "Why must I?" it will make him no wiser if I answer only, "Because I told you to." As Christians we shall take pride in getting across to that small son or daughter, at as early an age as possible, the truth that some things are "wrong" because by the working of God's laws they will certainly bring trouble either to himself or to others. In the same way things are "right" because they will just as surely bring happiness. Men and women who learn as children to live by this understanding of right and wrong will much more safely guide the destiny of our world than can those who have learned only to do or not to do what someone has told them.

Queen Frederika, who with her husband the King of Greece is now visiting the United States, was interviewed regarding her son's training for his future job as king. She told how the crown prince had been sent to work in the mines and factories and on the farms of his country in order that he might become acquainted with the problems of his people. As a queen, his mother felt that a lifetime of training was essential for the job of governing.

Our children are not born to royalty. None of them will ever fall heir to a throne. But they are born into American citizenship, which is better than royalty. And they will one day fall heir to the great experiment of world government, now in the making. And the government will be upon their shoulders. Fortunate are those future citizens whose parents are too wise, if not too busy, therefore, to solve their problems for them. Even more fortunate are those boys and girls who may share with older minds in the more important decisions of the home, not

(Continued on page 14)

A Page for Our Children

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor, 1045 23d St., Newport News, Va.

Dera Boys and Girls:

It's Christmas Eve. Lovely smells float in the air: spicery cookies, roasting dinner, greens and tree with fragrant bough. Children are excited and parents busy, but not too busy we hope to pause for a family worship time.

Let us remember in the midst of gifts and the magic-make-believe-fun of Santa Claus, that it is the King of Glory, the Prince of Peace, whose birthday we keep.

Do you know Grace Noll Crowell's lovely poem that Edith Lovell Thomas set to Mozart's music? It may be found, arranged as an anthem in Westminster Press's Anthem for Junior Choirs. It is excellent for Christmas Eve night. Light candles, sing a carol or two and then read:

LIGHT FOR HIM A CANDLE

A candle is, a lovely, lovely thing
To light for him, light for him tonight;
A slim white candle, straight and tall, to light for him,
To make the darkness bright,
To make the darkness bright.

So white was he, so tall, so tall and straight,
That all the dark was lit, the dark was lit;
A pathway widening on ahead, a widening way,
When he walked into it,
When he walked into it.

A candle burning, burning in the night!
A symbol of the One who shed a glow,—
A glow of circling light
Until his work, his work was done.
Then flickered out upon a cross,
Upon a darkened hill.
It lit again, the Light of the Earth
And it is burning still,
And it is burning still,
The light is burning still!

—Grace Noll Crowell

May the gentle love of the Holy Christ Child dwell in each heart, big and small, during these Holy Days.

* * * * *

"Christmas Will Come Again"

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Do you suppose you could find room in one of your closets for a doll carriage?" My neighbor, Rita Stanton, came to my apartment one evening last December to ask that eager question. "We gave Phyllis a baby doll last Christmas," she continued. "This year we're going to give her a carriage for the doll and we want it to be a surprise!"

"Indeed I do have room," I agreed heartily. "I'll be glad to share in the preparations for your little girl's Christmas."

"Then we'll have the carriage delivered to your address tomorrow," Rita answered happily, "and we want you to come over on Christmas morning to see how much Phyllis enjoys it."

"It looks to me as if you are going to enjoy your daughter's gift as much as she does," I commented, smiling at my friend's enthusiasm.

"You are right," Rita replied. "I'm going to be just as pleased as Phyllis will be about her new carriage. You see, I've waited a whole year to give it to her."

Noticing the puzzled expression on my face, she went on to explain. "Phyllis is only four years old now. Last year, when she was three, she became very much interested in dolls, and we found a nice one for her. I was going to give her the carriage, too, and several other elaborate toys.

"It was my husband who helped me to plan more sensibly for our daughter's Christmas. 'What are we going to give Phyllis next year?' he asked me one evening, when I was in the midst of a furore of preparations.

"I do not know," I answered soberly. 'I hadn't thought of that.'

"It seems to me," Blake advised, 'that Phyllis will enjoy her toys more if we give her a few at a time, instead of surfeiting her with good things. Besides that, presenting her with too many toys would be giving the child a wrong impression of our family status. Our income is adequate for moderate needs, but not for extravagant spending. We're saving money for Phyllis's years of college, and there will be many things she'll need that we shall want to get for her as time goes on.'

"Blake's suggestion helped me to decide that it would be better to postpone the purchase of a doll carriage until another Christmas time. However, we did provide a home-made doll bed for Phyllis last year—a project that was a pleasant pre-Christmas occupation for both her father and me. Blake made the little bedstead and I used pieces left over from Phyllis's babyhood crib materials to make a mattress and covers. I made clothes for the doll also, and Phyllis has spent numberless happy hours dressing, undressing, and caring for her makebelieve baby.

"The carriage is really more appropriate for her this year," Rita added, "because our little girl is old enough now to take her doll baby up and down the block for an airing, just as a friend of our takes her real baby."

"I can readily understand how one might wish to lavish gifts on such a dear little person as Phyllis," I remarked, "but I'm sure a child is happier with a few toys than with such a clutter of playthings that none of them has much meaning."

"We've proved that to be true," Rita agreed.

"Since that conversation with Blake last year I've been thinking a good deal about Christmas giving and I've concluded that a superabundance of presents emphasizes only the material side of Christmas. The true idea of giving at Christmas time is spiritual, commemorating the greatest Gift of all—God's Gift of His Son to the world. We can provide for our children nothing finer each year than a deepening sense of gratitude for that wonderful Gift. The traditional joy of Christmas, centering in the celebration of the birth of Christ, can make this season delightful for even the youngest child."

Helps for women, offered by an exchange:

Sunglasses may be freed of dirt, sun-oil and cosmetics by plunging into lukewarm suds.

A recent nationwide survey counted more pineapple on housewives' emergency shelves than any other canned fruit. No wonder, for pineapple's versatility—as an appetizer, main-course garnish, salad or dessert—makes it ideal for unexpected company.

When you're down on your knees—scrubbing, painting or gardening—protect them from grubbiness and numbness with special guards designed for the purpose. Held on with elastic straps, the guards are made of foam rubber and can be sudsed in your washtub or washing machine.

Youth at Work in the Church

THOMAS W. MADREN, Box 103, Elon College, N. C.

Best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to each and everyone. Let us hear from you about your Christmas activities. Let us not forget the true meaning of Christmas and give God thanks for this season of the year.

* * *

There have been several births in the past few weeks among our younger married couples. Into the home of Rev. and Mrs. Lewis Bill Simmons, Bennett, N. C., was born a baby girl, Sara Ann. Also, a black hair and blue eyed baby girl was born to Mrs. Bobby Moss, formerly Emily Eaves of the Liberty Vance Church. Congratulations to both of these couples.

* * *

The writer was fortunate to be present and really enjoy the program presented by the Elon Chorus at Liberty Vance.

* * * * *

Western North Carolina Officers Meet

The officers and counsellors of the Western North Carolina Youth Fellowship met at the home of Miss Sylvia Coggins, who is vice-president, on Sunday afternoon, December 13. The president, Tom Madren, presided at the meeting.

The purpose of this meeting was to take care of unfinished business, discuss projects for the coming year and plan the program for the next rally, which is to be at Pleasant Ridge on January 31, 1954. This program is to be centered around the newly adopted Three Commission Plan, so that we may better understand it and its purposes.

The group proposed that the young people undertake, as a project for the coming year, the building of a cabin on the Moonelon campsite. This is to be further discussed and explained at a later date.

To replace Mrs. F. C. Lester, resigned, the group has elected two new counsellors: Mrs. S. E. Madren, 1124 Carolina Avenue, Albemarle, and Mr. Mack Simpson, Route 1, Sanford. Regrets were expressed that Mrs. Lester is no longer working with the group.

The hostess served refreshments, and the meeting was adjourned with prayer by Ardell Simmonds.

* * * * *

Mt. Auburn Group Organizes Pilgrim Fellowship

Our church, Mt. Auburn, has organized a Pilgrim Fellowship. We organized on November 24, 1953. At the meeting the following officers were elected: Roberta Read, president; Fan Wilson, vice-president; Beverly "Moe" Collins, secretary-treasurer; Bettie Collins, recreational director, and Ann Leonard, program chairman.

Our new group will meet the Tuesday after the fourth Sunday of each month.

"MOE" COLLINS,
Reporter.

* * * * *

Youth Rally at Grace's Chapel

Some 250 enthusiastic and eager young people of the Western North Carolina Conference crowded into Grace's Chapel Church on November 29, 1953, for their Fifth Sunday Rally.

While the young people registered, Mr. Emory Matthews led the group in singing. The Albemarle young people had charge of the opening worship service. The roll call found many active youth from 12 churches, along with many visitors. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill spoke about the Three Commission Plan, which was adopted by the group at this rally. Commission chairmen were elected at this time.

The theme of the rally was "Problems of Christian Youth." A panel, made up of three adults and three young people, led a discussion about some of these problems as they were submitted by people present.

There were several beautiful selections of special music rendered, which were enjoyed.

The group gathered at the Community Center for a picnic supper, after which Rev. Bill Simmons led the young people in singing and recreation.

The evening program was held in the Community Center. The Pleasant Ridge young people had charge of the worship service. The movie, "The Hidden Heart," was shown. It presents the problems of a Christian girl concerning stewardship.

The appreciation of the Fellowship goes to Grace's Chapel and all who had a part in making this a wonderful meeting.

* * * * *

Elon Choir at Liberty, Vance

The Christmas spirit stirred the Liberty Vance community on December 11, 1953, when beautiful music flowed from the Liberty Christian Church as the Elon Festival Chorus presented selections from Handel's oratorio, "The Messiah."

This Yale program, presented by the Elon Singers, with student soloists, has been carried to many of our churches in North Carolina and Virginia. Such was the occasion at Liberty Vance, as it was presented before hundreds of people from the Epsom community and nearby Henderson.

The choir, under the direction of Prof. John Westmoreland, is composed of Elon students. Among them were three singing in their own home church, Liberty Vance: Patsy Fuller, Barbara Weldon and Sylvia Smith. Laura Seaman and Tyler Hight are from nearby Henderson.

This group gave an excellent performance which was well received.

* * * * *

Relax With Max

Some folks are always wishing they could start life over again and live it right the second time. Well, this, of course, is impossible. But here's a new year staring us in the face. We've never lived it before. Here's our chance to start at the beginning. All set? Let's go!

* * * * *

"How late do you usually sleep on Sunday morning?"

"It all depends."

"Depends on what?"

"The length of the sermon."

* * *

A burglar, who had entered a poor minister's house at midnight, was disturbed by the awakening of the occupant of the room he was in. So drawing his weapon, he said: "If you stir, you're a dead man. I'm hunting for your money."

"Let me get up and strike a light," said the minister, "and I'll hunt with you."

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

"God Revealed in Christ"

LESSON I—JANUARY 3, 1954.

MEMORY SELECTION: "These things are written that you may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing you may have life in his name."—John 20: 31.

SCRIPTURE: John 1: 20-30-31.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Hebrews 1: 9.

Seasons Greetings.

The writer of these "Notes" takes this means of expressing his thanks for the words of encouragement and appreciation which the readers give him from time to time, and to extend to the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN the greetings of the season. A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all. And as Tiny Tim says in Dickens Christmas Carol, "God bless us every one."

By Way of Introduction.

We begin today a series of studies in John's Gospel, or rather in the Gospel according to John. This has been called "the most spiritual gospel," and such it is. Written by the disciple closest to Jesus, by the one who knew him best, by the one who loved him most, and by the one who lived the longest, it contains rich spiritual treasures and profound spiritual truths. John tells us plainly why he wrote this book. "These things"—he said that there were many other things which Jesus did which were not written in this book, so many that perhaps the world itself would not contain the books that should be written—but these things are written "that you might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing, you might have life in his name." (John 20: 31) What were "these things"? What did John write about that would help people to believe that Jesus was the Christ? Briefly and simply they were three. First: He wrote about what Jesus said. In the words recorded in the gospel, there is spirit and there is life. No man ever spake like this man spake. Only the Christ could say what he said. Secondly: He wrote about what Jesus did. John used the word "signs" and "works" rather than miracles, as a rule. He gives an account of some of the "mighty works" which Jesus did, as "signs" of his Divinity and his Deity. Healing the sick, giving sight to the blind, causing the lame to walk, stilling the storm at sea, feeding the multitude, even raising the dead—these are some of the things which this man did. Only the Christ, the Son of God could do such things. And thirdly: He wrote about what Jesus was. Greater than what he said and what he did, was what Jesus was. He is portrayed as the Sinless Son of God, the Saviour of the world. In his life, in his death, in his resurrection there is revealed the fact that he is indeed the Christ, the Son of God.

One thing more. What John wrote was only a means to an end. He wrote to help men to believe, but he wanted them to believe so that they might have life through the name, or in Jesus' Name. He wrote to give knowledge that would produce faith, in the hope that faith would make it possible for his readers to find life more abundant in the Lord Jesus Christ.

All this sets the pattern for Sunday school teachers for this Quarter. Try to tell what Jesus said and did and was in such a way that the members of your class will believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that this belief becomes personal trust so that in him they may have life, and have it more abundantly. If there are members of your class who are not Christians, perhaps your teaching will prepare them for Christian decision at the Easter time. For what you are to teach was written that folks would believe that Jesus is the Christ, and that believing, they may have life in his name.

The Word Becomes Flesh.

We are now passing through the Christmas Season. It is the anniversary of the Birth of Jesus, the Babe of Bethlehem. When he was born, The Word became flesh. The Eternal, Invisable God came down to earth to dwell among men. The Word became flesh and dwelt among men. At a point in history, God was in Christ. The men who companied most intimately with Jesus came to know that he was God. They beheld in him the glory of God, and they received from him grace and truth. And from his fulness, from the overflow of his life, they received grace upon grace. So completely did the Word become flesh that Jesus himself said, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." "I and the Father are one."

The Witness.

John the Baptist came to prepare the way for the Lord Jesus Christ. He was a cousin of Jesus, and a courier for him. Emerging sudden-

The Hope of the World

By C. REXFORD RAYMOND

When Christ was born, hope came to conquer fears:
Our Christmas carols celebrate Christ's birth,
Rejoicing in his life in later years.
But Christ's brief fleeting years upon the earth
Were but the prelude of the symphony
Of ages past and cons yet to come,
That sing the victory of Calvary
And chant the choruses of Christendom.

The night before Christ hung upon the Cross
He said: "In me have peace. Be of good cheer."
No storms of earth can bring us lasting loss;
In tribulation, Christ is always near.
Assured that Christ has overcome the world,
Our flag of hope may ever float unfurled.

ly from the solitude of the desert, and dramatically summoning men to repentance, he made a profound impression on the people. Some even wondered whether he were not indeed the Christ himself. But with great humility, John quickly pointed the people to Christ. He said frankly that he was not worthy to unloose the sandals off the Christ's feet. His humility and his self-effacement are a rebuke to so many of us who seek preferment and place and power.

The Work.

"Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world"—thus did John sum up the work of the Son of God. The Christ came as a Lamb to be sacrificed for the sin of the world. His words point forward to the Cross, and to the work of the Messiah or the Christ, who bare in his body our sins on the Cross, and by whose stripes we are healed.

* * * * *

"Jesus Uses His Authority"

MEMORY SELECTION: "God is Spirit, and those who worship him, must worship in spirit and in truth.—John 4:24.

SCRIPTURE: John 2.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Ephesians 1: 15-23.

There is nothing "gentle, meek and mild" about the Jesus shown in today's lesson. It is an angry Jesus, one who burns with righteous indignation. There is fire in his eyes and force in his arm, as he drives both the sellers of oxen and sheep and their wares, and the changers of money and their wealth out of the Temple. And all this bothers some people, and scandalizes others. They do not understand how it is that Jesus, the sinless Son of God could become angry. They gloss it over, or apologize for it.

But why? Why not? Is God an easy-going, benign, grandfatherly sort of Being, unruffled and unmoved by nothing that goes on in the earth? Does he wink at evil. Is there no such thing as the wrath of God, the divine displeasure of God? Does not righteous indignation have a legitimate place in the divine nature? Can anyone think that God can look upon the injustices, the cruelties, the hypocrisies and the heartlessness of men and not be moved? Is there no fire in his nature? If all this be true, is it not natural to expect to find something of this divine wrath and displeasure, this righteous indignation in our Lord Jesus Christ who was the Revelation of God, God manifest in the flesh? And certainly the circumstances as portrayed in today's lesson warrant this divine wrath or righteous indignation. Consider the situation.

Like so many things, the practice which had resulted in such abuse in Jesus' day started in a good, and even a necessary way. It was customary for those who came to Jerusalem to worship in the Temple to offer a sacrifice of some animal. Manifestly it was not only inconvenient, but even impossible, for those who came from great distances, to bring an animal with them. It was natural, and fitting, therefore, that such animals for sacrifice be provided by people in Jerusalem, and open markets were established in Jerusalem, some of them near the Temple, for this purpose. Furthermore, it was necessary for the Temple Tax which every Jew was supposed to pay when he came to Jerusalem to worship, to be paid in Jewish currency. But here again, those who came from afar did not always have Jewish coins. Therefore it was a matter of great convenience that there were "changers of money" near at hand to convert foreign currency into Jewish coins. All of this was well and good.

But like so many other things that are good, especially things that involve gain in and profit, and appeal to covetousness, the custom had become greatly abused. These sellers of sheep and oxen, and these changers of money, in their greed, had invaded the inner courts of the Temple itself. And what should have been a place of quiet and worship and spiritual adventure, had been turned into a noisy market-place, and a commercial banking center. This is what Jesus found when he came up to Jerusalem to the feast of the Passover.

The sight sickened his soul. It kindled within him a holy anger, a righteous indignation. The zeal of his father was kindled within him. He took a few cords or pieces of rope, twisted them hurriedly into an improvised whip, and drove the sheep and oxen and the pigeons out of the Temple, along with the sellers thereof. Furthermore, he upset the tables of the money changers and sent the coins jingling all over the floor. Whether he actually struck a blow is not stated. If he did, what of it? The chances are, however, that his look and his gestures were enough to cow the brazen, but craven, racketeers and chiselers, and they slunk away afraid and ashamed. It should be said that Jesus did not lose his temper. He did not "get mad" in the sense that we often get mad. But a holy wrath did well up within him, a prophetic zeal laid hold upon him. What a caricature of God he would have been, if he could look upon the scene in the Temple, and not be moved to holy wrath against it! His disciples saw the deeper meaning of all this. They remembered that it was written "Zeal for thy house will consume me."

When called upon by the Jews to produce his "credentials" for doing such a thing, Jesus replied with an enigmatic statement to the effect that if they destroyed "this Temple, and in three days I will raise it up." With the moral and spiritual blindness so characteristic of them, they thought he was talking about the actual, material Temple. Instead he was speaking of the "temple of his body" and referring to his Resurrection, which was a sign of his Messiahship. And after he did rise from the dead, his disciples "remembered that he had said this."

The Church of Jesus Christ might well hang out a sign, and advertise in every paper, to this effect. "Wanted: Christians who will get mad." Fact is, it would be interesting to trace back to their sources, the laws protecting health, life, human rights, etc. and to see how many of them have come because somebody "got mad." Perhaps the greatest curse of our modern generation is the lukewarmness of our love. We are too tolerant of evil. Monstrous evils thrive right under our noses, and we do nothing about them. In many instances we not only do nothing about them, but we are afraid to speak against them. If the Church of Jesus Christ should become "mad enough" to become militant, if its members felt what Moses felt when he stood before Pharaoh, what Jesus felt when he stood in the Temple and saw the shameful practices—things would happen. We need Christians who become righteously indignant enough, and courageous enough, to speak out against, and to step out against, the monstrous evils of our day, and in the name of God to drive them from our common life.

Based on "International Sunday School Lessons;" Copyrighted 1951 by Division of Christian Education, National Council of the Churches in the U. S. A.

The Orphanage

J. G. TRUITT, Superintendent

Dear Friends:

A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to you from every member of our staff, and every child in our big orphanage family.

You have been good to us and we are most appreciative. We want to do well for your sakes. We want to do an even better job for you in the New Year, in order that you may be proud of every member of our staff and every child.

How nice it would be for this Christmas Greeting and New Year wish to go to every child reared here. There are hundreds of them. Some of them will see this letter and be reminded thereby of Christmas at the Christian Orphanage. I wish everyone of them saw THE CHRISTIAN SUN every week, and thus kept up with us and in turn would let us keep up with them. Many of them are doing such fine things. We hear from scores of them, and we know that they are doing well.

And it would be fine, too, if all our church members had access to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. They would be better informed on all phases of their church. There are many people who have contributed who will not get to see our report in their church paper. This week a good friend told me how he looked forward to seeing THE CHRISTIAN SUN each week and the report from the orphanage. Give a subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN to a good friend for a Christmas and New Year's gift.

At this Christmas season let us remember with deepest gratitude the real reason for Christmas, namely, the birth of Jesus Christ, our Lord and Redeemer. Let us give gratitude and praise and honor to him. Let us be thankful for his coming into our world and gather our family groups together in honor of him. Let us seek to give him first place in our hearts, and in our lives, words, and deeds bring honor and glory to his name.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Superintendent.

Christians are supposed not merely to endure change, nor even to profit by it, but to cause it.—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

GREENSBORO CHURCH HOLDS CHRISTMAS WORKSHOP.

(Continued from page 2.)

a yarn cat to be sent to the needy overseas. The cat was cut from cardboard; button eyes were sewed on; the tail was made of safety pins which kindergarten, primary and junior boys and girls had brought as gifts to Sunday school; the body was made from a handkerchief—each family was asked to bring one as a gift—wrapped around life savers—which junior highs had brought as gifts; knitting wool was then wound over and over the body to make the cat. One can hardly imagine the many kinds of cats which were produced!

After making the cats, the families went to other tables to make Christmas tree decorations. Four couples of the Parent Council had collected ideas and materials for these. There was a shoe box for each family with a sample of the decoration to be made, and the materials. One of the most inspiring sights was a grandmother sitting at one table stringing popcorn; standing on the chair next to her was a three-year-old, also stringing popcorn! All these decorations were used to decorate the two big trees in the Fellowship Hall.

After an hour of work, men, women and children visited the exhibits. One room contained Christmas centers of beauty which different families brought to share. There were three unusual creches: one made by a twelve-year-old, in which the figures were made of clay; another, made by a mother, of flour and salt mixture and painted with Pennsylvania Dutch colors; another brought by a public school teacher which her eighth grade pupils had cut from plywood. There was a book display loaned by a local book store, and our own denominational family book, "Roads to Christmas," for sale.

Ten families were asked to decorate small trees with edibles to go into a display of Christmas goodies, complete with recipes, arranged by two couples of the Parent Council. There was a cookie tree, candy cane tree, lollipop tree, chewing gum tree, gold tree, fruit tree, flower tree (centers of gumdrops) gumdrop tree, animal tree (cookies and fruit), popcorn ball tree. Afterwards these trees were taken by the families to shut-ins or to the polio hospital.

The young people served a snack supper in the Fellowship Hall.

Junior boys and girls made the table decorations. Stretched between the two big Christmas trees resplendent with our own decorations, was a rope holding our yarn cats. Christmas carols were sung at the tables, after eating, and a prayer of dedication for our cats was offered.

Quietly the group left the Fellowship Hall and entered the sanctuary as the organist played the beloved Christmas carols on the organ. A family led in a brief Christmas worship service. And our first Christmas workshop was over—an experience never to be forgotten!

GRAHAM WISSEMAN.

"UNTO US A CHILD IS BORN."

(Continued from page 9.)

only such simple questions as who is to do the dishes tonight, or who may use the car, but how to get along on a lower income, or how best to use the "raise" Dad got last week. Such children will learn more, and faster. The world will profit from their experience.

A young man said to me recently: "I always had thought that to take care of my own family and to lead a decent life was my whole responsibility." He could have contributed so much to humanity by using the abilities God had given him. Instead he was interested only in "getting by" in his little world. Somewhere a father's or mother's ambitions had been too small.

The ancient prophecies, the high hopes of men are still being fulfilled. Children who sit now with their toys on the floor will be called to banish disease from the face of the earth, to conquer fear, to sit in the halls of destiny and write the future of mankind. Will they fumble their job because we have bungled ours, because we have failed to train them in the fundamentals of the Kingdom of God: to put service before getting, to cooperate with others in improving conditions around them, to put themselves in the other fellow's place?

"And Mary brought forth her first-born son . . . and they called his name Jesus. For it was he who should save the people." What will your child be called?

True religion is the lie we live, not the creed we profess, and some day will be recognized by quality and not by brand.—J. F. Wright.

Pledges to Church Building Loan Fund Campaign

Church and Pastor	Amount
Va. Valley Central Conference:
Antioch—E. J. Rohart	$ 343.00
Bethlehem—Ralph M. Galt	106.00
Bethel—H. V. Harman	377.00
Dry Run—R. E. Newton	129.00
Joppa—R. E. Newton	52.00
Leaksville—R. E. Newton	436.00
Mt. Lebanon—R. E. Newton ..	211.00
Newport—R. E. Newton	426.00
Winchester—R. A. Whitten	1,101.00
Wissler's Chapel—Ralph M. Galt	60.00
Eastern Va. Conference:
Berea (Nans)—H. S. Hardeastle	$ 372.00
Berea (Great Bridge)—H. E. Crutchfield	1,197.00
Bethlehem (Disp)—John Gallo ..	459.00
Bethlehem (Nans.)—R. E. Brittle	2,040.00
Burton's Grove—J. W. Madren ..	153.00
Cypress Chapel—Earl T. Farrell	1,321.00
Damascus, Sunbury—T. Fred Wright	775.00
Franklin—Harvey L. Carnes ...	2,132.00
Holy Neck—Allen Hurdle	1,270.00
Holland—J. H. Lightbourne, Jr.	1,913.00
Isle of Wight—Ellis N. Clark ..	200.00
Liberty Spring—Jesse H. Dollar	1,591.00
Newport News—A. Lanson Granger, Jr.	3,264.00
Norfolk, Bay View—.....	724.00
Norfolk: Christian Temple—W. Millard Stevens	5,330.00
Norfolk, Rosemont—Melvin Dollar	2,800.00
Norfolk, Second—J. Everette Neese	577.00
Oakland—H. S. Hardeastle	1,570.00
Oak Grove—Earl T. Farrell	265.00
Portsmouth, First—W. P. Smith	1,410.00
Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial—Thomas H. Britton	683.00
Portsmouth, Elm Ave.—R. Eugene Tally	704.00
Richmond—Roy C. Helfenstein ..	1,459.00
South Norfolk—O. D. Poythress	2,500.00
Suffolk—.....	6,290.00
Union, Southampton — Clyde Fields	928.00
Windsor—Ellis N. Clark	500.00
Eastern N. C. Conference:
Amelia—John Littiken	$ 400.00
Antioch—W. A. Rich	203.00
Beulah—.....	517.00
Bethlehem—W. A. Rich	132.00
Chapel Hill—R. L. Jackson	509.00
Fayetteville—Carl Wallace	300.00
First Cong. Christian—John W. Rackley, Jr. (Hopewell, Va.) ..	464.00
Henderson—J. F. Apple	1,087.00
Hope Mills—Vacant	†195.00
Lee's Chapel—Fred P. Register	†166.00
Morrisville—E. M. Powell	207.00
Mt. Auburn—W. A. Rich	523.00
Mt. Carmel—W. A. Rich	203.00
Mt. Gilead—W. A. Rich	332.00
Plymouth—John Littikin	299.00
Raleigh—W. L. Parker	975.00
Sanford—Will B. O'Neill	1,000.00
Shallow Well—W. L. Wood	300.00
Southern Pines—Vacant	1,081.00
Turner's Chapel—W. L. Wood ..	300.00
Wake Chapel—F. P. Register ..	1,500.00
Western N. C. Conference:
Asheboro—F. C. Lester	$ 775.00
Albemarle—S. E. Madren	885.00
Bailey's Grove—Avery Brown ..	88.00
Flint Hill (R)—Avery Brown ..	127.00
Hanks Chapel—R. T. Grisson ...	694.00

High Point—Guy H. Veazey ...	426.00
Liberty—L. M. Presenell	361.00
Pleasant Ridge—Max Vestal ...	595.00
Pleasant Union—B. H. Lowdermilk	300.00
Spoon's Chapel—Max Vestal ...	132.00
Union Grove—Winfred Bray ...	246.00
N. C. and Va. Conference:
Apple's Chapel—John R. Lackey	$1,563.00
Burlington:
Beverly Hills—W. W. Snyder	400.00
Bethel—T. D. Sutton	593.00
Concord—T. D. Sutton	460.00
Greensboro, Calvary Christian—Thurman F. Bowers	688.00
Greensboro, First—W. E. Wiseman	3,292.00
Elon College—H. P. Bozarth ...	2,450.00
Greensboro, Palm St.—Mack V. Welch	1,243.00
Haw River—Dwight Jackson ...	1,065.00
Hendersonville—C. M. Heymann	160.00
Hines' Chapel—Julius Rice	697.00
Hopedale—J. Harold Loman ...	603.00
Ingram—W. T. Madren	975.00
Kallam Grove—C. Fred Allred ..	344.00

Lakeview—Curtis Young	82.50
Mount Bethel—C. Fred Allred ..	213.00
Monticello—Julius Rice	460.00
Mt. Zion—Thomas D. Sutton ..	600.00
Pfafftown—W. J. Andes	258.00
Pleasant Grove—W. T. Madren ..	814.00
Pleasant Ridge—W. E. Wiseman	364.00
Reidsville—T. G. Humphries ...	3,211.00
Shallow Ford—R. M. Petersen ..	1,057.00
Tryon—Orville H. White	*250.00
Union (NC)—K. D. Register ..	1,395.00
Union (Va)—Mark W. Andes ..	1,498.00
Winston-Salem—W. J. Andes ..	814.00
Zion—Fred H. Wrenn (Student)	75.00

* Contribution.
† Paid in full.

SUMMARY BY CONFERENCES.

Conference	Quota	Accepted
Va. Valley	$ 5,736.00	$ 3,736.00
Eastern Va.	51,000.00	43,691.00
Eastern N. C.	17,690.00	10,229.00
Western N. C.	11,476.00	4,629.00
N. C. and Va.	50,552.00	25,024.50
Totals	$136,454.00	$87,309.50

THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH BUILDING LOAN FUND

Declaration of Purpose

We believe that it is of overwhelming importance to help in the erection of church buildings to meet the needs of America's unchurched millions and to provide a place where children may receive training in the basic principles of Christianity.

We acknowledge with gratitude the generous assistance in church building financial aid already received by many churches of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches. We further realize that our own financial resources without aid from our Church Building Society will be inadequate to meet the needs of our churches of this area. We gladly join our Congregational Christian Churches of America in support of the Church Building Fund Campaign.

We are pleased to report that our church, at a meeting of the members held the day of, 195.., voted to co-operate in the Church Building Fund Campaign of the Congregational Christian Churches and accepted a goal of $.....

It was agreed that our church would seek to reach this goal by:
(Check below the statement which applies to your church.)

- [] 1. A special solicitation of our church to be held the week beginning, 195.., in which we will endeavor to secure a pledge from each member of the church.
- [] 2. By seeking a pledge from each member of the church for this purpose at the time of our regular every member canvass to be held the week of, 195...
- [] 3. By including each year in our budget, for years, the sum of $....., which will be paid in quarterly installments of $....., beginning, 195...
- [] 4. By annual solicitation each year for years.

..... Church
By Secretary or Clerk
Address
..... Pastor Treasurer

NOTE—Mail "Declaration of Purpose" to the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C. Make checks payable to The Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, designated "Church Building Fund" and mail to Elon College, N. C. Payments should be completed not later than March 1, 1956.

The Wondrous Christmas Secret

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

Have you learned the Christmas Secret? It is the most wonderful secret in life.

Why is it that Christmas seems to bring heaven nearer to earth? As if by magic, joy and cheer seem to spring up everywhere at Christmas time. The clouds of life seem to brighten, the burdens of life seem to lighten, the anchors of life seem to tighten, and life for us seems more secure as Christmas draws near.

The reason for this is the fact that Christmas is the time of all the year when people think most of others. That is the secret of the Christmas cheer and the Christmas joy which is seen wherever you go. That is the secret of the change in the very atmosphere during the Christmas season. Selfishness gives place to altruism. Indifference toward others gives place to thoughtfulness for others. People think about those they love—how to make them happy. They think about the needy, those less fortunate than themselves—and how to minister to their needs.

That is why some people are the happiest at Christmas time—it is because they think more of others, and try to do more for others than at other times. People who do not think of others, and of how to make others happy on Christmas, do not find Christmas any different than other days.

Christmas joy and cheer are largely an expression of our own creative powers. We create for ourselves and for others the Christmas atmosphere by thinking of others more than of self. We could create the Christmas Joy for every day of the year, if we would but practice the wondrous Christmas Secret every day—"thinking of others more than of self." The Apostle Paul reminded the elders at Ephesus about this wonderful secret given the world by him whose birthday Christmas celebrates: "Remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, 'It is more blessed to give than to receive.'" In other words, said Paul: "People find greater happiness in giving than in getting."

And the true joy of Christmas is only expressed by those who at this time and at all other times of the year, are conscious of the fact that they have given themselves to the Christ and that they are daily giving themselves to the world in Christian service. Those who have sincerely given themselves to Christ and are giving their best in Christ-like service to their fellow-men find that Christmas joy is not determined by gifts received from others, but by the love they may show to others in Christ's name.

If this wondrous Christmas Secret were known and practiced by everyone, what a happy world this would be!

